THE UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS LIBRARY

266.05
CHRI
v. 57

Digitized by the Internet Archive
in 2014

https://archive.org/details/missionfield5718refo

The Christian Intelligencer.

Een-dracht maakt macht.

VOL. LVII.—No. 1. WHOLE No. 2893. NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 6, 1886. $2.65 A YEAR IN ADVANCE. No. 48 CHURCH STREET.

EDITORS: Rev. JOHN M. FERRIS, D.D. Rev. N. H. VAN ARSDALE.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR: MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

"TRUST in the Lord with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge Him, and He shall direct thy paths," Prov. 3: 5 and 6, is affectionately recommended as a rule for the new year. If followed the life of the twelvemonth will be successful in the best sense.

SUBSCRIBERS in New Jersey will find on the twelfth page the Local Option law to be presented to the legislature. It has been prepared by a competent committee, begins at the right end, may profitably be studied by the friends of temperance in other States, and we hope will be adopted and faithfully executed.

REVIVALS.—The American Church has increased in the past by revivals of religion, many of them of great power. The results were not only the conversion of sinners but also the lifting up of the standard of Christian character and an increase in Christian activity. The great revivals of the past were characterized by solemnity, a sense of the majesty, holiness and righteousness of God, the sinfulness of men and the completeness of salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ. Large accessions were made from the world, infidels were brought to the foot of the cross as humble penitents, infidelity was almost silenced. Deep convictions of sin were a prominent characteristic of those fruitful awakenings.

LET US HAVE HONEST STATEMENTS AND FAIR PLAY.—There has been and is a great revival of religion at Cobleskill, N. Y., extending into the country around. A statement has been sent to the daily newspapers which makes the impression that the awakening is due to the labors of an evangelist from Boston and the pastor of the Methodist Church. We wondered at it when we read it, for, by our connection with the Executive Committee of our Board of Foreign Missions, we have acted on correspondence from that region since last summer. Mr. John G. Fagg, before his graduation from the Theological Seminary last spring, offered himself for appointment as a missionary to China or Japan to our Board and was accepted. Circumstances made it desirable that he should remain in this country one year. Providentially, while serving the Board by advocating our missions before the churches, if we remember correctly, he was led to the Classis of Schoharie and became, with the consent of the Board, the ministerial supply at Lawyersville, a few miles from Cobleskill. He preached not only in Lawyersville, but also in the villages around it, his services being greatly desired. Before his services began religious dullness, not to say indifference and apathy, prevailed throughout that region, except that there were in every church God's faithful ones, longing and praying for the power of the Holy Spirit. In a few weeks the earnest preaching of Mr. Fagg produced, under God, a great and manifest change. Among the services conducted by him was one at Cobleskill. A letter from seven gentlemen of that town, dated August 24th, 1885, appealing to the Board to allow Mr. Fagg to remain and preach for them, saying, "the whole church and community are unanimously with us in this appeal," states also, "Brother Fagg has preached but seven Sundays. We have now an attendance of between four and five hundred, and can safely say the whole town is moved." Since then a succession of similar communications from that region has come to the Board pleading for an extension of the services of Mr. Fagg, and for the same reason, namely, that the whole community was moved. This began in July of last year and continued, interrupted only by absences of Mr. Fagg to perform some special work for the Board. Of this blessed movement, this signal Divine blessing attending this young preacher in the very first year of his ministry, we have had knowledge from the beginning to this hour. It originated with and has increased under his ministrations. Yet a statement is given to the public in which he is almost ignored. We have no wish to disparage the work of those who have intensified, under God, this awakening, and who have been useful in gathering in the harvest. Neither have we a desire to lead Mr. Fagg into a notoriety from which he shrinks. We make this statement only in the interest of honest and fair dealing.

The Year of our Lord 1886.

HOWEVER chronologists may disagree as to the actual time of the Saviour's birth, there is a manifest fitness of things in the coincidence of the Advent season, as it is observed throughout Christendom, with the outgoing and incoming years. Between them is the Virgin's Child, the Son of Man, representing the humanity of all ages, and joining together in Himself the years of every individual life and of the world's historic eras. His unique, unmatched, all glorious Person unites all families and races of mankind in one great brotherhood, and centres the destinies of nations in His kingdom. There is a profound and tender significance in that common phrase, "The Year of our Lord." There have been nearly nineteen hundred such years, every one of which is His as certainly as ever coin bore the image and superscription of the ruler and country of which it is the currency.

What has the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-five, to witness for Him? Looking back over its revolving months, has it been a year of progress in His kingdom? Have the wheels of His chariot opened new tracks in the untrodden wilderness? Have the churches grown in numbers, resources and power? Have revivals of religion at home and missionary movements abroad marked its seasons? Have personal and family religion grown among us? Are we personally more loyal to Christ? Is the Spirit of Christ more prevalent and efficient in the churches? Are they merely holding their own, or are they marching on, with banners bright and cohorts gleaming in the panoply of God?

Are we individually grateful for the mercy and loving kindness of the Lord to us during the past year? And do we take with us into the new year that sincere, thankful spirit which is always glad that God reigns?

The year that is told has been full of events that teach us that the Lord Jesus Christ is on the throne. It has passed into eternity with all of its favors and failures, its sunshine and gloom, its trials and triumphs. Death has taken away from us the greatest man and the richest man, with many of the noblest and best in the whole land. We have been taught to value life not by its evanescent honors and its unsatisfying and abundant possessions, but by what a man is and what he has done; by character and by faith in things not seen and eternal.

The new year opens its vistas of promise and of hope to many amid the clouds and storms of winter's cold. But we can and do leave all that it shall reveal in the hands of Him who is its Lord. Our best security for the future is in lives that "are hid with Christ in God." Over against the hard and wild materialism of the times, the Christ of God manifests Himself as the incarnation of all that is pure and gentle, and spiritual and holy. And if ever there was a needs be, this is the time when God's men should stand among their fellow men and cry aloud as Jesus did to the people of His day, "What is a man profited if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul? For the Son of Man shall come in the glory of His Father, with His holy angels; and then shall He render to every man according to his deeds." Thus the Lordship of Christ over the year looks out into the last judgment and transfers our personal accounts to that high court for final settlement.

The Advent mission services that have been held in this city have been marked by the solemn urgency of these transcendent themes, and especially upon business men, in the heart of the financial mart of the metropolis. There has been in them somewhat of the fiery force of the preaching of the Lord's forerunner to the people of His generation; and we cannot but hope and pray that they portend a wider and deeper spiritual movement throughout our land.

This new year of our Lord ought to begin and end with new manifestations of the loyalty of His people, with trumpet calls and more persistent efforts by ministers and Christian people and churches to turn many to righteousness, and by more earnest praying and doing, that He and His kingdom may come quickly. We must proclaim and maintain, and, so far as we can, must enforce His supreme Lordship not only over the year but over the people and the nations, and the best evidence we can give of our sincerity and zeal will be our own entire, unconditional and joyful submission to His sweet and perfect will. This will make a truly

HAPPY NEW YEAR.

"Old Colony" Papers.

DEATHS OF THE HALF YEAR.

July--December, 1885.

I HAVE no hesitation in placing first among those whom the world has "not willingly let die" the name of Lord Shaftesbury, "The Good Earl,' whose long life was spent in incessant labor for the poor, the oppressed, the fallen, the ignorant and the unevangelized. He recognized the obligation, alike of his birth and of his new birth, to be the servant of all. He lived up to the motto of his illustrious house: "Love, Serve." The title he was most proud of, next to that of a Christian, was that given him of "The Costermonger's Friend." Not long ago he was presented with the freedom of the City of London, in a gold casket on which were engraved the words: "Blessed is he that considereth the poor." In the Golden City itself, to whose boundless freedom and honors he has been admitted, he has fully realized the same beatitude. It is an interesting fact that he traced his earliest religious impressions to the influence and instructions of a humble woman, who was his nurse in childhood. When a congratulatory address was presented to him at Guildhall on his 80th birthday, very few of the aristocracy made their appearance. At his funeral in Westminster Abbey, the poor so overcrowded the building that hundreds stood outside in the rain during the services.

Beside him in grateful remembrance stands the noble Jew, Sir Moses Montefiore, whom The Hebrew Journal ranks with the son of Amram, with Maimonides and with Mendelssohn, as their fourth great Moses. The whole world having celebrated his 100th birthday, he had the unusual satisfaction of anticipating a posthumous renown, and that of the sweetest and most honorable kind —as a philanthropist. Though his eyes were blinded to the "historic Christ," let us hope that this son of Abraham was a fruitful believer in Abraham's Messiah.

Other philanthropists who have died were Elizur Wright, who sacrificed all his early prospects and nearly came to starvation point in his devotion to the anti slavery cause; Benjamin J. Crew, a Quaker of Philadelphia, widely known for his earnest labors in behalf of unprotected children; Cyrus D. Albee, President of the Good Samaritans of New Haven, who fourteen years ago was an outcast and apparently irreclaimable inebriate, but who became one of the most faithful and effective seekers and saviors of drunkards in our country; and Mrs. Isabella Brown of Baltimore, whose gifts to individuals, churches and religious institutions were a stream as constant and full as it was quiet. A noble memorial of her stands within a stone's throw of where I write, in "Brown Hall," a substantial and commodious dormitory building belonging to the Princeton Theological Seminary.

Queen Elizabeth is said to have cried when dying, "Millions of money for an inch of time!" We are again reminded of the valuelessness of money to buy off Death. The great destroyer has included among his spoils an unusual number of millionaires. Foremost of these was Wm. H. Vanderbilt, "the richest man in the world," as he called himself. His physician has given the opinion that he died from the exhaustion of continuous thought and care in the management of his great possessions. Brooklyn loses two of its wealthiest citizens in H. B. Claflin and Edwin C. Litchfield. The latter was said to own over 2,000 building lots in the city, the former's name was a household word in the homes of the land for his just and generous character and life. Charles J. Osborn, a former co-operator with Jay Gould, died at forty-eight, broken down with the making and keeping of five millions.

Ex-Senator Sharon and Peter Donahue, two of the California gold and silver "kings," left six and twelve millions respectively. "Johnny Skae," another of them who was once worth ten millions, died literally a pauper in a station house. Here too may be mentioned the death in extreme want, of James W. Marshall, the discoverer of gold in California. The question is often asked, "What's in a name?" Julian Alvarez found that there were "millions in it," by his felicitous selection of a title for his "Henry Clay" cigars at a time when that was a name to conjure with.

One great historic name appears upon the death record of the half year. Gen. Grant, after carrying his country through the wilderness, went up into a mountain to die there, though not without having been permitted to see with great clearness and satisfaction the grand future of a re-united Republic. Gen. McClellan soon followed him. They were equally ineffectual in resisting the "last enemy." They were alike "more than conquerors," we have reason to believe, through Him that loved them. I suppose that the military superiority of Grant, as to all the other commanders of the Army of the Potomac, is best illustrated by a reply of the Confederate Gen. Buckner to some one who was praising Hooker's bravery and McClellan's strategy: "Yes, but Grant somehow was a very near man!" "What do you mean by that?" was asked. "Why, when I looked around for some one to surrender to at Fort Donelson, Grant was right on the spot; and I notice that when Lee surrendered at Appomatox, Grant was the nearest General to take his sword—that's what I mean by nearness." The last surviving officer of the war of 1812, Major Aaron Stafford, died at Waterville, N. Y., in the 99th year of his age. Abroad, the only noteworthy military man who has died,—unless we include the once dreaded El Mahdi and his lieutenant, Osman Digna, in the Soudan,—is Marshal Serrano, who was a typical Spanish leader and had been quite a Warwick or "king-maker" in his day.

His royal master, King Alfonso, died soon after at the early age of 28, after a reign of eleven years. Few and evil were his days, but he evinced more force of mind and character than the average incumbent of the Spanish throne. His successor is a little girl of five years. In the mausoleum of the Escurial, where the embalmed bodies of all the kings since Charles V. have been laid on shelves or niches, there was just one shelf left when Alfonso died. And there has long been a traditional superstition, that when that should be filled there would be no more kings of Spain. The only prominent public man who died in Great Britain was Lord Halifax, better known as Sir Charles Wood, a member of the Cabinets of Lords Russell, Aberdeen and Palmerston, and of Mr. Gladstone. Hervé Riel paid the penalty of his repeated excitings of the half-breeds of the Northwest to a barbarous and hopeless rebellion.

We have lost, of our public men, Vice-President Hendricks, who, after a long and conspicuous career during a period of the most embittered partisan and sectional passion, leaves behind him a reputation absolutely unstained by a suspicion of his personal or political integrity; ex-Governors Fenton of New York, Talbot of Massachusetts, and J. B. Page, Hiland Hall and Ryland Fletcher of Vermont; B. Gratz Brown of St. Louis, who ran for Vice-President on the ticket with Horace Greeley; Vice-Chancellor George W. Clinton of the Board of Regents, and the veteran Temperance leader, Gen. Joseph S. Smith, both of this State; and Edgar K. Apgar, one of that useful class of politicians whose services to their party is as potent as it is unrecognized by the rank and file. I remember the latter when a mere boy, he made his first speeches at Ithaca, in the war days. Those who recall the politics of our country before the war will have a vivid recollection of "Duke" William M. Gwin, the first U. S. Senator from California. He was in sympathy with the Rebellion, and retired to Sonora, to the "dukedom" of which he was appointed by ill-fated "Emperor" Maximilian. Robert Toombs of Georgia was one of the most blatant and furious of the Southern leaders who precipited the Rebellion, and has since contested with Jeff. Davis the palm of being the most irreconcilable, having refused to the last to accept the amnesty and take the oath of allegiance. His death leaves Davis alone in his glory as a disfranchised rebel.

Helen Hunt Jackson achieved a literary distinction beyond any American woman, except perhaps Mrs. Stowe. But on her death-bed she could say of her labors in behalf of the wronged Indians: "They are the only things of which I am glad now, all the rest is of no moment;" and that she "left this earth with no regret except that she had not accomplished more of this work, especially that it was so late in the day when she began to work in real earnest." Lord Houghton, whose poetry is best known under his name of Richard Monckton Milnes, was on the contrary a thorough Epicurean, a pleasure-seeker and man of the world, who enjoyed an unclouded course of pleasure for nearly eighty years and had his portion in this world. A contemporary calls him "a genial old Pagan," with whom "it was all of life to live, if not all of death to die." Principal Shairp will long be known for his lectures on "Culture and Religion," and other critical and suggestive books.

Other deaths have been those of Dr. Elisha Mulford, author of "The Nation" and "The Republic of God"; the witty and wise "Josh Billings"; Maria Weston Chapman, the biographer and literary executor of Harriet Martineau; ex-Pres. Brown of Hamilton College, Prof. Daniel J. Noyes of Dartmouth, and John Langdon Sibley, the venerable Librarian emeritus of Harvard; William J. Thoms, the antiquarian and Editor of "Notes and Queries"; the Italian poet, Andrea Maffei; Prof. Jonkbloet, the historian of Dutch literature; Prof. Seyffarth, the Egyptologist. Journalism loses George Wilkes, founder of the "Spirit of the Times," Frederick Hassaurek; and, far above all, Dr. Samuel Irenæus Prime. Dr. Prime was a "born editor." Every week for fifty years did he have an "Irenæus Letter" in the Observer, which was always interesting and sometimes brilliant. He was a man of great geniality in daily life, and indefatigable in promoting every good cause. Few careers have been as successful, as complete, and as beneficent.

The chief name in art, eclipsed by death, is that of the veteran and idealistic painter William Page, a modern disciple of Titian, whose best known works are his "Venus," and "Farragut passing the Forts." Other names of note are Robert Thorburn, the fashionable portrait painter of London; the celebrated architects, Donaldson and Labrouste, respectively of England and France; Thornycroft, the sculptor; poor John McCullough, the actor; and Henry K. Oliver of Salem, Mass., who immortalized himself by one tune, "Federal Street."

The legal profession has lost heavily, in Judge Westbrook; in the famous lawyers, all stricken down in the vigor of life, Richard T. Merrick of Washington, Francis N. Bangs and Scott Lord of N. Y., Emory A. Storrs of Chicago, and Charles R. Train of Boston. The veterans, Henry R. Selden of Rochester, Thomas W. Clarke of this city, and Theodore Romeyn of Detroit, were once leaders of the bar in their respective communities. The death of Ex-Judge Cardozo removes another of the gang, who ruled this city under the Tweed Ring.

The most celebrated men of science to die have been Dr. W. B. Carpenter, the English physiologist; Thomas Davidson, the palæontologist; John C. Draper of this city, son of the still more distinguished John W. Draper, both professors of chemistry in the N. Y. University, Dr. Henri Milne Edwards, the French naturalist, and M. Robin, Professor of Histology in Paris; Dr. W. A. Guy, a writer of standard medical works in England, and Dr. Atlee, the distinguished surgeon of Pennsylvania; Chief Engineer Zeigler of the American navy; Dr. Rufus R. Gilbert, projector of the elevated railway system of this city, who died "poor though making many rich"; Ezra Miller of New Jersey, who invented the car coupler, buffer and platform which bear his name; Commander Gorringe, who transported the obelisk, "Cleopatra's Needle," from Egypt to the Central Park; and Thomas C. Durant, to whose energy is due the Union Pacific railroad.

The most distinguished clergymen who rest from their labors are Cardinal McCloskey and Dr. Stephen H. Tyng of this city; Dean Howson, joint author with Conybeare of "The Life and Epistles of St. Paul"; the Bishops of Manchester, Ely, and Salisbury of England; Bishops Lay and Young of the Episcopal Church, and Shultz of the Moravian Church of this country; Dr. W. P. Mackay, the English evangelist and author of "Grace and Truth"; Dr. Rufus Ellis of Boston, a most admirable man and one of the few survivors of conservative Unitarianism; Drs. Joseph Alden, a leading writer and educator, David Irving, Secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, and Dr. A. C. George of Chicago, one of the ablest ministers of the Methodist Church; John Murray Forbes, who created a great sensation thirty five years ago by going over to Romanism, and who returned to the Episcopal Church ten years later; and Rev. Thomas Tennant of Arkansas, the oldest preacher in the world, dying at the age of 115, after a ministry of 90 years. Our own denomination has lost the veterans Jefferson Wynkoop, Oscar H. Gregory, Alexander Watson, A. C. Millspaugh and John Wenisch; Theodore Romeyn and E. P. Livingston, in the meridian of their life and eminently useful labors; and Henry Van Brackle, a student in the middle class of our Theological Seminary.

266.05
CHRI
v.57

Among what might be called the Curiosities of Necrology may be mentioned Edward S. Sanborn, who was regarded as an eminent philanthropist at Exeter, N. H., and known in Boston to be rolling up wealth by keeping houses of prostitution; Andrew Harper, who wrote the famous Hard-shell sermon on "The Harp of a Thousand Strings"; Joseph Taylor, who was hanged at Philadelphia after a record of having stabbed 17 persons and shot 28; Mrs. Veronica Bulla of Syracuse, who starved herself to death by a fast of 59 days; the Sacred White Elephant of Burmah; Goldsmith Maid, the famous trotting horse, with a record of 2:14, aged 28; and last but not least the great Jumbo, who was killed on the Grand Trunk R. R., while heroically endeavoring to save the life of the little elephant, Tom Thumb. F. N. ZABRISKIE.

PRINCETON, Dec. 29th, 1885.

PROSPERITY.—If men would be prosperous in the broad, best sense, they need to have God with them. To succeed in business; to acquire wealth; to become famous—that is not prosperity, except in a very narrow, temporal sense; not in any sense, if these pursuits be in the way of sin and death. To have all things pertaining to one's life tend toward one great and glorious consummation in God—that is prosperity, and God gives it to all them that trust Him and cling to Him.

Suggestive.

"EVEN THIS SHALL PASS AWAY."

Once in Persia reigned a king
Who upon his signet ring
Graved a maxim true and wise,
Which, if held before his eyes,
Gave him counsel at a glance
Fit for every change and chance.
Solemn words, and these are they:
"Even this shall pass away."

Trains of camels through the sand
Brought him gems from Samarcand;
Fleets of galleys through the seas
Brought him pearls to match with these,
But he counted not his gain
Treasures of the mine or main;
"What is wealth?" the king would say,
"Even this shall pass away."

In the revels of his court
At the zenith of the sport,
When the palms of all his guests
Burned with clapping at his jests,
He, amid his figs and wine,
Cried: "Oh, loving friends of mine!
Pleasure comes, but not to stay;
Even this shall pass away."

Fighting on a furious field,
Once a javelin pierced his shield.
Soldiers with a loud lament
Bore him bleeding to his tent;
Groaning from his tortured side,
"Pain is hard to bear," he cried,
"But with patience, day by day—
Even this shall pass away."

Towering in the public square,
Twenty cubits in the air
Rose his statue carved in stone.
Then the king, disguised, unknown,
Stood before his sculptured name,
Musing meekly, "What is fame?
Fame is but a slow decay—
Even this shall pass away."

Struck with palsy, sere and old,
Waiting at the gates of gold,
Said he, with his dying breath,
"Life is done, but what is death?"
Then in answer to the king
Fell a sunbeam on his ring,
Showing by a heavenly ray—
"Even this shall pass away." —Anon.

HEBREWS AT PITTSBURGH, PA.—A Convention of Rabbis of the Reformed Hebrew Church was held a few weeks ago at Pittsburgh. Of it the Evangelist reports:

This gathering, though having no reference to evangelical Christianity, is yet "a straw showing the course of the wind." It was an informal, non-authoritative body, but its tendency is obviously in the direction of the disintegration of Israel. Its animating spirit was not a "feeling after Christ, if haply they might find Him;" it was not the long cherished dream of a happy return to the Holy Land. But representing, as is claimed, the intelligent, cultured element among the Hebrew people here in America, its aim seems rather to have been to formally put away all that was ancient, incongruous, obsolete, and so modify their system and ritual that they shall have nothing distinctive. Yet it would preserve "historical identity with the great past." It affirms that "Judaism presents the highest conception of the God idea, recognizes the Bible as the most potent instrument of religious and moral instruction," and its record of the consecration of the Jewish people to their mission as servants of the one God. But the teachings of the Jewish religion respecting diet, dress, and all kindred things, and its teaching also respecting the more important subjects of "bodily resurrection, Gehenna and Eden (Hell and Paradise) as abodes of everlasting punishment and reward, it repudiates." This Convention proclaimed its belief in the immortality of the soul as a Jewish doctrine; paid passing respect to "Christianity and Islam as daughter religions of Judaism;" recognized "in the modern era of universal culture of heart and intellect, the approach of the realization of Israel's great Messianic hope for the establishment of a kingdom of truth, justice, and peace among men;" rejoiced in Judaism as a progressive religion, in accord with the postulates of reason; and acknowledged the broad humanity of the age as the ally of the Jews in fulfilling their mission. Surely this is a smooth and fastidious rendering of a system too old to be trifled with, and too staunch to be interpreted by such a word as "culture."

Circumcision met with ungloved handling as a "relic of barbarism." It was agreed that while Saturday is to be still remembered as a sort of historic monument, yet for business convenience worship may be transferred to Sunday, while all the features of it may be so modified, according to the popular cultus, as to make it more widely attractive. And finally, as to the long surviving, last fond hope of the Hebrew people of other days, the Convention, without any tinting of sentiment, simply declared that "We consider ourselves no longer as a nation, but a religious community, and therefore expect neither a return to Palestine, nor a sacrificial worship under the sons of Aaron, nor the restoration of any of the laws concerning the Jewish State." This is sufficiently outspoken. It flies in the face of much prophecy, as interpreted from the standpoint of the lost tribes and the supposed "hope of Israel."

MR. GLADSTONE ON THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE.—Réville, professor in the College of France, in his "Prolegomena to the History of Religions," 1884, questioned the correctness of what Mr. Gladstone had said some time before in support of "a primitive revelation in the testimony of the Holy Scriptures." Dr. Reville disputed the accuracy of the account of the creation and of the beginning of religious worship. In the Nineteenth Century of November last, Mr. Gladstone defends his position with signal ability, and whatever may be thought of his argument to establish an agreement between the first chapter of Genesis and the discoveries of science, there is no room to doubt that he completely demolishes his critic in regard to the dawn of worship. The article is entitled "Dawn of Creation and of Worship," and concludes with these sentences:

But none of these circumstances discredit or impair the proof that in the book, of which Genesis is the opening section, there is conveyed special knowledge to meet the special need everywhere so palpable in the state and history of our race. Far indeed am I from asserting that this precious gift, or that any process known to me, disposes of all the problems, either insoluble or unsolved, by which we are surrounded; of the burden and the mystery

Of all this unintelligible world.

But I own my surprise not only at the fact, but at the manner in which in this day, writers, whose name is legion, unimpeached in character and abounding in talent, not only put away from them, cast into shadow or into the very gulf of negation itself, the conception of a Deity, an acting and a ruling Deity. Of this belief, which has satisfied the doubts, and wiped away the tears, and found guidance for the footsteps of so many a weary wanderer on earth, which among the best and greatest of our race has been so cherished by those who had it, and so longed and sought for by those who had it not, we might suppose that if at length we had discovered that it was in the light of truth untenable, that the accumulated testimony of man was worthless, and that his wisdom was but folly, yet at least the decencies of mourning would be vouchsafed to this irreparable loss. Instead of this, it is with a joy and exultation that might almost recall the frantic orgies of the Commune, that this at least at first sight terrific and overwhelming calamity is accepted, and recorded as a gain. One recent, and in many ways respected writer—a woman long wont to unship creed as sailors discharge excess of cargo in a storm, and passing at length into formal atheism—rejoices to find herself on the open, free, and "breezy common of humanity." Another, also woman, and dealing only with the workings and manifestations of God, finds in the theory of a physical evolution as recently developed by Mr. Darwin, and received with extensive favor, both an emancipation from error and a novelty in kind. She rejoices to think that now at last Darwin "shows life as an harmonious whole, and makes the future stride possible by the past advance." Evolution, that is physical evolution, which alone is in view, may be true (like the solar theory), may be delightful and wonderful, in its right place; but are we really to understand that varieties of animals brought about through domestication, the wasting of organs (for instance, the tails of men) by disuse, that natural selection and the survival of the fittest, all in the physical order, exhibit to us the great arcanum of creation, the sum and centre of life, so that mind and spirit are dethroned from their old supremacy, are no longer sovereign by right, but may find somewhere by charity a place assigned them, as appendages, perhaps only as excrescences, of the material creation? I contend that evolution in its highest form has not been a thing heretofore unknown to history, to philosophy, or to theology. I contend that it was before the mind of Saint Paul when he taught that in the fulness of time God sent forth His Son, and of Eusebius, when he wrote the "Preparation for the Gospel," and of Augustine when he composed the "City of God;" and, beautiful and splendid as are the lessons taught by natural objects, they are, for Christendom at least, indefinitely beneath the sublime unfolding of the great drama of human action, in which, through long ages, Greece was making ready a language and an intellectual type, and Rome a framework of order and an idea of law, such that in them were to be shaped and fashioned the destinies of a regenerated world. For those who believe that the old foundations are unshaken still, and that the fabric built upon them will look down for ages upon the floating wreck of many a modern and boastful theory, it is difficult to see anything but infatuation in the destructive temperament which leads to the notion that to substitute a blind mechanism for the hand of God in the affairs of life is to enlarge the scope of remedial agency; that to dismiss the highest of all inspirations is to elevate the strain of human thought and life; and that each of us is to rejoice that our several units are to be disintegrated at death into "countless millions of organisms;" for such, it seems, is the latest "revelation" delivered from the fragile tripod of a modern Delphi. Assuredly on the minds of those who believe, or else on the minds of those who after this fashion disbelieve, there lies some deep judicial darkness, a darkness that may be felt. While disbelief in the eyes of faith is a sore calamity, this kind of disbelief, which renounces and repudiates with more than satisfaction what is brightest and best in the inheritance of man, is astounding, and might be deemed incredible. Nay, some will say, rather than accept the flimsy and hollow consolations which it makes bold to offer, might we not go back to solar adoration, or with Goethe, to the hollows of Olympus?

Wenn die Funke sprüht,
Wenn die Asche glüht,
Eilen wir den alten Göttern zu.*

New Books.

....VALENTINO." By William Waldorf Astor. To appreciate the value of the Reformation one needs only to study Italy at the beginning of the sixteenth century. At the very centre of the dominant form of Western Christianity vice reigned under the scarlet robes of the Vatican and its surrounding palaces. The work of Mr. Astor has, therefore, an ecclesiastical value no less than literary merit. In the latter point it takes, to our mind, very high rank. "Valentino" is only another name for Cæsar Borgia, the infamous but talented son of Pope Alexander the Sixth. His character is fully brought out in the story. His sister Lucretia, whom history has stigmatized somewhat unjustly, is sketched in a masterly manner and the partial defense made for her, as one weak rather than wicked, is warranted by the careful examination of contemporaneous testimony. In his descriptive scenes and the management of conversation, the author is far above the average of the writers of historical novels. The story unfolds itself naturally and strongly and commands the attention of the reader to its terrible ending. Mr. Astor has sacrificed something of dramatic effect to historical accuracy in the closing chapters, but we commend him for it. Providence sometimes does not order earthly events as critics might wish, but truth is to be preferred always. We congratulate the reading public that such an excellent book has been added to the roll of those which deal with the romance of history, and so tend to fix history itself most firmly in the mind. (Charles Scribner's Sons.)

....George W. Cable has gathered in a volume, "THE SILENT SOUTH," three essays already given to the public through the periodical press. These papers have a bond of connection in that they all relate to the status of the freedmen in the Southern States. The book is a strong and earnest plea for according fair treatment not only, but civil rights to the lately enfranchised negroes. It seems an honest, truthful and dispassionate presentation and discussion of the chief problem to be solved by the present generation of Southern statesmen. The volume is made the more attractive by an excellent portrait of the author. (Charles Scribner's Sons.)

* Braut von Corinth'

713188

Our Church.

We are thankful for items of Church News compactly stated; or for marked copies or clippings from local exchanges, which we would not otherwise see. To insure publication in next number, they must reach us by noon on Monday. A condensation of items is unavoidable.

Special Services.

SPECIAL Services in the Collegiate Church, corner of 29th street and 5th avenue, from the 10th to the 24th of January. On the evening of Sunday, 10th inst., Rev. Dr. John Hall will conduct the service. On and after Wednesday evening, 13th, Rev. A. T. Pierson, D.D., of Philadelphia, who has labored very extensively and successfully as an evangelist, will take a leading part in all the services. Commencing on Wednesday evening, 13th, meetings will be held every evening at 8 o'clock, and on and after Thursday, 14th, Bible Readings will be given daily at 4 o'clock P. M. Arrangements have been made thoroughly to distribute in the district around the church cordial invitations to all these meetings. All are earnestly invited and affectionately urged to attend. The pews in the church are all free during these services, and all are welcome.

....During the last week in January and the first week of February special religious services will be held every evening, except Saturday and Sunday, in the Collegiate Church on Fifth avenue and 48th street, conducted by the Rev. George F. Pentecost, D.D. The service will begin at 8 o'clock. A Bible Reading service will be held at 3 o'clock P. M. The Gospel Hymns will be used, and Mr. and Mrs. George C. Stebbins are to lead the singing. On January 25th these meetings are to begin and will close on February 5th.

The Rev. Dr. E. B. Coe writes to us in relation to these services: "All persons who will attend them will be cordially welcomed, and we hope that in addition to the residents in our immediate neighborhood, the ministers and members of our churches in other parts of the city will come to aid us in these meetings and share in the benefits we expect from them."

The desire for a revival of religion is general in this and neighboring cities and localities. All who have such a desire and who wish to know what course to pursue will no doubt be confirmed in faith and desire and learn what to do by frequent attendance upon these services. At such a time no one who witnessed it can fail to remember the season of revival which began years ago in the Fulton Street Prayer Meeting, extended to all parts of this country and afterward was experienced in Great Britain. Are not these proposed services worthy of remembrance in the prayers of believers?

Our Newark Churches.

THE Rev. W. H. Gleason, D.D., will close his labors in the First Church, on Sabbath, January 17th, and will immediately begin his new work at Hudson, N. Y. After nine years of earnest and successful ministry in Newark, his loss will be deeply felt, not only by his parishioners, but in the clerical ranks of the city.

The Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Waters, with the ladies of the North Church, recently held a reception in the spacious and elegant rooms of the new chapel which has been erected during the past year. Dr. Waters gave an interesting and brief history of the church, and addresses were made by the Rev. Dr. Charles E. Hart, of Rutgers College, a former pastor, and by the Rev. W. J. R. Taylor, D.D., President of the Classis of Newark. Choice music and abundant refreshments, with pleasant social intercourse, occupied the large assembly during the remainder of the evening.

The Second Church, Rev. J. A. Davis, pastor, is moving toward the erection of a new church edifice in the Tenth Ward. The change of location will give a new life and a larger field to this faithful and useful church.

In Clinton Avenue Church, the Rev. Dr. W. J. R. Taylor has just entered upon the seventeenth year of his pastorate. The Ladies' Aid Society and the Heidelbergh Guild sent a large and well-filled missionary box as a thanksgiving offering to the Rev. J. Meulendyk, of Fremont, Michigan,—a gift especially grateful at this time on account of the destruction by fire, a few months ago, of the pastor's house, furniture and library. The Christmas festivals of the Sunday-schools of this church and of Hope Chapel were kept with great spirit and gladness.

The West Newark (German) Church, Rev. C. Girtanner, and the East Church, Rev. D. C. Preyer, are doing good service in their difficult and important fields of real missionary work.

Christ Church, Woodside, within the city limits, is rejoicing in the earnest and promising beginnings of its new pastor, Rev. C. H. Jones, and in some good tokens of spiritual awakening.

The Classis of Newark has arranged a series of evangelistic services to be held during the present winter in each of its churches. The plan is somewhat similar to that adopted by the Classis of New York.

Its suburban churches, at Belleville, Franklin, Orange, Irvington, and Stone House Plains, are all in good condition, with zealous ministers and united and earnest congregations. QUIDNUNC.

....PASTORS' ASSOCIATION met at 34 Vesey street, Monday, Dec. 4th, and listened to an interesting address by Prof. J. G. Lansing, D.D., on "Soudan-Islam; Income and Outcome." The subject for next Monday is, "A Plea for Capital and Corporations," to be opened by Mr. W. A. Croffut.

....PHILADELPHIA.—A list of 81 new subscribers from the churches of Philadelphia, received on Monday, puts new heart and hope in us as we begin a new year. If the example should prove contagious THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER can be enlarged and improved, and made more and more useful and satisfactory to the Church it endeavors to serve.

....COOPERSVILLE, MICH.—The Church of Polkton sends this message: "We wish to express our thanks through THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER, to the Reformed Church of Canajoharie, N. Y., for their kindness in sending us Christmas presents for our Sabbath-school. The presents were numerous and good, and were heartily received by the school."

....CHRISTMAS FESTIVALS.—The festival of the Sabbath-school of Secaucus, N. J., drew an audience which filled the district school house and listened with the deepest interest to the singing and recitations by the children and to an address by R. R. Green, Esq. This mission was begun and for some years fostered by the Rev. Dr. W. V. V. Mabon. It greatly needs a pastor and is endeavoring to secure one.... The Sunday-school of the Union Hill Church, Hoboken, N. J., at its festival on Christmas evening had also a humorous speech from R. R. Green, Esq, who was introduced as an "evergreen" friend of the school. A real Christmas tree on the platform, decorated with sparkling ornaments, gifts and lights, aroused anticipations which were soon gratified. After the various exercises, our correspondent adds, "Christmas congratulations were extended to the esteemed pastor (Rev. J. Justin) by a host of parishioners and visitors."....A full account is kindly sent to us of the festival at Claverack, N. Y., which we must reduce, for if so much space as this report would occupy is given to one Sabbath-school it must be also to fifty others. The Sabbath-school had three trees, the central one, tall and symmetrical, brilliantly lighted, was laden with gifts for a Sunday-school in Iowa, which had been brought in by the Sabbath-schools of the church. The Rev. Mr. Leggett, Mr. Frank Webb and Prof. Landon made excellent addresses. After the children had received presents, the ladies assumed the direction of affairs and presented to Mrs. Leggett a life-size crayon portrait of her husband, done by Miss Nelson. All this and more made the evening of Dec. 23d one to be remembered.

....MEMORIAL.—Mrs. Catherine E. Campbell, wife of the Rev. Dr. Wm. H. Campbell, President emeritus of Rutgers College, died at their residence in New Brunswick, N. J., during the afternoon of New Year's day. Thousands will sympathize with Dr. Campbell in the loss of the true helpmeet of over fifty years, and hundreds will mourn for Mrs. Campbell with a deep sense of personal bereavement. The Church is deprived of the presence of a beautiful character, daily commending the grace and truth of God,—a nature apparently remarkably composed in trying circumstances and controlled by an unquestioning faith in the Word of God and, therefore, habitually obedient to the Divine law. Few lives have exhibited such uniform regard for the supremacy of the Divine will. And this spirit of filial trust and obedience, beautiful and memorable in itself, has been the more attractive by a union with a gentle, kind, generous and sympathetic disposition. The last years of Mrs. Campbell's long life have been years of great physical weakness, endured with a lovely patience and cheerfulness. While many mourn the end of such a life they will rejoice that it has been lived among us, that they have witnessed it and felt its power, and that it has been continued to over four score years.

....EAST NEW YORK, N. Y.—The congregation made up for a Christmas present to their pastor, Rev. D. Van Pelt, a purse of $180, and individuals expressed their good will by a number of valuable and useful gifts.

....A CORRECTION.—By a mistake which confounded Franklin, N. J., with Franklin Park, Six Mile Run received credit on Dec. 9th for the following: "Tuesday evening, Dec. 1st, was the occasion of a happy surprise to the pastor and his wife. A large number of the people assembled at the parsonage early in the evening, and after enjoying a social time departed, leaving behind not 'footprints,' but baskets and bags full of good things for the storeroom and a goodly handful of that which is needed to keep a minister from worldly cares." That well-deserved manifestation of friendship was made at Franklin, N. J., to the Rev. D. W. Skellenger, the young pastor, and his wife.

....NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J.—The Suydam Street Church, the Rev. Dr. Campbell, pastor, which began one year ago with 17 members, has now over 60. A large proportion of the increase has been by conversions of persons of all ages, from 14 to 80 years, and over one-fourth of the whole number have been gathered in from the world. The chapel will be ready for use in about two weeks. The church building is enclosed and is hastening to completion.

....JERSEY CITY, N. J.—The Free Church, the Rev. Henry Mattice, pastor, received at the communion season of last month seven members on confession of faith in Christ and one by certificate. Meetings were held every evening last week with a special manifestation of religious interest.

....ARABIA'S WARRIOR POETS.—The lecture bearing this title was delivered by Professor J. G. Lansing, D.D., in the Broadway Reformed Church of Paterson, N. J., on Tuesday evening of last week. The eager attention of the audience was held throughout its entire delivery, which occupied about one hour and a quarter. The specimens of Arabian poetry given by the lecturer, which he said were selected haphazard, possessed exquisite and unsurpassed beauty. The sketches of the poets were exceedingly vivid and interesting, and the historic incidents, skilfully interwoven in the lecture, were most fascinating. It is a production of absorbing interest, abounding with eloquent periods.

The lecture opened with a few historical remarks, necessary to the appreciation of the subject, upon the early settlement and character of the Arabian tribes, and the nomadic life of the desert. Poetry of the most perfect kind would be the natural result of Arabian life, character and language. From the same might be inferred the prominent traits of Arabian poetry, which were noted with specimens. The poets were then taken up, which occupied most of the lecture, which was divided into Arabia's Warrior Poets—Pre-Islamic and Post-Islamic. A number of individual poets were brought up under each division, with specimens of their poetry in Arabic together with translations and thrilling incidents in connection with their individual histories and poetry. The wealth, vastness, and importance of Arabic poetry were thus shown, the lecture closing with a notice of the Arabian poet Ibu al Farid, whom the lecturer regarded as the greatest of uninspired poets of all times. A HEARER.

....REV. W. E. DAVIS, of Lebanon, N. J., has recently enjoyed a rather singular experience. During the week ending January 3d, he has performed every function of his ministerial office. He preached the usual Sabbath sermons, enjoyed a social dinner, officiated at a funeral and a wedding, superintended a Bible class and prayer-meeting, preached a preparatory lecture, administered the rite of baptism to infant and adult, received members to the communion on certificate and confession, nominated a new consistory, administered the Lord's Supper, and set in operation a missionary society. I.

....FAIRVIEW, ILL.—Rev. Gerrit Huyser has been installed pastor of this church by a committee of the Classis of Illinois, of which the chairman was Rev. John S. Joralmon, of Norwood Park, who was the pastor at Fairview for nearly twenty-five years. He preached the sermon from 2 Corinthians 4 : 1. It was a very practical and affecting discourse, which touched every heart The "office for the installation of a minister" was read by the venerable Rev. Samuel A. Bumstead, of Norris, Ill., who also offered the prayer of installation, after which the presiding officer, in the name of the Classis, declared the pastoral relation fully constituted. Revs. W. H. Hitchcock and Height, of Fairview, and Rev. A. G. Zigeler, of Havana, Ill., assisted in the services. The occasion was much enjoyed by a large audience.

....OUR FOREIGN MISSIONS.—A Serious Financial Statement.—The receipts into the Treasury in December, 1885, were $6,900.12. In 1884 they were $8,979.97, showing a falling off of more than $2,000. In the eight months from May 1st to December 31st, the Treasury received in 1884 $38,421, and in 1885 $28,471, a diminution in receipts of almost exactly $10,000.

It is well known that the appropriations for the year were $80,000, to which point they were reduced after long and anxious deliberation. It is the very least sum that will at all suffice. In fact it is not probable that the actual expenditures of this year will fall below those of the year preceding, when they reached the sum of $81,656. To complete the year, therefore, without adding to the debt of $9,000 with which it began, and also without reducing it by a single dollar, will require about $53,000 at the very least,—an average of $13,250 per month.

Brethren, it is for you to determine whether this shall be done. The needs of the work are no less than they were a year ago. It is no less worthy of your confidence and support. It no less demands and deserves your fervent prayers and faithful efforts in its behalf. For it is the Lord's work and not ours. On it His favor manifestly rests, and in the blessings He bestows on it we are blessed ourselves. It is for us to render according to the benefit received.

....THE HOUSTON STREET German Evangelical Mission Church of this city celebrated its 50th anniversary last Sabbath. The attendance was large. The members of former years came from their residences in neighboring cities and towns to show their attachment to this very useful church. The interior of the building was adorned with flowers and with the national German and American flags. In the morning the Rev. Mr. Geyer delivered an historical discourse. In the afternoon addresses by former pupils and teachers were delivered before the Sabbath-school. Congratulations were presented at the evening service by Rev. Drs. T. W. Chambers and Edward R. Reed. The services continue during this week on every evening except Saturday.

....POMPTON, N. J.—The notice last week of the Christmas festivals at Pompton and Wanaque may lead to the inference that the gift of $100 to the pastor came from Wanaque, whereas it was from the entire congregation, Pompton contributing much the larger part.

....WESTERN ITEMS.—Rev. G. Huyser, of Pella, Iowa, was installed on Dec 10th, as pastor of the Church of Fairview, Ill.... Rev. H. Boer was installed last week as pastor of the church at Maurice, Iowa....The Sabbath school of Vriesland, Mich., contributed on Christmas day $146 60 to the treasury of the Board of Foreign Missions.

Gleanings from our Exchanges.

....A heavy gale of wind prevailed at Castleton, N. Y., Sunday morning. There was a large congregation at the Reformed church. The Rev. Alan D. Campbell, the pastor, had just announced his text and was about to proceed with his discourse, when a terrible crash was heard, and in an instant the auditorium was filled with the debris of the ceiling and roof, through which the chimney had fallen. The wind had blown down the chimney, which crashed through the roof. The organ was badly damaged. The services were abruptly closed by the unexpected arrival of the chimney in the audience-room. None of the congregation were injured.—Chatham Courier, Dec. 30, 1885.

....Rev. W. H. Gleason, D.D., of Newark, N. J., who has received a unanimous call from the church at Hudson, N. Y., to become its pastor, preached his first sermon to the congregation Sunday morning. He took for his text Gen. 24: 49: "And now if ye will deal kindly and truly with my master, tell me; that I may turn to the right hand, or to the left." His address to the church, founded on this expressive passage, was clear, earnest and appropriate, and gave no uncertain sound. He defined the relations that should exist between pastor and people, and the duties of each to their Church and their Master, and to each other. The church was well filled, and this first discourse of the prospective pastor, although purely practical in its nature, left a most favorable impression upon the audience. It was evident that among Mr. Gleason's strongest characteristics may be counted earnestness, sincerity and devotion to his pastoral work.—Hudson Gazette, Dec. 31, 1885.

....On Christmas Eve the Rev. Wm. H. Clark, D.D., pastor of the Nyack Reformed Church, was presented with a purse of $100 from members of his congregation. The ladies of the church also gave Mrs. Clark an elegant crazy quilt made by their own hands.

....At the re-occupation, after repairs which have already been noticed, of the Second Church of Hackensack, N. J., on the last Sabbath of the old year, the pastor, Rev. Arthur Johnson, instead of preaching a sermon gave an interesting historical statement, from which it appears that the church was organized just thirty years ago, with twelve members, only two of whom remain. Mr. Johnson is the fourth pastor. His predecessors were Rev. James Demarest, Jr., Dr. George H. Fisher, and Rev. Cyrus B. Durand. Members received under Mr. Demarest, 95; under Dr. Fisher, 76; under Mr. Durand, 109; between Mr. Durand and Mr. Johnson, 3; during Mr. Johnson's pastorate, 31; total, 314. Membership at beginning of Mr. Johnson's pastorate, 96; added, 31; dismissed 4; present membership, 123.

The pastor also read a letter from Wm. T. Knapp, announcing that he had ordered for the church a baptismal fount as a memorial to his father, Cyrus Knapp. G. W. Conklin read a statement for the repairs committee, showing that the entire cost of decorating the building was $2,600, about four-fifths of which amount had been already secured or was pledged. Without any special appeal the balance due was made up in the collection which followed, and there was a surplus of $85.

....In connection with usual Christmas festivities by the Sabbath-school of the church at Freehold, N. J., the pastor, Rev. I. P. Brokaw, read a letter of appeal from Rev. N. D. Williamson, of Dakota, stating that a log church was in course of construction, but that they were unable to finish it for want of funds and that they had no place to worship in, consequently were compelled to ask for aid from their brethren. After the letter had been read, Master Joseph Combs and Frank Conover, representing a Western and an Eastern man, walked up either aisle of the church and on meeting, a neat little dialogue ensued illustrating the above, when the man from the East said there was a Sunday-school at Freehold, N. J., ready and anxious to help them out of their trouble. Mr. Brokaw then called upon the several classes of the school for their Christmas offerings which were in the form of shingles cut from pasteboard, upon each of which was fastened a dollar bill. A young man was now sent out after a carpenter to put the shingles on the roof of a miniature log church, (the handiwork of Mr. A. Brower,) placed in the centre of the pulpit platform on a foundation trimmed with evergreens. This church represented the church in Dakota. The carpenter soon arrived in the person of Mr. Brower, in his working attire with his tool-chest on his shoulder ready for work, which was immediately begun by the nailing on the shingles furnished by the school. When the work was finished it was ascertained that $44 worth of shingles had been put on Mr. Williamson's church. This pleasant exercise was followed by the distribution of presents, the pastor receiving a handsome revolving book-case.

....At Ghent, N. Y., the Christmas entertainment consisted of the cantata, "The Birth of Christ," which was rendered with all the acceptance that appropriate and beautiful costumes, bright and cheerful music sung in good time by well trained voices, were adapted to give. A large audience was present, and the receipts were $60. In response to a generally expressed desire, the cantata was subsequently repeated. An interesting feature of the service was the reading by the pastor, Rev. J. B. Drury, D.D., of a letter from the Girls' School at Amoy, China, in acknowledgment of a gift of dolls and patch-work, which this school with others united in sending about a year ago.

....The Holland City News devotes over three columns to an entertaining description of the celebration of Christmas in the churches and Sabbath-schools of Holland, Mich. It is manifest that the good people of that city are proficient in decorative art, as well as in framing and executing excellent programmes. The First Church held its exercises in the college chapel. The missionary boxes of the Sabbath-school were opened, and it was found that $102 had been accumulated during the year for missionary purposes.

....A correspondent of the Highland Democrat writes in an exceedingly pleasant strain about the Christmas entertainment in the church at Peekskill.

Co-operation in Foreign Missions.

A PUBLIC meeting for the promotion of coöperation in Foreign Missions will be held in the Brick Presbyterian Church, corner of Fifth avenue and Thirty-seventh street, New York, on Tuesday evening, January 12th, at 7 30 o'clock, under the auspices of the American Sections of the Executive Committee, and of the Committee on Coöperation in Foreign Missions, appointed by the Third General Council of the Alliance of Reformed Churches, holding the Presbyterian system, at its meeting in Belfast, in 1884.

The Rev. T. W. Chambers, D.D., Chairman of the Executive Committee, will preside, and brief addresses on important phases of the subject will be delivered by the Revs. J. H. A. Bomberger, D.D., President of Ursinus College, Pa., of the Reformed Church in the United States; J. B. Dales, D.D., Philadelphia, United Presbyterian Church; M. H. Houston, D.D., Baltimore, Presbyterian Church (South); F. F. Ellinwood, D.D., New York, Presbyterian Church (North); Jacob Chamberlain, D.D., Arcot Mission, India, Reformed (Dutch) Church; and Rev. Thomas Wardrope, D.D., of the Presbyterian Church, Canada.

Officers and Managers of missionary societies and friends of the cause are invited to attend.

By order of the Committees,

WILLIAM J. R. TAYLOR, Secretary.

The General Outlook.

....The Bombay Guardian reports a remarkable revival among the native Christians of the Church Mission at Tricur, Southern India. It was first manifested in the Girls' Boarding School in the evening after a public meeting, when women and girls were prostrated on the floor in great distress on account of sin. At the next public service so many came forward for prayers that the whole church was required for an inquiry room.

....The Scandinavian Lutheran Theological Seminaries sent out last spring forty graduates to enter the ministry.

....Rev. E. P. Hammond is now holding evangelistic meetings in London. During three weeks' services held in Dr. Sinclair Patterson's church 500 professed conversion.

....Of the 42,972 new members who came into the Presbyterian churches last year on confession of their faith in Christ, 20,778, or nearly one-half, were from the Sabbath-schools of the Church.

....Minnesota now has 141 Congregational churches.

....Of the eight Congregational pastors in Hartford, Conn., seven are sons of ministers.

...Mr. Moody held a two days' Convention for Christian Workers in Poughkeepsie, November 27th–28th. Union meetings were held for ten days before his coming, and were continued daily under the leadership of Mr. E. W. Bliss for a month thereafter. The results of the six weeks of special effort have been marked by the quickening of the spiritual life of many of the churches. The number of converts cannot definitely be told as yet, but is thought to be not less than 150. All of the churches received additions to their membership.

....Three Unitarian churches in Cambridge, Mass., have consolidated.

News of the Week.

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 30.—Mr. Gladstone awaits the action of the Conservatives before declaring his own policy. His birthday was celebrated yesterday. He is seventy-six years old....Mr. Pendleton, the United States Minister to Germany, gave a large reception at Berlin....There is thought to be no further danger from smallpox in Canada. ....The officers of several steamships report heavy storms at sea. The schooner "Cleopatra" was lost and nine of the crew drowned....Two lives were lost in a railroad disaster near Chester, Penn....A fearful explosion occurred at midnight in the Gulf City Oil Mills at Mobile. Four men killed and six badly wounded....Miners are still digging for the entombed at Nanticoke. ....The Secretary of the Treasury has issued a bond call for 10,000,000 of three per cent bonds....A policeman in New York city has been arrested for stealing a watch. ...Mr. Vanderbilt's will has been admitted to probate....The policemen of New York city have been charged to kill all vagrant dogs. ..Professor Edwin D. Sanborn died in New York city yesterday....A tug-boat blew up at the Atlantic Dock Basin, Brooklyn....A vein of natural gas has been struck in Cleveland, O....There is a great deal of feeling among many people in Elizabeth, N. J., against the Singer Sewing Machine Co....Ten men were badly burned by gas at Kitanning, Penn.

THURSDAY, 31.—A severe fight between the rebels in Egypt and the British took place near Kosheh; the British entirely routed the rebels with severe loss on both sides....Home Rule for Ireland continues to be a theme for protracted discussion both in Ireland and England....Queen Christiana of Spain was sworn in as regent before the Cortes to-day....A daughter of Mr. Gladstone is about to be married at Hawarden. ....A terrible eruption of the volcano of Colima, Mexico, is taking place, causing a great deal of consternation among the surrounding inhabitants....An Orangeman's riot is feared at Conception Bay, N. F.... An earthquake shock was felt in Vienna, Austria....United States troops attacked and dispersed a band of Mexican Revolutionists on an island in the Rio Grande.... United States Treasurer Jordan is to take charge of the Sub Treasury at New York. ....Charges of embezzlement are made against the ex-Lieutenant-Governor of Ohio. ....The Rev. Dr. Kendrick is appointed acting President of Vassar College.... Brigham Young Hampton was convicted of conspiracy and given the heaviest penalty the law could inflict....Henry Chase, the marine artist, has become suddenly insane. ....The Board of Estimate of New York has greatly reduced the amounts asked for by the Sheriff and County Clerk....The miners of Pennsylvania are forming camps for a systematic prolongation of strikes.

FRIDAY, JAN. 1.—M. Brisson's resignation is accepted....By a proclamation which will be issued in India and England to-morrow, Burmah will be formally annexed to the British Empire. The territories formerly governed by King Thebaw will no longer be under his rule....M. Pasteur has again inoculated the four children from Newark, N. J., and is confident that they are improving....Judge Yates, of Peoria, Ill., is a defaulter; has escaped from that city to Canada. Many estates have been mismanaged by him, and his defalcations will amount to at least $250,000....An old woman aged sixty, living at Harrison, N. J., was murdered yesterday for her money....The propeller "Pequot," of Providence, ran into the ferryboat "Alaska" of the Roosevelt Ferry line. No loss of life... The Brooklyn Bridge carried about 21,000,000 passengers in the year just ended, and the Brooklyn Elevated Railroad carried about 6,000,000....A son of William Shaw, of Troy, N. Y., died recently, having been bitten by a cat. The cat had hydrophobia....There is a great deal of conflicting opinion respecting the piece system in the State Prison of New Jersey....The furnace fires of Youngstown, Ohio, are to be relighted....The appropriations for the city of New York amount to over $33,000,000.

(Continued on page twelve.)

Our Contributors.

Mother.

[The following lines were written in honor of the memory of Mrs Clarrissa Herkimer, who died in the 77th year of her age. She was the mother of Mrs. Kate H. Bungay, and the widow of Mr. Joseph Herkimer, a neal descendant of the Herkimer family of Revolutionary fame. She was an amiable woman, an affectionate wife and mother, and loyal to all the duties and relations of life. The village and county of Herkimer, N. Y., were named from the family to which she belonged.]

I'VE been told that, in her young womanhood,
She was a comely maid, indeed the belle
Of all the country round; old people tell
Of her attractive charms. The neighborhood
Lauded her beauty—it was understood
She had no peer, and few were loved so well.
To win her hand was love's sweet miracle.
In all life's phases she was pure and good;
A model mother, loyal, tender, fond,
Watching with sleepless vigilance and care
Her children. Now in the restful life beyond
She lives and waits to meet her loved ones there.
The legacy of her example given,
Worth more than gold, is like a gift from heaven.

GEORGE W. BUNGAY.

Who Will Not Give One Dollar and a Quarter for Christian Work in China, India and Japan Before the Close of the Financial Year?

BY REV. JOHN W. CONKLIN.

DEAR CHRISTIANS OF THE REFORMED CHURCH IN AMERICA: We missionaries have been watching with sinking hearts the reports of receipts for Foreign Missions as they have been published month by month. We hailed with joy the resolution of Synod to lay $100,000 at the feet of the Master for His work among the heathen. But the churches have not, so far, lived up to that resolution. A strong, hearty pull must be made from this time until the close of the financial year if that is not to go into the long list of "broken resolutions."

You know that a dollar and a quarter from every member of the Reformed Church will make up the required amount. The Board and the pastors know a great many who will give this amount and more. They know there are a few, perhaps a very few, but still some, who cannot give this amount, because they are too poor. They need to know who will not. Will you stand up and be counted, men and women, who eat and drink at the communion table in remembrance of Christ, and yet will not give this small amount to carry out His command to "preach the Go pel to every creature?"

When Gideon gathered his 32,000 men to march against the Midianites God told him to proclaim to them, "Whosoever is fearful and afraid, let him return." And 22,000 left the ranks. They were better away than on the battlefield. Who of the 80,000 enlisted soldiers in our division of the army of Christ wish to withdraw from the conflict with false religions and ignorance in Asia? There are very few who, if they give with any interest and at all systematically, cannot give two and a half cents a week for "campaign expenses." Who will not? It were well if such would hand in their names to their pastors or send them to the secretary of the Board, for they want to know on whom to depend. If 30,000 or 50,000 must give the whole amount, let it be known. Those that are fearful or unwilling may do well enough on parades but they only clog the battle advance.

Send in your names, ye who will not give, and be counted out. If it only be known where the money is not coming from, more concentrated effort can be made to collect it where it must come from.

But before you send in your names let me ask you two or three questions:

1. Have you carefully decided that it is not your duty to give? Is your conscience satisfied when you refuse? If so, why?

Are the heathen too far away? They are on the opposite side of the earth, they are of different races, and you may think you have no call to help them. But the traders do not think it too far for traffic. American produce and manufactures are for sale here in every market. We eat American flour, burn American oil, and take American medicines. The natives use American drill largely for jackets, and cheap American watches are flooding the market.

The news of Governor Cleveland's election to the Presidency reached us sooner than many in the United States. The nations are drawing closer together. Read again the parable of the Good Samaritan and see if you ought to confine yourself in your benevolence to those of your own nation or neighborhood. These people need the Gospel, and you know it, and you can help them.

Is no good done by missions to the heathen? How have you found that out? Have you read the reports? Do you think they are lies? Do you think we missionaries "tamper with the returns?" If you were here you could count every Christian we report. And what is the showing for the last ten years for the whole field of our Church in Asia? Do not skip this. In 1873 there were 1,323 communicants in our mission churches in China, India and Japan. In 1883, 2,952, or more than double. We do not admit to the Lord's table except upon the witness of a good confession, and we suspend for sufficient cause.

In 1873 there were 1,022 boys and girls receiving education in our mission schools. In 1883 there were 2,198, or more than double. Most of these children in India, probably nine-tenths, would never learn even to read, were it not for mission work. Now they are taught, besides, the precepts, the prayers, the hymns and the life of Christianity. Here are only two items, but they are the most significant. If they represent no good, then why are you a believer in Christianity?

Do you think the foreign work costs too much? It is not too much to say that in ten years there have been 2,000 converts and 5,000 children taught to read in our mission fields. Probably the appropriations for the work have been $700,000, or less than the congregational expenses of the home churches for one year. Is this a bad showing? How much money was expended upon you, dear friend, directly or indirectly, for your teaching and your church privileges before you were brought into the fold?

Have you no pastor for your church, or one not interested? If the former be the case, your church expenses are probably less and you have more to spare for work among the heathen. If you are a respon sible man or woman you can find a way to get your money into the proper channel. Send a money order, send postage stamps, send in any way to Dr. Cobb, at 34 Vesey street, New York city, and you will have done your part. If your pastor does not seek to lead his people to prayer and labor in this line, let the people lead him. You are ready enough to do this when he fails in what you think is his duty to you personally. If his preaching is distasteful, if he neglects you in sickness or sorrow, he will probably hear of it. Can you not let him know that you want to take part in answering the prayer, "Thy kingdom come?" I do not say, "Make it hot for him," but with Christian zeal make it warm for him.

2. Are you simply neglecting to give your share? This, in its effect upon the treasury and the work, is certainly as bad as an utter refusal, and I know not but it shows almost as much of a lack of Christ's spirit. The question of the writer to the Hebrews, "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salva tion?" has its application to the believer as well as the unbeliever. That salvation you claim as yours—given you by Christ. It is a salvation from sin, from selfishness. Are you neglecting it? Do you think so little of it that you care not to give it to others? The man who neglected his one talent after he received it, lost it. "Neglect not the gift that is in thee."

The failure of the Church at home means "cutting down" in our fields. If you only knew how we dread those words "cut down." How can we do it? Where shall we begin?

I read recently in a Tamil tract that tender story of the father and mother, in time of famine, who concluded that they must part with one of their chil dren. How they went from bed to bed, as the little ones lay asleep, to decide which they could spare—and could not give one up. Must I go into the boys' seminary and say to a part of them, "Go home; we cannot support you any longer; you cannot become preachers of the Gospel?" I went to them one morn ing last year and told them that unless they would consent to go without turbans, and get along with less jackets, and wear the same ones on Sunday as on week days, some of them must go home, for the ex pense was too great. Without a word of murmur they said, "We will do with less clothing, but let us all stay." I cannot cut them down much closer. They must have enough to eat. They get meat only twice a week and have no luxuries.

Must we go to some of our villages and tell them that we cannot keep up their churches and schools? To which ones shall we go? Each missionary will say, "I cannot do that." During the past year we have received written pledges from several new villages, agreeing to give up idolatry and all heathen practices and become Christians. They must have instruction if we keep these pledges. Must we say, "Take back your promises; we cannot help you?" We missionaries in India are decided that before we do that some of us must cut down expenses by leaving the field and going home. Every one of us, I think, is giving more than a tenth of his salary to the work. Which of us shall go? The Church at home and her Board must decide that. We are ready to obey her call.

But we have not lost faith or hope. We believe that the demands will be met. Now send in your names, ye that will not give your proportion for this work, that the others may put their heads and their hearts close together and come close to God and fill up His treasury.

The Heretic Priest; A Tale of Reformation Days in the Netherlands.

(Translated from the Dutch of E Gerdes, for the Christian Intelligencer, by Rev. Daniel Van Pelt.)

CHAPTER I.—THE LATIN EXERCISE.

IT was the year 1560. Philip II., King of Spain, having come into possession of the Netherland Provinces by the abdication of his father, Emperor Charles V., had determined to crush the Reformation, which was rapidly spreading throughout the entire country and finding adherents among both great and small. One who is familiar with the history of Holland of those days has doubtless often shuddered at the recital of the frightful destruction of human life to which the religious persecutions led. To be possessed of a Bible was a sufficient reason for dragging the owner before the courts of the Inquisition, an organization specially charged with searching out and punishing heretics, as the Reformed were called. Here the victim was subjected to the most excruciating tortures to make him reveal others guilty of the same heinous crime; and finally, unless he abjured the Reformed faith, with all manner of blasphemous imprecations he was publicly burned at the stake.

About ten or fifteen miles east of the ancient Episcopal city of Louvain is located the little village of Weersbeek. Surrounded by many beautiful forests, and watered by a small stream emptying into the Demer River, which flowed past the city of Aerschot, this village might well be considered as fortunately situated. The inhabitants were peasants, who, besides cultivating the soil, also drove a brisk trade in wool, which on stated days of the week they brought to market in the cities of Louvain, Hal and Aerschot. Attached to the old order of things, and almost unacquainted with what was going on in the outside world, they faithfully maintained all the institutions of a Church, which called itself the only Saving Church and made its adherents believe that it held the keys to the gates of heaven.

At one extremity of the village stood the little parish church, and near it, half concealed amid the dense foliage of a number of ancient linden trees, was seen the dwelling of the parish priest.

Upon a certain afternoon in the summer of the above mentioned year the priest was seated in his study. He rested the left elbow upon the rude arm of his oaken chair, and seemed absorbed in the contents of the book that lay before him. He was a handsome man, of a noble yet winning expression of countenance, while his lofty and ample brow indicated an acute intelligence and bespoke a gifted nature.

The study was a roomy apartment, provided with many articles which gave proof that the priest pursued his researches in many directions. Near the small window opposite the door stood an old globe with the constellations and the planets marked upon it, and by its side lay many charts, evidently prepared by the clergyman himself. Half concealed within the shadow of the window-bench of another small window to the left of the door was seated a youth of about seventeen years, busily engaged writing something upon a piece of paper. From all appearances his task was no easy one for him, and he seemed frequently on the point of asking the priest a question, had he not been afraid to disturb him. And indeed the latter was so wholly wrapped up in what he read that he had not even noticed the youth's repeated coughs, the only sign he dared make. Closing his eyes, and forgetting that he was not alone, he murmured softly to himself, yet loud enough to be heard distinctly by the lad:

"Wonderful! The more I read this book the clearer it becomes to my mind that I belong to a Church which does not look to Jesus Christ as her chief and only foundation. How ignorant have I been! Consecrated to the priesthood at Louvain, without ever having read a page of God's Word, but blindly accepting everything I was taught to believe. Scarce eight weeks have I been in possession of this Bible, and now I seem to have different eyes for everything. I, who believed and every day preached that men could win heaven by good works, chastenings, fasts, prayers and almsgivings, and calling on the saints—I am astounded at the words I was just reading. Let me turn to them once more."

And opening his eyes he followed with his finger the words as he read them in a somewhat louder tone:

"Therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in His sight. Being justified freely by His grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus."

But he ceased suddenly and grew visibly pale, for he now recollected that he was not alone and that he was committing a heinous crime against both State and Church. He placed his hand before his face, and looking through the open fingers he sought to ascertain whether the youth had been an attentive or inattentive listener. But when he perceived that the latter was busily occupied with his writing he was reassured, pushed the book, which had lain upon his knees, into a drawer of the table, hid beneath the heavy folds of the green cloth covering, and, raising his voice, he said:

"Well, Floris, how are you getting along?" But before the youth could reply a new cause for alarm presented itself to his mind, for he noticed that one of the windows was open. He rose and went up to it to see if anyone could have overheard him there, and asked the lad:

"Did you see anyone go by the window within a few moments?"

"Yes, your reverence," replied Floris. "A little while ago I saw a shadow passing along the opposite wall, and where there is a shadow there must be a body to cast it."

"And did you follow the movements of the shadow?"

"Yes, it stopped and seemed to be bending down towards the house."

"Could you not tell whose shadow it was?"

"No; but a few moments after, when the shadow had once more straightened itself, I saw just over the edge of the window sill—"

"Whom?" inquired the priest, filled with a growing anxiety.

"I saw no one, your reverence, but I saw something."

"And what was it?"

"The well worn hood of a monk."

The priest became greatly agitated. He held both hands clasped to his head and covering his eyes. He remained a few seconds in this attitude, then, recollecting himself, he turned to Floris, who was wondering why the priest could be so deeply moved.

"And to whom do you suppose the monk's hood belonged?"

"O, I am sure it could have been no one else than Father Josephus, for none of the other monks has so old a hood."

The priest grew pale again at the mention of this name. But, as if he had determined on a certain course, he changed the subject and asked:

"Did you hear any of the words that I was saying to myself?"

"Yes, your reverence; I"—the lad hesitated, hardly knowing how much of the truth he ought to admit.

"Speak freely, Floris. I know that you love me, and am convinced that you wish me no harm. You have heard enough to put my life in your hands. Can you keep what I have spoken secret from all outsiders? Do you understand me?"

"Oh, your reverence," said Floris, approaching him whom he venerated as one of the saints, and venturing to press his hands, "not a word of mine shall do you harm. I will be silent as the grave, and speak only as you permit it. But must I not say a word of this even to my mother? Or suppose Father Jo—"

Before he could finish the name the door opened, and Father Josephus entered in person. The latter was attired in a coarse monk's gown. A long rosary and a wooden cross were suspended from the girdle. He carried a huge volume under his arm, which he laid upon the table as he entered the room. His countenance was more expressive of cunning than of intelligence, and his age betokened none of the friendliness and gentleness of the parish priest of Weersbeek. He saluted the priest with excessive politeness, and patting Floris on the head, he said:

"So, so, my lad, ever industrious. You will soon be master of the language. With the help of the Most Holy Mother of God, your pastor will ere long be able to take you to Louvain to prosecute your studies at the University. For you wish to become a priest, do you not?" he added, with a significant smile, while looking eagerly towards the papers which lay scattered upon the table, and from which he had not taken his eyes since he entered the room. Finally, putting out his hand to take some of them, in order to secure proofs of that about which he had strong suspicions, he was hindered in his purpose by Floris, who covered the slips of paper with both hands.

"What, what, what!" said the monk, who had not expected this interference, and whose suspicions were confirmed; "what! do you keep your hands upon these? Let me see them."

"Worthy father," replied Floris, who had not much liking for the monk, "it is the conjugation of the verb moneo, and I have made so many mistakes that I am ashamed to let you see it."

"Pooh, pooh! No excuses! I, too, made many mistakes; come, let me look at those papers."

But it seemed as if Floris was determined not to yield his verb moneo. He pressed his hands all the more firmly upon the papers, and threw a beseeching glance toward his preceptor. The latter had been inclined to regard the thing as a jest, but when he gathered from the lad's look that Floris must be desirious of concealing something of importance from the monk, he thought it was time to interfere.

"Worthy father," he said, "the lad is afraid to let you see his scribbling. I am sure, if you ask it, he will give you a Latin translation of anything you may desire. Won't you, Floris?"

"Certainly, certainly, your reverence," replied the youth, "to-morrow I will furnish the father a neat copy of the conjugation."

"No, no, no!" exclaimed the monk, who was angry that a mere lad had defied his authority. "No, no, no! I will see those papers now. Take your hands away!"

With a sudden jerk he drew Floris' hands away from the papers. But the latter, still resolved not to give them up, threw himself bodily upon the table, hoping thus to prevent the monk's access to them. But it availed nothing; Father Josephus being stronger than he, pushed him partially over with one hand, and with the other drew one of the slips from under him. No sooner had Floris noticed this, than he sprang toward the monk and tore it from his hand. Nevertheless, the monk retained a portion, with which he triumphantly betook himself to one of the windows and read as follows:

"'Conjugation, verb moneo.' So, the indicative is correct; also the imperfect; but what is this? 'The perfect of moneo: being justified freely by his grace, by'"—

He could proceed no further. The lad sprang upon him a second time and wrenched the paper from his hands. But it was now too late; Father Josephus had already seen too much of the words that had been written down by Floris, while his teacher was meditating aloud. His suspicions were now fully confirmed. The priest of Weersbeek had been detected by him meddling with the heinous doctrines of the heretics.

"Ha, ha; ay, ay, your reverence," he laughed mockingly. "This is the way you teach your pupil Latin? I must say, quite a novel conjugation of the verb moneo."

(To be continued.)

Revival at Cobleskill, N. Y.

THE churches in the vicinity of Cobleskill, Schoharie Co., N. Y., have been refreshed with a remarkable revival of religious interest. Under the preaching of the Rev. Dr. Earl, a Baptist evangelist from Boston, who ministered daily in the Methodist Church of Cobleskill with the pastor, the Rev. Mr. Atwell, many were converted.

The Reformed church at Lawyersville, two miles west of Cobleskill, has been under the charge of Mr. Fagg, who has labored there since last July with great acceptance, and afternoon services have been for some time held in the rink at Cobleskill, where Mr. Fagg has preached on Sundays to congregations of from four to six hundred. So much interest has been developed that it has been thought practicable to organize a Reformed church in Cobleskill, and success would seem insured could Mr. Fagg be released by the Board of Foreign Misssions for this purpose.

On the Sabbath, December 20th, 1885, that the writer had the privilege of being in Cobleskill, about ninety were received into the communion of the Lutheran church and one hundred and seventeen into the communion of the Methodist church. The rink, at which he preached in the afternoon, contained a congregation of four hundred, and the Methodist church was packed in the evening with a congregation of over three hundred. Two hundred and thirty-seven came to the communion in the latter church, which was administered in the evening because of the length of the morning services when the converts were received.

About five hundred have united with churches in Cobleskill and the vicinity, and the prospect indicates steadiness in those received and an increase of accessions. E. J. R.

Modern Languages.

IN America we are so much by ourselves that we seldom learn to speak foreign languages. The French are much like us because everyone learns theirs. The Hollanders, on the other hand, learn three, because, they say, none of their great neighbors will learn theirs. As you fall in with travelling merchants and salesmen, you are struck with the number of languages they know, and the farther you travel in the Orient the more the wonder grows; six or seven being often at the command of one man. These peripatetic polyglots do the business of the world, and if America is to take a hand in the struggle for commerce her sons must have a living knowledge of other tongues. In illustration: Almost all American letters which I receive to open business, ask for English-speaking houses, and as these are very rare the business cannot proceed. The self-complacency that English will carry you everywhere is partially true in the case of travellers, but when applied to trade is utter nonsense.

A first-class passage to the Continent may be had for $40. A boy can live there, if he will, cheaper than at home. With a moderate amount of brains and backbone, two or three years will lay up more life-capital than in twice or twenty times the time spent at home. A member of a London firm told me that he would guarantee a position in one week to any young man who could read, write and speak the Arabic, at a salary of $5,000 per year and little to do at that.

The English seem jealous of the Germans who, in England, as everywhere, are making their way, and say that a German will do anything and live on anything, as Juvenal says of the people among whom we are living,

"Omnia novit
Graeculus esuriens in coelum jusseris ibit."

There may be something in this, but in a short trip across the Continent I fell in with two of these Germans, one bound for Roumania, the other for Smyrna. Both were polyglots, domiciled in England, married to English wives and likely

"Viscera magnarum domum dominique futuri."

My intercourse with these men and others since, assures me that the secret of their success was in their starting with one or two languages ahead, being sent abroad on that account, and while abroad having learned more and made themselves invaluable to their partners. This polyglotism does not prove any peculiar gift on the part of these people, but rather shows the ease with which languages are acquired after you once break out of the shell of your own.

Something peculiar to me is the way they are acquired, even by educated people, namely, by the ear. Of course, this depends for its ease on the discrimination of sounds and the memory of sound. A friend of mine, an Armenian by blood and an American by citizenship, speaks Armenian, Turkish, Greek, Italian, French and English, of which he knows Turkish and Greek only by the ear. His wife, of American blood and education, follows him with English, French, Italian and Greek, with a smattering of two or three more. This lady, born of a Greek mother and living here, told me that she could not write the Greek nor read it, unless plainly written. It had been learned by the ear, and so was the language that all of us first learned.

I think, with my new eyes, that were I to begin again, I would attack the living languages to master them, in order to get hold of the strongest line that reins the world, champ the bit as she may. R.

....As the result of an inspection among the Sioux Indians, it is said that of the seventy-one Indian boys and girls educated at the Hampton school, Va., only four have returned to the "blanket."

....There are now in our country fifteen hundred more Congregational churches than there were in 1860. But there are only twenty-seven more students in the theological seminaries now than then.

The Reading Room.

Our Book-Shelves.

... "LECTURES ON THE EPISTLES FOR SUNDAYS AND THE CHIEF FESTIVALS." By Joseph A. Seiss, D.D., LL.D. Complete in two volumes. In a firm grasp of the Word of God; in its clear and vigorous presentation by means of comprehensive analysis, short, stimulating sentences and apt illustrations; in freshness of thought and spiritual fervor; in simplicity; in adaptation to minds of average as well as of the highest culture, these lectures way well be taken as models. Dr. Seiss is through and through a Lutheran. For forty-three years he has been in the active ministry of that Church; and excepting a few interpretations in accordance with the distinctive tenets of the Lutheran Church, there is not a sermon in either volume that might not be consistently preached from any evangelical pulpit. We feel free to say that as they could not have been heard, when he delivered them, without intellectual pleasure and spiritual profit, neither can they be read without similar results. Dr. Seiss has a fertile mind and is a fluent, fervent writer, and, withal, a careful writer. He has evidently written so much for publication that he has trained himself into the good habit of carefulness, avoiding, at the same time, stiffness. The greatest care is apparent in these lectures, in the framing of his analyses, the arrangement of his thoughts and the construction of his sentences. His lectures on the Gospels, Daniel, Leviticus, the Apocalypse, and the Epistle to the Hebrews, not to mention others, have all been published, and some of them republished in other countries and languages. These last volumes perhaps show his best work, as being the fruit of his riper knowledge and experience. We esteem them worthy of a place in every minister's library. (Lutheran Bookstore, Phila.)

...."THE HEAVENLY VISION, and Other Sermons." By Henry M. Booth, D.D. This volume by the pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Englewood, N. J., is an exceedingly pleasant one. Dr. Booth possesses the rare gift of being natural without being obvious. He treats a topic in a fresh, vigorous manner which excites and keeps attention. Nothing is apparently said for effect, yet the discourse is effective. An evangelical spirit prevails throughout, and the truth is presented with clearness and fidelity. It is the old, old Gospel, but the form is modern and the dress adapted to our own day. The familiar phrase, "dry as a sermon," does not apply to any of the contents of this volume. (A. D. F. Randolph & Co.)

...."ATONEMENT AND LAW; or, Redemption in Harmony with Law as Revealed in Nature." By John M. Armour. It is not easy to see why this book was written. It is orthodox enough but makes no addition to our knowledge. The author finds fault with existing theologians but fails to justify his grounds of censure. (Christian Statesman Publishing Co., Phila.)

...."TIME FLIES, a Reading Diary," by Christina G. Rossetti, and dedicated to her mother, is a very useful and beautiful duodecimo volume of 340 pages, with lessons and texts of Scripture and other happy quotations from various sources. It is a Christian companion and deserves a place at every fireside. Some of the pages gleam with gems of excellent prose and genuine poetry. The author has won "green laurels and golden honors" in the field of letters and is recognized by those competent to judge as a true poet. (Roberts Brothers.)

...."ROADSIDE SONGS OF TUSCANY" is completed with Part X., which includes two additional illustrations of the legend of St. Christopher, one being his bearing of the Divine Infant over the ford, and the other his interview with Him at the shore. These pictures of the Holy Child are as exquisite as anything in the whole series. Miss Alexander's St. Christopher is too much idealized and, if we may say so, genteel—to our taste. There is, also, a lovely little Evening Prayer, the original of which has been sung by the peasants and taught to their children from time immemorial. Two descriptive and narrative letters of "Francesca," Mr. Ruskin's Note on the Legend of Christopher, and two brief ballads, are likewise found in this number. We are glad to reiterate what we have several times said, expressive of our delight in this unique and lovely work. It is cheering, in this day of "art for the sake of art" (which means often filth for the sake of art and vice versa), to find the pure and childlike and holy combined, as in the golden age of art, with the finest artistic idealizations. Such a work as this is a well-spring of exalting and refining influence in any home, into which it may be introduced. (John Wiley & Sons.)

..."A POLITICAL CRIME." By A. M. Gibson. This is a scathing review of the acts and proceedings in 1876 which resulted in the declaration that Samuel J. Tilden had received only 180 electoral votes while Rutherford B. Hayes had received 181, and was thereby chosen President. The story of the Louisiana Returning Board and the manipulation of the Florida vote take up most of the pages. The book is written from one standpoint and can hardly be fairly reviewed, as so many prejudices and passions are stirred by its contents. It will go, however, into history, and may show at a future day how little great wrongs ever really profit those who seek only the temporary advantages and passing honors of the world. (Wm. S. Gottsberger.)

...."FROM BOSTON TO BAREILLY AND BACK." By William Butler. This book is autobiographical, as well as a record of travel. Dr. Butler was the pioneer missionary of the Methodist Church to India, and the founder of its prosperous mission centering at Bareilly, Northern India. In 1883 and 1884 he was privileged to revisit the scenes of his early labors, and the present volume is the record of his observations, experiences and reflections. The narrative is somewhat discursive and the style rather too sermonic to be altogether agreeable, yet the volume is a valuable contribution to missionary literature and testimony to missionary success. It cannot fail to help the cause that is manifestly so dear to the author's heart. (Phillips & Hunt.)

...."FAITH AND RATIONALISM" By Prof. George P. Fisher. The fact that this is a second edition indicates that the book has met a felt need and found appreciation. It contains eight essays bearing more or less directly upon the subject stated in the title. Seven of these essays are arranged in an appendix, although constituting the bulk of the volume. The first essay, which gives its name to the book, was delivered before the students at Princeton, and gives an emphatic warning against the evils of a faithless rationalism and of an unrational faith. The essay on the Atonement is not altogether clear and satisfactory. The writer appears to be trying to get rid of the, to him, objectionable features of the doctrine of vicarious sacrifice without losing its essentials. We do not think that he has succeeded. (Charles Scribner's Sons.)

..."THE POEMS OF HENRY ABBEY" have been issued in a new and enlarged edition. We have already pronounced our favorable opinion of Mr. Abbey's poetry in noticing previous publications, and are confirmed therein by the contents of this neat volume of 260 pages, including about seventy pieces, varying in length from two or three stanzas to thirty-five pages The variety in subject and treatment is equally marked. At the same time, the uniformity of merit is sustained throughout. One seldom finds a volume of verse so free from weak lines or bad measures, so elevated in tone without dullness, and so interesting to read. The author always has an idea or incident worth writing about, and always has things to say about them worth reading and repeating. We have found wherever we opened the book that our attention was arrested by the vividness and clearness of the style. And on no page will one search in vain for beautiful thoughts and felicitous expressions. Mr Abbey has already won his way to an honorable place among the poets of the day, and we cannot conceive how any critic could fail to concede it to him. (Henry Abbey, Kingston, N. Y.)

....We are glad to welcome another of the compact and useful "HAND-BOOKS FOR BIBLE CLASSES AND PRIVATE STUDENTS," being part second of Prof. Lindsay's commentary on The Acts of the Apostles, completing the excellent and practical work of which we spoke in noticing Part 1st. (Scribner & Welford.)

...."THE NEW KING ARTHUR." By the author of the "Buntling Ball." The writer of this "Opera without Music" is undoubtedly possessed of poetical powers above the average. As yet he seems to have applied them only to the service of comedy, but we trust he may put them to higher use in the future. "The New King Arthur" is after the style of "Patience," and turns upon an endeavor of Queen Guinivere to steal her husband's famous sword in order to gain thereby some flasks of pearl powder and hair dye. The personages introduced are the well known characters of Tennyson's "Idyls of the King," and the songs and choruses have rhymes equal to any in the "Ingoldsby Legends." The song of Vivien on the subject of love rises above the others in its real beauty, but all parts of the book display remarkable rhythmical force. A "dedication" to Lord Tennyson in imitation of the Laureate's manner opens the book and will bring a smile to the face of the most serious. (Funk & Wagnalls.)

...."STANLEY GRAHAME: Boy and Man." By Gordon Stables, M.D., R.N. We have here an attempt to crowd a "book for boys" with sensational incidents drawn from three continents. The result seems to us a marked failure. The hero before going to Africa comes to the United States, walks with a negro up Fifth avenue, goes to a plantation two days south of Washington, near which is a vast inland sea and is there wounded by Indians! We find very little either in the style or the story which makes the work worthy attention in this day when so many better tales of adventure are offered to youthful readers. (A. C. Armstrong & Son.)

Our Library Table.

Periodicals, Serials and Notes.

....The New Princeton Review, whose first number lies before us, is handsomely printed on excellent paper, with an ample page and a plain but attractive cover. It resembles the class of English periodicals represented by The Contemporary Review, rather than our American magazines. Although claiming the ancestral honors of a Princetonian genesis, it thoroughly merits the addition to its title of the word "new," having little in common with the old "Princeton Review and Biblical Repertory" of the Theological Seminary, or with the bi monthly bundle of miscellaneous, though able, treatises which was for a time issued nominally from that ancient and academic borough. The distinctive features of the new departure, as announced, are strongly marked in this initial number. The contents are varied in their nature, and combine thoroughness with brightness and interest in their treatment. Philosophy, political economy, social science, physical science, history, literary criticism, observation of travel, and fiction, are all represented in these 150 pages. And the pervading tone and aim of all indicate that we are to have a distinctive and worthy organ of American culture and opinion. The keynote is struck by Dr. McCosh's article, "What an American Philosophy Should Be," a most suggestive and reasonable discussion, characterized by the author's peculiarly clear and popular style, and which ought to mark an epoch in American thought. Mr. Charles Dudley Warner's "Society in the New South," and the anonymous article on "The Political Situation" are equally striking in their suggestiveness. No one can read them without feeling that we, as a nation, are entering upon an era of almost startling transitions as well as unprecedented development. Rev. Dr. Parkhurst contributes a paper on "The Christian Conception of Property," written in his terse and brilliant style, and presenting in a vein of common-sense, and an open-eyed and open-hearted attitude toward all concerned, the only possible hope for the coming conflict which is to shake society as it has never before been shaken, and which, if not provided against, is sure to overwhelm the world in a social deluge. Prof. C. A. Young presents certain "Lunar Problems now under Debate," with that lucidity and interest which have made him as popular a lecturer and writer as he is a foremost scholar and professor. John B McMaster gives an account of the famous William Bradford, the first printer of the Middle States, and "the first man in America to stand up boldly for unlicensed printing." It is needless to say that this is an extremely readable as well as complete monograph. In fact, there is not a dull line, nor a line of "padding," in the whole Review. A goodly space is given to an anonymous story of creole life, entitled "Monsieur Motte," full of vivacity in style, and pathetic and inspiring in subject. The editorial department occupies seventeen pages, giving a comprehensive and intelligent view of recent events and progress in politics, science, philosophy, exploration and discovery, education and literature, and promises to be a distinctive and valuable feature of The New Princeton Review,—which we are glad to greet with a welcome based upon its present appearance, as well as its promise and its prospects (A. C. Armstrong & Son.)

....The Quiver for the month has four or five wholesome short stories, one by Anne Beale, and parts of two serials. A paper by the Rev. Dr. Newman Hall on Rev. Dr. Cuyler, of Brooklyn, with a portrait of the latter, is sympathetic and appreciative. Truth and Truthfulness are vigorously and pleasantly treated by Dean Plumptree; T. Cuthbert Hadden writes instructively about Martin Luther's love of music and of his hymns, and there is the usual variety of attractive and profitable reading for the Sabbath. The number is generously illustrated. It begins the second year of the American edition. Subscription $1.50 a year. Publishers, Cassell & Co.

....In the Popular Science Monthly the biography and portrait are of Mr. Frank Buckland. Innoculation against Hydrophobia, by M. Pasteur; Fish Out of Water, by Grant Allen; Nonconformity, by Herbert Spencer, are some of the fourteen valuable articles.

....No such record of out-door games and exercises by the clubs and contestants of this country is to be found anywhere as is furnished month by month in Outing. The record of the tour on a bicycle around the world by Mr. Thomas Stevens increases in interest. The instalment for January describes the incidents of his journey through Bulgaria, Roumelia and into Turkey. Mr. Hitchcock's account of hunting and fishing in California, Mr. Woodworth's paper on Snow-shoeing and Tobogganing in Saratoga, Mr. Oxley's on Skating in Canada, and a very entertaining record, by Minna Caroline Smith, of a Ladies' Tricycle Tour, with poetry and short stories and a variety of engaging articles, will be much enjoyed. The illustrations are first-rate.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

A. D. F. Randolph & Co.: Correspondencies of Faith and Views of Madame Guyon: A Comparative Study of the Unitive Power and Place of Faith in the Theology and Church of the Future. By Henry T. Cheever. 12mo, pp. 295. $1.25.

Consistory of Coll giate Ref. Dutch Church: History of the School of the Collegiate Reformed Dutch Church in the City of New York, from 633 to 1883. Second Edition, Revised and Enlarged. 12mo, pp. 284. $2. (For sale by R. Brinkerhoff, 34 Vesey street, N. Y.)

Richard B Vinkerhoff: A Memorial of Theodore Bayard Romeyn, D.D., Late Pastor of the First Reformed Church, Hackensack, N. J. With Portrait. 8vo pp 62

W. S. Gottsberger: A Tour Around the World. By George A. Raum. 12mo, pp. 450.

Cassell & Co.: Prince Bismarck: An Historical Biography. By Charles Lowe. With Two Portraits. 2 vols. 8vo, pp. 683–683. $5.

UNBOUND BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

Skilful Susy. A Book for Fairs and Bazars. By Elinor Gay. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 75.

Last Days at Ipswich. A Novel. (Harper's Handy Series, No. 47.) 16mo, pp. 180. 25 cents.

England Under Gladstone. 1880-1885. By Justin Huntly McCarthy, M.P. (Harper's Franklin Square Library, No. 508.) 4to, pp. 72. 10 cents.

PERIODICALS.

January.—New Englander and Yale Review, The New England Magazine and Bay State Monthly, The Art Journal, Outing, The Century, Lippincott's Monthly Magazine, The Library Magazine, Words and Weapons, The English Illustrated Magazine, The Book Buyer, Methodist Review, The Musical Herald, The Sidereal Messenger, The Fashion Bazar, The Converted Catholic.

7% SOUND SECURITIES. 7%

For SAFETY, PROFIT and PROMPT PAYMENTS there is Nothing better than the Investments made by

E. P. GATES,

(President Merchants' Bank and Negotiator of Farm Loans.)

GRAND FORKS, DAKOTA.

Twelve Years of Experience in the Business. First Money Loaner in this Section. All are Pleased with my Loans. Have Invested Nearly a Million of Dollars. Best of References in all Sections of the United States. Only Loan on First Mortgages.

I give my Direct and Personal Supervision to the Business, and no application is accepted until I am satisfied that there is undoubted security and perfect title: that the borrower is a prudent man, borrowing in good faith and intending to apply the money to the improvement of the farm, or some other good purpose. I loan only on FIRST MORTGAGE, and on farms in desirable localities.

Farms are carefully examined and values accurately ascertained before money is loaned.

The Character and Standing of every applicant for a loan is thoroughly investigated.

I require a Property Statement under oath of every borrower.

I loan only to Temperate, Thrifty men who will make good use of the money.

I loan only to men of Good Credit who are said to meet their obligations promptly.

I loan only upon Well Improved Farms that are occupied and cultivated.

I loan only upon Productive Farms that will readily produce interest and principal.

I loan only upon Well Located Farms in good neighborhoods and near market.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST COLLECTED AND SENT TO YOU FREE OF CHARGE, WHEN DUE, BY DRAFTS ON NEW YORK.

REFERENCES:

REV. WM. L. GAGE, D.D., Hartford, Ct.
M. E. GATES, PH.D., LL.D., President Rutgers College, New Brunswick, N. J.
DR. WM. J. MILNE, President Geneseo Normal School, Geneseo, N. Y.
HON. E. M. TOPLIFF, Manchester, N. H.
REV. JOHN W. RAY, Lake City, Minn.
DR. JNO. K. BUCKLYN, Mystic Bridge, Ct.
Importers' and Traders' National Bank, New York.
First National Bank, St. Paul, Minn.
The Congregationalist, Boston, N. Y. Observer, The Christian Intelligencer, and hundreds of others in all parts of the United States.

[CUT THIS ADVERTISEMENT OUT AND SAVE IT.]

FUNDS FOR INVESTMENT CAN BE SENT ME ANY TIME, AND WILL ALWAYS RECEIVE MY CAREFUL ATTENTION. CIRCULAR, LETTERS FROM OLD CUSTOMERS, AND A NEW MAP OF DAKOTA SENT FREE ON APPLICATION.

Address E. P. GATES, President Merchants' Bank, Grand Forks, Dakota.

Please mention The Christian Intelligencer.

Lesson Helps and Illustrated Papers

OF THE

Presbyterian Board of Publication FOR 1886.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

The Westminster Quarterly REDUCED From $15 to $12 per 100 Copies for a year.

HALF HOURS WITH THE LESSONS OF 1886. Cloth, $1.25. Paper Covers, 85c.

WESTMINSTER QUESTION BOOK, at $1.00 per 100 copies.

WESTMINSTER TEACHER, to schools, at 50 cts per copy for a year.

WESTMINSTER QUARTERLY, for advanced scholars, at $12.00 per 100 for a year.

WESTMINSTER PRIMARY QUARTERLY, by Mrs. G. R. Alden ("Pansy"), to schools at $8.00 per 100 for a year.

WESTMINSTER LESSON LEAF, WESTMINSTER PRIMARY LESSONS, WESTMINSTER GERMAN LEAF, to schools at $5.00 per 100 copies for a year.

ILLUSTRATED PAPERS.

FORWARD, formerly issued as a monthly of 16 pages, is now published as an illustrated Semi-monthly paper of 12 pages. School subscriptions, to one address,
Once a month, 100 copies, per year.....$15 00
Twice " " " " 30 00

THE SABBATH-SCHOOL VISITOR, School subscriptions to one address,
Once a month, 100 copies, per year.....$10 00
Twice " " " " 20 00

THE MORNING STAR, School subscriptions, to one address,
Once a month, 100 copies, per year.....$ 5 00
Twice " " " " 10 00

THE SUNBEAM, School subscriptions, to one address, 100 copies, per year, $2.00.

Samples of Periodicals sent free on application.

Orders and money should be addressed to
JOHN A. BLACK, Publisher of Periodicals,
1334 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.,
Or, Ward & Drummond, No. 116 Nassau St., New York.

(WEEKLY.)

Edited by Mrs W. F. CRAFTS,

Who is so widely known as a successful teacher of little children, whose writings are read in many countries, and whose voice is so welcome in conventions.

PRINTED IN COLORS BY

Am. Bank Note Co., New York.

LITTLE FOLKS' PAPER will contain during the year 104 Pages on the International Lessons, 12 Songs for Children. 24 Illustrated seven-minute Sermons to Children on the Birds, Foxes and Lions of the Bible, by

UNCLE WILL, V. M.,

(REV. W. F. CRAFTS.)

104 beautiful colored pictures, and will be a paper that children will put in their "TREASURE BOXES" to keep for years.

PRICE, per year, 50 cents; 5 or more in one wrapper, each per year, 35 cents. Send stamp for sample.

D. R. NIVER, 10 North Pearl St., Albany, N. Y.

THE NEW MUSICAL CURRICULUM

BY GEO. F. ROOT.

A Piano Instructor that has never been excelled.

CURRICULUM

The regular retail price is $3.00 a copy by mail, postpaid. We will send to any MUSIC TEACHER for examination, a single sample copy, postage paid, on receipt of two dollars.

EXAMINE it yourself and be convinced of its superiority.

Specimen PAGES FREE.

PUBLISHED BY

The John Church Co., CINCINNATI, OHIO.

Anthem Books. FOR 1886 Cantatas.

Ditson & Co. offer to Choirs Anthem, Chorus and Quartet Books unequalled in quality and variety. Send for lists! Of the following Anthem Books, the first three may be called the easiest, but none are too difficult for ordinary choirs.

Perkins' Easy Anthems.....	$1.00 or $9.00	per doz.
American Anthem Book.....	1.25 or 12.00	"
Dressler's Sacred Selections....	1.50 or 13.50	"
Emerson's Book of Anthems ..	1.25 or 12.00	"
Anthem Harp. Perkins.....	1.25 or 12.00	"
Gem Gleaner. Chadwick.....	1.00 or 9.00	"
Laus Deo. Henshaw.....	1.00 or 9.00	"
Santoral. Palmer & Trowbridge	1.00 or 9.00	"
Vox Laudis. Leslie.....	1.00 or 9.00	"

Not a poor book in the list. Choir leaders who have used one run no risk in ordering any of the others.

New Cantatas for Choirs and Societies.

Christoforus. Legend. Rheinberger..	$1.00,	$9.00 doz.
Fall of Jerusalem. Parkhurst.	1.00,	9.00 "
Holy City. Gaul.....	1.00,	9.00 "
9 st Psalm. Ballard.....	.60,	5.40 "
Out of the Depths. Darling.....	.32,	2.88 "
Rebecca. Hodges.....	.65,	6.00 "
Ruth and Boaz. Andrews.....	.65,	6.00 "
Herbert and Elsa. Thayer.....	.75,	6.72 "
Heroes of '76. Trowbridge.....	1.00,	9.00 "

Specimen copies of any of these books mailed, post-free, for the retail price.

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston.

Chas. H. Ditson & Co., 867 Broadway, N. Y.

NOW READY.

224 Pages of the choicest gems of Sunday School Songs from more than 100 popular composers.

Hymns of Praise

Contains Music for Each Hymn.

$30 per 100 Copies, in Board Covers.

The book in beautiful Cloth Covers will still be furnished at $40 per 100 Copies.

Hymns of Praise

Is the Best and Cheapest.

EXAMINE IT before you buy a new book.

Intelligent S. S. workers who appreciate a first-class book are adopting HYMNS OF PRAISE.

BIGLOW & MAIN, 76 East Ninth St., N. Y.
81 Randolph St., Chicago.

JUST ISSUED

BY THE

Presbyterian Board of Publication.

Half-Hours with the Lessons of 1886.

Forty-eight short sermons on the lessons of 1886 by twenty-four prominent Pastors and Preachers.

Specially prepared to aid Superintendents and Teachers.

12mo. Price, in cloth binding, $1.25. Paper binding, 85c.

Westminster Question Book for 1886.

A manual for teachers and older scholars, containing the Text of the Lesson, Helps for Scholars, Questions, Lesson Plan, Golden Text, Home Studies and Catechism.

Price, 15 cents, net.

My Soul, Thou Hast Much Goods.

BY HELEN R. EDSON.

24mo. Fancy Paper Cover. Price, 25 cents

Golden Promises.

SELECTED FROM GOD'S WORD.

BY REV. SAMUEL FULTON.

24mo. Fancy Paper Cover. Price, 25 cents.

Address orders to
JOHN A. BLACK, Business Sup't,
1334 CHESTNUT ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.,
Or, Ward & Drummond, 116 Nassau St., New York, N. Y.

JOSIAH ALLEN'S WIFE'S

new story, "SWEET CICELY; OR, JOSIAH ALLEN AS A POLITICIAN," is most eloquent, pathetic and instructive."—Senator Blair.

"SWEET CICELY" will lead Josiah Allen's Wife onward into literary immortality.—Miss Frances E. Willard. Cloth, illustrated, $2.00.

FUNK & WAGNALLS, 10-12 Dey St, N.Y.

A. S. BARNES & CO., Publishers of the authorized Hymn and Tune Book for the Reformed Church in America. Write for introductory terms 111 and 113 WILLIAM STREET, NEW YORK.

The Home.

AUNT MARJORIE'S CORNER

The Christmas Fairies.

"Beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him who bringeth glad tidings."

ROYALLY cushioned and curtained the chamber,
Pleasant the firelight that flickered and shone;
Above in a glory of purple and amber,
The heavens were fair as the vision of John!

On the rug at the hearth two forms were reclining,
Two little heads together were laid.
Two pairs of eyes so blissfully shining,
Glowed like a seraph's, serene, unafraid.

One childish voice with pure intonation
Said to the boy who knelt at her side,
How good of the Christ to leave His high station,
And bring to our earth the sweet Christmastide."

This is the time when all should be merry,
And even the wretched some happiness know!
Suppose you and I, in the garb of a fairy,
Wave a magical wand while we pleasure bestow."

On their errand of mercy they went without pausing,
The swift moving steps on the pavement were seen.
The quick-flying moments too precious for losing,
And the children of want too many, I ween.

The rickety stairs the little feet pressing,
The poverty stricken, with wonder, they saw;
And leaving for each a gift and a blessing,
A real Christmas blessing, passed out at the door.

They beamed on the aged, the feeble and weary,
They held in their own, hands shrivelled and blue
Ah, trembling the limbs, but the road seemed less dreary
In the touch of a clasp so tender and true.

O ye, with your pinched and wan little faces,
When God's jewels are counted you'll stand side by side
With these children of earth, who were born in high places,
For you as for them hath the good Saviour died.

Homeward the light-hearted fairies went bounding!
Do angels record good deeds that are done?
In mansion and street their voices resounding,
Proclaimed the glad tidings, the birth of the Son.

MARY SECOR MESEROLE.

Resolutions.

IT is rather the fashion among those of us who have experienced their futility, to smile indulgently, if not cynically, at the good resolutions which are so readily made in the early year. We have made them so often, and so often have we seen them broken. In the retrospect we are ashamed as we think of the many good beginnings on which we have prided ourselves, only to fail ignominiously in the effort to advance as we began. In the long run, the successful person is she who has the courage, the patience, and the perseverance to hold out; having begun well, to go steadily onward, day by day, without a flourish of trumpets, and in silent though energetic concentration of purpose.

It is quite the part of wisdom not to announce our good resolutions too publicly in the small world of the family. Have we decided to be up with the lark in the morning, our former practice having been rather akin to the self-indulgence of the sluggard? As indolent habits are hard to break, and winter mornings are cold, we would better establish our new reputation for early rising by a course of punctuality at breakfast, than cover ourselves with confusion in the event of failure by anticipatory boasting. There are many situations in life where he that putteth on the harness should not boast as he that putteth it off. Do we intend to curb our impatience and restrain our hasty tongues from the sharp words, keen as swords, which wound those dearer than our own souls, which, though repented as soon as spoken, leave scars? Trusting in God, by all means, let us resolve and attempt, arming ourselves with the sweet patience which holds the restless spirit in effectual check, but—no talk about it. Somebody smiles at the notion that such talk is ever possible. To you, my reader, perhaps not, yet you have only to observe those around you to be convinced that with a multitude of our fellow beings, an agreeable fillip to conscience, prompting to expressed regret, and the utterance of good intentions, takes the place of a real improvement.

In fact, by a subtle self deceit, we are very apt to fancy that the resolve to do better, if only announced with sufficient zeal and emphasis, is equivalent to the reformation itself.

As for the minor things occurring to us as we think over our lives, such as answering letters promptly, keeping daily accounts, returning visits, sending little gifts to the invalid or the aged, brightening lonely homes with our presence, blessing little children by thoughtful recognition of their rights and needs, reading good books, sympathizing with those in sorrow, assisting our inferiors; all the catalogue of duties which naturally sums up the total of our obligation, it is as well not to make resolutions in the lump, but rather to live as well as we can, humbly trusting in God, just one day at a time.

That is all we have to count on in any event. Next week, next month, next year, each is far away, but to day is our own, to make the most of, to answer for to God, to bless our households, and to consecrate to the best uses!

"Diversities of Gifts, but the Same Spirit."

SOME souls are born, like butterflies,
To sport beneath the sunny skies;
When over the wild flowers are heard
Blithe hum of bee, and song of bird.
To flit about on radiant wings,
To touch all fair and lovely things,
To pass away the pleasant hours,
Themselves like living, moving flowers.

And some are born, like fireflies,
To wander under starry skies,
When dark and silent is the earth,
And hushed is every sound of mirth;
Among the lilacs, in the dark,
To show a sudden glimmering spark,
A moment seen, a moment gone,
And yet undimmed still shining on.

The butterfly is dull at night:
It shows no gleam of tinted light;
And dull by day the firefly,
It spreads no wings of varied dye.
To our own work we must be true;
No other hands our task can do;
And yet, whate'er the form or name,
The blessed service is the same.

AGNES L. CARTER.

Thoughts After Sermon.

MRS. HOWARD returned from church, taking bonnet and shawl hurriedly off, throwing them on the lounge, she exclaimed to her daughters: "Oh, girls, you should have heard the Rev. Mr. Fairly this morning; but no, you always go away off hither and thither to church, when such preaching as we have here at our very doors! it would be hard to find better anywhere."

"Well, mother, what was the subject this morning? you seem to have come home all wrought up."

"Surely, I am wrought up," replied the mother, "after the singing, reading the law and prayer were through, and I was nicely settled to hear smooth words, when the text was taken, 'Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?' Even then I did not feel roused up at the reading of these familiar words; but as Mr. Fairly commenced and divided up this subject, speaking of 'my Father's business' as meaning our religion, and if we were Christians our making it the business of our lives, I began to listen more intently—it sounded so like a message to me."

"Christ when only twelve years of age made this reply to His parents, (found in the text), with surprise, that they expected to find Him anywhere except where His Father's business required Him. But, my daughters," said Mrs. Howard, "if I only had the memory to tell you half the good points there were in that sermon. I am an old woman now, and have heard many good sermons, but not many so powerful or so personal either; patience and perseverance were dwelt upon as very necessary qualifications in our Father's business, not to serve for a day, but for a lifetime; an earnest, determined following of duty after duty. Mr. Vanderbilt and Mr. Field were mentioned as being successful men, through persistent and faithful devotion in their first humble work. You will think I am preaching, but I have come home to practice."

And everyone who knows Mrs. Howard can testify that when once convinced, she is convinced through and through, and her words were not lost upon her household, but as they listened they wished more people would carry home and tell their thoughts after the sermon.

O. W.

The Importance of Good Manners.

EDWARD EVERETT, who commanded so much respect in England, not only for his great learning and talents, but for the elegance of his manners, was once asked by an American, how he had so mastered the detail of European etiquette. His answer was a significant one:

"I have never considered any subject which other people respect as unworthy of intense observation. I pride myself on the manner even in which I tie up a brown paper parcel. I study the etiquette of every country."

Our republicanism will become more genuine when it realizes that a proper attention to etiquette is at once elegant, simple, proper, and dignified, and that it should extend over our country from the extremest limits of civilization to the great cities and the little villages. It need not be observance of old world ceremonials, although we should learn enough of them not to offend if we visit a monarch on his own ground; but it should be that becoming courtesy, which will at home and abroad ornament and improve a society which has already so much to commend it and which may have the most splendid future.

The best American girl is interested everywhere in the best way of doing everything. A girl with self-respect is always willing to learn. The truly well-bred girls of America, with charming manners expressive of a good heart, a careful education, and a proper desire to please—and their name is legion—should not be injured even in that large general classification "American" by the bad manners of a few; yet they have to suffer for the ill-bred. American girls have no excuse for not being the best-bred girls in the world, for they are remarkably clever. We must permit ourselves the national vanity of claiming that the national purity, quick intelligence, apprehension of the necessities of a new position, and in some instances the intuitions of elegance, are, in our young countrywomen, quite miraculous, as contrasted with the slower mind of the German, for instance.

The wife of an American Minister at Berlin had occasion to notice this difference. "A young German countess," said she, "will arrive at Berlin from her secluded chateau, and she will be introduced at court, with all the honors. She will be awkward, embarrassed, gauche, for the whole winter. A young American girl will be introduced, fresh from some Western city, or some New England town, and she will be at her ease and mistress of etiquette in a month. She will charm everybody by her wit, her repartee, and her cleverness."—Mrs. John Sherwood, in Dec. Wide Awake.

Dutch Etiquette.

I HAVE no idea of attempting to tell anything new about Holland and the Dutch, but there are some things about domestic etiquette and the like that only a woman would notice, of which I may write, and which are just what "Our Dutch" practised. The man is "lord of all" in Holland; the woman is almost without a shadow of estimation. The typical Dutchman hasn't a particle of the chivalrous about him, and abounds in the arts of slighting and impertinence. He is a sort of a bear, tame and good-natured, but still full of the bruin element. His countrywomen are actually afraid of him, especially when outside their own door. The Dutchwoman lives in constant fear of insult; and when she is out on the street she acts as if she was afraid that her ursine brothers were going to bite, paw or hug her. Not that the men are dangerous, for rarely is it heard that the bears have bitten. Look out on the street, and you will see that the ladies walk in the road and the gentlemen on the sidewalk. Always so, no matter how muddy or dusty the road is, or how many teams are passing. Watch them, and you cannot help but notice that the gentlemen and ladies never speak to each other on the street. That would be a breach of etiquette that society would hardly pardon. Even when a man meets his wife he is not permitted to ask what he shall bring home for dinner! The gentleman bows first, the same as in France, and a lady may have bows from any number of men whose name she does not even know. And the bowing is a marvel! The forehead almost touches the knees in the act, and there is no half-way work about it—no nodding or a sweeping touch of the hat, but an entire removal of the hat to supplement that intense bow. Everybody bows, then they take off their hats to one another and profoundly bow. Your friend's coachman or lackey does the same toward you as his master does, and the servants are just as polite to each other. A lady is bowed to by all the friends of her father, husband or brother; and your housemaid's friends as well. Every man bows to the house of his lady acquaintances when he passes; bows, smiles and raises his hat, no matter whether the ladies are visible or not. If they are visible they return the bow with an over-polite bend of the whole body.

The women seem to think that where there are several men congregated they will take especial delight in insulting them, and a lady is never known to pass a club-house or a knot of men on the street. If she is obliged to pass up a street where there is a club, she does not dare to brave the dreaded windows, but will cross the street until she is past the house, and then cross back again. I have seen a lady of my acquaintance make the round of several streets to avoid a club-house, being at the time in a great hurry to reach an apothecary, whose shop was next beyond the club. If a lady, alone or accompanied by other ladies, must needs enter a confectionery, library or other place where men will naturally go and finds a gentleman or two there, she will retire as precipitately as if she had seen a case of smallpox. The men know this, but unless my lord the man has quite finished his business he will not retire. The lady retreats in a most undignified manner, and the human bear finishes his book or his chocolate, even though the lady is waiting at the door for him to leave.—Home Journal.

....“THE SATIN-WOOD BOX.” By J. T. Trowbridge. Anything that Mr. Trowbridge writes is sure to find an eager audience. This latest of his stories for young people is written in the peculiarly animated style characteristic of all of his writings, and has a plot sufficiently intricate and mysterious to excite curiosity and rivet attention. In the course of the narrative the author discusses moral questions which are worthy of every boy's thoughtful attention, and so skilfully are they presented that a consideration of them can hardly be avoided. The dullest of boys will, we are sure, find it a very delightful book. (Lee & Shepard.)

CHILDREN'S PORTFOLIO.

Eventide.

“NOW I lay me down to sleep.”
Long and hard has been the day;
I have come a weary way
Since life's morning, but at last
Night is falling sweet and fast.
“Now I lay me down to sleep.”

“I pray Thee, Lord, my soul to keep.”
I have tried—alas! in vain—
From the world's dark soil and stain
Free to keep it. Weak and worn,
With my strength all overborne,
“I pray Thee, Lord, my soul to keep.”

“If I should die before I wake.”
Treasures have slipped fast away
From my keeping day by day,
And I shrink from coming ill:
This thought holdeth joy's glad thrill—
“If I should die before I wake,”

“I pray Thee, Lord, my soul to take.”
From all the sorrow it hath known—
Sin and loss, and tear and moan—
To the dear ones gone before,
To Thy presence evermore,
“I pray Thee, Lord, my soul to take.”

“This I ask for Jesus' sake.”
Name alone that can prevail,
Anchor-hold within the veil!
Every other plea hath flown;
Worth or merit claim I none:
“This I ask for Jesus' sake.”

—Kate W. Hamilton, in Forward.

Christmas All the Year.

BY EMMA J. GRAY.

“Star, star, beautiful star!
Pilgrims weary we are;
To Jesus, to Jesus,
We follow thee from afar.”

THE Sunday-school festival closed with this joyous hymn. It had often been sung by happy children—sung for ages by the many, young and old, for surely hearts set the words to music in the time long ago when the wise men saw the Star in the East and came to worship Him.

A great hush fell upon the Sunday-school room so lately filled with the happy murmur of voices and sweet notes of song. The end had come, and all the children knew it. Even little Marie Gordon knew that Christmas time was once more over. The little girl had almost countless gifts—all she had expressed a desire for and many more; for her home was not only one for wealth, but of refinement and luxury as well. Marie being the only child, her parents delighted in gratifying her every wish. So when the Christmas holidays were over, her play-room was like a beautiful toy shop. It contained everything from a tin kitchen to a genuine French doll, which really seemed alive, as it could sleep, talk, and sing.

It is often the case that when all our wishes are gratified, we still feel unhappy and reach out our hands for what we know not. So it was with little Marie. Scarcely had the new year dawned when she said, “Mamma, I wish Christmas would last all the days of the year.”

“You can have Christmas every day,” was her mother's answer. At this unexpected reply, she clapped her little hands and asked how.

“By letting some of your Sunday-school friends who have not the comfort and many toys which you have, come here sometimes and enjoy yours; by going sometimes with me when I go to see the sick little ones in the hospital, and giving them some of these, your treasures. You will thus be happier far than in keeping them all yourself; by putting into the missionary box which in a few days will leave for India some toys and books for the children of our faithful teacher there, to whom Christmas does not bring all it does to you. So, my darling, in many ways Christmas may be yours every day. I know that you will be happier in thus seeing others made happy by you, than you are to-day with your playroom filled with toys which now you alone enjoy.”

“Thank you, mamma dear, I'll try; I do want Christmas to last a whole year this time, and I shall begin at once to find some pretty pictures and books for little girls just like me in the country so far away, called India.”

A Little Knight and Gentleman.

I WAS sitting at the window looking out one cold, slippery day last winter. I suppose a good many of you children have amused yourselves looking at the people who pass on slippery days, smiling a little to see how queerly some of them walk; I hope though, that none of you laugh if you see some one fall. As I looked out of the window I saw a knot of boys, all neighbors of mine, who were standing talking and laughing. Two or three persons had passed, and almost slipped at one particularly dangerous spot, (I think the boys had been sliding there,) and now a little girl came by with a basket of buttons, tapes, shoestrings, and such things. Down she went, her basket falling on its side and half the contents rolling out. Through the window I could hear the boys laughing! Not one of them stepped forward to help the little girl, but the door of the house opposite opened quickly and a little boy, without overcoat or mittens, ran down the steps, and hurrying to the poor girl, after saying a word or two to her, helped her put her things in her basket. The poor girl was so stiff and cold that half her things might have been lost, but for this kind little knight and gentleman. I call him a knight, because the knights in old times helped the poor and helpless wherever they found them, and a gentleman, because a gentleman—a true Christian gentleman—is polite to rich and poor alike. He remembers that his Saviour has said, “Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.”—H. L.

One Who Loves Little Girls.

A LITTLE Mohammedan girl said, I like your Jesus because He loves little girls; our Mohammed did not love little girls.”

As the heathen woman thought that the author of the New Testament must have been a woman, because it said so many kind things of those who were only mentioned with scorn in the heathen shasters, so this little girl had seen enough to show her the difference between the religion of Mohammed and the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Consider what Christ has done for the children. Every Christmas bell that rings, every Christmas gift that gladdens, is but the manifestation of the spirit of peace on earth and good will to men, which the Lord Jesus brought into this world. What has heathenism, to take the place of the Gospel of Christ? Hideous rites, horrible ceremonies, bloody and cruel observances, but little of peace, of joy or of blessing.

In India there are thousands on thousands of little child-widows, not more than ten or twelve years old, whose whole life is to be a scene of misery, suffering, privation and abuse, which only ends in the grave. Thank God, the Gospel of Christ, who loves little girls, has gone into the dark corners of the earth, and wherever it goes it carries brightness and blessing on its wings. Let us pray that it may run and be glorified, and that many souls may be saved, and that all little girls may learn to know the Christ who loves them and who died to save them.—The Little Christian.

The Biggest Things on Earth.

THE greatest wall in the world is the Chinese wall, built by the emperor of the Tsin dynasty, about 220 B.C., as a protection against the Tartars. It traverses the northern boundary of China, and is carried over the highest hills, through the deepest valleys, across rivers and every other natural obstacle. Its length is 1,250 miles.

Among the most remarkable natural echoes is that of Eagle's Nest, on the banks of Killarney, in Ireland, which repeats a bugle call until it seems to be sounded from a hundred instruments, and that of the banks of the Nahe, between Bingen and Coblentz, which repeats a sound seventeen times.

The most remarkable artificial echo known is that of the castle of Simonetta, about two miles from Milan. It is occasioned by the existence of two parallel walls of considerable length. It repeats the report of a pistol sixty times.

The most remarkable whirlpool is the maelstrom of the northwest coast of Norway and southwest of Moskenæsol, the most southerly of the Lofoden isles. It was once supposed to be unfathomable, but the depth has been shown not to exceed twenty fathoms.

The greatest cataract in the world is that of Niagara. The Horseshoe fall, on the Canadian side, has a perpendicular descent of 158 feet. The height of the American fall is 167 feet. The Horseshoe fall, which carries a larger volume of water than the American fall, is about 600 yards wide and extends from the Canadian shore to Goat island.

The biggest diamond in the world, if indeed it be a diamond, is the Breganza, which forms a part of the Portuguese crown jewels. It weighs 1,860 carats. However, not a little doubt exists of its being a diamond, as the government has never allowed it to be tested. It was found in Brazil in 1741.

The largest tested but uncut diamond is the Mattam, belonging to the Rajah of Mattam, in Borneo. It is of pure water, weighs 367 carats and is of pear shape, indented at the thick end. It was found about 1760 at Landak, in Borneo. It has been the cause of a sanguinary war. Before it was cut the Koh i-noor, which is one of the English crown jewels, was the largest tested diamond. It then weighed 793 carats. When in possession of the Emperor Aurengzebe it was reduced by unskilful cutting to 186 carats. During the Sikh mutiny it was captured by British troops and presented to Queen Victoria. It was recut and now weighs 106 1-6 carats.—Philadelphia News.

Play.

PLAY is a good thing in its place. We love to see children play and enjoy themselves—and grown people, too—by way of change and recreation from more serious duties.

The way people play also shows character. If any one is fair, truthful, honest and good-tempered in play, he is likely to be the same in other things, and so the reverse.

Good, earnest play has its temptations and dangers as well as other things, and our young friends have need to be cautioned against yielding to them. To be cheating, mean and full of ill-temper when beaten, or ugly when things do not go as desired, is very improper. Disputes and quarrels may easily arise, and of these everyone should beware. Play, but always play fair; keep in good temper, avoid wrangling and disputes, and play will be a good and healthful thing.—Busy Bee.

Little Heads Together.

CHARADE (partly phonetic).

My first is a being you often have seen
Of various aspect and changeable mien;
My second you cannot so truly behold,
Though others may look without payment of gold;
My third is a thing undeniable, sure,
Sought for by the wise, by the rich and the poor;
My fourth is possessive—relates in a way
To the second I mentioned—this much will I say.
My whole is a thing that contributes its weight
Towards the wealth of the world and the laws of the State.

TRANSPOSITIONS.

1. Transpose something edible and get a large cask.
2. Transpose to send forth and get something that is always passing.
3. Transpose a conjunction and get something used in the laundry.
4. Transpose a blossom and get a verb meaning to invest with any dignity or character.
5. Transpose a part of the day and get its equivalent.
6. Transpose a plane surface and get its equivalent.
7. Transpose a precious stone and get part of the name of a famous gypsy.
8. Transpose something that exudes from a tree and get something that is prized by a baby.
9. Transpose something that may be enjoyed after dinner and get a kitchen utensil.

SQUARE WORD.

1. A heroic poem. 2. A minute opening. 3. A metal. 4. A hundred.

Answers to Puzzles of December 16th.

Johnnie's Christmas Presents.—I.—1. Pipe. 2. Cane. II.—1. Cape. 2. Cap. III.—1. Cologne. 2. Chain. 3. Watch. 4. Boots. 5. Music 6. Box. 7. Charms. IV.—1. Brush. 2. Pen. 3. Inkstand. 4. Bachelor's Buttons. 5. Game.

Crossword Enigma.—Holidays.

Pi.—I.
Truth is honest, truth is sure;
Truth is strong and must endure;
Falsehood lasts a single day,
Then it vanishes away.

Pi.—II. An idle youth—a needy age.

Correct Answers from “Midwout,” A. M. M., Rappie Bowne, Louis D. and Jennie Labagh.

Puzzles and answers should be sent to Cousin Lois, at this office.

Local Option Law for New Jersey.

AN Act entitled an act to provide for Local Option in the several counties in this State by submitting the question of prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors to the qualified voters in said counties, and to provide for the enforcement of the same.

SECTION I.

Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That upon application by a petition signed by one-tenth of the legal voters of any county in this State, the Judge of the Circuit Court in and for such county shall order an election to be held at the usual places of holding elections in said county, or at such other places in said county as shall be designated in said petition, within forty days after the presentation of such petition, to determine whether or not any alcoholic, spirituous, vinous, malt, or intoxicating liquors, or any compound of which intoxicating liquors form an ingredient, shall be sold as a beverage within the limits of said county, Provided, that such election shall not be held within thirty days of any general election in said county, so that such elections as are held under this act shall be separate and distinct from any other election whatever.

SECTION II.

And be it enacted, That notice of any election to be held under the provisions of this act shall be published once a week for three weeks prior to such election, in two newspapers published in said county where such election is to be held, and such other notice shall be given as said Judge may direct; and all such elections shall be held under the same regulations as are now or may be prescribed by law, for holding the general elections for members of the General Assembly and Senate in this State, and that all the penalties contained in the said general election laws of this State are hereby extended to and shall apply to the special elections to be held under the provisions of this act; and it shall be the duty of Judges, Inspectors and Clerks of the election precincts to conduct the said election, to canvass all the votes cast and declare the result, and in all respects to perform the same duties at such elections as they are by law required to do at the election for members of the General Assembly and Senate of this State.

SECTION III.

And be it enacted, That all persons voting at elections held under the provisions of this act who are against the sale of the articles mentioned in the fourth section of this act shall have written, or printed, or partly written and printed, on their ballots: "Against the sale of intoxicating liquors," and all who favor the sale of the articles mentioned in said fourth section shall have written, or printed, or partly written and printed, on their ballots: "For the sale of intoxicating liquors."

SECTION IV.

And be it enacted, That whenever by returns of the election it shall appear that a majority of the votes cast are against the sale of intoxicating liquors, it shall be unlawful, after thirty days from the said election, for any person within the limits of such county to sell, or expose for sale, or barter for valuable consideration, either directly or indirectly, or give away to induce trade at his place of business, or furnish at other public places, any alcoholic, vinous, spirituous, malt or intoxicating liquors, or any compound of which intoxicating liquors forms an ingredient; Provided, that nothing contained in the provisions of this act shall prevent the sale by druggists of such liquors for medicinal, sacramental and manufacturing purposes only; said liquors not to be used on the premises; Provided further, that persons holding licenses issued prior to the election shall not be deprived thereof until the expiration of the same.

SECTION V.

And be it enacted, That any person who shall traffic in, sell, expose for sale, or give away with intent to violate any of the provisions of this act, or shall suffer to be trafficked in, sold or exposed for sale, or so given away, any liquors or compounds mentioned in the fourth section of this act, used or to be used as a beverage, by whatever name called, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall for the first offense forfeit and pay, upon conviction thereof, a sum not exceeding $200 or imprisonment in the county jail for six months, one or both, at the discretion of the court, with cost of suit, and for each additional offense a sum not exceeding $500 or imprisonment in the State Prison for a term not exceeding one year, one or both, at the discretion of the court, with cost of suit.

SECTION VI.

And be it enacted, That whenever it shall appear by proof, on any trial for an alleged offense against the provisions of this act, that any substance having the appearance of intoxicating liquor has been sold, exposed for sale, or supplied under any pretext whatever, where the sale of intoxicating liquors would have been unlawful, it shall be deemed prima facie evidence that such substance was intoxicating liquor. And wherever the appliances ordinarily used in the liquor traffic are found on the premises this fact shall, upon proof, be deemed prima facie evidence that intoxicating liquors are there sold in violation of this act.

SECTION VII.

And be it enacted, That if the result of any election held under the provisions of this act shall be for the sale of intoxicating liquors, or against the sale of intoxicating liquors, then no other election for that purpose shall be held in the same prescribed limits in less time than two years thereafter, and then only upon the presentation of a new petition as aforesaid.

SECTION VIII.

And be it enacted, That all laws and parts of laws in conflict with this act be and the same are hereby repealed.

SECTION IX.

And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Financial.

TUESDAY, Jan. 5th.

THE imports of last year at this port, specie excluded, were valued at $395,268,782, against $421,584,301 in 1884; and the exports at $327,943,780, against $327,066,211 in 1884. The foreign trade of the year at this port amounted to $722,300,000 in round numbers. Yet there are members of Congress from the South and West who, when financial measures are under discussion, shout, "What do we care for the rest of the world!" Exchange yesterday was sold for $4.86 for 60 day bills and $4.89 1-2 for demand for sterling.... There are rumors that a compromise is to be made between the friends and opponents of the silver dollar, and that the coinage is to go on until 250 millions have been made, the manufacture then to cease and to be resumed at the discretion of the President. The silver dollar is worth just now 79 1-2 cents as bullion. It is asserted that some millions have been made by private parties of full weight and value, properly stamped, and made at a handsome profit....The banks here increased loans last week $2,971,500, lost in specie $1,267,100, gained in legal tenders $1,595,500 and in deposits $3,006,300. The surplus of reserve was somewhat reduced and remained $24,289,475, against $40,020,625 at the same time last year. The situation at present is the more promising. The deposits still, however, exceed the loans by 37 millions. A temporary demand on Thursday raised the rate for money to 4 and 5 per cent; the average for the week was 2 1-2 per cent on call. Yesterday the rate was 2 1-2 to 3 on call. The Bank of England rate remains at 4 per cent, but in the open market money is freely offered for less....The stock of wheat at central points shows a decrease of about 500,000 bushels. Foreign markets are reported dull. Quotations for grain yesterday were: Wheat here 90 3-4, in Chicago 83 1-4; corn here 48 7-8, in Chicago 36 1-4; oats here 35 3-8, in Chicago 28 1-8. Provisions are dull at a slight concession in prices. Cotton has advanced a point or two in Liverpool under a good demand. The closing quotations here yesterday were: January, 9 27-28; February, 9.36-37; March, 9.47-48; April, 9.58-59....The public debt was reduced last month $9,089,940 by the accumulation of money. The Secretary of the Treasury has issued a call for $10,000,000 of 3 per cents to mature on Feb. 1st. It is a wordy and obscure document....The undertone of the Stock Market is strong and steady. Buying for investment is persistent. Yesterday, after a depression caused by a bear raid, prices rose and the market closed strong. Railroad earnings generally show an improvement.

Cleveland's superior to Royal.

RUTGERS COLLEGE (the New Jersey State Scientific College)
NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., July 7, 1885.

Analyses and careful examinations of Cleveland's Superior and Royal Baking Powders enable us to bear testimony to the superiority of Cleveland's. It yields more carbonic acid gas than the Royal, and contains no ammonia salts.

Cleveland's Baking Powder is made of pure substances and is absolutely free from any kind of adulteration. We endorse it most cordially as an honest and efficient article, and one that will give entirely satisfactory results.

PETER T. AUSTEN, Ph.D., F.C.S.,
Prof. of General and Applied Chemistry.
FRANCIS A. WILBER, M.S.,
Adj. Prof. of Analytical Chemistry.

Professors Austen and Wilber are also the Chemists to the Boards of Health of the Cities of Newark and New Brunswick, N. J.

News of the Week.

(Continued from page five.)

SATURDAY, 2.—England cedes to China part of Upper Burmah in order to make the Chinese and Indian frontier contiguous. India advocates an offensive and defensive alliance between China and India....It is reported that M. Brisson has written to President Grévy refusing to lend himself any longer to the combination, the object of which is to impose upon him lasting discredit....The British steamer "Sidonian" has been sunk off Syracuse, Sicily....Eleven persons were bitten by a mad wolf in a village in Western Russia, and M. Pasteur has at his own cost undertaken to cure them....Gov. Hill was inaugurated at Albany yesterday, and Gov. Lee at Richmond....Large fire in Detroit. Loss, $1,500,000. ....Fourteen suits for $10,000 damages each have been started against the Plymouth Water Company....William McNeil, President of the Lancaster National Bank of Clinton, Mass., has fled to Canada with $100,000....Miss Van Worst, of Murray Hill, New York city, was burned to death yesterday in her own home, her clothes having caught fire at an open grate....It is reported that coal miners in the Monongahela Valley have ended their strike. Nearly 2,000 men are at work....Slight clews have been found to the murderer of Mrs. Garrity.

MONDAY, 4.—Great preparations are being made in Germany for the jubilee of the Emperor William....An agreement has been reached for a union of Bulgaria and Eastern Roumelia....The children who were sent to Dr. Pasteur from Newark are returning home.... Lord Randolph Churchill has proposed that Ireland be governed the same as Scotland....A battle at Suakim, in Egypt, has been reported....A boat containing five men reached the navy yard at Bermuda asking assistance for their vessel, but a tug that was sent out could not find her....The strike in the Monongahela Valley has been formally abandoned....The marriage contract of Millard Filmore and his wife has been made public....There is a lively contest among the Republicans in Albany for the Speakership....Gen. Sheridan explains his plan for settling the Indians....A series of mysterious murders are reported from Detroit.... A defaulting bookkeeper was arrested on his return from Canada....There was a fatal explosion of a locomotive in Jersey City yesterday. One man was killed and another fatally injured. ....Six persons were drowned in the Chattahoochee River, Georgia....Five thousand cigar makers in New York city threaten to strike....R. Dunlap's hat factory in Brooklyn, L. I., was destroyed by fire yesterday. Loss, $100,000.

TUESDAY, 5.—Heavy storm yesterday from the Atlantic to Dakota. Rain in the East, snow in the West, and high winds....Ocean steamers report rough weather and loss of sails, spars, boats, etc....Pleuro-pneumonia is reported among cattle near Lancaster, Pa.... Through trains on Brooklyn Elevated do not pay....The Grand Cross of the Order of Naval Merit, conferred by the late King of Spain on Mr. Ericsson, was received yesterday by Secretary Bayard....Engineers of Elevated roads threaten to strike unless eight hours be made a day's work. Strike imminent also on Third avenue surface road.... Prof. Charles E. Hamlin, of Harvard, is dead....Pierrepont Potter, aged 91 years, long Clerk of Queens County Supervisors, died yesterday at Jamaica, L. I....Dacoits are making trouble for English troops in Burmah by burning villages and slaying inhabitants.... Russia refuses to acquiesce in union of Bulgaria and Roumelia, and Greece protests....British administration proposes County Boards and Central Council, elected by the people, for Ireland.

....The Methodists have an itinerant preacher who travelled 4,700 miles last year, from station to station, going 2,211 miles on foot. He preached once or twice every day, and three times on Sunday, and his salary was $100.

....In Florence, Alabama, there have been more than one hundred conversions recently.

....A case of intolerance in Syria is thus described: A tribe named Nusarieh inhabits the mountains near Latakieh, consisting of about 200,000 persons. A large number of this people have become converts to the Christian faith, through the labors of American missionaries. Mission churches have been built and Christian communities established. The Governor of Damascus has given positive orders that no change of religion shall be recognized, and that all the Christians shall be registered and treated as Moslems, and at a late census this had been done.

The purest, sweetest and best Cod Liver Oil in the world, manufactured from fresh, healthly livers, upon the sea-shore. It is absolutely pure and sweet' Patients who have once taken it prefer it to all others. Physicians have decided it superior to any of the other oils in the market. Made by CASWELL, HAZARD & Co., New York.

PIMPLES removed and the Skin made smooth by using Juniper Tar Soap, manufactured by Caswell Hazard & Co., New York
Sold by druggists.

MARRIAGES.

BULL—MESICK.—At the residence of Mr. Jerry N. Garner, Kinderhook, N Y., Tuesday, Dec. 29, 1885, by Rev. J. B Drury, D.D., assisted by Rev. T. S. Brown, Charles M. Bull, of Harrison, N. Y., and Agnes V. Mesick, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., eldest daughter of Frederick Mesick.

CRAWFORD—DECKER.—At Dwaarskill, N.Y., on Thursday, Dec. 24, 1885, by Rev. P. K. Hageman, Daniel I. Crawford, of Pine Bush, N. Y., to Maria J. Decker, of Dwaarskill, N. Y.

FERGUSON—SHARTS —At the First Reformed manse, Glenville, N. Y., by the Rev. Norman F. Nickerson, Dec. 31, 1885, Mr. Henry Ferguson and Miss Emma C. Sharts, both of Glenville.

GORDON—WILLIAMS.—At the home of the bride, by Rev. James LeFevre, Dec 31, William H. Gordon, of South Somerville, N. Y., to Petranella, daughter of John B. Williams, of Middlebush, N. Y.

HIGGINS—LOTZ.—On Monday, Jan. 4, at the residence of the bride's parents, Franklin Park, N.J., by the Rev H. D. B. Mulford, Samuel Higgins and Lena, daughter of Conrad Lötz.

JANSEN—GALE.—At the home of the bride, Dec. 23, 1885, by Rev. C. E. Lasher, John R. Jansen, of Gardiner, N. Y., and Emeretta Gale, of Galeville, N. Y.

KERR—VAN ORDEN.—Dec. 30, 1885, by Rev. C. E. Crispell, D.D., William D. Kerr and Ellen, daughter of P. S. Van Orden, all of Spring Valley, N. Y.

MAIER—WEBER.—At the residence of the bride's parents, Philadelphia, Pa., Dec 3, 1885, by the Rev. C F. C. Buckow, Wm. Sylvester Maier and Miss Katie Weber, all of Philadelphia, Pa.

PENNY—UPRIGHT.—At Shawangunk, N. Y., on Wednesday evening, Dec. 23, 1885, by Rev. P. K. Hageman, Hiram Penny, of Walker Valley, N. Y., to Henrietta Upright, of Shawangunk, N. Y.

QUACKENBUSH—BUTLER.—At the parsonage, Coit's Neck, N. J., Dec. 31, 1885, by Rev. Geo. W. Labaw, Mr. Elmer P. Quackenbush, of Englishtown, to Miss Lizzie J., daugnter of Mr. Charles K. Butler, of Marlboro.

RAMSEY—BOSS.—At the residence of the bride's parents, Lebanon, N. J., Dec. 31, 1885, by Rev. Wm. E. Davis, Mahlon T. Ramsey, of Lebanon, N. J., to Miss Chrissie C. Boss, daughter of Samuel Boss, of Lebanon, N. J.

SCHEIFER—DOAN.—At the parsonage of the Reformed Church of Richboro, Pa., on Dec. 24, 1885, by the Rev. E. Birdsall, Jacob Scheifer and Ida Doan, both of Richboro.

TATRO—BABCOCK.—At Niskayuna, N. Y., Dec. 28, 1885, by Rev. C. P. Ditmars, Joseph Tatroe, of Cohoes, N. Y., to Emma C. Babcock, of Niskayuna, N. Y.

VAN ALSTYNE—HOFFMAN.—At the parsonage, First Reformed Church of Bethlehem, N. Y., by Rev. Jos. Paige Davis, Wm. J. Van Alstyne and Libbie E. Hoffman, all of Callanan's Corners, N. Y.

VAN EPPS—THOMAS.—At Niskayuna, N. Y., Dec. 30, 1885, by Rev. C. P. Ditmars, Alfred Van Epps to Emma Thomas, both of East Glenville, N. Y.

DEATHS.

Obituary notices five cents per line (nine word to the line.) For subscribers we will insert fifteen lines free; all lines in excess of that number will be charged same as non-subscribers.

AUCHMOODY.—On Friday, Dec. 25, 1885, at the residence of his brother, in New Paltz, N. Y., Peter D. Auchmoody, aged 72 years, 2 months and 19 days.

Since Dec. 1st, 1854, Mr. A. has been a consistent member of the Reformed Church of this place, has honorably filled the office of elder for a few years, being a member of the Great Consistory at the time of his death. He was a man of plain habits, sterling character and generous heart, and died in the full assurance of faith. V.

BRUYN.—In the city of Kingston, Ulster Co., N.Y., Dec. 28, 1885, Mrs. Catharine Bruyn, wife of the late Cornelius Bruyn, for many years President of the National Ulster Co. Bank.

Mrs. Bruyn was the daughter of the late James Van Vleck, of Shawangunk, in which town she was born, and spent the earlier portion of her life.

Her married life, however, was spent in Kingston, where she was widely known and respected and beloved by all who knew her. Mrs. Bruyn was a faithful and devoted member of the Fair Street Reformed Church; she was truly a good woman and possessed in an eminent degree many excellent qualities of character, conspicuous among which were her devout and kindly spirit, her sound, practical judgment and her conscientious fidelity in all the relations of life. Though for many years an invalid, yet she calmly and patiently bore her sufferings, and was always cheerful and courageous in the midst of her infirmities. During her last illness, which continued about ten days, she was a great sufferer, but was calm in the midst of it all, the comfort of her Christian faith and hope never for a moment failing her, and the presence and grace of her Divine Saviour, in whom she had so long trusted, giving her victory and triumph at last. She tenderly bade farewell to her children and family and quietly passed away in joyous and blessed hope of the better life above.

Though sincerely respected and beloved by all, yet those who knew Mrs. Bruyn best loved her most. Her peculiar gentleness and amiability of disposition, her cheerful and devout spirit, her simple but firm faith and kindly sympathies greatly endeared her to her friends and made her presence a benediction to all about her, and now that she has gone, there are many who gratefully cherish the memory of her kindly spirit and loving deeds.

Mrs. Bruyn left two sons—Cornelius, now a student in Johns Hopkins University, and James, a youth of 17 years, pursuing his studies at the Kingston Academy. Mrs Bruyn was a sister of the late Rev. John Van Vleck, well known in the Reformed Church as a faithful and useful minister. She also left behind one sister—between whom and herself a peculiarly strong attachment existed—Miss Sarah M. Van Vleck, recently Lady Principal of Elmira College, which congenial and widely useful position she about one year ago surrendered in order to be with her sister in her declining health. She alone survives, the last of eight brothers and sisters, all of whom having loved and served the Saviour here have one after another passed hence to the joy of His presence in the better land beyond.

The funeral services were held on Thursday, Dec. 28th, at the family home on Albany avenue, Kingston, Rev. Drs. Noyes, Van Slyke, Demarest and Shaw taking part in the exercises.

Truly "the memory of the just is blessed."

"Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints."

LENT.—Entered into rest, Nov. 24, at Peekskill, N. Y., B. Maria Lobdell, wife of Everette Lent, in the 60th year of her age.

"Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints."

MYERS.—Jan. 1, 1886, at the residence of her daughter, in New Rochelle, Mary S., wife of James Myers, aged 76 years Funeral services were held on Tuesday, Jan. 5, at her home, 134 Montague street, Brooklyn.

This beloved wife and mother became a member of the Collegiate Reformed Church of this city, then under the joint charge of those reverend men, Knox, De Witt, and Brownlee, about fifty years ago. In 1845 the family removed to Brooklyn. In 1848-9, Mr. Myers, having before served as a deacon in the Collegiate Church, had part in the formation of the Church on the Heights, Brooklyn, and in the calling of the lamented Bethune to that pastorate. During the latter years of his pastorate and the early years of the pastorate of the Rev. Dr. Eells, the father and mother had the happiness of sitting at the Lord's table with their nine children.

All the children survive, (two sons being in the ministry,) and a large number of grandchildren and great-grandchildren. In June, 1883, the golden wedding was celebrated at the home in Brooklyn, where the immediate family and descendants, nearly fifty persons, all in good health, assembled to rejoice in the goodness of God.

Not given to speaking of her religious experience, Mrs. Myers exerted a steady and invariable influence for Christ Those who knew her well often remarked, that she was the most perfectly unselfish person they had ever known. By reason of this self-forgetfulness and affectionate self-surrender, she was wonderfully cheerful and happy. Clear perceptive powers and a sound judgment were tributary to a warm, kind and loving heart. She never could see a ragged child without enfolding it in her compassion, and if possible doing it good. There were no limits to her pity and charity.

She has finished the work which was given her to do. Her life was worth living. Her friends mourn not as those who have no hope. Her memory is blessed on the earth, and she is gone to be with her Lord.

ANDREW K. PITCHER.—When the good and true pass from us, it is fitting that more than a simple notice of their death should be observed, that the living may lay it to heart, and others mould their characters after the same standard, so far as that standard is in obedience to the teachings of our Divine Master, for it is appointed unto all once to die. It is my belief that obituaries should not be eulogies, but true pictures of the life as it was, that others may be benefitted by its teachings. In the decease of Andrew K Pitcher, of Upper Red Hook, Dutchess Co., N. Y., whose death was announced last month, the Reformed Church, of which he was a consistent member and office bearer for a long period of years, has lost one of her true pillars. Naturally unobtrusive, his piety was no erratic light flashing for the time and then going out in darkness, but a steady flame that burned on to the end, an every day work. And although at last called suddenly to meet the Bridegroom, we believe his lamp was trimmed and burning. Respected by all who knew him, he has passed on to join the beloved wife of his youth, and that innumerable assembly who have reached the other shore. The church and society will miss his good example, but the great loss will be to his children, a tender, affectionate and beloved father whom they delighted to honor. May the God of all grace support them in this affliction, resting in Him who has promised to be a Father to the fatherless, and may they so live that when this short period which we call time is ended, they may be reunited where there is no more tears, to be forever with the Lord.

I have looked back on trials that are passed,
Which time has mellowed and the Healer healed,
And counted them the harvest of the soul,
The days our Father in His mercy sealed,
For His own purpose. E. A. L.

THE LAST OF A FAMILY OF SAINTS.

CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER: Our hearts have been saddened by the tidings of the death of Mr. Andrew K. Pitcher, of Upper Red Hook, N. Y., and as his late pastor, will you allow me a word in your columns in testimony of his worth, not simply as a man, but as a Christian man,—active, consecrated, faithful, full of the Holy Spirit, and of rich, ripe Christian experience.

My acquaintance with his family dates back ten years. There were then living three brothers, Rev. John Pitcher, Rev. William Pitcher—both efficient, successful ministers of our own dear Church—and Andrew K. Pitcher, the subject of this brief sketch. With the death of the latter the original family becomes extinct.

To know Andrew Pitcher was to love him. He was in every sense a lovable character. As his pastor for a period of more than eight years, my relations with him were most intimate and confidential, and I always found him the same in spirit and temper. He was an old-fashioned Christian, with a heart as large as it was tender, firm yet gentle, full of dignity but affable, and ever ready to befriend and help with both heart and hand. As you entered his dwelling there was always a smile, always a hearty hand-grasp, which set you at ease and assured you you were welcome; and I am sure, no one who knew him will differ with me when I say that few men possessed more fully the confidence of the community in which he lived, few more universally esteemed and loved. He was a favorite with all, young and old.

But it was in his life as a Christian, especially, that his qualities shone forth in all their lustre. He was preeminently a man of God, loyal to his church, loyal to his minister, always in the house of God if possible for him to be there, and always ready to say a word of encouragement and love to his pastor. No matter what the sermon, he invariably found some good in it. In no place did he show to greater advantage than in the weekly prayer-meeting. It was a delight to hear him pray. His face fairly kindled with heavenly light as in tender, mellow tones, he poured forth the feelings and desires of his heart. Long will those prayers linger in the minds and ears of those who listened to them; and long will it be before the place left vacant by his departure can be filled. In him the Church has lost a supporter, the community a friend, the home a tender, loving sympathetic heart. Certainly may it be said of him, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them." The world is the better for having had such a man live in it as Andrew K. Pitcher. What earth has lost heaven has gained.

E. C. SCUDDER.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Dec. 21st, 1885.

Notice to Subscribers.

Owing to the largely increased number of remittances at this season of the year we are unable to change the date on the little yellow labels as promptly as usual. In a few weeks we hope to catch up with all corrections.

Our readers will confer a favor upon the publishers of this paper and, perhaps, find it to their own advantage if, when answering an advertisement found in these columns, mention is made that it was seen in THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER.

Publisher's Department.

LEARN THE TRUTH ABOUT Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar. It softens the cough, relieves the windpipe and bronchial tubes of mucus, tones the lungs and the membranes of the throat, and restores to the organs of respiration their natural strength and vigor. 75c., 50c. and $1.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap heals and beautifies, 25c.
German Corn Remover kills Corns, Bunions, 25c
Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye—Black & Brown, 50c.
Pike's Toothache Drops cure in 1 Minute, 25c.

The Market Report for this week will be found on page 16.

The American Investment Company, of Emmetsburg, Iowa, and 150 Nassau street, N. Y., whose advertisement appears in our financial column, has just declared a dividend of 25 per cent per annum. The stock is held at $150 per share of $100 each.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is made only by C. I. Hood & Co., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass. It is prepared with the greatest skill and care, under the direction of the men who originated it. Hence Hood's Sarsaparilla may be depended upon as strictly pure, honest, and reliable.

The best cough medicine is Piso's Cure for Consumption. Sold everywhere. 25c.

The consumption of Ayer's Pills far exceeds any precedent. They are constantly winning the confidence of those who use them. They cleanse the blood, improve the appetite, promote digestion, restore healthy action, and regulate every function. They are pleasant to take, gentle in their operation, yet thorough, searching, and powerful in subduing disease.

Notices and Acknowledgments

THE CLASSIS OF BERGEN, on Dec. 14th, 1885 adopted the following plan of Classical Visitation within its bounds: Church of English Neighborhood, Jan. 13th, 1885, Revs. Van Buskirk and Gowen; 1st Hackensack, Jan. 13th, Revs. Suydam and Seibert; New Durham, Jan. 13th, Revs. House and Wright; Schraalenburgh, Jan. 14th, Revs. Gordon and Johnson; 1st Hoboken, Jan. 15th, Revs. Suydam and Wright: North Hoboken, Jan. 15, Revs. Goebel and Seibert; Park Av., Jan. 19th, Revs. House and Gowen; 2d Hackensack, Jan. 20th, Revs. Harris and Van Buskirk; 3d Hackensack, Jan. 26th, Revs. Justin and Seibert; Palisades, Jan. 26th, Revs. Gowen and Taylor; Closter City, Jan. 28th, Revs. Bogardus and Johnson; German Hoboken, Feb. 3d, 1886, Revs. Suydam and Justin; Guttenburgh, Feb. 3d, Revs. Gowen and Wright; Central Av., Feb. 10th, Revs. House and Suydam; Cherry Hill, Feb. 10th, Revs. Johnson and Van Buskirk; Spring Valley, Feb. 16th, Revs. Harris and Seibert. The several services indicated will all begin at 3 and 7.30 P.M.

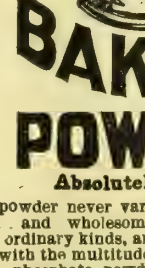
THE SOUTH CLASSIS OF LONG ISLAND, at a special session held on Thursday, Dec. 17th, 1885, made the following arrangements for the installation of the Rev. Wm. D. Perry: The installation to take place on the evening of Jan. 13th, 1886, at 7.45 o'clock. The President of Classis, Rev. D. N. Vanderveer, D.D., to preside and preach the sermon; Rev. C. L. Wells, D.D., to deliver the charge to the people, Rev. A. J. Hutton, secundus; Rev. U. D. Gulick to deliver the charge to the pastor, Rev. Daniel Van Pelt, secundus.

R. G. STRONG, Stated Clerk.

THE CLASSIS OF SCHENECTADY, at a meeting held Dec. 16th, 1885, received Rev. Robert Doig from the Classis of Schoharie, and made the following arrangements for his installation over the Second Reformed Church of Glenville: To preside and read the form, Rev. L. Van Derveer; to preach the sermon, Rev. W. E. Griffis, D D., with Rev. P. E. Kipp as secundus; to charge the pastor, Rev. D. K. Van Doren, with Rev. N. F. Nickerson as secundus; to charge the people, Rev. H. Van Derwart, with Rev. E. A. McCullum as secundus. Installation service to take place on Monday evening, Jan. 11th, 1886, at half-past seven o'clock. S. C.

THE address of Rev. Robert Doig is changed from Berne to Scotia, N. Y.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER



Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans. ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall-st., N. Y.

HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE cannot fail to delight young people for whom its contents are specially and carefully selected.—The Court Circular, London.

HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE.

A Sixteen-Page Illustrated Weekly for Boys and Girls.

Subscription per Year, $2.00.

HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE has won the approval of parents and the hearts of their children. No pleasanter or surer antidote to sensational juvenile literature could be placed in the hands of youthful readers than this popular journal for boys and girls. Pictures, the work of the foremost artists and engravers, lavishly illustrate its pages; and it is as attractive as fine paper and skilful printing can make it. There is nothing cheap about it but the price.

PRESS NOTICES.

It entertains, instructs, and charms its readers.—Christian Intelligencer, N. Y.

As fresh and sparkling as the boys and girls for whom it is written. A capital weekly for our young folk.—Christian Advocate, N. Y.

A delightful little magazine that brings joy and gladness to the household fifty-two times a year.—Christian Advocate, New Orleans.

A charming juvenile publication, fresh and delightful as ever, dainty in dress and delightful in spirit. A delight and a treasure in thousands of happy homes.—Evangelist, N. Y.

An inexhaustible source of entertainment.—Watchman, Boston.

A favorite with all boys and girls. In this weekly they have the best and safest reading. It is in every way deserving of its great success.—Churchman, N. Y.

This periodical offers a rare collection of valuable and instructive reading, with choice illustrations and many matters of various interest for old and young.—Observer, N. Y.

The best reading for boys and girls.—Living Church, Chicago.

It keeps well at the head of its class.—Christian Advocate, Richmond.

Always full of attractions and instruction for a host of young people. An encyclopædia of general information and amusement.—Zion's Herald, Boston.

This bold venture in the field of juvenile literature has proved a victory....It deserves a welcome at every fireside.—REV. J. H. VINCENT, D.D., in the Sunday-School Journal, N. Y.

A model juvenile. A boy or girl can have no purer and brighter magazine as a weekly guest.—Independent, N. Y.

Its tone, variety, and general excellence of literary workmanship are admirably sustained.—Christian Union, N. Y.

BOUND VOLUMES.

Volume VI., with about 700 Illustrations. pp. viii., 832. 4to, Ornamental Cloth, $3.50. Copies of Volumes IV. and V. on hand. Price $3.50 each. Volumes I., II., and III., for 1880, 1881, 1882, out of print.

HARPER'S PERIODICALS.

Per Year:

HARPER'S MAGAZINE	$4 00
HARPER'S WEEKLY	4 00
HARPER'S BAZAR	4 00
HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE	2 00
HARPER'S FRANKLIN SQUARE LIBRARY (One Number a week for 52 weeks)	10 00
HARPER'S HANDY SERIES. (One Number a week for 52 weeks)	15 00

Postage free to all subscribers in the United States or Canada.

Remittances should be made by Post-office Money Order or Draft, to avoid chance of loss.

When no time is specified, subscriptions will be begun with the current number.

The most popular and successful periodicals for family reading ever published.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

There is nothing more conducive to wholesome pleasure, and to the creation in the family of an elevated moral condition, than the persistent use of these periodicals. They are as familiar as household words, and are administered with such high humanity and wisdom that they constitute one of the greatest engines of civilization in existence.—N. Y. Sun.

☞ HARPER'S CATALOGUE, comprising the titles of between three and four thousand volumes, will be sent by mail on receipt of Ten Cents.

Published by HARPER & BROTHERS, N. Y.

PLAID SHAWL GIVEN AWAY!

Through the failure of a large manufacturer of Cashmere Pattern Fringe Shawls, there has come into our hands a large consignment of Plaid Shawls, perfect goods, which we propose to present to the ladies in the following manner: Send us 25 cents for 3 mos. subscription to Farm and Household, a large 32 page illustrated paper, devoted to Farm and Household topics, Stories and general miscellany, and we will send you one of these beautiful shawls FREE by mail postpaid, or we will send 5 shawls and 5 subscriptions to one address for $1.00 Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Address

FARM AND HOUSEHOLD, Box 49, Hartford, Conn.

The Church.

Exalted to Give.

THE sun shines from exalted heights
To give its light to worlds below,
While from the highest mountain-peaks
The streams of purest water flow.

From green-wood's topmost bough afar,
The sweet song-sparrow's note is heard;
And in the cloud God's bow is hung,
To give remembrance of His word.

And even Christ the Holy One
Hath been exalted, more than all,
To give repentance for our sins;
To give redemption from the fall.

Oh, Poet, sing not for thyself,
Oh, Wise-man, thou art not thine own,
Oh, Ruler, reign not without love,
But give to others from Thy throne.

Oh, men of wealth, and men of power,
Remember God is over all,
And He who hath exalted thee,
May all thy power and wealth recall.

Then sing, oh, Poet, words of cheer,
To help earth's weary, saddened hearts;
Think well, oh, Wise-man, for not all
Of treasures are in earthly marts.

And all who are exalted much,
By wealth, or power, or high degree,
Give of thy gifts, for 'twas for this
That God thy Maker honored thee.

—Dora E. W. Spratt, in The National Baptist.

What Came of Two Conversions.

IT was very cheering to hear a few days ago that one fourth of the large increase of membership in the young Suydam Street Reformed Church, during the past year, has been gathered in from the great body of non-churchgoers. One well informed told us that some of these had never seen a communion table until induced to attend the services of this church. Here is a good example put before us by Rev. Dr. Campbell, ex President of Rutgers College, and Rev. Dr. Mabon, Professor of Theology in our Seminary, who are the pastors of the church.

Accounts lately published of the results of two conversions in another locality are interesting, and the fact that two such men were converted is encouraging. The first is from Sabbath Reading, and is as follows:

"The well-known evangelist, Ferdinand Schiverea, was born in New York. His father was a Roman Catholic, and his mother a Protestant. Ferdinand, though christened by Bishop McCloskey, saw the fallacy of the Romish faith at a very early age. He was sent to a Protestant Sunday-school until he was about nine years old; and at that age he was taken from the public school and obliged to work on account of his father falling into drinking habits, and reducing the family to poverty.

"Withdrawn from the religious influences which might have been brought to bear upon him by his mother, he grew up reckless and with little desire for spiritual things. Taking a liking for the stage, he made up his mind to prepare for it in the Negro minstrel line. Naturally gifted as a dancer and mimic, he bade fair to attain popularity as a performer; but soon he drifted into a tramp life. After a brief experience in that direction, he resumed his steps towards the stage, working at whatever he could get to do, and embracing every opportunity for better preparation. Spiritually he continued to decline until at the time of his conversion, when twenty-two years of age, he had no hope in God, and no care for salvation. It was just one week before his conversion that he appeared before the footlights, with every evidence of coming success.

"One evening, he, with others, was handed a ticket to Mr. Moody's meetings, then being held in the Brooklyn Rink. Out of curiosity, he entered the Rink; it was then and there that God met him and told him that He had something better in store for him than the career of a buffoon. He attended the meetings a few nights, and after a great struggle he was converted. From the very moment of his conversion he commenced to tell others what God had done for him. His brother George was converted about the same time. The two engaged a small house, and fitted it up for prayer meetings, and they would stand at the alley entrance, hailing all persons who passed by, and inviting them to the meetings in the upper room in the rear.

"This was the commencement in earnest of Ferdinand Schiverea's preaching. He worked at anything to make a living, and at night held meetings in his little upper room or elsewhere. In this way he went on until four years ago, when, after five years of struggle to leave all and go and preach the Gospel to the non-churchgoing masses, he gave up all secular employment. Without a dollar promised, with hardly a friend to stand by him, and in the middle of one of the severest winters, he commenced telling the masses of neglected people about the great love of God."

Mr. Schiverea was afterward a co laborer with Rev. Dr. Pentecost in one of the worst parts of Brooklyn, and is now preparing to go from place to place with a Bible cart, distributing Bibles and exhorting by the way.

The other instance is recorded in The Christian, London, in these words:

"Mr. William J. Orsman was born at Cambridge in 1838, and enjoyed the advantages of a religious training under Bishop Perry, D.D. Soon after he left school, the Crimean War broke out. Although but a youth, Mr. Orsman proceeded to Constantinople and Scutari, where he served in the Army Commissariat Department, and was frequently brought into contact with Miss Florence Nightingale. At the conclusion of the campaign in 1856, he obtained an appointment, which he still holds, in the General Post-office, London. In the same year he was led to attend the ministry of C. H. Spurgeon, at the Surrey Music Hall, and the young Post-office official was one of the popular preacher's earliest converts.

"Having experienced the power of Divine grace in his own soul, Mr. Orsman at once became desirous of communicating the good news to others; for some time he engaged in voluntary Christian work in South London, particularly in the open air and the common lodging houses. By his energy a large Bible-class and Evangelists' Association were established at the Metropolitan Tabernacle. As honorary secretary of that earnest band of workers, he rendered important service; and a goodly number of ministers and evangelists can look back to those early days as among the most pleasant and helpful in their lives."

Working with this Association led Mr. Orsman into one of the most degraded sections of London, where the "Great Hell" and "Little Hell" lodging houses were doing a thriving business. Here he has remained for nearly twenty-five years, conducting a work which has been often commended and constantly encouraged by the late Earl of Shaftesbury and Rev. Mr. Spurgeon. A great change has come over the people, and the commodious mission premises are the centre of vigorous and most successful Christian efforts. Mr. Orsman divides his time between his important duties in the Post-Office and the work of the mission.

These examples deserve to be considered.

SUNDAY NEWSPAPERS.—Is not the increasing use of Sunday newspapers in Christian families owing largely to the absence of conscientious inquiry? Has not conduct in this respect outrun conviction? Have we not acted without thought of principles or forethought of the effect of example? It may not be that we have violated deliberate and fixed opinions, but that we have acted without opinions. We have unconsciously stretched our Christian liberty in the dark. The cords which bind it to Christian principle have snapped. We have done that which we have not given conscience a chance to condemn or to approve. To that extent we have "lived without God in the world."

A more insidious temptation to a profane use of holy time can scarcely be devised than the Sunday newspaper as now conducted. It has not religion enough to save its title. To children and youth, especially, it is a counter-check to public worship, a faithful pulpit, and the Sunday-school. It is a pest in Christian families. Some portions of the plays of Shakespeare are more congenial with the spirit of worship. If we must choose for our Sabbath hours between the best Sunday newspaper in Vanity Fair, and Hamlet, give us Hamlet.—Prof. Austin Phelps, D D., in The Congregationalist.

THE proud man hath no God; the envious man hath no neighbor; the angry man hath not himself. What good, then, in being a man, if one has neither himself, nor a neighbor, nor God?—Bishop Hall.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Home Readings.

LESSON 3, FIRST QUARTER.

M. The Rechabites ..... Jer. 35: 1-19.
T. Jonadab the Son of Rechab ..... 2 Kings 10: 15-25.
W. The Nazarite's Vow ..... Num. 6: 1-12.
T. Counsel Set at Naught ..... Prov. 1: 20-33.
F. A Disobedient People ..... Jer. 7: 21-34
S. Vengeance Denounced ..... Jer. 11: 1-14.
S. Warning against Wine ..... Prov. 23: 29-35.

—From the Westminster Question Book.

International Sunday-School Lesson.

BY REV. JOHN C. VAN DEVENTER.

Jan 17th.—The Faithful Rechabites.—Jer. 35: 12-19.

Golden Text.—"For unto this day they drink none, but obey their father's commandment."—JER. 35: 14.

CENTRAL TRUTH.—"Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long upon the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee."—EX. 20: 12.

INTRODUCTION.

THE family of Rechabites, brought prominently before us in this chapter, appear to have had just this mission to accomplish in connection with the inspired history, viz., to serve as an object lesson in obedience. Very little is known of them, but it appears to be quite certain that they were descended from Abraham and Keturah; that they belonged to the same group of tribes from which Moses took his wife; that some of them accompanied the Israelites into the promised land, sharing in some measure the blessings of the covenant people. It is impossible to locate Rechab, who gave his name to this family, for the terms are not sufficiently definite for us to determine whether he was the father, or a more remote ancestor of Jonadab, who was associated with Jehu in the destruction of idolatry in Israel. It was this Jonadab who instituted the ascetic regulations which were the occasion of this lesson. These Rechabites had been driven by the advancing armies of Nebuchadnezzar to leave their pastures and seek protection within the walls of Jerusalem. The presence of this company, dwelling perhaps in tents in some open part of the city and differing so markedly in habits from the people of the city, would naturally attract a great deal of curious attention. This prepared the way for the object lesson which the prophet was instructed to teach the people through these strangers. Representatives of the entire family were gathered in one of the rooms adjoining the temple, and were then cordially invited to partake of wine which the prophet had set before them. Their answer was given without hesitation or circumlocution, "We will drink no wine: for Jonadab the son of Rechab our father commanded us, saying, Ye shall drink no wine, neither ye, nor your sons for ever." In studying the lesson we need to bear in mind that the emphasis is laid upon their obedience rather than upon their abstinence, although that is doubtless approved also.

THE LESSON.

I. THE REMONSTRANCE.—VS. 12-15.

V. 12.—"Then came the word of the Lord unto Jeremiah" The prophet himself was not aware of the meaning of the scene just witnessed until God explained and bade him apply it.

V. 13.—"Go and tell the men of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, Will ye not receive instruction to hearken to my words?' The Lord had a controversy with His people because they did not appreciate and improve the advantages they enjoyed. No man will be able to say that he sinned because of ignorance, but God can say men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil.

V. 14.—"The words of Jonadab....are performed." These commands had a human source and authority, they were intended to meet certain dangers to which these people were exposed, and the wisdom and authority of their ancestor had been unquestioned for over two centuries, if they are not recognized even to the present day. "Notwithstanding I have spoken unto you, rising early and speaking, but ye hearkened not unto me." Well might God say, If I be a father, where is mine honor? This people whom He had signalized by many and particular revelations of His will, had made themselves conspicuous by persistent disregard of that will.

V. 15.—"I have sent unto you all my servants the prophets" From the time of Moses until then there had scarcely been a generation which had not heard the voice of some man of God warning against sin, and seeking to lead them back to God. These warnings had been accompanied by gracious promises of blessing and wonderful manifestations of Divine interposition, yet, "Ye have not inclined your ear." They had not even listened to the message, much less had they given heed to its teachings.

II. THE REPROOF.—VS. 16 17.

V. 16—"Because the sons of Jonadab, the son of Rechab, have performed the commandment of their father. This "because" introduces both the reproof of Judah and the reward of the Rechabites. Their conduct is contrasted in this connection in order to emphasize the difference in the manner of God's dealing with them.

V. 17.—"Behold, I will bring upon Judah....all the evil that I have pronounced against them." The warnings and threatenings of God are held in abeyance subject to the manner in which men treat them. It is true of every sinner as it was of the nation, "Thou hast destroyed thyself."

III. THE REWARD —VS. 18, 19.

V. 18.—"Jeremiah said unto the house of Rechab" They had been brought into a position of peculiar temptation and peril; they had remained firm and loyal to the commands of one whom they esteemed, and now they were to receive an especial mark of God's approval. Their obedience to man was now recognized as obedience to God. Notice in the latter part of the verse the emphasis laid upon obedience in the different forms of expression. It seems as if God could not set their faithfulness in too strong a light.

V. 19.—"Jonadab the son of Rechab shall not want a man to stand before me forever." This declaration of Jehovah was their adoption into the full fellowship of Israel. Arabs have been found in modern times who claim to be the descendants of these Rechabites, and who are still obedient to Jonadab and Jehovah. The expression "to stand before me" is taken by some in a technical sense as referring to the service of the temple, and there appear intimations that after the return from captivity the Rechabites were to some extent incorporated with the Levites.

We cannot leave this lesson without considering what bearing the incident has upon the question of abstinence from wine. While it is evident that this subject is not the prominent one in the incident, yet it is apparent that the wisdom of Jonadab and the example of his descendants ought to have weight with us. It could not have been wrong for him to lay this command upon his people, or their obedience to that command would not have been so markedly approved by God. In his judgment the tendencies of his day demanded such self-denial on the part of those who wished to preserve themselves from the contamination of evil; similar tendencies in the present day make a similar course almost obligatory upon those who would keep themselves unspotted from the world.

LESSONS FOR TO-DAY.

1. Obedience to God is the part of wise men.
2. Disobedience to God is the utmost folly.
3. Obedience to God is reasonable.
4. Disobedience to God is ungrateful.
5. Obedience to God is demanded.
6. Disobedience to God is rebellion.
7. Obedience to God is sure of a reward.
8. Disobedience to God is certain of well-merited punishment.

Charity.

LITTLE children, bright and cheery,
Wrapped in furs and wreathed in smiles,
Winter is not cold and dreary,
Pleasure all your time beguiles.
To the sound of bells, entrancing,
Back of horses, gayly prancing,
You can ride for miles and miles.

But, to some, the winds are calling
In a melancholy wail;
With a chill, the snow is falling
On their faces pinched and pale.
Happy hopes are dead and dying,
Frost and hunger, tears and sighing,
Come with winter's sleet and hail.

Little children, who are living
In your homes so warm and bright,
You, with others, should be giving
Aid for homeless ones to-night.
Give with open hands and gladness,
Cheering hearts bowed down in sadness
With a ray of heaven's light.

—James Clarence Harvey, in Sunday-School Times.

A Brave Boy's Reward.

THE Christian Worker gives the following interesting story: There is in Savoy, very near the Italian frontier, a small town called Bridoire, through which runs the little river from which it takes its name. The Bridoire is a mountain stream of great depth and strong current, and it is seldom that anyone who has the misfortune to fall into it is rescued. A short time ago a group of merry children just let loose from school were at play on the river bank, when one tumbled headlong in, and was being fast whirled away by the torrent, when a bigger boy, named Antoine Meziat, aged thirteen, plunged in after him. Bravely striking out into mid-stream, he seized the terrified child by the collar, succeeded in bringing him safely back to land, and restored him to his parents uninjured, though, of course, wet through.

This little incident found its way into a local paper, and was copied into others, till it met the eye of an American gentleman who was staying at Southampton, England. He was so much struck that he at once put a £20 Bank of England note (equal to 500 francs) into an envelope, and wrote the following letter:

"MY BOY: I read, the day before yesterday, in an English newspaper, a few lines about you; but I do not know whether you will receive the medal which, I think the only worthy recompense of a young Frenchman who has distinguished himself by saving the life of other at the peril of his own. I hope it may be so, but meanwhile I think it will give you pleasure to know that far from your own country there is one who wishes you well, and will always continue to do so on account of the courage and devotion you have shown, and that this stranger is an American.

"I beg you to accept from him the sum of 500 francs as a mark of his esteem, and I advise you not to spend this money, but to put it into a bank, where it will probably become more in course of time

"If you have any desire to write, and the opportunity of doing so, a letter will be welcome to the friend I speak of, and he would also like to have your portrait.

(Signed) A. C. C——.
— W—— street, New York."

Antoine was overjoyed at this handsome present and the kind words with which it was accompanied, and he lost no time in going to Lyons, where he presented himself at the bank, in order to deposit his money. The chief cashier thought it very strange that so young a boy should have so large a sum of money in his possession and asked questions that drew from him the circumstances just related. Further inquiries proved him to be a very deserving lad, and it is probable that the 500 francs will be the means of setting him up in life in so frugal and hard-working a country as Savoy, where the proud possessor of a little nest-egg often sees himself on the high road to competence, if not actual fortune.

MANY a time a man has travelled so far that God can never stop him until He has to put his dead wife in his pathway, and many a man has turned around and said, "I will go back! I will go back!" Many a time God has thrown the sweet angel babe, like a sweet angel chiseled out of marble, in the pathway of the father, and stopped him. This much I know: God will never suffer any man to be damned until He has done His best to save him.—Rev. Sam Jones.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate
In Liver and Kidney Troubles.

Dr. O. G. CILLEY, Boston, says: "I have used it with the most remarkable success in dyspepsia, and derangement of the liver and kidneys."

Rheumatism

We doubt if there is, or can be, a specific remedy for rheumatism; but thousands who have suffered its pains have been greatly benefited by Hood's Sarsaparilla. If you have failed to find relief, try this great remedy.

"I was afflicted with rheumatism twenty years. Previous to 1883 I found no relief, but grew worse, and at one time was almost helpless. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me more good than all the other medicine I ever had." H. T. BALCOM, Shirley Village, Mass.

"I had rheumatism three years, and got no relief till I took Hood's Sarsaparilla. It has done great things for me. I recommend it to others." LEWIS BURBANK, Biddeford, Me.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by three peculiarities: 1st, the combination of remedial agents; 2d, the proportion; 3d, the process of securing the active medicinal qualities. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown. Send for book containing additional evidence.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over." J. P. THOMPSON, Register of Deeds, Lowell, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla beats all others, and is worth its weight in gold." I. BARRINGTON, 130 Bank Street, New York City.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Made only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

7% NET Secured by first mortgage on improved farms worth three times the loan. INTEREST Semi-annual and paid at your home. 20th year of residence, and 10th of business. No investor ever had to pay taxes, costs of foreclosure, wait for interest, or take land. BEST of References all around you. Write if you have money to loan.
D. S. B. JOHNSTON & SON,
Negotiators of Mortgage Loans, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN. Kansas City, Mo.

YOU CAN DYE ANYTHING ANY COLOR
With Diamond Dyes, for 10 cts. They never fail. 32 fast colors. They also make inks, color photo's, etc. Send for colored samples and Dye book. Gold, Silver, Copper and Bronze Paints for any use—only 10 cents a pk'ge. Druggists sell or we send post-paid.
WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

WANTED An active Man or Woman in every county to sell our goods. Salary $75 per Month and Expenses. Canvassing Outfit and Particulars FREE. STANDARD SILVER-WARE CO., Boston, Mass.

Happiness

results from that true contentment which indicates perfect health of body and mind. You may possess it, if you will purify and invigorate your blood with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. E. M. Howard, Newport, N. H., writes: "I suffered for years with Scrofulous humors. After using two bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, I great relief. It has entirely restored me to health." James French, Atchison, Kans., writes: "To all persons suffering from Liver Complaint, I would strongly recommend Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I was afflicted with a disease of the liver for nearly two years, when a friend advised me to take this medicine. It gave prompt relief, and has cured me." Mrs. H. M. Kidder, 41 Dwight st., Boston, Mass., writes: "For several years I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla in my family. I never feel safe, even without it. As a liver medicine and general purifier of the blood, it has no equal." Mrs. A. B. Allen, Winterpock, Va., writes: "My youngest child, two years of age, was taken with Bowel Complaint, which we could not cure. We tried many remedies, but he continued to grow worse, and finally became so reduced in flesh that we could only move him upon a pillow. It was suggested by one of the doctors that Scrofula might be the cause of the trouble. We procured a bottle of and commenced giving it to him. It surely worked wonders, for, in a short time, he was completely cured."

Found

At Home

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

Sold by all Druggists.
Price $1; Six bottles, $5.
Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass., U. S. A.

CONTINENTAL Insurance Co.
Continental Buildings
100 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.
Cor. COURT and MONTAGUE STS., BROOKLYN
106 BROADWAY, BROOKLYN, E.D.

Insures against loss by Fire at reasonable rates.

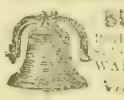
Reserve for re-insurance (Fire Risks)..	$1,928,299 3
do do do (Inland ")...	25,394 7
Reserve ample for all other claims.....	449,586 0
Capital paid in cash.....	1, 00,000 0
Net surplus..	1,535,221 8
Total Cash Assets, Jan. 1, 1885.	$4,938,50 92

This Company conducts its business under the restrictions of the New York Safety Fund Law. The two Safety Funds together equal $1,200,000.

H. H. LAMPORT, President.
CYRUS PECK, Secretary

BELLS.

McShane Bell Foundry
Finest Grade of Bells,
CHIMES AND PEALS for CHURCHES, &c.
Send for Price and Catalogue. Address
H. McSHANE & CO.,
Mention this paper. Baltimore, Md.



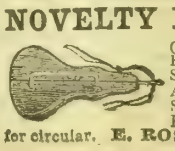
BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY,
Bells of Pure Copper and Best Selected Tin for Churches, Schools, Fire Alarms, Farms, etc. FULLY WARRANTED. Catalogue and Price List Free.
VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

CINCINNATI BELL FOUNDRY CO
SUCCESSORS IN BELLS TO THE
BLYMYER MANUFACTURING CO
CATALOGUE WITH 500 TESTIMONIALS
CINCINNATI O. BELLS CHURCH SCHOOL FIRE ALARM

MENEELY & COMPANY
West Troy, N. Y. Bells,
For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others

PISO'S CURE FOR
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION

NOVELTY RUG MACHINE.



(Pat. Dec. 27, 1881.) For making Rugs, Tidies, Hoods, Mittens, etc. Sent by mail, full directions. $1. AGENTS WANTED. Man'frs Stamped Rug Patterns on Burlap. Beware of infringements. Send for circular. E. ROSS & CO., Toledo, Ohio.

FINANCIAL.

HARVEY FISK & SONS,
28 Nassau Street, New York,
DEALERS IN
UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT
AND
OTHER DESIRABLE SECURITIES
FOR INVESTORS.
ALL STOCKS & BONDS
Listed on the New-York Stock Exchange,
Bought and Sold on Commission for Cash.

Deposit accounts received and interest allowed on monthly balances subject to draft at sight.

Coupons, registered interest, and dividends collected, and placed to credit, for our customers, without charge.

7 PER CENT. INTEREST
FIRST MORTGAGE
FARM LOANS.

Personal acquaintance with lands and values. Over 2,000 loans made. NO CUSTOMER has ever LOST A DOLLAR of principal or interest on any loans made here. Interest collected and sent to you, free of cost, each year. These loans are very safe, and pay nearly U.S. BONDS, I am three times as much as known and recommended by leading business men and clergymen, East and West—men for whom I have been making these investments for TEN YEARS PAST.

REFERENCES.
REV. WM. L. GAGE, D.D., Hartford, Ct.
M. E. GATES, PH.D., LL.D., President Rutgers College, New Brunswick, N. J.
DR. WM. J MILNE, President Geneseo Normal School, Geneseo, N. Y
HON. E. M. TOPLIFF, Manchester, N. H.
REV. JOHN W. RAY, Lake City, Minn
DR. JNO. K. BUCKLYN, Mystic Bridge, Ct.
Importers' and Traders' National Bank, New York.
First National Bank, St. Paul, Minn.
The Congregationalist, Boston, N. Y. Observer, and hundreds of others in all parts of the United States.

All are pleased with my Investments. Circular, references, letters giving experience and testimony of old customers, and a New Map of Dakota sent free on application. Mention this paper. Address

E. P. GATES,
Pres. Merchant's Bank,
Grand Forks, Dakota.

6% 7% 8%
The American Investment Company, incorporated under the laws of Iowa, with a Capital Stock of $1,000,000. Succeeding ORMSBY BROS. & CO., Emmetsburg, Iowa, ORMSBY, CLUTE & CO., Mitchell, Dakota, ORMSBY, GRAVES & CO., Huron, Dakota, Bankers and Mortgage Brokers, offer Guaranteed Mortgages, Debenture and School Bonds. Their Demand Investment Certificates drawing 5 per cent. are attractive for parties with funds idle for a short time. 20 years' experience. Write for pamphlet
Home Office, Emmetsburg, Iowa.
New York Office, 150 Nassau St.

INVEST Through the Sound and Reliable
WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE CO.
F. M. PERKINS, President. LAWRENCE, KAN. L. H. PERKINS, Secretary.
CAPITAL AND SURPLUS, $250,000.
Carefully selected 1st Mortgage Farm Loans payable in N. Y. Unrivalled facilities. Absolute satisfaction. 10 years' experience. No losses. Refer to 3d Nat'l Bank, N.Y. City; Nat'l Bank, Lawrence, Kan.; and Hundreds of Investors. Send for pamphlet, forms and full information. Branch Offices in N.Y. City, Albany & Phila. N.Y. Office, 137 B'way, C.C. Hine & Son, Agts.

ATLANTIC
Mutual Insurance Co.
NEW YORK OFFICE, 51 WALL STREET
ORGANIZED 1842.
Insures against Marine and Inland Navigation Risks.
And will issue Policies making Loss payable in England.
Assets for the Security of its Policies are more than TEN MILLION DOLLARS.
The profits of the Company revert to the assured and are divided annually, upon the Premiums terminated during the year, Certificates for which are issued, bearing interest in accordance with its Charter.
J. D. JONES, President.
CHARLES DENNIS, Vice President
W. H. H. MOORE, 2d Vice Pres't.
A. A. RAVEN 3d Vice Pres't.
J. H. CHAPMAN, Secretary.

HOME
INSURANCE COMPANY
OF NEW YORK.
OFFICE, No. 119 BROADWAY.
Sixty-fourth Semi-Annual Statement, Showing the Condition of the Company on the 1st day of July, 1885.

CASH CAPITAL.....	$3,000,000 00
Reserve Premium Fund	2,839,742 00
Reserve for Unpaid Losses and Claims..	389,513 48
Net Surplus.....	1,030,802
Cash Assets.....	$7,260,058 32

SUMMARY OF ASSETS

Cash in Banks.....	$134,241 28
Bonds and Mortgages, being first lien on Real Estate.....	971,950 00
United States Stocks (market value).....	2,884,245 00
Bank and Rail road Stocks and Bonds (market value).....	1,581,772 50
State and City Bonds (market value).....	232,000 00
Loans on Stocks, payable on demand.....	123,600 00
Interest due on 1st July, 1885.....	43,087
Premiums uncollected and in hands of Agents.....	340,835
Real Estate.....	960,337 32
Total,.....	$7,260,058 32

CHAS. J. MARTIN, President.
J. H. WASHBURN, Secretary

In this age of adulteration there are few things more difficult to obtain of a pure quality than soap. Unfortunately the mischief by inferior soaps is done before their dangerous nature is discovered. The Ivory Soap is 99 44/100% pure, so may be relied upon as entirely safe to use.

Free of charge. A full size cake of Ivory Soap will be sent to any one who can not get it of their grocer, if six two-cent stamps, to pay postage, are sent to Procter & Gamble, Cincinnati. Please mention this paper.

JAMES PYLE'S

O K TRADE MARK

PEARLINE

The Great Invention,

For EASY WASHING,

IN HARD OR SOFT, HOT OR COLD WATER. Without Harm to FABRIC or HANDS, and particularly adapted to Warm Climates. No family, rich or poor, should be without it.

Sold by all Grocers, but beware of vile imitations. PEARLINE is manufactured only by

JAMES PYLE, NEW YORK.

Sawing Made Easy.

MONARCH LIGHTNING SAWING MACHINE

SENT ON 30 DAYS' TEST TRIAL.

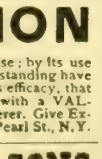
For logging camps, wood-yards, farmers getting out stove wood, and all sorts of log-cutting—it is unrivaled. Thousands sold yearly. A boy of 16 can saw logs fast and easy. Immense saving of labor and money. Write for elegantly illustrated catalogue in 6 brilliant colors, also brilliantly illuminated poster in 5 colors. All free. Agents Wanted. Big money made quickly.

MONARCH M'F'G CO., (A) 206 State St., Chicago, Ill.

LE PAGE'S

LIQUID GLUE

Is used by thousands of first class Manufacturers and Mechanics on their best work. Received GOLD MEDAL, London, '83. Pronounced strongest glue known. Send card of dealer who does not keep it, with five 2c stamps for SAMPLE CAN FREE



Russia Cement Co., Gloucester, Mass.

CONSUMPTION

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., N.Y.

GEO. MATHER'S SONS, PRINTING INK

Manufacturers. Superior Black and Colored Ink Lithographic and Plate Ink. Varnishes, etc. 60 John Street, New York.

The Intelligencer is printed with our ink.

R. H. MACY & CO.,

14TH STREET, SIXTH AVE., AND 13TH STREET NEW YORK.

GRAND CENTRAL FANCY AND DRY GOODS ESTABLISHMENT.

Special Sale of Ladies' and Children's

MUSLIN UNDERWEAR,

all of our own manufacture and design. Our prices are the lowest in the country.

Rare bargains in

LINENS

and Housekeeping Goods, our own direct importation.

Unapproachable bargains in

BLACK AND COLORED Silks and Dress Goods.

Our prices below all competition.

Tremendous mark-down in

SUITS AND CLOAKS.

Our Entire Stock at Lower Prices than ever before known.

Special Care Given to Mail Orders.

R. H. MACY & CO.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY

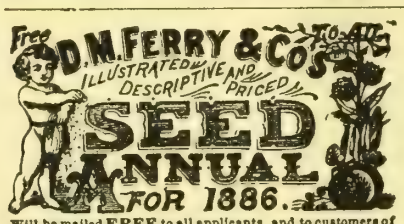
GOOD NEWS TO LADIES.

Greatest inducements ever offered. Now's your time to get up orders for our celebrated Teas and Coffees, and secure a beautiful Gold Band or Moss Rose China Tea Set, or Handsome Decorated Dinner Set, or Gold Band Moss Decorated Toilet Set. For full particulars address THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO.,

CURE FOR THE DEAF

Peck's Patent Improved Cushioned Ear Drums

PERFECTLY RESTORE THE HEARING, and perform the work of the Natural Drum. Always in position, but invisible to others and comfortable to wear. All Conversation and even whispers heard distinctly. We refer to those using them. Send for illustrated book with testimonials, free. Address, F. HISCOX, 853 Broadway, N. Y. Mention this paper.



Will be mailed FREE to all applicants, and to customers of last year without ordering it. It contains about 180 pages, 600 illustrations, prices, accurate descriptions and valuable directions for planting all varieties of VEGETABLE and FLOWER SEEDS, BULBS, etc. Invaluable to all, especially to Market Gardeners. Send for it.

D. M. FERRY & CO., Detroit, Michigan.

CLAREMONT COLONY!
CLAREMONT COLONY!
CLAREMONT COLONY!
CLAREMONT COLONY!
CLAREMONT COLONY!
CLAREMONT COLONY!
CLAREMONT COLONY!

A New House every 16 days in the last 6 years. Our village, only 32 months old, has 5 stores, 2 hotels, 2 churches, school, newspaper, factory, foundry, 4 steamboats, 2 trains and 2 mails daily. Land rapidly advancing. Send, send, send, by all means, send for circulars with 4 maps, 36 Photographic cuts of houses, all about the wonderful growth of our colony, its soil, climate, markets, business opportunities, health, prices, terms, and 96 other distinct subjects. Farms for $2 0 on monthly instalments to those having employment, without leaving their situation. Address J. F. MANCHA, Claremont, Surry Co., Va.

DON'T put all your eggs in one basket, but remember that the EQUITABLE MORTGAGE CO. guarantees its 7 per cent Farm Mortgages, principal and interest. Office, 135 and 137 Broadway, New York.

SILKS AND VELVETS.

JAMES M'CREERY & CO.

Commence on Monday, Jan. 4, their ANNUAL SALE of SILKS and VELVETS.

HEAVY REDUCTIONS have been made in all Sections of the Vast Stocks which they exhibit.

An early inspection is invited.

Broadway and Elveventh Street, New York.

Sole Agents for the

CLIFTON SILK MILLS.

LEGGAT BROS., CHEAPEST BOOK STORE IN THE WORLD.

989,999 MAGNIFICENT GIFT AND GORGEOUS JUVENILE BOOKS ALMOST GIVEN AWAY. GRAND HOLIDAY CATALOGUE FREE. IMMENSE TERMS TO SUNDAY-SCHOOLS, ETC.

81 Chambers St.,

Third door west of City Hall.

FOR ONE MONTH.

GREAT BARGAINS IN THEOLOGICAL, SUNDAY-SCHOOL AND MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS. FAMILY AND TEACHERS' BIBLES A SPECIALTY.

Come and see at

N. TIBBALS & SONS,
124 Nassau St, New York City.

AGENTS WANTED FOR OUR CHARMING NEW BOOK.

"Some Noted Princes, Authors and Statesmen of Our Time."

By 20 of our best writers—Canon Farrar, Jas. T. Fields, Jas. Parton, Dickens's daughter, and others. Over 60 fine portraits and engravings. ["The book is brimming over with choice and rare things."—N. Y. OBSERVER.] Intelligent young men and ladies can have permanent employment. A few General Agents wanted. THE HENRY BILL PUB. CO., Norwich, Ct.

OUR New Catalogue of Books for family, Sunday-school, ministers, students, or teachers' Library will be sent free to any address on receipt of a postal request. Address PHILLIPS & HUNT, Publishers, 805 Broadway, New York

POPULAR LECTURES.

SUBJECTS

1.—The Romance of the Revolution.
2.—An Evening with Longfellow
3.—The Tudors
4.—Monologue—National Poems and Events

Address MRS. E. T. BARRETT,
SING SING, N. Y

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.

EPPS'S COCOA.

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood, and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins by Grocers, labelled thus:

JAS. EPPS & CO., Homœopathic Chemists, London, England.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD
GOLD MEDAL PARIS EXPOSITION—1878.

CARDS 60 Fancy Pictures, and 25 elegant Cards in Gilt Edge, Silk Fringe, Hidden Name, &c., 1 Songster, 1 $50 Prize Puzzle, and 8 parlor games, all for 10 cts. Game of Authors 10 cts. IVY CARD CO., Clintonville Conn.

150 CARDS, in new styles, Embossed, Hidden name, Gold Edge, Transparent, &c., &c., of latest designs and lowest prices. 50 samples with name on 10 cts. TODD CARD CO., Clintonville, Conn.

M'COMBER'S PATENT BOOTS AND SHOES.

Everybody can now enjoy my Patent Boots and Shoes. I am now manufacturing my Patent Boots and Shoes on a large scale with new and improved machinery, and selling at greatly reduced prices so as to place them within the reach of all. I will send to all applicants price-lists, full instructions for self-measurement for men, women and children, and return the shoes as quickly as they can be made. They will fit beautifully, will never warp, distort, or injure the tenderest foot, and will restore bad and distorted feet to symmetry and comfort. I make no shoddy goods, and my highest class boots and shoes are unsurpassed either in material or workmanship, and my lowest class goods are superior in every respect to all others at the same price. Those who desire perfect boots and shoes should send for my free illustrated pamphlets, JOEL M'COMBER, Inventor and Manufacturer, of M'COMBER'S PATENT BOOTS AND SHOES, AND M'COMBER'S PATENT LASTS, 52 East 10th Street, New York.

To preserve the leather of all kinds, for ladies' or gentlemen's boots and shoes, and to make them soft and beautiful, use my Seal Polish Blacking. Mention the INTELLIGENCER

EDUCATIONAL.

UNIVERSITY of the City of New York.

JOHN HALL, D.D., LL.D., Chancellor.

1. DEPARTMENT OF ARTS, Tuition Free.
2. DEPARTMENT OF SCIENCE, Tuition Free.
3. SCHOOL OF CIVIL ENGINEERING, Tuition $100.
4. DEPARTMENT OF LAW.
5. DEPARTMENT OF MEDICINE.

* Catalogues, with full particulars of all Courses, may be had upon application to the Registrar.

BEST TEACHERS AMERICAN and FOREIGN, promptly provided for Families, Schools, Colleges Skilled Teachers supplied with Positions. Circulars of Good Schools free to Parents. School Property rented and sold. School and Kindergarten Material, etc.

J. W. SCHERMERHORN & CO.,
AMERICAN SCHOOL INSTITUTE, 7 East 14th St., N. Y

$5 PER DOZEN.

I now furnish my finest Imperial Photographs at $5.00 per dozen. All sittings by the instantaneous process. Superior work at low prices.

ABRAHAM BOGARDUS

872 Broadway cor. 18th St., only.

KNABE PIANOFORTES.

UNEQUALLED IN
Tone, Touch, Workmanship and Durability.
WILLIAM KNABE & CO.,
Nos. 204 and 206 West Baltimore Street, Baltimore. No. 112 Fifth Avenue, N. Y.

PAYSON'S INDELIBLE INK. No preparation and only a common pen needed. Established 50 Years. Superior and popular for decorative work on linen. Received Centennial Medal & Diploma. Sold everywhere.

Market Report.

Review of the New York Market for Butter, Cheese, etc. Reported by DAVID W. LEWIS & Co., Produce Commission Merchants, 49 Pearl St., New York.

Commission on Butter, Eggs, Poultry, etc., is five per cent; Flour, Grain, etc., 2½ per cent.

Marking-plates furnished when desired.

NEW YORK, January 2, 1886.

BUTTER.—Receipts for the week, 22,489 pks.; exports 1,317 pks.

This is holiday week and business is almost at a standstill. All grades of butter have been more plentiful and freely offered at a decline of fully 2c. less than last week. We note sales of fancy Western creameries at 36a37c., and really good ones all the way down to 30c State dairy butter has been in full supply and light demand, and after leaving a strictly fancy dairy or closely selected lots of fall make, prices are low and very irregular. We quote:

Solid silky grain-fed fresh Elgin creamery	35 @ 37
Fancy fresh grain-fed Eastern creamery	33 @ 35
Heavy bodied, grainy, high-flavored dairy, fresh	25 @ 27
A strictly fancy Delaware dairy, entire	22 @ 24
Common to fair dairies [nominal]	13 @ 18
Fine summer firkins	— @ 20
Fresh Western imitation creamery	23 @ 26
Western creameries, fancy summer make	18 @ 20
" " good held butter	12 @ 15
" store-packed butter	7 @ 10
Winter make, common roll butter	9 @ 12
Grease	4 @ 5

CHEESE.—Receipts for the week, 24,945 boxes; exports 22,270 boxes.

There is a firm market, with exporters taking fancy white stock at 9¼a9¾c., and colored 10a10½c., and good useful cheese at 6a8c., also skims at 2a3c. We quote:

	FANCY.	FINE.	FAULTY.
Factory, full cream.	9½@10½	9 @ 9¼	6 @ 8
Night's milk.
" skimmed.	6 @ 7	4 @ 5	2 @ 3

EGGS.—Receipts for the week, 4,522 bbls., and imports 2,574 cases.

Mild weather and light demand had a demoralizing effect on the market, and prices dropped off 2a3c. per doz. and close weak. We quote:

Fresh laid, per doz	— @ 25
Western and Canada, per doz	23 @ 24
Limed eggs, per doz	18 @ 20

POULTRY AND GAME.—We have had a repetition of last week in poultry. There was more stock offering than could be sold, and although prices ruled very low there was considerable stock carried over, and prices were the lowest of the season. In game, quail were in demand at better prices. Partridge and grouse sold well. We quote:

Dressed turkies, per lb	8 @ 10
do chickens, per lb	6 @ 9
do fowls, per lb	6 @ 7½
do ducks, per lb	10 @ 13
do geese, per lb	8 @ 10
Quail, per doz	$1 50 @ $1 62
Partridges, per pair	70 @ 80
Grouse, per pair	80 @ 85

The Christian Intelligencer.

Een-dracht maakt macht.

VOL. LVII.—No. 2. WHOLE No. 2894. NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 13, 1886. $2.65 A YEAR IN ADVANCE. No. 48 CHURCH STREET.

EDITORS: Rev. JOHN M. FERRIS, D.D. Rev. N. H. VAN ARSDALE.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR: MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

THE ACCOUNT of Orphan Work in the Netherlands, after the manner of the Bristol Orphanages, conducted by Rev. George Muller, printed on the twelfth page, will be new to many of our readers and tends to strengthen faith in the promises of God.

A NEW and remarkably full history of the school of the Collegiate Church of this city will be regarded with interest by a great many persons. The graduates will put a high value upon it and the descendants of many of the old families of the city will be attracted by the record of the names of their ancestors and of the circumstances, so widely different from those now prevailing, under which they were taught. All who are gratified with the history of education in this city, marked by a steady progress, will find in these annals many facts which they will enjoy. The book is one that will be talked about in many circles, will revive pleasant reminiscences and will furnish and suggest topics for agreeable and profitable conversation. The children of old families, we have said, will regard the record with special interest. It is surprising how many of those families, Dutch, Huguenot and English, are represented in the catalogue of scholars. One is rather surprised to find some names, such as Bancker, Bayard, Bleecker, Brevoort, De Peyster, Duyckink, Duryee, Elsworth, Forbes, Harpending, Kip, Lefferts, Roosevelt, Rutgers, Stuyvesant, and a hundred others. It is pleasant to notice how many of the graduates have occupied positions of honor in mercantile and professional life, and in the service of the State. The illustrations have special value, as they recall the days when the city was young and contrast them with the present. The old buildings have a sturdy dignity that is impressive. They seem to embody the substantial character and serious earnestness and the resolution of those who built and used them. The book, which has cost Mr. Dunshee much labor, will be welcomed to an honorable place in many libraries. As a matter of course Mr. Richard Brinkerhoff has it for sale, at the Synod's Rooms, 34 Vesey street, New York, for two dollars, and postage when sent by mail.

HERE ARE TWO WAYS of helping deserving men through the world. One is to give them money. That needs to be done with a great deal of judgment, for the tendency of such help is to injure. Another is to provide employment, so that by faithful service they can earn a fair living. If the employment is of such a character and so ordered that an industrious man, who makes himself familiar with the duties of the occupation and fits himself for a higher position, can secure promotion on the ground of merit, it is a wise and beneficent provision. There is a tendency at present to overlook this fact. Men of capital are assailed simply because they have capital, and the attempt is made to induce those who have less or little money to look on them with suspicion and to adopt some measures to limit the further gains of the capitalist. Nobody has anything to say of the regular employment provided by the man of money for hundreds and thousands of men. Every week brings new criticisms upon the dead Mr. Vanderbilt, because he did not do this or that by an expenditure of some millions. Very incorrect representations are made of the character of his life. How easy it is to overlook the fact that by the system of railroads developed under his superintendence thousands of men earned a fair living, many a handsome living, and thousands of families were supported. One writer refers in a style that has an undertone of something like contempt and condemnation, to the outlay of two millions of dollars on the Vanderbilt mansion. But the money was paid for work, was paid to workmen of all classes, from the day laborer who dug out the cellar to skilful carvers, upholsterers, and to artists. Is that of no importance? An example in another city may be received with more favor, it being the very bad and cowardly fashion just now to administer a kick to the dead millionaire. Soon after the panic of 1873 a gentleman in a city in the interior of this State, who was receiving a handsome income from the manufacture of a useful article, expended sixty thousand dollars in adding a dining-room to his mansion. The outlay supported the skilled labor of that town through two years of those "hard times." Our informant spoke of him as a public benefactor. Yet there were those who complained because he had not given a part of the sum expended to reduce the debt of the church he attended. He had given more than any other three or four men toward building the church, had given again to reduce the debt incurred, and had made a generous offer, if other men would raise a reasonable amount, to remove all the remaining indebtedness. At that time the men chiefly in need of help were the skilled workmen, especially those competent to do the elegant work in hard woods and the rich ornamentation of that sixty thousand dollar room. The hard times deprived them almost absolutely of employment. The capitalist who furnished them with work was a benefactor to them and to that town by enabling skilful mechanics to remain there. A number of the wealthy men of this country are to be commended for sustaining various enterprises which furnish employment for thousands of men. Of the two ways that of providing employment is the better in which to help men.

FREEDOM OF WORSHIP.—Under this heading we find in the journals the following paragraph from the Governor's Message sent in to the Legislature last week:

I reiterate the recommendation contained in my previous annual message in favor of such wise and judicious legislation as may be necessary to effectually and impartially enforce that provision of the constitution which declares that "the free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship, without discrimination or preference, shall forever be allowed in this State to all mankind." The duty of the Legislature to enforce this constitutional guaranty of religious liberty by appropriate legislation, whereby all just complaints which have arisen in regard to its violation in some of the penal and charitable institutions of our State may be effectually remedied, is clear and admits of no discussion. It is to be hoped that such proper action may be taken as upon a thorough investigation of the subject may seem to be justly demanded.

There could hardly be a grosser misrepresentation of the facts in the case than in this statement. There is complete and absolute religious liberty in all the penal and charitable institutions of the State. All denominations have equal rights and privileges, but the trouble is that the Roman Church wants more than other bodies. To grant them their wishes is not to comply with the Constitution, but to violate both its letter and its spirit. If the Legislature does what the Governor desires it will simply so far unite Church and State, and impugn religious liberty.

Co-operation in Foreign Missions.

INCREASING interest is felt in the endeavor to secure a union of the churches formed in pagan countries by the missions of the churches of Great Britain and America, holding the Presbyterian system. The meeting of last evening in the Brick Church of this city was a manifestation of this interest. The prominence of the speakers and the character of the audience indicate the hold the endeavor has upon men of intelligence, high Christian character and influence. An end advocated and supported by such persons may be delayed for a time, but will come in due season.

Our own Church needs no instruction and no incitement in this matter. We are and have been co-operating with Presbyterian bodies in pagan lands. More than twenty years ago, after a discussion which extended over three or four years, our General Synod gave permission to our Amoy Mission in China to unite with the Mission of the Presbyterian Church of England in organizing a native church. And from that time the churches gathered there by the two missions have been under one Tai-hoe, or Classis or Presbytery. At the very beginning of the formation of churches in Japan, and we organized the first one, it was proposed to form the Union Church of Christ in Japan out of the churches which might be gathered by our Mission, that of the American Presbyterian Church and that of the United Presbyterian Church of Scotland. After a consideration of this proposition for two or three years it was adopted, and the churches of the three missions have been organized in the same Chiu Kwais and Dai Kwai. We have thus been for years in organic union with other churches in prosecuting missionary work in Asia. We need no incentives to engage in such a co-operation.

There was hesitation at the outset from a fear that under such a union our work could not be so separate and distinct that we could constantly measure its efficiency and know what we were doing. It was feared that the interest of the Church at home would diminish if it could not discern what its efforts were achieving. Experience has removed that fear. Enough is known to enable us to judge intelligently of the success we have by the blessing of God. In regard to the work in Japan it was feared that by uniting with the Presbyterian Church of this country and the United Presbyterian Church of Scotland, each much stronger in every way than we are, we would be unequally yoked and in the effort to advance abreast with our co laborers our ability would be overtaxed. That fear also has been allayed by experience. It was also thought at one time that we ought to secure the engrafting of the peculiarities of our faith and church government upon the native churches gathered by our missions. But unbiassed consideration brought out the fact that these peculiarities have been produced by our history, by the social and political conditions under which we have lived. Such peculiarities would be a hindrance to the Lord's work in other lands, where other conditions are dominant. It was seen also that the political and social organizations of other peoples called for a modification of our polity. Therefore the churches of China and Japan have been considerably cast in native moulds, and are the more pleasing to the people for that reason.

In China the English Presbyterian Mission has cordially adopted a number of our Forms, with modifications adapting them to Chinese customs, where these customs have no immoral tendency.

In Japan the Constitution of the Church was formed from those of the three Missions united in the work; and it is claimed that the Union Church of Christ in Japan has the best organization of the Presbyterian and Reformed type anywhere in existence. The opinion may be well founded. If the favor of the people is a proper measure of its adaption to their wants and of its efficiency, then it is a success, for it is unquestionably popular.

Such has been our actual experience in coöperation in foreign missions, producing the conviction that such an organic union of native churches as we have participated in is highly beneficial and attended with satisfactory results.

Religious Liberty.

THE Pope and American Christians in general are alike intolerant of toleration, but for very different reasons. He thinks that wherever it is possible the Roman Church should alone prevail; we, on the contrary, consider that all religions are equal before the law and none exist by toleration. But it is strange how long it took our country to reach its present position. A recent valuable monograph by Charles J. Stillè, formerly Provost of the University of Pennsylvania, takes up the matter of Religious Tests in Provincial Pennsylvania, and incidentally refers to the experience of other States. In none of them save one was there absolute religious liberty. A subscription of some kind was required, if not to be a citizen, at least to hold office. In many cases these restrictions continued long after the adoption of the Constitution of the United States, but now they have all disappeared. If the people of any State proposed to revive them, there is no difficulty in the way, for the article of the federal constitution limits only the National Government, the States retaining their rights in this respect. But there is no danger of any such attempt. To show the change that has taken place, one need cite only two or three cases.

The "Great Law" of Penn had for its fundamental principles, which, however, were afterwards departed from for a century, that all who professed belief in one God should be freely tolerated, and that all who believed in Jesus Christ should be allowed to hold office. This was a grand achievement for that day, but it was very far from being true religious liberty. The atheist had no rights at all, and the deist was shut out from employment under the State. So in the Province of Maryland, there was said to be "free liberty of religion," yet this was simply the assurance that no one professing to believe in the divinity of Jesus Christ was permitted to be molested on account of religion. Neither the atheist nor the deist had any guarantee of his rights. Rhode Island seems to have been the only exception. In its first charter, 1644, nothing was said on the subject, but the second, 1676, especially provided that no person should be in any wise molested, punished or called in question for any difference of opinion in matters of religion, but every one should freely enjoy his own judgment and conscience in religious concernments.

Now the Rhode Island principle is accepted throughout the nation. Men can practise any religion they please, no matter how absurd or puerile. But they cannot violate the criminal law under a religious pretext, as the Mormons are now finding out to their discomfiture. A man may preach and argue for polygamy, but if he undertakes to practise it, the law takes hold of him. The only danger is when any sect by stealth secures governental favor, just as the Mormons run their civil institutions in aid of their Church, or as the Romanists seek the public money to educate their children in their faith. Just now they are crying out for "freedom of worship," when they have all the freedom any other churches have. But what they want is more than other churches have, and we are sorry to say that the indications are that they will succeed. But if they do there will come a settling day for the folks who play into their hands. Protestants are a long suffering folk, but when they are once aroused they strike out from the shoulder, and whoever is struck carries the mark a long time.

Dr. Stillè in his admirable paper says of Luther that he "invoked the civil sword against the Anabaptists," but if so it was, we think, not against them as re-baptizers, but in consequence of the anarchical principles which they avowed. See, for example, the following extract from the Belgic Confession (Art. xxvi.): "We detest the Anabaptists and other seditious people, and in general all those who reject the higher powers and magistrates, and would subvert justice, introduce a community of goods, and confound that decency and good order which God has established among men." To take up the sword against such people is no more religious persecution than it is intolerance to make Mormon polygamists obey the law of the land. Undoubtedly the principles of religious liberty were not at all understood in the sixteenth century, but Luther's skirts were clear of anything like direct persecution. He doubtless admitted the theory, cujus regio ejus religio, yet he often spoke in opposition to it, as, for instance, in the remark that if heretics were to be burned the hangman would be the best theologian. His record in this respect is cleaner than that of any of his associates in the work of Reformation.

Our Opportunity in the West.

A FIELD has opened to our Church in the far West, of which, we fear, too few appreciate the importance and promise. It offers a grand opportunity for missionary effort and church growth, and if the emergency be adequately met it will mark an era in the history of our denomination. We refer to the territory occupied by the Classis of Iowa.

This Classis was only organized a little more than a year ago, and its growth assures us that the field it occupies has only to be properly cared for and cultivated to become in due time the most important and valuable of any in the West.

The territory covered by this newest Classis of our Church lies in Northwestern Iowa and Southern Dakota. It embraces three counties in Iowa and four or five counties in Dakota, covering an area equal to the entire valley of the Hudson, or that portion of New Jersey where our churches are most strong and numerous. Our Church owes its strength in these Eastern fields to their being first on the ground and predominant in numbers and influence. The same conditions are repeating themselves in this far Western field. The virgin soil is being taken up and occupied by those who, in birth, education and affiliation, are firmly attached to our Reformed Church. They will give tone and shape to the religious, social and educational institutions of the territory already occupied, and with timely and adequate aid and encouragement to even a wider area, possibly to one as large as that occupied by our entire Church in the East.

The population taking possession of this district is predominantly the children of our Holland immigrants. This new Western centre is attracting to itself the most aggressive, energetic and Americanized young people of our congregations, not only in the Classes of Holland, Grand River, Wisconsin and Illinois, but also of those which are scattered through our Eastern Classes. This element constitutes fully one-half of the people, and frees the future from many of those questions and difficulties which naturally arise where the constituency of the Church is wholly Hollandish, and where the language of the fatherland and the ideas brought from the old country retard full assimilation with our American churches. Constituted as these churches are it seems scarcely probable that the denomination will be called to adjust difficulties such as arrested our growth here in the East a hundred years ago, and such as have arisen in the Michigan colony. There is already in nearly every church of the new Classis an English speaking element sufficient to require from the first the use of our English language in some of the services.

The nucleus of this recent expansion of our Church was the organization of the Church of Orange City in Sioux Co., Iowa, by Rev. Seine Bolks in 1871. In the Minutes of 1872 it reported 20 families and 38 communicants; in five years it had grown to 241 families and 353 communicants, but remained the only Reformed Church in all that region until 1877, when the churches of East Orange (now Alton) and West Branch were organized. In 1880 the immigration of which we have spoken, of the younger elements of our Holland churches and of new comers from the Netherlands, began to assume larger proportions, and two churches were organized; one of them in Dakota. Since then the unoccupied lands have been rapidly filling up, and churches have had to be organized to keep pace with the demand. The Classis of Iowa was organized a year ago with 16 churches, 839 families and 1,207 communicants. Within the year the churches have increased to 25, and inviting openings are offering themselves on every side.

The majority of the people in this new territory are scarcely yet comfortably housed. The land is rich and fertile, but it has for many of them yielded scarcely more than one harvest. For five or six years the first comers lost nearly all their crops with the grasshopper scourge, and very few are yet circumstanced to do much toward building churches, rearing parsonages, or even supporting ministers. Assistance given at this period will not only be doubly valuable and valued, but will yield a rich return to the denomination when these churches become, as they surely will, strong and wealthy. This makes most urgent the plea of our Board of Domestic Missions for the $60,000 that it needs this year, and the thought of this magnificent opportunity should stimulate the liberality of every one who seeks to do loyally the work of the Master.

Meanwhile these descendants of those who chose a university above all else as the reward of their valor, are seeking for their children the advantages of higher education, and have instituted the Northwestern Classical Academy at Orange City, which is vital to the perpetuation of that controlling influence which our Church has secured in all this region. This institution seeks, and it deserves to receive, the aid of all our churches in this period of its infancy. We scarcely know where a gift can be bestowed which will yield more immediate and permanent fruit in blessing and benefit to the nation and the Church, than one bestowed on this young Academy. Would that some possessor of consecrated wealth might be moved to bestow upon it the endowment it needs, and make it at once adequate for the important work it has to do.

SCIENCE.—Some time since Rev. H. W. Beecher preached a series of sermons on Evolution and Religion, which were afterwards collected and bound in two pamphlets. Time was when such a proceeding would have made a sensation, but that time has gone by, never to return. A man in Mr. Beecher's position may say what he pleases and the newspapers will take due note of it, but to the great body of Christian people it will be so much talk, and nothing more. In this publication we are told that the early chapters of Genesis are a collection of legends; the Hebrews found out God instead of God finding them; plenary inspiration is a modern delusion; sin is imperfection and incident to a progressive nature, while the old theory of it is repulsive and immoral; the fall of Adam is a poetic idyl and the imputation of his guilt to his posterity a bastard belief of the Jews; transmitted sinfulness is outrageous paganism; the new birth is a figure, the real fact being a gradual development, and all true spirituality an outgrowth of morality. Original sin, foreordination, the atonement, the eternity of conscious suffering, and many other tenets once held, must go. Now if anybody of character and standing said these things there would be a stir. But coming whence they do, people only smile and wonder what next? A man who gets his religion from science and takes the Bible only as collateral will of course be "ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth." Exit H. W. B.

SUNDAY OPENING OF THE MUSEUMS.—We are glad to see that the able argument on this subject made by Mr. Morris K. Jesup before the Board of Estimate and Apportionment a few months since has been put in print. It is calm and logical and conclusive. The hue and cry about the matter does not come from the workingmen in whose interest it is professedly put forward, but from enemies of the sanctity of the day of rest. This has been clearly shown to be the case in Great Britain. The strongest opposition to the opening of the museums on Sunday came not from clergymen or churchmen, but from representatives of the Trades Unions. It is the interest of the toiling millions to have Sunday kept holy, for if the idea of sacredness is lost that of rest will soon follow, and then men will have to labor seven days in the week and get no more wages than they now do for six.

Suggestive.

THE PASSING YEAR.

By the glimmer of green and golden,
The leap and the sparkle of spray,
By the heart of the rose unfolden
To the breath of the summer day,
By the shout and song of the reapers,
Binding the ripened sheaf,
By the bloom on the fragrant cluster,
By the fall of the loosened leaf,
By the feathery whirl of the winter,
And the deep waves' hollow sound,
By the moan of the wind in the forest
When the night was gathering round,
By the sweet of the honey of lilies,
By the fields all brown and sere,
Through the march of the changing seasons,
We measured the passing year.

By the baby's step on the carpet,
By her earliest broken word;
And her laugh as she ran to meet us—
Merrier never was heard,
By the time when she said, "Our Father,"
With two little hands held up,
And the flower-face softly bending
Like a blossom's brimming cup,
By the day she was parched with fever,
And spent with the stress of pain,
By the hour we gave thanksgiving
That baby was well again,
By the hide and seek of her dimples,
And the start of her April tear,
By the grace of our darling's growing
We measured the passing year.

By the love that is tried and precious,
And needful as daily bread,
By the fond hands clasped in ours,
As the chequered path we tread,
By the glow of the household faces,
And the hush of the household peace,
By the beautiful wifely presence,
That gives to care surcease,
By the looks that are ever tender,
The kiss that is always true,
By the small familiar sayings,
And the work we daily do,
By board and loaf and flagon,
And the coming of kindred dear,
The home's unwritten story,
We've measured the passing year.

By the brave things thought or spoken,
By the true deeds simply done,
By the mean things crushed and conquered
And the bloodless battles won,
By the days when the load was heavy,
Yet the heart grew strong to bear,
By the days when the heart was craven,
Lacking the strength of prayer.
By the hour that crept slow footed,
And the hour that flew on wings,
The time when the harp was silent,
The time when we swept the strings.
By the dearth, the dole, and the labor,
The fulness, reward, and cheer,
By the book of the angel's record
We measured the passing year.

By the joy of the Christmas carols,
And the solemn shade of the cross,
By the breaking dawn of Easter,
And the gain that follows loss.
By the name of the world's Redeemer,
And the sins we trample down,
By the light that shines above us,
Though the darkling cloud may frown,
By the silent voices calling,
By the dear remembered eyes,
By the heaven which ever beckons
Beyond these earthly skies,
By credos grand and steadfast,
Banishing doubt and fear,
By the Christian's hope and comfort
We've measured the passing year.

—Mrs. Margaret E. Sangster, in The Congregationalist.

MCALL MISSION.—A good idea of the working of this enterprise may be gotten from the following incident related by the Rev. W. W. Newell in a recent address.

The following is one instance out of many:

"A wealthy man from one of the provinces, who owned two estates, was in Paris on a visit; he was fond of the theatre, and went to it every evening. The theatre in Paris is open every evening in the year, except the evening of Good Friday; and on Sunday it is open twice. He was passing one of our halls, and he was invited in, as is every passer-by. Being from the province, he wanted to see all that there was in Paris; so he went in. A lady gave him a hymn book, and asked him to be seated. Seeing that that was the thing to do, he sat down. He heard the Bible read, and hymns sung; he heard the preacher and the people speak of the Gospel.

"After the close, he went to one of the leaders, and asked where he could get that book which they had read from. It happened that they had on hand only a New Testament. He had never seen or heard of it before. The Roman Catholic Church may, or may not, be a Christian Church; but it is not a Bible Church. We have known a Sister of Charity to demand that a poor dying woman should give up her Bible; and when she would not, the Sister left her to die alone.

"After a day or two, he came back saying, 'I cannot find the chapter that you read.' 'No, that was in the Old Testament, in Isaiah.' 'Pray tell me where I can get the whole book?'

"He was directed to the Depository, where he could get a Bible. After that, he came every evening to the meetings, and no longer went to the theatre. His whole desire was to know about the Bible. At last, he must return to his home. He was anxious that one of our laborers should go and visit him at his chateau. So one of the brethren went. They spent much time in studying the Bible. At last the gentleman said, 'Why cannot we have a meeting here just as you do in Paris?' 'Certainly; but where shall we hold it?' 'Why not right here in my chateau, and I will go about and invite my neighbors to come in.'

"Then he thought of one man who had shown much enmity to him, even tearing out the eye of a horse belonging to the gentleman. He asked of himself, 'Is it my duty to ask that man? But Christ forgave His enemies; why should not I? Christ loved me when I was His enemy; why should not I love this man?' So he went to his door, and said to him, 'You know that things have not been as they ought between us. I forgive you; let us live as friends; and I want you to come to my house to the meeting.' The man was melted; he came to the meeting, and was welcomed by the gentlemen as a friend.

"The gentleman desired some tracts to give to his neighbors. Then he wrote us, 'Some of the tracts are good; others are stupid; the people will not read them. I will write some that I think they will read.' And so we have this gentleman of culture writing tracts for distribution."

THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND.—The tories forced the question of disestablishment to the front during the recent elections, despite the fact that the Nonconformists, in deference to the wishes of Mr. Gladstone, had almost entirely discontinued the agitation of the question. There is no doubt that the tories carried some districts by their action in this matter. On the subject the Spectator, of December 5th, says: "A strong body of Cambridge professors and divines,—which will, we believe, include more than half the heads of houses and two-thirds of the resident professors in the University,—are about to present a declaration to the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, protesting against the recent attempt to force prematurely to the front the Disestablishment and Disendowment of the Church of England before even the facts are generally known on which the question must turn, and urging, at the same time, that the hour has come for such a reform of the Church of England as may give the laity of that Church a substantial influence in the government and administration of her affairs. The names of the leaders who urge this upon the rulers of the Church will command universal respect; and we believe that the moment is most favorable for their undertaking. The English people have at last been made aware that the Church is in a critical position, and they do not very well understand what that position is. The bishops and clergy have had things too much in their own hands. Very few of the laity, indeed, are intimately acquainted with the affairs of the Church. A great chasm appears to yawn between the Episcopacy and the people. Till the present Archbishop of Canterbury pleaded for the Franchise Bill in the House of Lords, the Church had chiefly exerted itself to suppress popular feeling rather than to express it. In spite, therefore, of the general attachment of the middle-class to the Church, the clergy are looked upon askance by the laborers of the rural districts; and their frequent dictatorial manners are contrasted with the cordial fellowship of the Methodist ministers and Baptist preachers, greatly to the disadvantage of the clergy. In a word, the Church greatly needs popularizing, and nothing would popularize it so much as to bring the influence even of the educated laity to bear more stongly on the clergy, so as to make them feel keenly their responsibility to the people at large."

A WORTHY EXAMPLE.—A correspondent of the Examiner furnishes the following interesting item, which reflects great credit upon the merchants of Hoosick Falls, N. Y., whose example is to be highly commended: All the Protestant churches hold their week-day prayer meetings on Thursday evening. About two years ago the merchants of the place—that they and their clerks might have an evening free from work—closed their stores at 6 o'clock on Thursday evenings. It worked so well that it has become an established thing. They say nothing is lost, but much gained. They make just as much money; their clerks are refreshed. But this is the best of all, it gives a great number the opportunity of attending the prayer-meetings; and this is probably a fact, that there are few villages in the State where the weekly meetings of the churches are so very largely attended. Now while this matter of closing the stores on a certain night in the week would be impossible in our cities, it is not in our villages. It has been a blessing to the people and to the churches of Hoosick Falls.

"'Tis Sixty Years Since."

DEAR EDITOR OF CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER: The new year opens in brilliant beauty, and I proffer my wishes for perennial joy in the office at "48" May there always be a ball of "copy," on which to receive the darts of the "adversary" from the Drukkerei; pressure at the subscription desk from the new comer and the paying settler of annual regularity, and good will, alacrity and right views of steadiness and progress among all who write for the organ.

I am ill, and therefore not "receiving," as is the wont of domines. But I was raised where it was the day among the Dutch. The "English" Church and the Catholics might observe, with ever so jolly ado, December 25th, but we then made most of the New Year's aperient. Nor do I feel anything but joy in the widening observance of Christmas by families of every name. A regret there is, however, to notice the result of the overdone freedom of calling in the past on New Year's day. Good people are closing their windows and obtruding pretty little card-baskets in a discouraging way, aping each other's horror of vulgarity between the wind and their nobility. No jury with me on it will punish a larcenous urchin who lifts a perfumed, lace-trimmed receptacular fraud of that character. I doubt the motive, as to quality or wisdom, for the sake of "Auld Lang Syne." "If this court understand herself, and she think she do," the boy has done no crime against the heart. And if he have sinned, this juror whispers "Go, and sin no more." My own bell-pull has had them, I am sure, but the childhood-memory within me affects them not.

We often fall into little miffs of aloofness, and a distance arises between neighbors, who know not how nor why. This is the genial Day of Custom, on which to destroy the troubles, without apology, and take a new departure. The water-spout cloud falls at a hand shaking and a seeing eye to eye. I could illustrate the value of this point, but no verbiage is needed to a candid, friendly soul.

I was not sure, some months ago, that I should come to the threshold of 1886. I enter the year gladly, though our Church wears ominous apathy for action. An old classmate was buried last week, and an old acquaintance will be laid to rest to-morrow. Not many New Year's remain to those approaching 70, and this is a thoughtful day to me, as "one of them." When I think of what the 20 h century will open up, "I would I were a boy again;" but all we can do is to live and pray in such manner that each morrow find us further than to-day on the road of Scriptural faith and works. God bless the old INTELLIGENCER, and may our beloved but guiltily slow old Zion arise and shine!

HENDRICK HUDSON.

Our Church.

We are thankful for items of Church News compactly stated; or for marked copies or clippings from local exchanges, which we would not therwise see. To insure publication in next number, they must reach us by noon on Monday. A condensation of items is unavoidable.

Special Services in Twenty-ninth Street Collegiate Church.

ON Wednesday evening, 6th inst., a very interesting meeting was held. Dr. Conkling preached an admirably appropriate discourse on the promise, presence and power of the Holy Spirit; a deep impression was made upon the congregation. On Sunday evening, 10th inst., the first service of the series was held, when Dr. John Hall preached an earnest and impressive discourse on the duty of all believers to preach Christ. The congregation was large, attentive and obviously profoundly impressed. A meeting will be held to-night at 8 o'clock, and every evening thereafter in this week and next at the same hour; also a meeting for Bible-readings will be held on Thursday, 14th inst., at 4 o'clock P M., and every afternoon at the same hour, till the 22d inst., except Saturdays. All are cordially invited and welcome; all seats in the church a e free during these services. The Rev. Dr. Pierson, of Philadelphia, whose rare gifts and peculiar qualifications specially fit him for evangelistic work,—in which he has been long and most successfully engaged,—will conduct these meetings. Other ministers and the pastor will also take part in the exercises.

The Shelterless Flocks.

THE warm desire for information concerning the destitute places in our mission field is certainly a very hopeful indication. The necessary brevity of this statement will make it resemble a catalogue rather than a description. The following is, at the present writing, a mere list of the most urgent cases:

First Holland, Mich., unjustly dispossessed of their church property by a factional and fanatical majority, is compelled to build a new church. They need $3,000 at the earliest day.

Second Kalamazoo, Mich., a young congregation of young people who have just called one of our most promising young men, and are growing rapidly, can purchase a church property complete, in the best location, for $6,000. They can raise by heroic effort $2,000. They need $4,000, and they would probably be self supporting in two or three years.

Baileyville, Ill., an organization of considerable promise, but without buildings, need about $800 with what they can do to secure a place for meeting.

Monroe, Iowa, organized last summer, have the visible church without the visible buildings. Probably $1,000 will meet the want.

Elk Creek, Iowa, is not organized, but they have enjoyed a blessed revival and are ready for organization. They can buy a building, meeting all their wants, for about $700, of which they can raise $300. Can we give them $400?

American, Orange City, Iowa. This is a representative church of young people, now worshipping in a hall. It is located in a country town where the Northwestern Classical Academy is located, and is a point of great importance. They need a building of ample seating capacity, and can raise by great effort $2,000. They need at least $3,000 more.

Maurice, Iowa, has a church but needs a parsonage for their first pastor, who preaches once a day in English. Probably $500 will do.

Pattersonville, Iowa, just organized and without buildings. We have no statement as to the extent of their wants.

Grand View, the county seat of Douglas Co., Dakota; was organized last August. They have nothing in the form of buildings. They have communicants and a communion service, the gift of friends, awaiting transportation and shelter.

Charles Mix Co., Dakota, has an organization and a pastor; he has built himself a small habitation with the aid of the Sunday-school of the South Church of New York city, but there is no place for a sanctuary. They ought to have one, possibly two small ones.

Bon Homme (Bon Hom) is not organized, but will be in the early summer. They worship in a small school house.

Pella, Nebraska, is organized, and is a promising field, but has only a sod church and no parsonage.

Philadelphia, Kansas, has a spirited church organization and had a sod church, but, alas! it has caved in, and they are "out upon the prairie."

To come to the East, Ontario, N. Y., a community of very poor laboring people, had an acre of ground donated to them for church purposes, but the hopelessness of obtaining the needed help to build has utterly discouraged them and, we fear, they have given up.

German, Plainfield, N. J., a church which has struggled for years with a bad location and inadequate accommodations, must rebuild, and has not the means. They need the practical sympathy of their fellow Christians.

And this list is by no means complete. But there are presented here reasons enough why the $20,000 recommended by the General Synod and so heartily endorsed by the Conference at Fonda, should be raised this year. And we are happy to say that the indications are very strong that the Church is beginning to feel the vital importance of enlarging and strengthening our home work. The "apportionment" is very kindly received, and several churches are already rejoicing that they are even now beyond the amount fixed. Shall the day come when we can put a covering over the heads of the shelterless people who wish to meet for the worship of God?

J. WEST, Cor. Sec.

(NOTE.—We hope the list will be made complete. If $50,000 are needed let us know it. Let us have a knowledge of the entire opportunity. The Church is in a good frame of mind to receive and improve it. If we can organize twenty, thirty or even forty, churches this year or in six months, let us know it. These columns are open to receive the information.)

....ADDISVILLE, PA.—During the past year the congregation has renovated and greatly improved its parsonage, within and without. Under the direction of a competent building committee, a two story addition to the parsonage has also been completed, the ground floor of which has been fitted up for the pastor's use. He is thus enabled to enter upon the new year in possession of a cheerful, convenient, roomy and accessible study—a most acceptable New Year's gift.

Our church has reason to be thankful also for many evidences of the Spirit's presence, in the apparent increase of interest, in the quickened spiritual life of members, and in recent and expected accessions on confession.

As we enter the new year, we desire and render our hearty thanks to God for His many mercies in the past, and to ask the prayers of all that the work of the Lord may prosper yet more in our midst. *

....THE CLASSIS OF KINGSTON met on Thursday, Dec. 17th, in the Reformed Church of New Paltz The president stated the object of the session to be the consideration of the interests of our Home and Foreign Mission work.

A large congregation was convened, and addresses were made by the delegates to the Conference at Fonda, Rev. W. H. Vroom, Rev. A. Vennema and Elder J. L. Snyder; after which discussion was engaged in relative to the best method of raising money for missions. It was Resolved, That the Missionary Agent, Rev. Wm. H. Vroom, be requested to prepare a sermon on "Missions," and that he deliver it in as many churches of the Classis, through exchange of pulpit service, as possible, consistent with other duties.

A resolution was adopted that Revs. Wyckoff and Vennema be appointed a committee to apportion among the several churches the sum of $1,500 for Foreign Missions, and of $900 for Domestic Missions.

The cordial thanks of the members were given to the ladies of the New Paltz Church for the elegant dinner provided in the lecture room. S. C.

....GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—Another Holland church is likely to be organized at Grand Rapids in the spring,—a Roman Catholic. It has been ascertained by the Romish bishop of this city that there are here about 80 Holland families of the Roman Catholic faith. Last week, in response to an appeal, 26 of them subscribed $1,400 toward a church building fund, with a view to building next summer.

The First and Second Reformed Churches generously remembered their pastors on Christmas and New Years. P. M

....BRIGHTON HEIGHTS, STATEN ISLAND.—This church has enjoyed and is still enjoying a deep work of grace. During the past two months its members have been aroused, the prayer-meetings have doubled in the number of attendants, and requests for prayer have come in from many sides. The visit of Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey a few weeks since brought crowds to the church and many conversions were the result of these special services. During the past week Rev. Geo. C. Needham, the evangelist, has preached every night and three times on the two last Sabbaths. His wife, Mrs. Needham, a most gifted speaker and expositor of the Scriptures, has given five Bible lectures in the afternoons. These have been largely attended, while the evening meetings have been so crowded that some were obliged to stand during the services. As many as two hundred would remain at the after meetings. Several of the unconverted have risen for prayer and have since openly declared for Christ. A few backsliders have confessed their waywardness and have openly asked for the prayers of God's people. Over 100 Christians have publicly rededicated themselves to the Lord and declared their purpose to live more entirely for Him. The preaching has been simple and in marvellous power. There has been no approach to excitement in any of the meetings. Other pressing engagements prevent these evangelists from continuing their labors here, but the work will go on, four special services being announced for this week.

Last Lord's day eleven persons united with the church on confession of their faith, and many others have expressed their desire to come forward at the next communion. The work appears to be genuine, deep and lasting, and we are looking for a more thorough awakening of the Lord's people, and also for a harvest of precious souls.

Truly we are enjoying "seasons of refreshing from the presence of the Lord," at which many of your readers will rejoice. COM.

....NEWARK, N. J.—The thirtieth anniversary of the Sabbath-school of the North Church was held on Sabbath last. The body of the church was filled by the members and the galleries crowded by friends of the school. Eight hundred and twelve scholars are on the list; and judging from the number of prizes given to those who had been present every Sabbath, each Sabbath but one, and each Sabbath but two, it is safe to say that the attendance during the year has been remarkably good. Guessing rather than counting, the writer thinks at least one hundred had been absent not more than two Sabbaths of the year. Whatever may be said against the prize system, it appears evident that it works well in that school as far as it affects the attendance. The interesting report of the Secretary, Dr. Arthur Ward, gave a number of facts well worth a broader mention. Over six hundred dollars, as the writer recalls to memory, have been given by the school during the year for Domestic Missions, besides money for other purposes. Nineteen have united with the North Church during the year, and several have joined the membership of other churches from this school. The death roll is unusually large; among the number on it are the names of Secretary Frelinghuysen, of loved and honored memory throughout the whole nation, of the good Elder Merry, and a large number of others. It was a peculiarly sad and touching tribute to these thus missed by the school to have the secretary call their names, and have no response to follow. The silence, unbroken for a moment, was sadly suggestive and yet touchingly appropriate.

Addresses were made by Rev. J. A. Davis, of the Second Church, and by the pastor, Rev. Dr. Waters. Rev. J. N. Jansen, who was present, took part also in the services. The presence of the efficient superintendent, Frederick Frelinghuysen, was felt rather than heard as he presided, took charge of the exercises, presented the prizes, yet let his work as superintendent rather than words speak of what the school is. The quietness, the order, yet evidence of life and fun, showed that the school has regulation that controls but does not suppress spirit. A rather remarkable feature of the school was the singing. It was good, and the time was excellent, and yet no leader appeared. The school seemed to sing as if each one knew how to sing well and correctly. D.

....JERSEY CITY, N. J.—Rev. Dr. P. D. Van Cleef preached his thirty-sixth anniversary sermon as pastor of the Second Church on January 3d. It is a very pleasant fact that this pastoral relation has continued so long, and one creditable to both pastor and people. An outline of Dr. Van Cleef's discourse will be published next week.

....REV. RALPH W. BROKAW, of Belleville, N. J., has been invited to become Secretary of the Young Peoples' Society of Christian Endeavor, with headquarters in Boston. Report says he is undecided what to do.

....NEW PROSPECT, N. Y.—The Sabbath-school held its first Christmas festival on Monday evening, Dec 28th. The church was packed as never before to participate in what to many was a novel service. The preparations had been made with great enthusiasm. The Usterville Sabbath-school united in the work and gave valuable help. The church was decorated with evergreens and mottoes, an evergreen bell in the centre of the building being conspicuous. There were also Christmas trees. The exercises by the school customary on such occasions were much enjoyed.

The pastor, Rev. E. O. Moffett, made an address. Santa Claus distributed the gifts with humorous sayings. The pastor, superintendent and the organists were specially remembered. The general conviction was that the exercises had been profitable as well as agreeable.

....MANHASSET, L. I., surprised Pastor Martine completely during the holidays by presenting him with a purse of $204.

....WESTERN ITEMS.—Rev. C. Vander veen is supplying the pulpit of the Second Church of Grand Haven, Mich., this winter. ....Rev. J. H. Karsten was installed at Coopersville, Mich., last week, the Rev. Messrs. Jacob Van der Meulen, Joldersma, and E. Winter conducting the services.

....LONG ISLAND —There is trouble in two churches—that of South Bushwick, Brooklyn, and the Second Church German, of Flatbush. In both cases it arises from a desire and attempt to override and break down the established order of the Reformed Church. Wise and necessary provisions of the Constitution and common law of the Church are to be swept aside to allow a portion of the membership to do as they please In the long run it is best to obey the laws, especially when those laws have been adopted only for the sake of maintaining the rights of all parties and to secure a decorous and profitable orderly system.

....PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The Sabbath-school of the Third Church made its Christmas anniversary memorable by publishing the programme with covers decorated with pictures in colors. The children must have been delighted with it. The programme indicates that the exercises were simple, appropriate and adapted to making one impression.

Mr. G. F. Gordon has prepared and printed a pamphlet containing the action of the Classis, Particular Synod and Consistory, from April to September, 1885, in relation to the government and the rights of the church It will be indispensable in deciding the appeals which have been made by the members and those who claim to have been elected elders and deacons in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution.

....REV. T. B. ROMEYN, D.D.—A handsome memorial volume in relation to their late pastor has been published by the Consistory of the First Church of Hackensack. It contains a sketch of the life of Dr. Romeyn, accompanied with an excellent portrait, and a record of his ancestry, the admirable address of Rev. Dr. Mabon at the funeral, the address of Rev. Dr. Berry, an account of the general features of the funeral services, the verses written by Mrs. M. E. Sangster, the biographical and sympathetic articles published in the local papers and in THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER, and the resolutions adopted by the various organizations with which Dr. Romeyn was connected. The book will be very acceptable to those who learned to admire and love this faithful servant of God.

Gleanings from our Exchanges.

....Sunday, January 3d, being the fifth anniversary of Rev. A. V. V. Raymond's pastorate of Trinity Church, Plainfield, N. J., he preached a sermon appropriate both to the event and to the new year, from the text 2 Cor. 4:18, "While we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen; for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal." At the close of an admirable sermon, he stated among other things of interest that from a membership of about 50 five years ago it had grown to number 315, showing an average increase of 58 a year. The church, not boasting of people of wealth, had contributed about $30,000 to home expenses, and about $7,000 to benevolent purposes. While this, he said, was nothing to boast of, it was something to be thankful for.

....Rev. James Edmonson has resigned his pastorate of the Mohawk Church, N. Y., to accept the Presidency of the Sedalia, Missouri, College.

....The Rev. E. Van Slyke, D D., of Catskill, received from his people as a Christmas gift a full set of pulpit vestments —Genevan gown, cassock and bands. This is reviving the good old usages and customs of the fathers.

....The Classis of Newark are making arrangements for a series of evangelistic services to be held in the several churches during the present winter.

...A friend of the church at Port Ewen presented to the church on Christmas morning two elegant bouquets of artificial flowers, which were mounted on black walnut pedestals, finely turned and polished. The pedestals stand about four feet high. The tops resemble huge basins which were full to overflowing with flowers of every description. The joke is on the domine, Rev. B. C. Lippincott, for publicly thanking the wrong man for the gift.

....Rev. H. M. Cox preached the first of his series of historical sermons at the Reformed church Sunday morning. He has devoted two or three years to the subject, and his researches have been very complete. In his first discourse he treated of the early settlement of the Schoharie and Mohawk valleys by the Palentines who came from the country of the Rhine, settling first in Ulster County in 1700. From the records Mr. Cox believes that a church existed as early as 1723. This building burned in 1755, destroying all the records excepting an old map of 1755. From the drawings on this map Henry Churchill has made a crayon sketch representing this earliest church. Old Fort Dayton which was named after Major Dayton of New Jersey, stood nearly opposite to the present church. The first pastor was a Mr. Rosencrantz, who preached to the Germans at Schoharie in 1755, and afterwards settled at Fort Herkimer, where he died in 1796.

In 1798 the churches at Herkimer and German Flats secured the services of a Mr. Pick, of Stone Arabia, who divided his time between the two parishes. The original agreement Mr. Cox has secured, in which Herkimer church agrees to pay a salary of $62.50 per year.—Herkimer Citizen, Jan 5th, 1886.

American Bible Society.

THE Board of Managers met at the Bible House, on January 7th, 1886, Robert Carter, Esq., Vice-President in the Chair. The committee appointed to inform Judge Fancher of his election to the Presidency of the Society, reported that he had signified his acceptance of the office.

The portrait of the late Dr. S. Wells Williams, painted by Professor John W. Weir, and left by himself as a legacy to the Society, was received by the Managers, and resolutions of grateful appreciation were adopted.

The foreign correspondence of the month included letters from Dr. Bliss, relating to arrangements for the supply of the Bulgarian troops with Scriptures; from Dr. Gulick, mentioning the noteworthy success of Mr. Protheroe in selling 3,446 volumes of Scripture to students undergoing examination in Nanking; from Mr. Loomis, giving an account of his visit to Corea, and of a demand from Tientsing for Corean Scriptures; from Mr. Prince, with interesting statements of colportage in Siberia and among the Russian soldiers on the frontier; from Mr. Milne, on the eve of his departure for Venezuela; from Mr. McKim, respecting his work in several towns in Southern Cuba; from Mr. Erikson of Stockholm, with a report of Bible distribution in 1885; from Mr. Brown of Brazil, relating new instances of opposition to the circulation of the Bible; and from Dr. Wright of London, announcing that a committee would be organized in Lisbon before long for the purpose of making a new version of the Bible in Portuguese.

Grants and consignments of books were made for circulation at home and abroad, the aggregate value of which was about $6,000, and funds to the amount of $1,303.

The total receipts for the month of December were $39,893 46. The total of the Scriptures issued from the Bible House during the same period were 93,641 volumes.

....A revival has been in progress in Fayette, Me., for a month past, resulting in 116 conversions.

The General Outlook.

....The Evangelistic meetings in Washington Hall, Paterson, N. J., conducted last week by the Protestant pastors of that city, with the hearty coöperation of the churches, were so largely attended that overflow meetings were provided for in the First Baptist Church, near by, where from night to night the attendance increased, until at the Friday night meeting the pews in the body of the large church were well filled. The audiences of about 1,800 people each night in the hall seem pervaded by a deep religious seriousness. The most eager attention is paid to the services from the time that they begin until they close. So far as can be ascertained from 150 to 200 souls are earnestly seeking Christ. About 100 have risen for prayers, and quite a number profess to have found hope in Christ. The meetings are continuing this week every night with gratifying results. The success so far attending these meetings is very gratifying; it even surpasses the expectations cherished by the pastors, who are cordially united in the good work. Last Sabbath morning there was a general exchange of pulpits; no pastor preached in his own pulpit, or in the pulpit of any church belonging to his own denomination. It looks as if the whole city might soon be thoroughly aroused by a mighty revival of religion.

....The progress of Yale College under Pres. Porter who has just resigned after 16 years of service, is presented in these terms: Number of students increased from 809 in 1870 to 1,076 at present; the number of teachers from 71 instructors, 57 professors and tutors and 14 lecturers, to 114, of whom 80 are professors or tutors. The funds of the college in 1871 were reported at $1,227,305, they amount now to $2,155,705, and there are promises, payable at the end of certain lives, which will double the present endowment. Of new buildings, Battell Chapel, the Peabody Museum, West Divinity Hall, Bacon Memorial Hall, North Sheffield Hall, and the Sloane Physical Laboratory have been built during Pres. Porter's administration, and Lawrence College, Dwight Hall, and the Y. M. C. A. building are in progress. The course of study has been extended. More is now required of candidates for admission, and the range of studies is more comprehensive, while elective courses have been adopted. The moral and religious condition of the students is encouraging. Of the class which graduated last year more than one-half were professing Christians.

....Dr. Meredith's Saturday afternoon Bible Class in Tremont Temple, Boston, is as attractive as ever. The audience room was "densely packed," good authority says, on January 2d.

....MRS. Harriet W. Janes, daughter of Rev. Dr. Henry M. Scudder, of Chicago, died Dec. 30th at her father's house, of cerebral hemorrhage, after an illness of two days.

....The Methodist Church has raised $861 327 of the one million dollars that it set out to raise last year for missions, which is $126,000 more than the receipts of the society in any other year of its history. It has done nobly to secure that amount, especially in a time of business depression. Undaunted by failure to reach the round one million, it lifts up the rallying cry, "A million for missions for the year 1886."

....The ancient Hindoo faith has met with a severe shock. It is an article of faith with the Hindoos that the sacred city of Benares cannot be shaken by an earthquake, because it does not rest upon the earth at all, but upon the back of a tortoise. The earthquake which recently visited Hindostan gave Benares a good shaking up, and many rickety buildings came tumbling to the ground. Thereupon the Mohammedans laughed and the Hindoos were wroth, as the learned Brahmans openly derided the notion that the city could be disturbed. Hindooism itself has received a telling blow.

....One of the results of the meetings lately held in Birmingham, Ala., was the reception of one hundred members into the Baptist church. The pastor thinks that he will receive fifty others.

News of the Week.

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 6.—John Ruskin advises the Government to study the peculiarities of the Irish people before making any arrangement for them....Mr. Gladstone expresses a desire to visit America but is unable on account of his health....A dispatch states that the city of Metamoras, Mexico, is without a government; the defeated candidate for Mayor has possession of the office and much blood has been shed. ....Emperor William has issued a rescript respecting his twenty-fifth anniversary to the accession to the Prussian throne....An uproar and riot took place in the Congress at Santiago de Chili, South America....Both Houses of the U. S. Congress met in Washington after the holiday recess....Mr. Edmund's brought up the Utah bill in the Senate and a large number of new bills was introduced in the House... The Legislature of New York met and was organized at Albany; the Governor's message was read. ....Great damage by floods is reported from the East and West, especially in Pennsylvania and part of New York; bridges, fences, and in some places houses have been swept away; the full extent of the damage is not known as yet....Deficiencies are reported in the accounts of the officials of Luzerne Co., Penn ...The strike of engineers and firemen on the Elevated Railroad is probable....Am Ende, the German druggist of Hoboken, who was indicted last fall for manslaughter in giving morphine for quinine, by which two young ladies were poisoned, was acquitted yesterday.

THURSDAY, 7.—Prince Alompra, a Burmese Pretender, is ravaging the country near Mandaly with 10,000 men; there is great fear of a massacre among the Europeans.... The Peruvian out-put of silver in 1885 amounted to $1,700,000....Mr. Parnell is waiting to hear from the Government as to the Home rule for Ireland before announcing his plans....Forty persons were arrested in Russia on a charge of nihilism and conspiring against the government....Extensive Custom House frauds have been discovered in Montreal....In the Senate grave charges were made by Senator Hale against distribution of post-offices in Maine....In the House there was a call of the States for bills, and many new bills were introduced. ...Three additions were made to the Standing Committees of the Assembly at Albany, and the Legislature adjourned until next Tuesday ..John S. Stevens, President of the United New Jersey Railroad died suddenly at Trenton, N. J. It is thought that he committed suicide....Severe floods are reported from New England and intense cold in the far West....The dynamiters of St. Louis are now are trial in that city.... Trains were run on the Second and Ninth avenues, because of Commissioner O'Donnell's interference. A compromise is looked for between the Directors and engineers of the New York Elevated Railroad.

FRIDAY, 8 —The French Cabinet was announced this afternoon in Paris. M. de Freycinet is President of the Council and Minister of Foreign Affairs....The Princess of Wales is prostrated with a serious illness. ...Sixty cases of smallpox are reported in a small village seventy miles from Montreal. ....A French missionary and five hundred Christians were massacred in Annam ... Senator John Sherman was nominated for United States Senator in Ohio....The Committees in the House of Representatives have been announced by Speaker Carlisle. ....The Committee investigating the frauds in Ohio are preparing to report....A severe ice jam blocked the Kennebec river for several miles ...A blizzard is sweeping over the Northwest. Low temperatures are reported in a number of Western cities.... The trouble between the engineers and Directors of the Elevated Railroad is over. ....The cruise of the "Dolphin" was altogether satisfactory ...There is to be a new national organization of steel manufacturers. ....A man shot himself and his wife in Paterson, N. J....The dry goods store of Kaughran & Co., of New York, made an assignment....Robert Graves, one of the wealthiest residents of Brooklyn, died yesterday.

(Continued on page twelve.)

Our Contributors.

The New Year.

BY W. A. AUGUR.

RING out the old, ring in—but stay;
'Tis easy said ring out the old
And pretty 'tis when pretty told;
But old still lives on New Year's day.

The heart's sharp pangs—what, ring out these?
Oh! what a glorious time 'twould be!
Oh! what a time for jubilee!
But ah! those stings they will not cease.

Ring out wild bells—a mother's love,
That's old, too old for gladsome days.
No, no! let bursting shouts of praise
Extol this taste of heaven above.

Ring back the old, old childhood days,
Those treasured hours of sweet content
Forever spending, never spent;
For this, oh! bells chime forth your lays.

But midnight bells toll no death knell,
And new and old are much the same;
The change lies most in change of name,
And most that's new is old as well.

Yet ring, ring loud; but ring to warn
That life's few years are fleeting by;
That all who live ere long must die:
Announce th' approaching new life's dawn.

The Heretic Priest; A Tale of Reformation Days in the Netherlands.

(Translated from the Dutch of E. Gerdes, for the Christian Intelligencer, by Rev. Daniel Van Pelt.)

CHAPTER II.—UNDER THE TABLE.

THE priest, although secretly much moved at first by the monk's discovery, quickly regained his usual calmness and was about to reply, when the door opened once more and Sister Brigitta, the priest's housekeeper, called out in a voice of a peculiarly sharp pitch: "Your reverence, there's a peddler outdoors that has been sitting for more than an hour upon the bench beneath the holy-water basin. He desires much to see you. Shall I bring him in here?"

"Certainly, Sister Brigitta," said Father Josephus, who was very inquisitive, and seemed to think he had a right to command here.

But the priest disappointed the intruder's hopes by saying:

"Sister Brigitta, show the peddler into my oratory.* The father would be insulted by the presence of so mean a person."

The monk bit his lips. He dared answer nothing to this rejoinder; but he resolved, cost what it may, to learn who this peddler was, and what he had to communicate to the priest. Pointing to the thick volume he had brought, he said:

"Brother Justus, I brought this here for you to study. I would gladly have had some conversation with you concerning the book, but the peddler's coming prevents me. I hope to see you this evening. And you," he continued, turning to Floris, who was still speechless with indignation and resentment, "do you learn to conjugate moneo better another time."

And with a derisive laugh he left the study, followed by the clergyman, who went to see the peddler in his oratory.

Floris remained alone in the study. He busied himself smoothing out the pieces of paper which had suffered in the late encounter; and was about to return to his customary place when it occurred to him that this was a fine opportunity for reading that big book which the priest had concealed in the drawer beneath the green table-cloth. He had more than once before read in it and copied extracts from it and sent them to his parents, for they, and especially his pious mother, were eager to learn the teachings of that book. But now, as at other times, he had need of the greatest caution in making these extracts. Father Josephus might at any time unexpectedly re enter the study; or Sister Brigitta might take it into her head to give the room a little sweeping and dusting. He accordingly climbed up into the window-sill to ascertain that no one was approaching the parsonage from the outside. Next he opened the door and listened for the signs of possible disturbance from within, and heard nothing but Brigitta's unmusical voice repeating the first line of a favorite hymn. Then he crept on hands and feet under the table and hid himself beneath the low-hanging folds of the table cloth. He carefully examined the drawer, and found to his delight that the back part was loose and could easily be removed, so that he had no difficulty in securing the Bible. He eagerly opened it, laid it in front of him upon the floor, and as he had provided himself with writing materials, and carried, according to the custom of those times, an inkhorn at his girdle, he began in spite of the increasing darkness to copy several passages that struck his mind with special force.

As it may seem somewhat remarkable to the reader that this village priest was in possession of a vernacular Bible at so early a period, it may be of interest to pause here a moment and notice the various translations of the Bible which had already been published. In the year 1522 appeared the Antwerp version of the New Testament (German) of Luther; in 1524 the Dutch translation of the Latin version by Erasmus, done at Delft; in 1525 was published at Basle a version of the New Testament from Luther's German, for the use of the Netherland refugees. Between the years 1526–1545, Jacob van Lieshout published the entire Bible, and for this reason was burned at Antwerp; and many subsequent editions of the whole vernacular Bible appeared. The Bible in the possession of the priest at Weersbeek was a Flemish version, a dialect but little differing from the Dutch.

Floris had not been long engaged in his arduous task when he suddenly heard heavy footsteps at the further end of the long hall. He immediately replaced the Bible in the drawer, and had scarcely done so, when, before he had time to leave his hiding place, the door opened. To his great consternation Floris discovered that the one who entered the apartment was none other than Father Josephus. He withdrew his person into as limited dimensions as he could, and held his breath in the hope he might remain both unseen and unheard, while he anxiously followed the movements of the monk so far as this was possible from behind his cover.

"No one here!" said the father half aloud. "I saw Mr. Justus just now leaving the house with that strange peddler. But that troublesome scamp of a boy must be in the parsonage; carefully as I watched, I saw no sign of him. Yet he is not in this room," he continued, peering into every corner of the apartment; "where can he be? O, I understand, he must be in the vestry putting the censers in order. That's his evening work."

Thus talking to himself he paced up and down the room, while the lad anxiously awaited the issue.

"I wish I knew," he continued in the same grunting tone, rummaging among some papers lying on Floris' desk, "where the boy got those words. He could not have written them of his own accord. Out of what book did he copy them? I must look around and see if I can't discover something. I would not be at all surprised if Brother Justus had a hand in this, for I have been noticing some things here lately which have a bad look. He receives all manner of mysterious characters, and now to-day this peddler again. What does that man want here? Could he be a heretic who is trying to introduce the doctrine of the accursed Calvin in these parts? But this shall not be! Hitherto Weersbeek has remained free from this hellish poison, and by my vows as a Dominican, I will accuse and persecute every adherent of the new doctrine. And," he added, carefully examining the books that filled the shelves or lay scattered about the study, "it might well be that the accursed and forbidden book is to be found here, for I don't trust those strangers who come to this house so often. But how can I be so stupid as to suppose that this heretical book would be lying exposed to everyone's view. If it is here at all it must be locked up somewhere. Yes, yes, I remember now," he said, approaching the table, and not a little increasing the anxiety of Floris by this move, "the last time I passed the window I saw Brother Justus putting something in the table-drawer. What could that have been? I must see."

The monk placed his heavy hand upon the table, and it seemed to Floris that the beatings of his heart must be audible. He fully comprehended that the result of the monk's search might be fatal to his preceptor, and he was determined to frustrate the intruder's efforts at whatever cost.

Meantime the twilight had almost deepened into the darkness of night. The departing light cast weird and curious shadows and gave fantastic forms to the objects distributed about the study. The monk had not failed to notice this, but for once his malicious inquisitiveness overcame his superstitious fears. He now and then cast anxious looks about him, as if he expected some startling apparition to spring from behind the door or out of the book-case. The hooting of the owls, too, up in their abode in the church steeple, occasionally made him tremble with fright. But still he was not to be diverted from his purpose. He felt with one hand along the sides of the table till he found the knob of the drawer, and then proceeded to pull it out. But the drawer would not open, for Floris held fast to the back of it with all the strength that he could muster.

"The drawer seems to be locked," muttered the monk. "Yet I feel no key hole; perhaps it closes with a spring, but where"—

At this instant the owls' hooting became peculiarly loud and harsh, and a bat glanced along the window panes, making a ghostlike, rustling noise which so startled the timid father that he let go the knob of the drawer for a moment.

"Pshaw!" he said, trying to reassure himself, "why am I so timid? Am not I doing a good work for the glory of the Most Holy Mother; and St. Luke, my patron saint, will surely assist me. Come, come, I must know what is hid in this drawer. Where is the spring?"

He bent down, partially lifted the table cover, and felt all along the bottom of the drawer. But fortunately it was so deep that his hand could not reach the back of it unless he crept under the table, which Floris hoped he would be afraid to do.

"That wretched drawer," he heard him say. "I don't want to break it open by force for fear of being heard. I see no other way than to get under the table and try to get at it from behind."

Floris was now at his wits' end. What was he to do? If the monk carried out this new idea he could no longer remain concealed, and what then? He resolved upon one more desperate expedient.

The monk was already lifting the cover and was about to go down upon his knees, when Floris uttered a dismal cry, followed by a frightful yell at the top of his voice He then subsided into a low growling; and imitations of various uncouth sounds. The monk, convinced that some evil spirit was hid under the table, let the table cover fall from his hands, ran with all his might towards the door, rushed through the hall and was out of the house in much quicker time than could be told in words.

Floris was not a little rejoiced that his stratagem had succeeded, and coming forth from his hiding place he hurried to the window to see if he could discover the fleeing form of the frightened monk. He caught a glimpse of Father Josephus just as he was turning the corner of the church, his hood fallen from his head and the bare crown shining in the starlight. The lad laughed heartily, but recollected that it was high time to go with Sister Brigitta to the vestry and attend to his evening duties there. He had nearly reached the study door when it was opened, and a man entered the room, whose strange garb and accoutrement greatly astonished the boy.

(To be continued.)

*...furnished set apart for the exercise of prayer

Hebrew in our Colleges.

BY REV. N. M. STEFFENS, D.D.

SOME of our ministers seem very enthusiastic about the study of Arabic in our seminary. After having read Professor Lansing's Inaugural Address and Rev. Daniel Van Pelt's article, wherein this brother fully endorses the professor's appeals, I perfectly understand this enthusiasm. And let me add, I feel grateful that this question of studying Arabic in our seminary is being brought before the public.

Although I do not see my way clear to endorse all the statements the professor has made in his inaugural address, I nevertheless think that his main position is right. Arabic certainly is of the greatest importance for everyone who desires to obtain a sound knowledge of Hebrew.

Theroetically we all agree, I suppose, that the study of Arabic ought to be introduced into our seminary as soon as it is practicable.

But is it practicable? This question ought to be answered before we proceed to add this branch of the study of theology to those already on the list. That Arabic finds a place in a theological encyclopedia is true, but whether our students are able to take up this study without endangering their harmonious development as teachers and pastors of the Church seems very doubtful to me.

If I understand the brethren contending for the introduction of Arabic into our seminary well, they desire to take up this study in order to equip our future pastors better for the sound interpretation of the Old Testament. They look upon this study not as a branch of philology, but as an auxiliary to the study of Hebrew. This is certainly a sound view. It is impossible to study Arabic in our seminary as it is studied in a University, as a branch of philology. Our students, preparing themselves for the ministry of the Word, have to study it, as a rule at least, with an eye to the practical requirements of their future calling. It seems to me plain as day, that a young man who desires to make the study of the Semitic languages a specialty, will soon find out that he has to sacrifice theology in order to become familiar with these difficult languages. A smattering of them may be easily acquired, but to master them requires the best years of a man's life. Wellhausen himself, the great critic, has found it necessary to exchange his position in the Theological for one in the Philosophicsl Faculty.

To overdo the study of Arabic, neglecting other branches, would be a calamity instead of a blessing. Let us, in limiting the boundaries of this study, show that we are masters in methodology, if we cannot be masters in sacred philology. Let it be an axiom, if not a creed, that Arabic if it be studied at all, is to be studied in our seminary as an auxiliary to a pastor's knowledge of Hebrew. Truly a grand accomplishment it would be if all our young men on leaving our seminary were able to consult intelligently an Arabic lexicon and grammar in studying their Hebrew Bibles.

But it seems to me that even this result cannot be reached if our colleges do not open their doors to the introduction of Hebrew. As these institutions of learning are now constituted, they prepare young men for every profession except for theology. Let a college graduate enter a school as a teacher, he is prepared; let him enter upon the study of medicine, he is at home; let him enter the service of his country in any capacity, his tools are at his hand; but let him enter the theological seminary, and he is obliged to learn first the rudiments of Hebrew before he can open his Hebrew Bible and listen to the instructions of his professor in Old Testament exegesis.

And this young man, fresh from college, has three years before him to prepare himself for his work as pastor of God's people and as minister of God's Word. Only three years. My experience tells me that these three years are hardly sufficient to give to our students such a knowledge of Hebrew as to make it a joy for them to continue their studies after they have left the seminary.

Since 1872 I have had opportunities enough to form an opinion, not based upon prejudices, but upon facts. I am sure that all those students who applied for examinatio during these years to the Classes to which I had the honor to belong, had good teachers in Hebrew, and s ill their knowledge of Hebrew was very superfical indeed. I wish my readers to understand that I do not blame these young men, I simply state a fac , which I think cannot be denied. If, however, other brethren have had a better experience, I will be very glad indeed to hear their testimony to the contrary. Of course, there are always exceptions to the rule. If this condition of things remains unchanged, if our young men come as hitherto, without the slightest knowledge of Hebrew to our seminary, what will the result be if Arabic is added to the branches of theological studies? Our young men on leaving the seminary will know a little less Hebrew than formerly and a smattering of Arabic, which is of no practical value at all to them.

I am at present teacher in Hebrew in our Seminary at Holland, Mich. Our young men are very studious indeed, and set their faces manfully against the difficulties of Hebrew. How grateful I will be if they prove to be able, after three years of diligent study, to make an intelligent use of their Hebrew Bibles, including perhaps the Chaldaic portions!

But you remind me of the fact, that students in Europe study Arabic, although they have no more time of preparation for the ministry than our young men. Are the results on the other side of the waters not satisfactory? Or are our young men behind European students in diligent application or abilities? Comparisons are odious. I do not wish to make them. I desire only to draw the attention of my readers to the fact that theological students in Europe enter upon their work with a substantial knowledge of Hebrew, whilst our students, as we have seen, are entirely unprepared in this regard.

On my table lies the yearly report of the "Koenigliche Landesschule Pforta," one of the most renowned institutions of its kind in Germany. Instruction in Hebrew in this school is given to all who have the study of theology in view. For four years this instruction continues. Two lessons are given every week. Diligent students acquire during this time a thorough knowledge of Hebrew etymology and become acquainted with the most important syntactical rules. They read portions of the Holy Scriptures, being able towards the end of their course to read the historical portions cursorily and to study to advantage the poetry of the Old Testament. Besides this, the students have regular exercises in translating from the German into Hebrew, and by continually committing Hebrew words they obtain a fair knowledge of the treasures of the Hebrew lexicon. With this stock of knowledge of Hebrew, a student in Europe enters at once upon the interpretation of the Old Testament, having ample time to increase his knowledge of Hebrew and to add Arabic, Chaldaic or any other Semitic language to the list.

My purpose in writing these lines is not to damp the enthusiasm of our friends who contend for the importance of the study of Arabic in our seminary, but to draw their attention to the condition sine qua non of introducing this branch of study. Let our colleges open their doors for the study of Hebrew. Let our young men begin this study in their Freshman year, even if they are obliged to sacrifice some other studies, which have no direct bearing upon their work in the seminary.

I have thought about these questions very often and especially of late, since I have work to do in our seminary. The fact is, our colleges are very good, but they do not prepare our young men with an eye to their studies in the seminary. And that is absolutely necessary, before I, at least, would be able to favor Arabic in our seminary. And I doubt whether it would be wise to introduce it under the present condition of affairs into any seminary.

A Watchword for the New Year.

BY REV. WILBUR F. CRAFTS.

"MAKE it as easy as possible to do right, and as hard as possible to do wrong,"—the purpose of law, according to Gladstone—is an admirable motto for the new year.

It is a new form of stating the old Mosaic principle: "When thou buildest a new house, then thou shalt make a battlement for thy roof that thou bring not blood upon thine house if any man fall from thence." Every man in his best moods should build a battlement to protect himself in his worst; make it as easy as possible to do right and as hard as possible to do wrong.

The best moods are apt to come with the closing of an old year full of regrets for sins committed and duties neglected, and the opening of a new year, full of aspirations for a better life than memory's records of the past.

How shall a young man or young woman through all their new years make it as easy as possible to do right and as hard as possible to do wrong?

There are many helps in this direction not technically religious, such as preserving the health, a suitable marriage, choosing pure associates, wholesome reading; but all of these would not make a battlement sufficiently strong unless preceded by the one supreme essential, a change of heart. So long as temptation without has a friend in the evil tendencies within, the fort is very likely to be surrendered; however well supplied with ammunition, a fort can never be secure unless the garrison is loyal. To make it as easy as possible to do right and as hard as possible to do wrong, one should by a decision of the will receive into his soul the transforming Christ, who will not only cancel the guilt of sin and counteract its power, but will take away the very love of sin. Make it as easy as possible to do right by receiving from God a love for the right; make it as hard as possible to do wrong by allowing the converting Spirit to bring your heart into similarity of feeling with God, who cannot look upon sin with any degree of allowance. Hating wrong makes it hard to do wrong.

He who has been truly converted will buttress this battlement by the sacraments and privileges of church membership, a second wall, whose four sides are, Christian vows, Christian associates, Christian sympathy, and Christian instruction. Even in business one waits long for an article which is promised indefinitely, while those who have a promise for Monday or Tuesday at a certain hour are far more likely to receive their goods promptly. The value of promises lies back of oaths and marriage ceremonies and pledges, as proved by centuries of history. Even our revolutionary fathers pledged to each other their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor; so one who solemnly promises God and man in becoming a church member, to be and do what is right, has made it easier in the time of temptation to do right and harder to do wrong.

Christian associates, Christian sympathy in times of discouragement, Christian instruction through pulpit and prayer-meeting and Sabbath-school and daily Bible-reading,—all these make it easier to do right and harder to do wrong.

One who has any noble aspirations to live even a pure, noble life makes a mistake if he neglects church-going, since the songs and the sermons give frequent reinforcement to every weakening principle and awaken to new energy every noble impulse.

But experience shows that even beyond church membership there are yet other things that may and should be done to make it easier to do right and harder to do wrong. Our inebriate asylums and Christian homes for intemperate men contain many church members and even deacons, stewards, elders and ministers, some of them persons who once lived very earnest spiritual lives.

All evangelical churches, by declaration of their supreme councils, have for fifty years emphasized the importance of the practice of total abstinence as one of the things that make it easier to do right and harder to do wrong. In recent years they have for the same reason endorsed prohibition. But there are other sins quite as great in God's eye view as intemperance, though they put no sign upon the countenance that can be easily read; God tells us by the story of Miriam's punishment that envy is to His eye as loathsome as leprosy, and by the story of Gehazi that covetousness is also a festering sore, and by the story of Uzziah that pride and irreverence are not less ugly to His view; in the first chapter of Isaiah the prophet tells us that ingratitude and disobedience (no vices being mentioned) are as hideous in the sight of God as a body covered from head to foot with festering sores. To make it as hard as possible to do wrong by covetousness one should be always giving as he is always receiving, that the flowing stream of generosity may never have opportunity to freeze into miserliness; to make it as hard as possible to be proud, one should cultivate the spirit of gratitude, for what persons are commonly proud of, except their faults, are the very things they should be grateful for; to make it as hard as possible to do wrong in the very common and scarlet sin of evil speaking, every statement that comes to us against another, before being passed on should be tested in three sieves: 1st. Is it true? 2d. Is it kind? 3d. Is it necessary?

Especially should this watchword, "Make it as easy as possible to do right and as hard as possible to do wrong," be the principle on which not only the laws but all the other arrangements of the home should be made. If you would make it as easy as possible for that innocent babe of yours to do right and as hard as possible to do wrong as the years come on, you will teach it to pray with every evening and morning, kneeling at a parent's knee; you will put a Scripture watchword into his memory with every new day as a shield such as protected the Christ in the wilderness against the wrong to which He was tempted; you will especially gather your family for daily worship, counting that as a necessity of life, and so never counting yourself too busy to have it any more than too busy to feed the body; you will also take that child from three years of age or less regularly to your church service to cultivate a church going, Sabbath-keeping habit; and when old enough to be tempted to spend the evenings on the streets or in places of questionable amusement, you will have your own home so well supplied with pure and popular reading and so bright with love and cheer, that you will still make it as easy as possible to do right and as hard as possible to do wrong.

Theosophy in India.

COL. OLCOTT, the Theosophist, still goes about the country delivering his ad captandum lectures. The Blavatsky fiasco undoubtedly did his cause a good deal of injury; but the Colonel is an adroit man, and has managed personally to escape much of the opprobrium consequent on Madame's exposure. He continues to draw large audiences, especially of young men, and is enthusiastically cheered.

Two principal reasons may, I think, account for much of his success. The first is that under the strong light of western science the Hindus plainly see the utter baselessness and vacuity of their mythological systems. Some religion they must have. Christianity is too pure and too radically destructive of their sinful inclinations to be palatable. Theosophy, with its vague generalities, its occult mysticism and its specious ethics, better suits the depraved moral appetite. It serves to stay the longing for something more satisfying than their lately abandoned faith.

The second reason is that the Colonel is an expert in adulation. To use a slang phrase, he soft-soaps the Hindus without stint. According to him, Occidental Philosophy is yet in its teens. Sanscrit is the great repository of all true and perennial thought. Europe and America, if they wish to arrive at certainties, must sit at the feet of Hindu Gurus, and humbly submit their intellects to the Koot Hoomies of Thibet. All this wonderfully tickles the amour propre of men who are just emerging, with blinking eyes, from the darkness of a secular night. They have not yet had time to look about enough to see that the swelling sentences of the Colonel are but the outfoamings of a mind which is equally empty of Sanscrit and of Philosophy. But the fulsome flattery and fawning blandiloquence of the expounder of Theosophy have their charms, especially for the young and unripe. And so he scores a success. But I believe that it will prove only temporary. For [illegible] here is one of transition. Theosophy, as taught by Col. Olcott, may do service [illegible] find themselves [illegible] thinking minds will crave [illegible] tial to [illegible] of Christ's teaching cannot be [illegible] continuously on their attention. J. W. [illegible]

Vellore, December 1st, 1885.

The Reading Room.

Our Book-Shelves.

....“THE FINAL SCIENCE; or, Spiritual Materialism.” Under this title an anonymous writer has prepared a sharp and severe satire upon godless science. Assuming the position of an earnest advocate of materialism he exposes its inconsistencies, absurdities, and falsities with a master's skill. Almost every page bristles with some ludicrous exhibition of the motive or manner of much that claims the name of scientific research. We cannot refrain from giving a couple of samples of the pungent style of the author. Speaking of materialism he says, “‘Nature's great progression’ from blind force to ‘conscious intellect and will,’ is of more than ordinary interest. The inconceivable evolves the conceivable; the formless, the formed; the inorganic, the organic; the blind evolves sight; the unconscious, consciousness; necessity, freedom—in other words, everything unfolds itself into its opposite.” Again treating of heredity he says, “Modern laws are for use, and have all the freedom, variety, and adaptability of life. If a child had a quality in a greater degree than the parent, the law of heredity is one of progress; if in a less degree, then the same law works differently. If the child has anything which the parent has not, then it is a law of heredity that the child may have an endowment which the parent lacked; but if the child fails to have a charcteristic of the parent, then it is a law of heredity that children may lack what parents possessed. This admirable law, therefore, explains the appearance and disappearance, the increase and decrease of characteristics; and if anything cannot be explained by that law it has not yet been discovered.” (Funk & Wagnalls.)

....“MY RELIGION.” By Count Leo Tolskoi. This book is a translation from the French. The author, who has written some remarkable works on other topics, here gives his view of religion, which is neither new nor true. He casts overboard the entire faith of the historical Church, and adopts a literal and very absurd interpretation of the Sermon on the Mount as the substance of his religion, which indeed is no religion but simply an ethical formulary. The exegesis of the book is contemptible and its philosophy ridiculous. It is indeed a curious “religion of Jesus” that knows nothing of depravity, of atonement, of the new birth, of the resurrection, or of the Holy Ghost. (T. Y. Crowell & Co.)

....“VIEWS OF RELIGION.” By Theodore Parker. With an Introduction by James Freeman Clarke. This volume, published by the American Unitarian Association, is composed of selections from the various writings of Mr. Parker. They give a very good idea of the great declaimer, of his strength and of his weakness. They show his intensity, his vigor and his occasional power of expression, and also his audacity, his presumption and his incapacity of comprehending the Gospel. The man who claims to have outgrown “the common Christian idea of God” writes his own condemnation. Mr. Parker's theological vagaries were buried with him, and for them there is no resurrection.

....“FROM DEATH TO RESURRECTION.” By S. H. Kellogg, D.D. In this little volume Dr. Kellogg cites the Scripture testimonies concerning the sainted dead. He shows that theirs is not a final state, that it is one of consciousness, of rest, of sinlessness, of preparation and of faith and hope. It is not easy elsewhere to find in the same compass so clear and Scriptural and satisfactory a statement on a subject confessedly obscure and yet intensely interesting. The book may be very cordially recommended. (Randolph & Co.)

....“DEFENCE AND CONFIRMATION OF THE FAITH.” The six lectures which fill this volume were delivered before the Western Theological Seminary of the Presbyterian Church on the foundation of the Elliott Lectureship, during the winter of 1884–85. They discuss, in a clear, vigorous and scholary manner, various truths which have been assailed by skeptics and are so popular in form that they are likely to be very useful in the permanent form now given them. The book is a welcome addition to our apologetic literature. It is only necessary to add that the lecturers were the Rev. Drs. Wm. M. Taylor, Carroll Cutter, S. J. McPherson, Nathaniel West, S. F. Scovel and H. C. McCook. (Funk & Wagnalls.)

....“SERMONS.” By T. DeWitt Talmage. Delivered in the Brooklyn Tabernacle. First Series. All who have ever heard Mr. Talmage preach, or have read his sermons, need not be told of his original and enthusiastic style. These sermons are all marked by the peculiar personal characteristics that distinguish him. They furnish fascinating, soul-stirring and instructive reading. He puts truth in such a fresh, terse, pungent way that it strikes the mind with surprising force, and sticks. (Funk & Wagnalls.)

....“IMMORTALITY INHERENT IN NATURE.” By Warren Sumner Barlow, author of “The Voices,” and other poems. This is a small, tastily bound volume, containing five cantos, entitled, “The Source of Thought is Eternal;” “All Effects are Eternal;” “Foreordination in Harmony with Free Agency;” “Design versus Chance,” and “The Hope of the Soul.” While we find the poetry very agreeable, we cannot go with the author all the way in doctrine. He is certainly a good writer of verse. (Fowler & Wells Co.)

....“THE POPULAR SPEAKER.” By George M. Baker. We have here a large selection from both poetry and prose, and a pleasing variety of pieces—humorous, pathetic and patriotic—excellently adapted for use in reading clubs or at parlor and public entertainments. No difficulty can be found in choosing from these well-stored pages something suitable for almost any occasion. This volume is beyond doubt entitled to rank with the best in this line of books. (Lee & Shepard.)

....“MENTAL SCIENCE.” By Edward John Hamilton, D.D., Professor of Intellectual Philosophy in Hamilton College. Prof. Hamilton has proven by this manual his right to both his name and position. His analyses are clear; his illustrations lucid; his arguments generally convincing; and his style as free as possible from those technicalities which make many works on mental science a burden instead of a pleasure to the reader. His system may be termed, The System of Common Sense and Plain Speech. (Robert Carter & Bros.)

....“LODEBAR.” By Mrs. Lucy A. Spottswood. We have here a story which, while interesting, impresses us unpleasantly. The author has made too free use of imaginary horrors to render her work healthful reading for the young, for whom it is evidently intended. (Phillips & Hunt.)

....“MUSTARD LEAVES; or, A Glimpse of London Society.” By D. T. S. In this cleverly written story of the world, a New Hampshire girl is rushed through Paris and a London season into loveless marriage to an English baronet, precipitate flight from his house, and death on an ocean steamer homeward bound. It has an important moral for American girls. (Dodd, Mead & Co.)

Our Library Table.

Periodicals, Serials and Notes.

....St. Nicholas begins the New Year well, and will doubtless go through it in the same admirable manner. The January number contains the opening chapters of a biography of George Washington by Horace E. Scudder. These describe in a fascinating way life as it was in the Old Dominion, and the boyhood of the Father of his Country. In the twenty-ninth paper entitled “Among the Law-Makers,” Edmund Alton depicts some of the wonders of our National Capitol, and finds his article illuminated by ten illustrations. The serial story, “Little Lord Fauntleroy,” by Frances Hodgson Burnett, reaches its third chapter, which will draw tears to the eyes of some beside the young folks. There are Christmas stories by W. D. Howells, Hezekiah Butterworth and A. Temple Bellew, and a Norwegian tale by Boyesen. Happy is the child who receives a monthly visit from St. Nicholas.

....The Johns Hopkins University Circular for December gives a programme of eighteen lectures, to be delivered in January and February before the university, on The New Testament as Transmitted by Printing, by Professor Isaac H. Hall, Ph.D, of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in this city. On this subject Dr. Hall is facile princeps, having larger and more accurate information than any other man in this country or possibly in Europe. It is to be desired that some liberal friend of our institutions at New Brunswick would secure the delivery of these lectures there. Not that our professors are incompetent, but that they have so many other things to teach that they cannot go into details on this point. The visit of a specialist rouses new interest, and prepares young men better to understand and appreciate the instruction they receive in regular course on kindred themes. In matters pertaining to the Criticism of the Text of the New Testament and its chief versions, the mantle of the lamented Ezra Abbot has fallen on the shoulders of Dr. Isaac H Hall. Genuine scholarship has a right to look for large additions to its stores from his labors, and those of the man whose place at Johns Hopkins he temporarily occupies, the learned C. R. Gregory, now Privat-docent at Leipsig

....The American Antiquarian for November contains a learned and acute article by the editor, Rev. S. D. Peet, on the Growth of Symbolism, a good review of the year's work in Archæology, and interesting Notes by Profs. Merriam, Avery, Brinton, and others. This bi-monthly fills a vacancy in the periodical literature of America, and fills it well.

....In Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine for the month Christmas Carols, Relics of William Penn, Hawthorne's Home and Study, Prehistoric America, Anecdotes of Bibles, Christmas in America, Domestic Life in China, and How Mince Pies were Introduced Cornerwise are very interesting articles, all except one illustrated abundantly. The number has many attractive full-page engravings.

....The January Century contains another illustrated and very interesting paper on “The City of Teherân.” The engaging serial “The Bostonians,” by Henry James, is in its thirty ninth chapter. “Feathered Forms of Other Days,” and “Typical Dogs,” are illustrated articles of much merit. A paper that will prove of fascinating interest to musicians, is on Guiseppe Verdi, the celebrated musical composer, whose portrait forms the frontispiece. The Second Battle of Bull Run, by Gen. John Pope, is accompanied with maps, illustrations of battle-fields, and portraits of Generals Halleck, Sigel, Schenck, Kearny and others. Pope attaches great blame to Gen. Porter. The Recollections of a Private, by Warren Lee Goss, embrace in this number “Two Days of the Second Battle of Bull Run,” also illustrated. We have not room to further specify the good things in this superb number.

...The Presbyterian Review for January appeared promptly. It contains a candid and scholarly review of the Revised Version of the Bible as a whole by Principal Cavan, of Canada, a very timely article on the Missionary Problem in Japan by Prof. Knox, of Tokio, a paper in which Dr. H. J. Van Dyke, Sen., writes with freshness and candor on the well-worn theme of Ordination to the Ministry, and Dr. Patton's thorough handling of the ethical question of the day under the quaint title, Metaphysics of Oughtness. His criticism of the Kantian Ethic is acute and searching. The reviews of recent literature are numerous and satisfactory. The Critical Notes contain an interesting account of certain Scotch Collects, and Prof. Brown's sketch of the Wolf Expedition to Babylonia. The Review is now published by Charles Scribner's Sons. Its friends should labor to increase its circulation.

....The New Englander for January, now a monthly, has three admirable articles, one by L. W. Bacon justly castigating Garrison, another by Prof. Sam. Harris showing the futility of the distinction commonly made between religion and theology, and the third by D. H. Chamberlain a calm statement of the Present Aspects of the Southern Question. Dr. W. W. Patton's article on the Weak Points of the Evangelical Faith as commonly stated, is itself very weak. One of the Educational Papers gives a very satisfactory view of the progress made by Yale College under the fifteen years of Pres. Porter's administration. The notices of new books are thoughtful and just.

....The Methodist Review for January has a very able criticism of Principal Tulloch's last work by the editor, a calm notice of the Revised Version Old Testament by Prof. Strong, a very judicious statement of the Temperance Conflict by H. Graham, and Mr. Ross's capital article on Drummond's “Natural Law,” etc., taken from the Monthly Reporter. The Editorial Miscellany is well filled.

....The Expositor for December (Randolph & Co.) begins with Harnack on Lightfoot's Ignatius and Polycarp, and ends with a commendation of the American Hebraica by Canon Cheyne. The Critical Estimate of the Revised Version Old Testament by Jennings and Lowe is concluded. Prof. Salmond furnishes a very just and discriminating account of Godet's life and writings, and Dr. Dodds reviews intelligently Recent English Literature on the New Testament. The Expositor maintains its high character.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

Charles Scribner's Sons: Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. By Robert Louis Stevenson. 12mo, pp. 138. $1; also,

My Study and Other Essays. By Austin Phelps, D.D. 12mo, pp. 313. $1.50; also,

The Wonders of Pompeii. By Marc Mounier. Translated from the French. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 250. $1; also,

Thunder and Lightning. By W. De Fonvielle. Translated from the French. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 235. $1; also,

Wonders of Acoustics. From the French of Rodolphe Radau. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 288. $1

Phillips & Hunt: The Mormon Problem: An Appeal to the American People. With an Appendix Containing Four Original Stories of Mormon Life. By Rev. C. P. Lyford. 16mo, pp 323. $1; also, Under the Apple Trees. By Sophie Worthington. Illustrated. 16mo, pp. 320. $1.

Funk & Wagnalls: “The Homiletic Review.” Edited by I. K. Funk, D.D. Vol. X. From July to December, 1885. 8vo, pp. 558. $2; also,

The Haunted Life. By Josephine R. Fuller. Paper. 16mo, pp. 178. 15 cents.

Presbyterian Board of Publication: A Commentary on The Confession of Faith. With Questions for Theological Students and Bible Classes. By Rev. Archibald Alexander Hodge, D.D. With Appendix. 12mo, pp. 559. $1.50.

UNBOUND BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

The Methodist Year-Book. 1886. 16mo, pp. 68. 10 cents. Phillips & Hunt.

Cabin and Gondola. By Charlotte Dunning. (No. 48, Harper's Handy Series.) 16mo, pp. 203. 30 cents.

Original Comic Operas. Written by W. S. Gilbert. (No. 505, Harper's Franklin Square Library.) 4to, pp. 73. 20 cents.

A Church Calendar for the Year of Our Lord, 1886. On Roller. 20 cents. Thomas Whittaker.

PERIODICALS.

January.—The Brooklyn Magazine, Wide Awake, The Musical Visitor, The Reformed Quarterly Review, Babyhood, The Old Testament Student, Phrenological Journal, The Lutheran Quarterly.

February.—Frank Leslie's Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

7% SOUND SECURITIES. 7%

For SAFETY, PROFIT and PROMPT PAYMENTS there is Nothing better than the Investments made by

E. P. GATES,

(President Merchants' Bank and Negotiator of Farm Loans.)

GRAND FORKS, DAKOTA.

Twelve Years of Experience in the Business. First Money Loaner in this Section. All are Pleased with my Loans. Have Invested Nearly a Million of Dollars. Best of References in all Sections of the United States. Only Loan on First Mortgages.

I give my Direct and Personal Supervision to the Business, and no application is accepted until I am satisfied that there is undoubted security and perfect title; that the borrower is a prudent man, borrowing in good faith and intending to apply the money to the improvement of the farm, or some other good purpose. I loan only on FIRST MORTGAGE, and on farms in desirable localities.

Farms are carefully examined and values accurately ascertained before money is loaned.

The Character and Standing of every applicant for a loan is thoroughly investigated.

I require a Property Statement under oath of every borrower.

I loan only to Temperate, Thrifty men who will make good use of the money.

I loan only to men of Good Credit who are said to meet their obligations promptly.

I loan only upon Well Improved Farms that are occupied and cultivated.

I loan only upon Productive Farms that will readily produce interest and principal.

I loan only upon Well Located Farms in good neighborhoods and near market.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST COLLECTED AND SENT TO YOU FREE OF CHARGE, WHEN DUE, BY DRAFTS ON NEW YORK.

REFERENCES:

REV. WM. L. GAGE, D.D., Hartford, Ct.
M. E. GATES, PH.D., LL.D., President Rutgers College, New Brunswick, N. J.
DR. WM. J. MILNE, President Geneseo Normal School, Geneseo, N. Y.
HON. E. M. TOPLIFF, Manchester, N. H.
REV. JOHN W. RAY, Lake City, Minn.
DR. JNO. K. BUCKLYN, Mystic Bridge, Ct.
Importers' and Traders' National Bank, New York.
First National Bank, St. Paul, Minn.
The Congregationalist, Boston, N. Y. Observer, The Christian Intelligencer, and hundreds of others in all parts of the United States.

[CUT THIS ADVERTISEMENT OUT AND SAVE IT.]

FUNDS FOR INVESTMENT CAN BE SENT ME ANY TIME, AND WILL ALWAYS RECEIVE MY CAREFUL ATTENTION. CIRCULAR, LETTERS FROM OLD CUSTOMERS, AND A NEW MAP OF DAKOTA SENT FREE ON APPLICATION.

Address E. P. GATES, President Merchants' Bank, Grand Forks, Dakota.

Please mention The Christian Intelligencer.

NEW BOOKS.

My Study, and Other Essays. By Professor AUSTIN PHELPS, D.D., author of "The Theory of Preaching," "Men and Books," etc. 1 vol., 12mo, $1.50.

These essays fall into two classes; one deals with religious and doctrinal themes, and the other discusses historical and secular subjects, but always with a distinctively Christian purpose. More than a hundred pages are given to a series of eloquent essays on the subject of future retribution. Other essays are deeply spiritual and edifying, and all are marked by a vigor of thought and mastery of expression that make them delightful reading as regards the style alone.

Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. By ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON, author of "The New Arabian Nights," etc. Cloth, $1; paper, 25 cents.

Without being a ghost story, or, in fact, falling under any of the hitherto recognized categories of strange and wierd imaginations, it is likely to furnish the most hardened with a genuine thrill, by one of the most singular and original conceptions that ever entered the mind of even this writer of tireless fancy.

The Illustrated Library of Wonders.

A new and revised issue of twenty-four volumes, containing over a thousand beautiful illustrations. Each volume 12mo, complete in itself. Sold separately at $1 per volume.

NEW VOLUMES:

WONDERS OF ACOUSTICS.
THUNDER AND LIGHTNING.
POMPEII AND THE POMPEIIANS.

 These books for sale by all booksellers, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, by*

Charles Scribner's Sons,

743--745 Broadway, New York.

OUR New Catalogue of Books for family, Sunday-school, ministers, students, or teachers' Library will be sent free to any address on receipt of a postal request. Address PHILLIPS & HUNT, Publishers, 805 Broadway, New York.

POPULAR LECTURES.

SUBJECTS

1.—The Romance of the Revolution.
2.—An Evening with Longfellow
3.—The Tudors
4.—Monologue—National Poems and Events

Address MRS. E. T. BARRETT,
SING SING, N. Y

Anthem Books. FOR 1886 Cantatas.

Ditson & Co. offer to Choirs Anthem, Chorus and Quartet Books unequalled in quality and variety. Send for lists! Of the following Anthem Books, the first three may be called the easiest, but none are too difficult for ordinary choirs.

Perkins' Easy Anthems	$1.00 or $9.00 per doz.
American Anthem Book	1.25 or 12.00 "
Dressler's Sacred Selections	1.50 or 13.50 "
Emerson's Book of Anthems	1.25 or 12.00 "
Anthem Harp. Perkins	1.25 or 12.00 "
Gem Gleaner. Chadwick	1.00 or 9.00 "
Laus Deo. Henshaw	1.00 or 9.00 "
Pastoral. Palmer & Trowbridge	1.00 or 9.00 "
Vox Laudis. Leslie	1.00 or 9.00 "

Not a poor book in the list. Choir leaders who have used one run no risk in ordering any of the others.

New Cantatas for Choirs and Societies.

Christoforus. Legend. Rheinberger	$1.00, $9.00 doz.
Fall of Jerusalem. Parkhurst	1.00, 9.00 "
Holy City. Gaul	1.00, 9.00 "
9 st Psalm. Ballard	.60, 5.40 "
Out of the Depths. Darling	.32, 2.88 "
Rebecca. Hodges	.65, 6.00 "
Ruth and Boaz. Andrews	.65, 6.00 "
Herbert and Elsa. Thayer	.75, 6.72 "
Heroes of '76. Trowbridge	1.00, 9.00 "

Specimen copies of any of these books mailed, post-free, for the retail price.

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston.

Chas. H. Ditson & Co., 867 Broadway, N. Y.

DR.

JOSEPH PARKER'S

"PEOPLE'S BIBLE is a stupendous work."

SPURGEON.—"Every page reveals keen insight, powerful thinking, great strength, and suggestiveness" British Quarterly Review (188).—"Food for the spirit is provided in prodigal abundance; the thoughts are fresh and sparkling, and the lessons rich and satisfying." Christian Union, N. Y.—"Each volume complete in itself. 'Genesis' (Vol. I.) and 'Exodus' (Vol. II.) Now ready. Each $1.50

FUNK & WAGNALLS, 10-12 Dey St, N.Y.

NOW READY.

224 Pages of the choicest gems of Sunday School Songs from more than 100 popular composers.

Hymns of Praise

Containe Music for Each Hymn.

$30 per 100 Copies, in Board Covers.

The book in beautiful Cloth Covers will still be furnished at $40 per 100 Copies.

Hymns of Praise

Is the Best and Cheapest.

EXAMINE IT before you buy a new book.

Intelligent S. S. workers who appreciate a first-class book are adopting HYMNS OF PRAISE.

BIGLOW & MAIN, 76 East Ninth St., N. Y.
81 Randolph St., Chicago.

AGENTS WANTED FOR OUR CHARMING NEW BOOK.

"Some Noted Princes, Authors and Statesmen of Our Time."

By 20 of our best writers—Canon Farrar, Jas. T. Fields. Jas. Parton, Dickens's daughter, and others. Over 60 fine portraits and engravings. ["The book is brimming over with choice and rare things."—N. Y. OBSERVER.] Intelligent young men and ladies can have permanent employment. A few General Agents wanted. THE HENRY BILL PUB. CO., Norwich, Ct.

A. S. BARNES & CO., Publishers of the authorized Hymn and Tune Book for the Reformed Church in America. Write for introductory terms 111 and 113 WILLIAM STREET, NEW YORK.

Agents Wanted. The Story of My Life and Art of Money Making. By P. T. Barnum New, finely illustrated, low priced. Selling by thousands. Address FORSHEE & MCMAKIN, CINCINNATI, O.

Lesson Helps and Illustrated Papers

OF THE

Presbyterian Board of Publication

FOR 1886.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

The Westminster Quarterly
REDUCED
From $15 to $12 per 100 Copies for a year.

HALF HOURS WITH THE LESSONS OF 1886. Cloth, $1.25. Paper Covers, 85c.
WESTMINSTER QUESTION BOOK, at $15.00 per 100 copies.
WESTMINSTER TEACHER, to schools, at 50 cts. per copy for a year.
WESTMINSTER QUARTERLY, for advanced scholars, at $12.00 per 100 for a year.
WESTMINSTER PRIMARY QUARTERLY, by Mrs. G. R. Alden ("Pansy"), to schools at $8.00 per 100 for a year.
WESTMINSTER LESSON LEAF, WESTMINSTER PRIMARY LESSONS, WESTMINSTER GERMAN LEAF, to schools at $5.00 per 100 copies for a year.

ILLUSTRATED PAPERS.

FORWARD,
formerly issued as a monthly of 16 pages, is now published as an illustrated Semi-monthly paper of 12 pages. School subscriptions, to one address,
Once a month, 100 copies, per year $15 00
Twice " " " 30 00

THE SABBATH-SCHOOL VISITOR,
School subscriptions to one address,
Once a month, 100 copies, per year $10 00
Twice " " " 20 00

THE MORNING STAR,
School subscriptions, to one address,
Once a month, 100 copies, per year ..... $ 5 00
Twice " " " 10 00

THE SUNBEAM,
School subscriptions, to one address, 100 copies, per year, $20 00.

Samples of Periodicals sent free on application.

Orders and money should be addressed to
JOHN A. BLACK, Publisher of Periodicals,
1334 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.,
Or, Ward & Drummond, No. 116 Nassau St. New York

Filled with varied, pleasant and instructive reading—a safe and interesting family publication."—CHRISTIAN WOMAN

Sold by all Newsdealers. JOHNSTON'S JOURNAL 10c. a copy. $2 a year.

"A popular illustrated literary Magazine for the Home and the Family—pure, clean, wholesome, elevating."*

Estab'd 1874. Published every other week. 36 pages. Bright, Timely, Original. Handsomely and copiously illustrated. Interesting, but not sensational; Instructive, but not dull; Amusing, but not vulgar; Scholarly, but not pedantic. A sample copy can be had of any Newsdealer for 10 cents. If he doesn't keep it he will get it for you. Order it regularly. You can stop at any time if you want to; or remit $2 for 1886. Postage in U. S. or Canada PREPAID. Agents wanted. Any dealer will take your order or subscription; or address W. J. JOHNSTON, Publisher, 9 Murray St., N. Y.

The Home.

AUNT MARJORIE'S CORNER.

Waifs and Strays?

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

PERHAPS I am mistaken about their being waifs and strays, these lads who haunt windy street corners on cold winter nights, when fires are blazing cheerily on glowing hearths, and boys who have mothers are safe at home. Mothers' boys are cuddling close to them, talking merrily as only boys can, or reading the stirring books which boys love; are sitting with absorbed faces beside the evening lamp. Now that I think of it, the little fellows I mean have thick jackets and pantaloons, good hats and shoes, and overcoats buttoned to the chin, and every material sign of comfort. Certainly they are well dressed, and we usually associate rags and tags with waifs and strays, pallid faces and shivering shoulders with the flotsam and jetsam of suffering childhood, thrown up on the shore of a great city like the fringe of driftwood left by a receding tide. These boys are well-fed and hearty, as their active legs and sonorous voices testify, and they have homes somewhere, undoubtedly. The question that puzzles me is, "What are they doing in the street every evening of their lives? Where are the mothers and sisters, and what has become of the fathers who are responsible for these children?" Night after night the early or late passer-by on the sidewalk encounters the groups whistling, shouting, singing, posturing grotesquely around flickering bonfires, hooting, howling and playing uproarious games at hours when boys should be at the fireside or else safely and snugly tucked away in bed. They have been neither to a party nor a prayer-meeting, they are not going on errands, nor are they performing escort duty in behalf of sisters or cousins. Racing and tearing about in the dark, learning many an evil thing, and forming habits fatal to the refinement of thought and behaviour which distinguishes the gentleman, something in their case is very much awry.

Poor fellows, they are no better off than waifs and strays, not as well off, indeed, as some of the latter, who are glad on cold nights to gather in the friendly shelter of a boys' club, opened for their entertainment by kind Christian women, thus endeavoring to circumvent the adversary.

Among insoluble problems this takes precedence, viz.: what can a boy's mother be thinking of when she chooses to let her boy slip away from her own influence, out of the sweet safe home atmosphere, away from the blessed home environment, into the wide wilderness of the streets? When she does this easily and without a protest. Even in broad daylight it is better that a boy's play-ground should be in a more exclusive place than the street; that his associates should be of his parents' selection, or at least of their acquaintance. A little judicious planning will obtain for him the needful air and exercise in some way other than mere aimless romping on the highway. When night comes, I am sure that the place for a boy is under his mother's wing. A mother who truly estimates the trust which was given her when the Lord bestowed upon her the priceless treasure of her boy, will prefer to have him under her guardianship. Not for carpets, nor woodwork, nor quiet and silence, will she send her child into doubtful company. Though he fill the house with his companions, and they sometimes play a little roughly, till the gusts of mirth shake the floors and almost rattle the windows, she will not complain, knowing as she does, how pliant her boy is to the suggestions of her desire. Her gentle word will always quell a tumult, and this in the face of Mrs. Thistledown's declaration that "Boys are such savages!"

Mrs. Thistledown, with a flirt of her fan and a simper on her lips, lisps her belief that "Boys are horrid. They ought to be sent to Coventry between the ages of five and twenty-one!" So have other people idiotically asserted. Sisters, for instance, who would enjoy a brother's gallantry, when his head overtopping theirs, and his ready arm should make his escort desirable, but who never had anything better than crusts of incivility to throw to the boy when he was little. A charming young man is the product of many days of courteous mother and sister training, the result being much more certainly satisfactory if the boy have a daily object lesson in the person of a chivalrous father.

If a boy is uniformly de trop in the parlor, never has a decently appointed chamber of his own, and is made to feel himself forever in the way, he can hardly be expected to deport himself like an angel or a Sir Galahad. It would be a miracle if he did.

Clustering in the country store at nightfall, because there they can hear what all boys delight in, the animated conversation of men—there are waifs and strays from well-to-do homes, where a bright fire, a bright lamp, nuts and apples, leave to play a game or two, and have an innocent frolic, would transform the house and the boy. It is hard to find patience with people who can afford to take comfort with their children, and for the sake of a paltry saving shut up their best rooms, and stew over kitchen fires through long winter evenings. Of what avail will be the land, added acre to acre, the lengthened account in the bank, when, one of these days, the boys who ought to have been educated for a large usefulness shall be narrow and selfish, or, reacting from the close-fisted economy of their homes, become bankrupts in that which constitutes the best manhood?

We may sing "Home, Sweet Home," with all the variations, till we are gray, but if home is so deadly dull that our boys cannot endure it, so stiff and prim that young people feel it a prison rather than a refuge, if it is so intolerably selfish that it has no space to devote to those who are to be its representatives as they set out on the duties of life, it is not a home in any real sense, but a delusion and a deceit.

A word more, pardon it gentle reader, but if your Arthur, your Charlie, through any pre-occupation of yours, however innocent, has found his way into the ranks of respectable waifs and strays, do you think there will ever be a better opportunity than the present for winning him back to your side? He is much too precious to be risked in bad company, and the best place for the long evenings is where mother presides.

The Beautiful Years of Heaven.

I AM growing older, older,
With each succeeding day,
And the bloom of my young manhood
Will soon have passed away;
But there is a thought most precious
That for me to treasure is given,
I am only so much nearer
The beautiful years of heaven!
Beautiful in their seeming,
And beautiful all in all,
That over the Silent Border
Seem ever to call and call;
So beautiful in their presence
I shall know it was all for the best
That I left the world behind me,
And entered the Land of Rest.

I am growing older, older,
With each succeeding day,
Yet never I reck the hours
That are speeding so fast away;
For I know that fairer seasons
Are waiting for me across
The dark and silent border
In the land where woe is loss!
I know that yonder Eden
Will pay again and again
The cost of the dying hour,
With all its struggle and pain;
That the joy in store for even
A soul like me is worth
Far more than the pleasure of living
Long years on the beautiful earth.

So let young manhood leave me,
And old age steal apace;
For all this, none shall notice
A shadow upon my face;
For if the years now passing
Have had their joys for me,
And those now coming are laden
With sorrows and cares, maybe,
This thought so sweet and precious
For me to treasure is given—
I am only so much nearer
The beautiful years of heaven!
The years of Eternity's ages—
Yet where life grows never old—
The sum of whose blest glories
Can never one-half be told!

O beautiful years of heaven!
Why should I doubt when He,
The loving Christ, and holy,
Has told so oft of ye?
And why should I dread the fading
Of my manhood, and the hour
That makes me only nearer
My life's all-perfect flower?
That flower of kingly splendor
With me to ever abide,
That shall crown me with its presence
When I step on the other side;
That flower so fair, yet only
A part of the beauty given
To me in the life eternal—
The beautiful years of heaven!

—Youth's Companion.

Shall We Trust God?

"WHAT shall I do about my poor people?" despairingly exclaimed Mrs. Wright at the close of a long winter spent in laborious efforts for the welfare of a wretched part of the city, which God had laid upon her heart as a special care. "I have used up all my means and the means of my friends, and I cannot go to them with spiritual food while unable to help them in their physical sufferings."

Mrs. Pruyn listened with sympathy. "I, too, have drained my friends," she said. "I do not see that we can ask any one but God."

They knelt together and asked help of the Helper, counsel of the "Counsellor," and left their burden at His feet. Rising, Mrs. Pruyn said, "I am quite clear now what I ought to do. I shall publish an appeal, and trust the Lord for the response."

This was done. The newspaper was hardly dry before the bell began to ring, and by the next day one hundred and seventy dollars, in small instalments, was received.

This occurrence of a few years ago has just been freshly brought to my memory, and I record it for the strengthening of faith. May it bring to mind many similar experiences, that we may bless the Lord. "Forget not all his benefits." We cannot remember them all, but we should talk them over oftener than we do, and "encourage ourselves in the Lord our God," as David did in recounting His faithfulness.—Mrs. R. W. Clark.

TIMELY RECIPES.—CREAM OF OYSTERS.—Put a quart of oysters with their liquor in a porcelain kettle over the fire, and watch them until they are on the verge of boiling. Then take them off and pour into a colander over a bowl, leaving the oysters in the colander. Chop the oysters as fine as possible, and pound them well in a thick bowl.

Now put in a saucepan a piece of butter the size of a small egg, and when it bubbles throw in a generous tablespoonful of flour, stir it well with the egg-whisk so as to cook the flour without allowing it to color. Now pour in the oyster liquor and when well mixed over the flour add the pounded oyster pulp and a pint of good cream. Pass this all through the sieve, season it carefully with salt and cayenne pepper; return it to the fire to heat without allowing it to boil, and just as it is about to be served add half a cupful of fresh cream and a piece of butter the size of a small pigeon's egg. Whisk it well with the egg-beater, keeping it hot without boiling over the fire for a minute. Pour into a warm tureen and serve immediately.—Mrs. Henderson, in Diet for the Sick.

A Bad Habit.

"OF course, it will rain to-morrow just because I want to go to town."

I suppose you constantly hear people say such things as that—probably you say them yourself. It is a general custom, even with good Christians, and apt to be accepted as quite innocent. To me it seems particularly wrong and particularly ungrateful. Any Christian will admit that God is strangely careful for our little pleasures, not only that He gives us life and breath and all things, but that He makes the ins and outs of every-day matters fit comfortably together so many times when we had every reason to fear a painful jar, that He seems, so to speak, to go out of His way to please us; and then we glibly assert at any minute, as a sort of rhetorical flourish, not even with a bitter tang showing the temptation of keen feeling: "It will be sure to be that way just because I want it to be this way. It always is so."

To think of such a habit carried on through a lifetime! In the face of God's watchful kindness! I wonder that we are not afraid. I wonder still more that we are not ashamed. It would be so much more natural, and so infinitely sweeter, to take as a matter of course what is really the matter of course, that "He careth for us;" in little things and in great, in all that we ourselves care for.

Perhaps I turn the verse aside from its main meaning in the Apostle's argument, but I know I can use it as a thanksgiving: "Every good gift and every perfect gift cometh down from the father of lights." It is a verse which the weakest Christian can gloat over. Dwell on the words: "Every good gift,"—"every perfect gift,"—"cometh down,"—nothing withheld;—He is the giver of every good and perfect gift.

Suppose an earthly friend unweariedly worked for our good, would we lightly accuse him before his enemies of always thwarting us in trivial mean ways? How can we so misrepresent our heavenly Father, "the One whose hand is Help," "our friendly God?"—Margaret Meredith, in The Presbyterian.

...."PARLOR VARIETIES." Part Two. Being the Second Series of Plays, Pantomimes, and Charades, by Emma E. Brewster and Lizzie B. Scribner. A book in paper covers of one hundred and forty-six pages, with eleven pieces, some good, and some not such as we like, catering to a variety of tastes. (Lee & Shepard.)

CHILDREN'S PORTFOLIO.

Whooping Boy's Hollow.

WHEN the early settlers on the shores of Long Island began to dot the place with farms, and to make homes for themselves in various localities, the Indian tribes were still in possession. The newcomers were quite willing to go through the ceremony of purchasing from the true owners. Among the records of the public sales are to be found many Indian deeds signed with the curious names of the chiefs. I have seen a copy of a deed for the Hallett farm signed by Shaueslecont and Erramohar, by authority of Mattano, their Sagamore, for which was paid fifty-eight fathoms of wampum, seven coats, one blanket and four kettles.

It was a long time before these Indians disappeared. The Shinnecocks and the Montauks owned the Eastern part of the island, and were very jealous of each other and of the whites. Many stories are preserved by the descendants of the settlers. From one I heard the following:

A young man brought his wife to the eastern end of the island, where clearings had been made and where the sandy soil seemed to afford a good place for some kinds of cultivation, and the lakes and ocean promised fish. The farm he purchased was not far from where the village of Amangansett now stands, and both he and his wife set to work to make a home. They had a pretty hard time at first—just like all early settlers—failure of crops, overflowing of the tides, mistakes in planting, high prices of provisions, and, above all, constant annoyance from the Indians. These last were always ready to take whatever they fancied and to threaten violence if denied or punished. However, so kind and good-hearted were John and Patience Westcott that they were less annoyed than their neighbors. They were firm to defend their rights, but just and generous; had the fear and love of God in their hearts and were in earnest in hoping for the conversion of a few, at least, of their heathen neighbors.

Their dear and only son, Kent, had grown up to be six years old before they came, a hardy, bright boy, familiar with the water as a wild duck, with the forest and the hills. His mother found time to teach him to write and read, and to impress upon his soul the dear lessons she had received in her English home. From his infancy his good parents had, by precept and example, taught their Kent (named from their home in England) the blessedness of following in God's ways. The Holy Spirit had spoken to the child's heart, and his faith and love were pure and sincere. In many ways, even at a tender age, he was helpful to his parents, and as a companion now to the one and now to the other, he learned how to be brave and truthful, skilful and prompt in resources.

So the family went on suffering from the inroads of the ocean, the Indians, and inclement seasons, but on the whole prosperous. Kent was a great favorite with the Montauks, whom he seemed to prefer, though he had friends also among the more wily and clever Shinnecocks. Many a time he had brought in some poor little papoose, boy or girl, to get from his mother a draught of milk and slice of bread; and when the squaws came with their woven baskets or berries to exchange for some cotton or other stuff, Kent was always ready to show off any treasure of the farm, such as a new calf or some little pigs, and to fill their pipes with coveted tobacco.

He undertook to teach two of his favorite companions their letters, but after two attempts the book was given up. The pupils looked at it with contempt and turned to the arrows, with which they had already filled a squirrel skin pouch.

"Ha! ha!" laughed out one, holding up an arrow and a knife, "These talk! these speak best! these say 'Give me, and you give.' That leaf, no; papoose can tear. That leaf no good!" Kent then tried to teach them the Lord's Prayer. "Speak," said the mother, "to the Great Spirit."

"He can't hear. He gets angry and makes a noise and a light and sends down water. He hates the pale faces. Run and hide under the rock. No like Yengees." So Kent left off for a little while.

Well, there had been a prosperous season on the Westcott farm, and John and Patience and their neighbors actually began to hope for brighter days. Miles Standish had gone successfully against Philip, and that great warrior was at rest. There seemed to be a lull in the outbreaks of the neighboring tribes.

One afternoon an aged Shinnecock came creeping stealthily along towards the homestead, and he stood for a time watching a canoe that had just appeared on the lake. Two Indians were fishing, and Kent Westcott was with them. The party had been very successful. The old Shinnecock marched into the kitchen, and sitting down by the table, made signs that he was hungry. Unfortunately, Mrs. Westcott had just put her bread in the oven and she could find but a scanty meal for her visitor. However, she gave freely what she had, but as he belonged to a people who are great eaters when they can get food, he was not satisfied. He ran out of the house down to the lake where the canoe was just landing, seized a fish and ran back to the house. The Montauks, indignant at the theft, rushed after the thief, and John coming in, made the Shinnecock give back the fish. Instead of resenting this interference the thief shook his head, and with a guttural laugh ran off and disappeared in the forest.

The Montauks left a liberal share of their catch with Mr. Westcott, and then securing the canoe, went off muttering, "Shinnecock, woman, Shinnecock loud words, no fight!" But one of the party pointing to Kent, said: "Take care! Shinnecock lay in the grass. Snake run out when you don't know. Take care! Shinnecock moccasin don't talk loud!"

John and Patience had been somewhat disturbed by this occurrence, but they had lived so long among such scenes that they had been accustomed to pay little attention to them. Each one went on as usual, John and Kent preparing the fish for supper, and Patience going to look after a sick neighbor.

A few days passed and not an Indian was to be seen. John and Patience were planning a visit to the Connecticut shore, where some fellow Englishmen had lately arrived from home, with tidings that you may be sure would stir the hearts of the exiles. Meanwhile they amused themselves and Kent with stories of their dear home and family, and with memories of their youth. Yes, they talked far into the night, forgetting the passing moments in the sweet and sad recollections that had been revived by the news of the arrival of their companions. Kent crept off to bed and the parents were soon asleep, carrying on in dreams their reminiscences. Kent's room was on the ground floor and looked out on the lake. The boy's imagination had been so excited that he could not sleep. Though it was autumn it was very warm. The night was dark, the insects noisy, and he fancied that a dive in the lake would be delightful. Both he and his father had often bathed late in the evening, and he was perfectly fearless. He jumped out of the low window and was soon running to the lake scantily clothed. He threw off his garment and immediately felt himself in the grasp of two powerful hands. Over his mouth another pair of hands was placed.

Kent looked up and found himself surrounded by three men; he recognized three Shinnecocks. He struggled, but in vain. What could a boy do in the grasp of three powerful men? They secured him with thongs. His mouth was so fastened that he could not open it, and then they carried him to a canoe. Two Indians entered, the third shot up through the woods. The lake was soon crossed, and on the other side the third Indian joined the party. Kent's legs were freed, and he was told to walk. He made signs to the men to free his mouth, and they were willing to release the band. Kent endeavored to make them understand by signs his questions. He could not speak their language, but he understood it, and that he was to follow them. Poor Kent! he was in an agony of fear, not for himself alone, but for his parents, who would miss him sadly. The Indians strode on, and if the boy lingered a rude pull hastened him forward. Only one sentence was spoken in broken English. The oldest of the party said: "You catch fish; Montauk catch fish; Shinnecock catch fish too!" Then Kent remembered the theft of the fish and the quarrel, and he knew that this was for revenge. His father had helped the Montauks.

Kent's faith in God was as true as his love and trust in his earthly parents. He was sure that if he prayed his heavenly Father would deliver him in some way. So he went on praying earnestly, and the more so as he picked up from the guttural talk of the Indians, who had no idea that the boy understood the language, that not only himself was to be kidnapped, but that the next night the little settlement was to be set on fire and the Montauks to be punished for being favorable to the settlers.

Oh, how earnestly that boy prayed as they tramped on through the forest! Kent remembered that they were coming to an open place where the land fell down in the shape of a great bowl or hollow. He knew that peculiar echoes could be made here, and not far hence a few Montauks had their wigwams. I have no doubt that the Holy Spirit put these thoughts in his mind. With renewed courage he strode on with the others, faint yet pursuing, and with his whole soul in a deep prayer, reached the hollow. Then, at this supreme moment, he opened his mouth and gave with supernatural energy, three wild whoops. The echoes gave back on every side the signal. The captors fancied that the enemy was upon them and fled in swift dismay, leaving their captive.

In a few moments there darted from the shade two Indians, who approached the boy. They recognized him as the pale face boy, Kent. They cut the thongs with which he was bound, and he told his tale. They carried him in their arms to their wigwam, bathed his limbs, and gave him food.

Nor was the sound confined to the ears of the neighboring Montauks. It woke the small settlement of whites. The frightened men and women started from their beds, sure that the Indians were upon them, and seeing no foe, wondered what unearthly sound had filled the midnight air. They hurried to clothe themselves, and to grasp their weapons. Lights were glancing, and there were pale, fearful faces and throbbing hearts. Dismay and horrible fears filled the minds of Kent's parents. So hour after hour passed on, until in the midst of the excitement two Montauks strode into the dwelling, and with them was Kent. Again he told his story, spoke of his sleeplessness, his desire for a plunge in the lake, his escape from the house, and his capture by the Shinnecocks. They had intended to enter the house and steal the boy, as they were well acquainted with the locality and knew where Kent slept, but the prey fell more easily into their hands. The wits of the captive had been sharpened by the extremity of his circumstances, and he understood the plot that was to revenge at once all the fancied wrongs they had received from the rival tribe as well as from the whites. God answered his prayer for strength, and in those wild whoops awoke the threatened victims. Preparations were made to thwart the wicked designs of the Shinnecocks. They did not believe that those whoops were given by the captive boy, and for a time kept clear of the vicinity.

The boy Kent, though the only real comfort his parents enjoyed, was sent home to England to get an education, and tradition says his future was not unworthy the training of his pious parents. A few descendants of the Shinnecocks remain, but oh, how degraded. The hollow retains the name "Whooping Boy's Hollow," and as I drove from Amagansett past the place I heard this tale from dear lips now silent forever.

K. M. S.

Little Heads Together.

ZIGZAG.

* o o o
o * o o
o o * o
o o o *
o o * o
o * o o
* o o o
o * o o
o o * o
o o o *
o o * o
o * o o
* o o o

1. A man's name. 2. What we most value. 3. An expression of laughter. 4. A satellite. 5. Something used for measuring. 6. To grant for temporary use. 7. To tear. 8. An imaginary monster. 9. Quickly. 10. A place of confinement. 11. Combinations of syllables. 12. To look narrowly. 13. A border.

Zigzag.—An eminent musical composer.

MISPLACED WORDS.

Read and punctuate the following, and give the name of the author.

Decayed ages fled whole works have and their
Been scattered nations and Fade stout but ivy old the shall never Hearty hale and its green from Days lonely old its in plant brave the Fatten shall past the upon
Man stateliest can building the for raise
Food ivy's the last at is.

SQUARE WORD.

1. An army. 2. One of the United States. 3. To affix a signature. 4. A sound.

Answers to Puzzles of December 23d.

Double Acrostic.—

C ri B
H at E
R es T
I va H
S au L
T yr E
Mot H
A bl E
S heM

Enigma.—It never rains but it pours.

Two Diamonds.—1.

S
A H A
S H A W L
A W E
L

2.

F
C R I
F R A M E
E M U
E

Correct Answers from Lewis D. and Jennie Labagh, Rappie Bowne, "Midwout."

Cousin Lois would be glad if each of her little friends would make at least one puzzle and send it to her with the answer. How many will try?

A Dutch George Muller.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Jan. 7th, 1886.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER: Please insert the following, which first appeared in the Pella Blade, of Pella, Iowa, and was soon thereafter copied in English into the columns of Mr. J. Van 't Lindenhout's philanthropic paper, Het Oosten, a weekly published at Nymegen, Netherlands, in the interest of his Orphan's Home.

It will explain itself. I will simply add, that a considerable number of publications, tracts, songs, almanacs, etc., from the press of the above Institution, are read by Hollanders in this country, and their interest in Mr. Van 't Lindenhout's beautiful Christian charities is manifested by liberal contributions for their support. Two urgent invitations, from Cincinnati and Grand Rapids, have been sent to this Holland George Muller to visit the United States and give lectures on his work. The Netherland & American Steamship Company, hearing of this, has offered him free passage both ways, and the probability is, that his friends will soon have their wishes gratified. An old-time friend of this remarkable Christian worker requests me to send you this communication, as containing information pleasing to all who delight in such fruits and graces of Christianity. The Pella Blade said:

"Last week Prof. Cory, principal of our city schools sent a draft of £32 23 to Mr. J. Van 't Lindenhout, director of one of the noblest institutions found in the Netherlands, Europe. This money was, at the instigation of Mr. John Mulder, janitor of our schools, contributed in small sums mostly by the scholars to show their appreciation of the efforts made by said director in the education of hundreds of orphans in his institution located at Neerbosch, in the vicinity of Nymegen, of which the janitor had told them a great deal.

"Twenty-one years ago Mr. Van 't Lindenhout conceived the idea to found an institution especially designed for the orphans of the poor. He had no money; he did not ask the assistance of the government; he laid his case before some intimate friends, who could do nothing else but approve it. Some benevolent persons sent him some money; he commenced a small building; soon this was insufficient to hold the children that wanted admission. The friends of the poor became interested in the noble efforts of the director, who left his whole case to the guidance of the Lord. He kept on building and the money kept coming in sufficient sums to supply the demands. The institution has all the time been prospering. Hundreds of orphans have been taken up, religiously educated and instructed in all the branches of a common education. The boys have learned the most useful trades, and hundreds already occupy good positions in society. The girls also are instructed in all branches they need to make them useful among their fellow beings.

"At present more than eight hundred orphans receive all the fatherly care of which they stand so much in need. Instead of one small building of which the institution consisted first, the grounds upon which it was originally located, contains at present about twenty five buildings. The orphans are instructed in all trades. Since a few years a printing office was established for the use of the institution and the scholars, which netted last year more than seventeen thousand guilders. Under the supervision of competent workmen, the orphan boys do all the carpenting, mason work, painting, etc., if new buildings have to be erected. An extensive nursery is attached to the institution, which has at present a large trade in flowers, bulbs, roses, etc., that are sent to the remotest countries. The donations of last year amounted to over one hundred and twenty one thousand guilders; twenty-five thousand guilders were spent last year for new buildings; more orphans keep all the time demanding admission than the director has room for."

P. MOERDYKE.

The Dutch Defended.

EDITOR OF THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER: I wish to enter my severe and solemn protest against the absurd and groundless slanders against Dutch manners, contained in your home department of this week. I was but a boy of about thirteen years when I left Holland, but I can say with entire confidence that the assertions of that article (clipped from the Home Journal) are most egregiously false. It may be meant for a burlesque, and then good nature can afford to laugh over it. But if so, the clipping is all the more unfortunate in taking it out of its connection and turning the intended humor into serious statements. If, however, the statements are meant seriously, they but illustrate the truth of Havard's remark: "Among all the travellers who have gone through the Netherlands there is hardly one who did not arrive there with what may be called a bulky baggage of preconceived ideas, or who remained long enough to enable him to get rid of his singular prejudices." Some narrow-minded Englishman or American has gone wrong on this "Dutch Etiquette" before he ever saw the Dutch at home, I suppose, and found there exactly what he wanted. Just so A. J. C. Hare vented his spleen in a series of outrageous aspersions upon the Dutch, but had the grace to conclude his tirade with the reflection, "Probably a longer stay in the country might do much to modify such an impression, but this was the result of a fortnight's scamper through it." If the clipping from the Home Journal is correct, Holland is not only behind in manners, it is simply unfit to form a part of civilized Christendom; the Dutch are worse than savages.

DANIEL VAN PELT.

EAST NEW YORK, January 7th.

Probation Hereafter.

EDITOR OF CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER: In his exposition of the S. S. lesson for next Sabbath, Dr. Lyman Abbott, in The Christian Union, uses the following language:

"I cannot find any authority in Scripture for the declaration frequently made that death closes the door, and that after death there is no other opportunity for repentance."

When a professedly orthodox minister undertakes to inject such poison into the minds of thousands of S. S. teachers, does it call for no comment?

NEW YORK, January 4th. C. M M.

(Our opinions in regard to probation after death have been published in detail. We regard such a statement, as that quoted by our correspondent, as exceedingly pernicious. We regret especially that it has gone into the hands of Sabbath school teachers and scholars.—ED.)

PROVIDENCE, R. I., is the second largest city in New England and has about 120,000 inhabitants. Of this number it is estimated that 2,500 are German and 1,500 Swedish Lutherans. But strange to say, for these 4,000 Lutherans there is no Lutheran church. After personal inquiry as to the reason why, this answer was received: "Our Germans do not wish to have a church. Attempts have been made in this direction; able men have worked here, and that with energy and zeal; but they were obliged to give it up because of a lack of interest on the part of the Germans. Sunday is spent in the society halls, at the card table and with the beer glass." (!) Worcester, Mass., has a population of 70,000, with 1,000 Protestant Germans and 5 000 Swedes. Only a small Swedish Lutheran church exists here. From this city a similar answer was received: "The Germans want no church, and who can force them?"—The Lutheran Observer.

News of the Week.

(Continued from page five.)

SATURDAY, 9.—A hurricane prevailed along the north coast of Great Britain, causing a serious loss of both life and property; a life-boat was capsized and one of the crew drowned....A severe snow storm in Paris has caused a cessation of traffic and many accidents are reported....The Belfast Presbytery has issued a manifesto declaring that the adoption of Home Rule is impolitic, and at this time disastrous and criminal for Ireland....The French newspapers are pleased with the new Ministry and urge a truce among all political factions....A very severe storm is sweeping over Canada and the West....A blizzard has been sweeping over the Southwest; trains are blocked and roads have become impassable....A number of the members of the Legislature are blocked up on the road on the way to Des Moines....Senator Eustis offered a resolution in the Senate to pay $10,000,000 of bonds in silver dollars....A large part of the stolen bonds of the Bank of Lancaster, Vt., have been found. ....The Utah bill, by which it is hoped to wipe out Mormonism, has passed the Senate. ...The anniversary of the battle of New Orleans was celebrated in that city yesterday....A fire destroyed the St. James Hotel of Batavia, N. Y.; no lives lost but several injured....There was a panic in an upholstery store in N. Y., caused by a gas explosion in the cellar.

MONDAY, 11.—The Jesuits have been expelled from Monaco....The Greek Government is making active preparations for war; the peaceful reports heretofore published have been unfounded; the king is going to the frontier to inspect the army....The number of skaters in Regents Park, London, was so great that they broke the ice, and over one hundred were plunged into the water, but no one was drowned....Many disasters continue to be reported from the last storm at sea; several vessels were wrecked near Boston, but their crews were saved....The ocean steamers as they come into port are covered with ice, and speak of terrific storms. ....The hall occupied by the female students at Oberlin College was burned; no lives were lost....Twenty-one cars were burned, and three men were killed in a railroad accident in Alabama....Several trains and a large number of locomotives are snowed under on the Blue Ridge Mountains; the passengers are in great peril from cold ...There have been several severe fires in Philadelphia....Constables guarded the gate of a cemetery at Newtown, L. I., and collected one dollar for every burial....A number of orange groves are said to be frozen in Florida.... The Baltimore & Ohio R R. are prepared to cut rates to New York on their line.

TUESDAY, 12.—The cold continues, reached its height here last night, when the mercury fell to 2 degrees. Reports of damage to vegetation in the South still come in. The harbor of Galveston, Texas, was covered with ice on Monday morning for miles. At Augusta, Ga., the temperature yesterday morning was down to nearly 6 degrees. The orange groves of Florida have been seriously injured. The weather at sea has been exceedingly tempestuous and many vessels have been wrecked along the shore. A Long Island farmer bravely saved the crew of a schooner by means of a small raft, on which he made six trips to the vessel. The steamer "Hylton Castle" foundered off Long Island in the gale, one boat succeeded in reaching the shore with the mate and seven men. During the storm here on Friday night the barometer fell to 28.74 inches,—an excessively rare occurrence. The railroad trains all over the country have been delayed, and in the Northwest have been abandoned. In Southern Illinois the thermometer ranged from 18 to 23 below zero. Much distress is caused in Montreal by a flood in the St. Lawrence. The water freezes as it rises and many buildings are made very uncomfortable, some untenantable. ..No probability as yet of any action by Congress on silver coinage. The silver men claim a majority in the House. ....Strikes of various mechanics continue in many localities....The New York Marine Society celebrated its 116th anniversary by a dinner last evening... Mr. Steinitz wins the first game in the match for the chess championship of the world, on the 46th move, after a contest of five and one half hours....A number of fires reported during the cold term....Report says that Germany has seized the Samoan Islands, notwithstanding the protests of the American and British consuls.

The Truth as an answer to the Bombastic Advertising of the Royal Baking Powder Co.

We are analyzing all the Cream of Tartar used in the manufacture of Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder, and we hereby certify that it is practically chemically pure—testing as high as 99 95 per cent and not less than 99 50 per cent.

From a hygienic point of view we regard Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder as the ideal baking powder, composed as it is of pure Grape Cream of Tartar and pure Bicarbonate of Soda.

STILLWELL & GLADDING,
Chemists to the New York Produce Exchange.
NEW YORK, Nov. 25, 1884.

Analyses heretofore made by noted chemists show the amount of Tartrate of Lime found by them in different samples of Royal Baking Powder as follows:

	Per Cent of Tartrate of Lime found in Royal Baking Powder.
WM. M. HABIRSHAW, F. C. S., Chemist of the N. Y. State Agricultural Society.	5.05
PROF. JAMES F. BABCOCK, State Assayer of Massachusetts.	4.52
STILLWELL & GLADDING, Chemists to the New York Produce Exchange.	5.00

These analyses show that the Tartrate of Lime which the Royal Baking Powder Company condemns in its advertisements has been found in its own baking powder.

Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder does not contain Ammonia, Alum, Lime, Potash, or Bone Phosphates, and it is ABSOLUTELY FREE FROM ADULTERATIONS.

Financial.

TUESDAY, Jan. 12th.

IMPORTS of merchandise at this port last week were valued at $7,336 998, and exports at $6,306,721. Sterling exchange sold yesterday at $4.68 1-2 for 60 day bills and $4 89 1-2 for demand.

The banks last week reduced loans $36,100, gained in specie $3,361,100, in legal tenders $2,309,500, in deposits $6,438,300. The surplus of reserve was increased by over four millions, making it $28 350,400. Money was freely offered on call at the Stock Exchange at 2 per cent. The Bank of England rate is held at 4 per cent. That bank has been passing through heavy draughts on its bullion. The percentage of security to its obligations is unusually low. Wells & Fargo have just issued their annual statement of the production of metals in the States and Territories west of the Missouri River. The product of silver last year they make $44,516 599, and of gold $26,393,756. The silver product is larger than in any previous year except 1877, when it was over 45 millions. The gold product of 1884 and of 1885 has been smaller than in about 20 years.

Grain quotations yesterday were: Wheat here 91 7–8, in Chicago 82 1–2; corn here 49 1–4, in Chicago 36 1–2; oats here 36 7–8, in Chicago 28 1–4. No special demand in foreign markets. Good prospects for growing wheat reported from India. The rains have been abundant and the crop is in good condition. Bids for cotton yesterday afternoon at the close were: January, 9.21–24; February, 9 25–29; March, 9.35-41; April, 9 48–52; May, 9.60–63.

The Stock Market has reacted steadily from the attacks of the bears and remains fairly strong. Some values have increased.

Notice to Subscribers.

Owing to the largely increased number of remittances at this season of the year we are unable to change the date on the little yellow labels as promptly as usual. In a few weeks we hope to catch up with all corrections.

INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA, nervous prostration, and all forms of general debility relieved by taking Mensman's Peptonized Beef Tonic the only preparation of beef containing its entire nutritious properties. It is not a mere stimulant like the extracts of beef, but contains blood-making, force-generating, and life-sustaining properties; is invaluable in all enfeebled conditions, whether the result of exhaustion, nervous prostration, over work or acute disease; particularly when resulting from pulmonary complaints. Caswell, Hazard & Co., Proprietors, New York. Sold by druggists.

Market Report.

Review of the New York Market for Butter, Cheese, etc. Reported by DAVID W. LEWIS & Co., Produce Commission Merchants, 49 Pearl St., New York.
Commission on Butter, Eggs, Poultry, etc., is five per cent; Flour, Grain, etc., 2½ per cent.
Marking-plates furnished when desired.

NEW YORK, January 9, 1886.

BUTTER.—Receipts for the week, 27,321 pks.; exports 1,203 pks.

The late sharp bidding by Butterine and Oleo. men at Elgin advanced the market on finest fresh butter beyond its ability to carry, and the trade has not responded to the prices set up Under the impetus of this apparently higher butter market, the Butterine men in New York and vicinity have renewed operations and have been heavy purchasers of milk, some of them using 10,000 to 15,000 pounds each daily. This large consumption of milk by Oleo. manufacturers may be a crumb of comfort to nearby milk producers, but the butterine utterly swamps the market for common butter and demoralizes all sorts with the exception of fine late-made grain-fed makes. Exports are fallen to about nothing, and on the whole it is a blue market To begin at the bottom, there were sales of grease at 4a5c. 8½c. was bid for 200 firkins of Ohio, but not accepted. 18 firkins original Western butter, solid, very poor, sold at 6c. A car-load of 377 tubs Iowa June ladle-packed good butter sold at 9½c. Fresh Western factory-packed, that has been selling at 18a2 c, is slow, and 17a20c. would cover most of the transactions in it. Several hundred packages of Delaware, Chenango, and other N. Y. State dairies have been offered here at 14a15c., and odds and ends of same at 12a13c., but the stock has accumulated unsold, and exactly what disposal is to be made of about 100,000 packages of miscellaneous butter that is in stock here is doubtful. Strictly fancy dairies, entire, have value at about 20c., with a possible 22c. Last week's made grain-fed creamery winter butter, fancy quality, bring 30a33c., with a possible 35c. for retail selections. We quote:

Solid silky grain-fed fresh Elgin creamery	32 @33
Fancy fresh grain-fed Eastern creamery	30 @33
Heavy bodied, grainy, high-flavored dairy, fresh	24 @26
A strictly fancy Delaware dairy, entire	20 @22
Common to fair dairies [nominal]	13 @16
Fine summer firkins	— @20
Fresh Western imitation creamery	20 @21
Western creameries, fancy summer make	— @18
" " good held butter	10 @13
" store-packed butter	7 @10
Winter make, common roll butter	9 @13
Grease	4 @5

CHEESE.—Receipts for the week, 33,433 boxes; exports 27,283 boxes.

There has been a fair business done in all grades this week, mostly for export. Shippers paid 9½@10c. for fancy cheese, 8a9c. for good prime stock, and 5a7c. for State skims and part skims, and took good line of Pennsylvania skims at 2½a3½c. Home trade took moderately, paying 9½a10a10¼c. for fine colored, and 9a9¾c. for white. Market closes firm. We quote:

	FANCY.	FINE.	FAULTY
Factory, full cream.	9½@10½	9 @ 9¼	6 @ 8
Night's milk.
" skimmed.	6 @ 7	4 @ 5	2 @ 3

EGGS.—Receipts for the week, 7,145 bbls., and imports 155 cases.

Mild weather early in the week had a very depressing effect on the market; later there was cold, wintry weather, and more disposition to buy, and prices came to a halt, and our market closes firm at quotations. We quote:

Fresh laid, per doz	— @25
Western and Canada, per doz	23 @24
Limed eggs, per doz	18 @20

The best Ankle Boot and Collar Pads are made of zinc and leather. Try them.

Publisher's Department.

LEARN THE TRUTH ABOUT Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar. It softens the cough, relieves the windpipe and bronchial tubes of mucus, tones the lungs and the membranes of the throat, and restores to the organs of respiration their natural strength and vigor. 75c., 50c. and $1.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap heals and beautifies, 25c.
German Corn Remover kills Corns, Bunions, 25c
Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye—Black & Brown, 50c.
Pike's Toothache Drops cure in 1 Minute, 25c.

The pain and misery suffered by those who are afflicted with dyspepsia are indescribable. The relief which is given by Hood's Sarsaparilla has caused thousands to be thankful for this great medicine. It dispels the causes of dyspepsia, and tones up the digestive organs.

MARRIAGES.

BOICE—CONOVER.—At Raritan Landing, N. J., Dec. 23, 1885, by Rev. T. C. Easton, D.D., of New Brunswick, James M. Boice, Esq., of Piscataway, to Mrs. Gertrude N. Conover, of Raritan Landing.

BOWER—ALDEN.—At Cairo, N. Y., by the Rev. S. W. Roe, S.T.D., Jan 7, 1886, at the residence of the bride's parents, George Calvin Bower, of Stamford, Montana, and Alice C. Alden, only daughter of Charles Alden, Esq.

CHASE—VAN PATTEN.—At the home of the bride's parents, Glenville, N Y., on the evening of Dec. 31, 1885, by Rev. Robt. Doig, Mr. Charles E. Chase, of Benedicts, Fulton Co., to Aggie Van Patten, of the former place.

GOLDEN—CARTNER.—At Muitzeskill, N. Y., on Dec. 6, 1885, by Rev. Wm. Veenschoten, Mr. Reuben F. Golden to Mrs. Mary V. Cartner, both of Muitzeskill N. Y.

JOHNSON—CRAMER.—At the parsonage of the Ref. Church of Muitzeskill, N. Y., on Dec. 31, 1885, by Rev. Wm. Veenschoten, Mr. Stephen A. Johnson to Miss Lena C. Cramer, both of Kinderhook N. Y.

MULL—TRIMPER.—On the evening of Jan. 10, at Schodack Landing, and by the Rev. H. A. Hendrickson, Alfred Mull, of Schodack Landing, to Abigal F. Trimper, of Kinderhook.

PERSONS—ODELL.—At the residence of the bride's father, Charles Persons and Helen Odell, by the Rev. S. W. Roe, S.T.D., at Cairo, N. Y, Jan. 5, 1886.

WOOD—ROALEFS.—On New Year's eve, at the home of the bride, by Rev. J. A Davis, assisted by Rev. J. Kirby Davis, F. J. Wood Esq., of Philadelphia, to Miss Lillinore, daughter of the late John A. Roalefs. All the parties except the groom live in Newark, N. J.

WRIGHT—KLEYN.—On Thursday, Dec. 31, 1885, by Rev. Thomas Walker Jones, at the bride's home, Albert F. Wright, of Kansas City, Mo., to Minnie, eldest daughter of John R. Kleyn, Esq., of Holland, Mich.

DEATHS.

Obituary notices five cents per line (nine word to the line.) For subscribers we will insert fifteen lines free; all lines in excess of that number will be charged same as non-subscribers.

WILTSE.—Sunday morning, Dec. 27, 1885, Miss Diana M Wiltse.

Miss Wiltse died suddenly at her home in this city, of apoplexy. She was the last of the Wiltse name in her branch of the family. She was the daughter of Capt. John Wiltse, late of Fishkill Landing, who served many years in the eldership of the Reformed Dutch church at Fishkill, N. Y. Her mother, Hannah Van Wyck, of an old, highly-esteemed family, as her name indicates, also died suddenly on a Sunday morning, many years ago.

Their son, John Henry, died ten years ago, who married a Miss Schenck, but left no children. One daughter, Elizabeth, who died in 18 6, married Rev. Dr. Robert P Lee, so long the faithful pastor of the Reformed Dutch church at Montgomery, in Orange County. Ann Louisa remained unmarried, and died in 18 0

Miss Wiltse had been a member of the Reformed Dutch church at Fishkill Landing for more than fifty years toward which she was drawn with a warm affection. She lived in a comforting Christian hope of a blessed immortality, and has entered upon her reward. She was much attached to the old community in which she grew up and spent so much of her life. Within the last few months she would in sleep go off into dreams of her happier earlier days, in which she was moving again among those she had known and loved, and on waking she would regret that she had not already gone to be among the many departed. The wish to go from earth grew stronger and stronger, so that she was ready to welcome the last change. Her remains were brought to the family vault in the graveyard of the Reformed Dutch church at Fishkill Landing on the Tuesday following her death, to rest with kindred dust The brief burial service was conducted by her pastor, Rev. Charles W. Fritts. A number of friends and relatives here met the immediate friends, to pay their last respects to the dead, and to sympathize with the living.

Notices and Acknowledgments

THE NORTH CLASSIS OF LONG ISLAND will meet in special session in Synod's Rooms, 34 Vesey street, on Monday, January 18th, at 11 o'clock A M., to consider a call of the German Evangelical St. Paul's Church, Jamaica, upon the Rev. F. Hartig, of Orange, N J., and the transaction of such other business as may come before it.

A. J. MARTINE, President.

Board of Education.

RECEIPTS FOR DECEMBER, 1885.

From North Hempstead, L.I., $7; Vriesland, Mich., 1; Thousand Isles, 2; South Brooklyn, L.I., 5; Rev. A. D. W. Mason, Brooklyn, L.I., 20; A member of Collegiate Church, 50; Three Bridges, N.J., 5.66; Fonda, N.Y., 12.60; Ladies' Ed. Society, Flatbush, L.I., 155; Franklin, Wis., 10; Fulton, Ill., 14.55; Canarsie, L.I., 3 50; 2d Ghent, N.Y., 6.80; Fair St. Church, Kingston, N.Y., 8.07; James D. Blauvelt, Esq., Clarkstown, N.Y., 10; Rev. John N. Jansen, 10; Castleton, N.Y., 5; 2d Rotterdam, N.Y., 4.75; Queens, L.I., 15; Orange City, Iowa, 7.01; 1st Rotterdam, N.Y., 9.58; 2d Claverack, N.Y., 11.65; Readington, N.J., 18.83; 1st Hudson, N.Y., 23.17. Total, $416.17.

FOR NORTHWESTERN CLASSICAL ACADEMY.—Mrs. Rosina Stilwell, $1; A friend, 5; 2d Claverack, N.Y., 13.21. Total, $19.21.

J. HOSFORD, Treasurer,
Vesey Street, N. Y.

What It Is—What It Does.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is made of sarsaparilla, dandelion, mandrake, cherry bark, uva ursi, dock, and other valuable medicinal agents long and favorably known for their power in eradicating disease and purifying the blood. It will cure, when in the power of medicine, Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Dyspepsia, Headache, Constipation, Biliousness, General Debility, Pains in the Back, Kidney Complaint, Catarrh, Female Weakness, Cancerous Humors, Humors of the Face, Ringworm, Pimples, Ulcers, Sores, Tumors, Scald Head, and all diseases arising from an impure state or low condition of the blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla is made by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all druggists; $1, six for $5.

A cold may be a dangerous thing or not, depending upon the means at hand to combat it. It is a wise precaution to provide against emergencies that are liable to arise in every family. In sudden attacks of cold, croup, asthma, etc., Ayer's Cherry Pectoral will prove the quickest and most effective cure, and your best friend.

Best, easiest to use and cheapest. Piso's Remedy for Catarrh By druggists. 50c.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies A marvel of purity strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans. ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall-st., N. Y.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Should be kept constantly at hand, for use in emergencies of the household. Many a mother, startled in the night by the ominous sounds of Croup, finds the little sufferer, with red and swollen face, gasping for air. In such cases Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is invaluable. Mrs. Emma Gedney, 159 West 128 st., New York, writes: "While in the country, last winter, my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with Croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral was tried in small and frequent doses, and, in less than half an hour, the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the Pectoral saved my darling's life." Mrs. Chas. B. Landon, Guilford, Conn., writes: "Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Saved My Life,

and also the life of my little son. As he is troubled with Croup, I dare not be without this remedy in the house." Mrs. J. Gregg, Lowell, Mass., writes: "My children have repeatedly taken Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for Coughs and Croup. It gives immediate relief, followed by cure." Mrs. Mary E. Evans, Scranton, Pa., writes: "I have two little boys, both of whom have been, from infancy, subject to violent attacks of Croup. About six months ago we began using Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and it acts like a charm. In a few minutes after the child takes it, he breathes easily and rests well. Every mother ought to know what a blessing I have found in Ayer's Cherry Pectoral." Mrs. Wm. C. Reid, Freehold, N. J., writes: "In our family, Ayer's medicines have been blessings for many years. In cases of Colds and Coughs, we take

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

and the inconvenience is soon forgotten."

PREPARED BY

Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by all Druggists.

WANTED An active Man or Woman in every county to sell our goods. Salary $75 per Month and Expenses. Canvassing Outfit and Particulars FREE. STANDARD SILVER-WARE CO., Boston, Mass.

EDUCATIONAL.

UNIVERSITY of the City of New York.

JOHN HALL, D.D., LL.D., Chancellor.

1. DEPARTMENT OF ARTS, Tuition Free.
2. DEPARTMENT OF SCIENCE, Tuition Free.
3. SCHOOL OF CIVIL ENGINEERING, Tuition $100.
4. DEPARTMENT OF LAW.
5. DEPARTMENT OF MEDICINE.

 Catalogues, with full particulars of all Courses, may be had upon application to the Registrar.

BEST TEACHERS AMERICAN and FOREIGN, promptly provided for Families, Schools, Colleges
Skilled Teachers supplied with Positions.
Circulars of Good Schools free to Parents.
School Property rented and sold.
School and Kindergarten Material, etc.
J. W. SCHERMERHORN & CO.,
AMERICAN SCHOOL INSTITUTE, 7 East 14th St., N. Y

VASSAR COLLEGE, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. FOR THE LIBERAL EDUCATION OF WOMEN, with a complete College Course, Schools of Painting and Music, Astronomical Observatory, Laboratory of Chemistry and Physics, Cabinets of Natural History, a Museum of Art, a Library of 15,000 Volumes, ten Professors, twenty-three Teachers, and thoroughly equipped for its work. Students at present admitted to a preparatory course. Catalogues sent on application.
J. RYLAND KENDRICK, D. D., Acting President.

Kneeling Bench for use in Church or at Home. Arranged to hold Books.

—CHURCH FURNISHINGS.—

STAINED GLASS MEMORIAL WINDOWS.
MEMORIAL TABLETS OF BRASS, BRONZE, &C.
COMMUNION SERVICES OF SILVER.
S. S. BANNERS, EMBROIDERY, DECORATIONS.
CHURCH FURNITURE.

SEND FOR HAND-BOOKS.

J. & R. LAMB, 59 CARMINE ST., NEW YORK.

Established 1857.

The GREAT CHURCH LIGHT

FRINK'S Patent Reflectors for Gas or Oil, give the most powerful, softest cheapest & Best light known for Churches, Stores, Show Windows, Banks, Theatres, Depots, etc. New and elegant designs. Send size of room. Get circular and estimate. A Liberal discount to churches and the trade. Don't be deceived by cheap imitations.
I. P. FRINK, 551 Pearl St., N. Y.

BELLS.

McShane Bell Foundry
Finest Grade of Bells,
CHIMES AND PEALS for CHURCHES, &c.
Send for Price and Catalogue. Address
H. McSHANE & CO.,
Mention this paper. Baltimore, Md.

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY.
Bells of Pure Copper and Tin for Churches, Schools, Fire Alarms, Farms, etc. FULLY WARRANTED. Catalogue sent Free.
VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O

MENEELY & COMPANY,
West Troy, N. Y. Bells,
For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY

GOOD NEWS TO LADIES.

Greatest inducements ever offered. Now's your time to get up orders for our celebrated Teas and Coffees, and secure a beautiful Gold Band or Moss Rose China Tea Set, or Handsome Decorated Gold Band Moss Rose Dinner Set, or Gold Band Moss Decorated Toilet Set. For full particulars address
THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO.,
P. O. Box 289. 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

ON 30 DAYS' TRIAL.

THIS NEW ELASTIC TRUSS

Has a Pad different from all others, is cup shape, with Self-adjusting Ball in center, adapts itself to all positions of the body while the ball in the cup presses back the intestines just as a person does with the finger. With light pressure the Hernia is held securely day and night, and a radical cure certain. It is easy, durable and cheap. Sent by mail. Circulars free. EGGLESTON TRUSS CO., Chicago, Ill.

GEO. MATHER'S SONS,
PRINTING INK

Manufacturers. Superior Black and Colored Inks for Lithographic and Plate Ink. Varnishes, etc. 60 John street, New York.
The Intelligencer is printed with our ink.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.
CATARRH
Also good for Cold in the Head, Headache, Hay Fever, &c. 50 cents.

Our readers will confer a favor upon the publishers of this paper and, perhaps, find it to their own advantage if, when answering an advertisement found in these columns, mention is made that it was seen in THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER.

The Church.

A Revival Under Nettleton.

LAST November, Rev. E. A. Chase preached an historical sermon on the one hundredth anniversary of the church in Hampden, Conn., formerly South Wilbraham. From a report of it in the Congregationalist the following selections are made in relation to the preaching of the Rev. Asahel Nettleton in 1822:

"Circumstances awakened with Mr. Nettleton an interest in the people of South Wilbraham. Express invitations were at this time, as well as previously, forwarded by the minister and individuals, urging Mr. Nettleton to visit South Wilbraham. On Tuesday afternoon, June 25th, Mr. Nettleton for the first time consented to have an appointment made for him in the hall at sunset. This appointment, though of a few hours' previous notice, like an electric shock reached every extremity of the society. At the set time the room was literally crowded and multitudes yet assembling. Mr. Nettleton took his station, from which in the hall little else was to be seen than a dense surface of expressive countenances, and at the same time from the windows might be seen trees and roofs of adjacent buildings occupied by anxious hearers. The preacher's subject was 'The Ground of Alarm to Awakened Sinners.' Many were roused to anxiety. These scenes were new and interesting to the people. There had never been a general revival in the place from its first settlement till this time, and the language of every heart seemed to be, 'What do these things mean?' It would be an injustice to the opposers of religion not to mention that they acted their part well. Slanderous reports and insinuations of every kind were current against Mr. Nettleton. Much opposition was offered by the Universalists. At one time a meeting was appointed in the Blue Hill schoolhouse. One Reuben Hendricks stood at the door with a club, determined to break up the meeting. This he succeeded in doing; but Captain Comfort Chaffee opened his house to the people, and Mr. Nettleton preached there from the parable of the Pharisee and the Publican. Still the opposition continued. 'I had rather sickness would visit my family than Nettleton,' said one. Said another, 'If he visits this place we shall have a famine.' Others said, 'Now this excitement shall not be, we will put a stop to it; it is really becoming a serious evil when business gets to this pass, it is time that we interfere.' Had the smallest living atom proposed to create a world it would not have appeared more ridiculous than did these anti-religious reasoners stopping a revival in a dignified manner. As in a moment they found their refuge of lies swept away by the powerful influences of God's Spirit.

"But Satan now mustered all his forces; not a drunkard, profane person or Sabbath breaker in the place who was not candid in saying he was very much alarmed at this growing evil—a revival; and that he thought it intolerable to have such an ado about religion, and he thought it his duty to discountenance it. During this opposition, Mr. Nettleton, so far as his health would permit, was rallying the consciences of one and another as he had opportunity to subjects of greater moment than of opposition to religion.

"On the evening of the 27th of June, Mr. Nettleton met his second appointment in the church, which was full and solemn. There no longer remained a doubt of the presence of God by the special influence of His Spirit among the people. Many were anxiously inquiring, 'Men and brethren, what shall we do?' From this time forward the work advanced rapidly. Let us enter the church and listen to one of the sermons. The text is of Dives and Lazarus. Mr. Nettleton begins by saying it is not a parable; the Scripture says, there was a rich man. He goes on to say, the moment a man dies he is in happiness or misery. Next, the request of the rich man indicates that this misery is very tormenting. The answer, that between God and Dives there is a fixed gulf, indicates that this torment is unalleviated. Dr. Todd, in the life of his father, speaks of having been much impressed with this sermon, which he heard at New Haven. One of his hearers in this church describes it as an awful sermon, under which the audience fairly quailed. By such preaching the young were deeply affected. At the close of one meeting a young woman was overwhelmed with a sense of her guilt. As she dwelt some distance from the village, she was asked by one of her companions living near to spend the night with her. At midnight Mr. Nettleton was sent for to come to this house. It was filled with people. He found the young woman sustained in the arms of her friends, piteously crying out, 'Lord Jesus, have mercy on my soul.' The next day, while in a company of young people with whom Mr. Nettleton was talking, she with one or two others expressed joy and peace in believing.

"On Thursday, July 11th, Mr. Nettleton met sixty or eighty in an anxious meeting—an awful scene of distress. From this they went to the church, where he spoke on the danger of grieving the Spirit of God. It was indeed a heart searching subject. The sobs and sighs of anxious sinners were to be heard from all parts of the house. At its close a large number rushed toward Mr. Nettleton, as if expecting assistance from him. Many cried out aloud, and the house was filled with groans of distress. The multitude clambered upon the rear seats, beholding with astonishment the effects of the Holy Spirit of God, opening the eyes of the blind and loosing the tongues of the dumb. Mr. Nettleton addressed them for about five minutes, and asked them to retire as quietly as possible. Some were so overwhelmed that it became necessary to urge and even assist them home. By Monday, the 29th of July, thirty had been converted. At an anxious meeting on the evening of this day, in the village hall, there were at least a hundred and fifty present. At the close of the meeting, which was peculiarly interesting, there was witnessed the most awful scene of distress known thus far during the revival; there was evidenced generally a more deep conviction of sin than at any previous meeting. As the people passed on to the green, retiring from the hall, there was a burst of feeling among the more anxious, which one may imagine was a faint expression of the agonies of the damned on receiving their final doom. Flying to each other's arms, in piercing cries they exclaimed, 'I am sinking to hell, I am sinking to hell!' They were immediately led by their friends to the house of Mr. Warren, just across the street, where for a time were responded from one room to another, cries which were calculated to melt the hardest heart. Never did the justice and mercy of God, united in a work of grace, appear to move in greater majesty than on this occasion. The voice of opposition for a time was hushed to silence, and many by what they witnessed were converted. On the next day, a number who were in such distress on the preceding evening, expressed a hope of having submitted, and the number of anxious sinners was very much increased. From this time on the work steadily advanced, until nearly one hundred had expressed a faith in Christ; and at the communion in October sixty-two were received into the church."

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Home Readings.

LESSON 4, FIRST QUARTER.

M. Captivity of Judah..... .....2 Kings 25 : 1-12.
T. Foretold by Isaiah..... .....Isa. 29 : 1-16.
W. Foretold by Ezekiel.....Ezek. 12 : 8-16.
T. Foretold by Jeremiah.....Jer. 32 : 26-44.
F. The Prophet's Lament.....Lam. 1 : 1-16.
S. Prayer for Deliverance..... .....Ps. 80 : 1-19.
S. Weeping in Captivity.....Ps. 137 : 1-12.

—From the Westminster Question Book.

International Sunday-School Lesson.

BY REV. JOHN C. VAN DEVENTER.

Jan. 24th.—The Captivity of Judah.—2 Kings 25 : 1-12.

Golden Text.—"By the rivers of Babylon, there we sat down, yea, we wept, when we remembered Zion."—Ps. 137 : 1.

CENTRAL TRUTH.—"The wages of sin is death."—ROM. 6 : 23.

INTRODUCTION.

THE reform under Josiah was not sufficient to avert the impending wrath. At the close of his reign the process of destruction had set in. The Egyptians first placed Jerusalem under tribute, then Nebuchadnezzar, who claimed the territory, came and took possession of the city, carrying away a portion of the people as captives, among whom were Daniel and his friends. A few years later this king made a second invasion, and took away another company of captives, among whom was Ezekiel. The third campaign was directed against both Tyre and Jerusalem. The king made his headquarters at Riblah, about 100 miles north of Damascus, while he sent armies to besiege the two rebellious cities. The story of the final overthrow of Jerusalem occupies our attention at this time.

THE LESSON.

I. THE SIEGE AND FAMINE.—VS. 1-3.

V. 1.—"And it came to pass in the ninth year of his reign." Zedekiah, although the son of Josiah, was not his immediate successor, since two brothers and a nephew of his had occupied the throne before his accession. He had been appointed king by Nebuchadnezzar in the place of his nephew Jehoiachin. In spite of the warnings of Jeremiah and the experience of his immediate predecessors, Zedekiah rebelled against the King of Babylon, and so brought down upon the nation that destruction which was God's punishment for their idolatry. "He and all his host." The king himself was not present at the fall of the city, although it is quite probable that he visited his army during the progress of the siege. "They built forts against it round about." The taking of a walled city was necessarily a slow work in those days. The land about the walls was raised by artificial mounds, upon which towers were erected which would bring the attacking parties on a level with the tops of the walls, and so permit them to harass and destroy the defenders. These towers also contained battering rams with which to make breaches in the fortifications.

V. 2.—"And the city was besieged unto the eleventh year of King Zedekiah." The siege lasted just about one year and a half. During this time of suspense the miseries of the besieged people became unspeakably severe. The book of Lamentations gives some insight into the depth of sufferings in which sin had involved the people.

V. 3.—"On the ninth day of the fourth month the famine prevailed in the city." This was not the beginning of the famine, but its culmination in absolute destitution. The people had fought against the army without and death within the walls until nothing of strength or hope was left.

II. FLIGHT AND PUNISHMENT.—VS. 4-7.

V. 4.—"And the city was broken up." "Then a breach was made in the city." (Revision.) With the failure of food the strength and vigilance of the soldiers failed, so that the Babylonians easily forced an entrance through the walls. From the general implication of the story this breach was made on the northern side of the city. As soon as the enemy were within the walls the defenders of the city knew that there was no help for them, and they fled with the king under cover of the darkness. Their flight was out of a southern gate through the vale of Kedron and over the Mount of Olives toward Jericho.

V. 5.—The flight of the king and his men was soon discovered by the besiegers, who immediately gave pursuit and overtook the fugitives after a few miles' chase.

V. 6.—"Then they took the king, and brought him up to the King of Babylon at Riblah." Zedekiah was considered a rebel against his superior monarch, and he had in fact broken a solemn oath of allegiance by which he had been permitted to reign.

V. 7.—"They slew the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes." This was not merely an Eastern refinement of cruelty, but was intended to remove the seed royal in order to break up the kingdom as effectually as possible. After making the captive king witness the death of his children, his captors then proceeded to blind him, according to their manner of treating such important prisoners of war. But this was not all; defeat, loss of kindred, and blindness were but preludes to a perpetual bondage in which the fallen king was to be kept in Babylon.

III. DESTRUCTION AND CAPTIVITY.—VS. 8-12.

V. 8.—"In the fifth month, on the seventh day of the month." This was nearly a full month after the capture of the city. The lapse of such a length of time indicates that the victorious king had been deliberating what the fate of the rebellious city should be. "Nebuzar-adan, captain of the guard." This title is applied to the chief executioner, and it was in that capacity that he visited Jerusalem, bearing the king's decision as to its future.

V. 9.—"And he burnt the house of the Lord." This destruction of the temple was deliberate, while that of the later temple by the Romans was against the wishes of the commander. The temple had been profaned by the hypocrisies and idolatries of the people, and needed to be purified by fire. "The king's house and all the houses of Jerusalem." As the last clause of the verse evidently qualifies this statement, we understand that the important buildings were subjected to this destruction, but probably the greater part of the entire city was consumed in the conflagration.

V. 10.—"Brake down the walls of Jerusalem round about." The complete demolition of the city and its walls, while simply policy on the part of Nebuchadnezzar, was in direct fulfilment of Divine threatenings.

V. 11.—"Now the rest of the people.... did Nebuzar-adan, the captain of the guard, carry away." The classes of persons mentioned in this verse seem to include the population of the city, the deserters during the siege, and the inhabitants of the surrounding country.

V. 12.—"But the captain of the guard left of the poor of the land." It seemed necessary that some should be left to keep the entire country from becoming a desert, and the officer thought that the poor would be safe ones to leave behind for this purpose. This remnant had a sorry time of it, however, and the result was that they were compelled to flee into Egypt or become partakers of the captivity of their brethren. Thus ends the history of the decline and fall of the Jewish nation.

LESSONS FOR TO-DAY.

1. God's judgments may be deferred, they cannot be defeated.
2. God's promises, whether of wrath or mercy, are sure.
3. Sin certainly leads to destruction.
4. God causes His enemies to destroy each other.
5. Even the threatenings of God are blended with mercy.
6. Neglected grace increases condemnation.

Be Still.

"LET not your heart be troubled,
Your blessings oft are doubled
By disguise;
A mansion is awaiting,
Which faith is antedating,
In the skies.

"A Saviour comes to carry
Your load, and with you tarry,
If you will;
Then do not fret or worry,
Or try God's plans to hurry—
Just be still."

The Sunday Dinner-Table.

"DIDN'T we have a good sermon?" inquired the eldest son, with all the zest of his satisfaction in his tone.

"Good!" echoed the father, scornfully, bristling up as usual when the word "sermon" was uttered. "He took ten minutes to prove something that we know as well as he does, ten more—"

A shade of distress flitted across Sophy's eyes; the minister had made her feel that she was a sinner. Was not that worth ten minutes?

"And as for the prayer," continued the head of the family, with a gesture of impatience, "it was the dryest prayer I ever listened to."

"Perhaps he was not praying to you," suggested the privileged member of the family.

"I think it was the loveliest prayer I ever heard," exclaimed the visitor, with rising color.

The visitor, by the way, did not enjoy the prayers of the head of this family. In her own young opinion, addressing God in long, hard phrases, made Him seem high up and away off from her.

"Such length! Such diffusiveness and minuteness! Such rambling! It was a talk, not a prayer. He brought in everybody under the sun." Impulsive young visitor kept her lips shut, but she could not keep the indignant flash out of her eyes. The prayer in church that morning had touched her as prayer rarely had touched her before. At that instant she hotly wished that she might never have to hear the head of the family pray again.

"Prayer is not a thing to be criticized,' suggested the eldest son, gently. "I never felt so clearly as I did this morning, how Christ is our only hope. Our minister made it so strong and clear."

"After rambling on ten minutes about nature!" commented the argumentative voice of the father. By this time conscientious Sophy has a finger-tip pressed into each ear; that sermon was one of the marked periods in her spiritual growth. "And, then, the idea of saying—"

The sensative boy of fourteen, whose mercury rises and falls with every change in the home atmosphere, dropped his eyes and looked troubled. All his delight in the plain, strong sermon had been marred, even while listening to it, by the dread that somebody at home would pick flaws in it at the dinner-table. If he might have listened with an untroubled heart, into what ready soil the seed would have been dropped that day! Sometimes I think that Satan takes more delight in the Sunday dinner-table, than in any home-gathering through the week. He knows what little winds carry the good seed away.

Somebody, anxious to interrupt the flow of unkindly criticism, now made a hurried remark:

"Did you see that lady in front of us? Wasn't her bonnet grotesque? Just the shape and colors to make her hideous."

A relieved laugh went around the table. Surely this was better than finding fault with the minister. But Sophy's laugh had a touch of uneasiness in it. For several Sundays she had been trying to school herself not to look at bonnets at church; and this morning, under the impressive sermon, she had not even noticed the offending bonnet almost within range of her eyes.

The boy of fourteen looked up brightly. "We have such a good lesson for Sunday-school to-day."

"I'm glad there's one good one," grumbled his next oldest brother. "I had come to the conclusion that they had picked out the hardest and dryest parts of the Bible for the lessons. Your teacher is such a poke, with his melancholy voice and solemn face, I don't see how you ever like the lessons."

Public opinion again quenched the boy of fourteen. Coming home from church, he had resolved to hurry through dinner that he might give the extra minutes to the study of the lesson; but if it was the dryest part of the Bible, and his teacher a "poke," why should he care for the Sunday-school? Perhaps he ought to be ashamed for staying after Sunday-school last Sunday to talk to the "poke" about something in the lesson. Of course, the big boys knew!

"He has no more sense about asking questions," continued the big boy.

"Your superintendent is a superior man," observed the head of the family. "I noticed in prayer-time this morning how uneasy he was under that long prayer. He couldn't keep his head down through three sentences."

The visitor flushed again. By this time she had almost resolved to be busy elsewhere when the time for family worship should come to night. The listener, who was not a Christian, and who had spent her Sunday morning in reading "George Eliot," pushed her napkin into her ring with considerable energy.

"I didn't go to church this morning, and I do not intend to go to Sunday-school! A sermon that does no good, a prayer that irritates, dry parts of the Bible to study, and a poke to teach it, have no attractions for me."

The others, who were Christians, looked blank.

A blessing had been asked upon the dinner. What about a blessing upon the dinner-table talk?—Maria Hyde, in The Westminster Teacher.

Living at Swatow, China.

OF course, one must eat. During my recent visit to America, I answered certain questions many hundreds of times; and one of these questions was, "What do you eat in China?" We make use, firstly, of available native products. From the water-buffalo and the zebu, animals used here in agricultural labor, milk, in small quantities, and of poor quality, is procured. The Chinese do not themselves use milk, except as a strengthening medicine. In this treaty port, where there are 120 foreign residents, a sufficient number to make the butcher's trade profitable, the zebu is fattened, and the flesh is sold at six cents a pound. Both prejudice and economy deter the Chinese from the slaughter of cattle as food for themselves, but they eat the flesh of such as die by disease or accident. Pork, without which no Chinese feast is served, is rarely used by us, because we know on what garbage the animal has fed. I have not myself partaken of this viand, since, early in my missionary life, I saw a pig feeding on an infant.

Fish of fair quality is usually abundant. Chickens, geese and ducks are always to be had, and eggs, small and watery, because the fowls are ill-fed, are everywhere used. Rice the staple food of the natives, becomes prominent in our meals. Irish potatoes, raised from tubers brought from California, are now cultivated and used by the Chinese, who sell them to us. We have russet pears, oranges and bananas for two-thirds of the year, and during the remainder of the time we have plums, mangoes, and several fruits that have no English names.

Among vegetables, we get from the native gardeners a course, white turnip, stringy sweet potatoes, carrots, bamboo sprouts, and celery; and, if we annually get fresh seed from America, they will raise for us, in winter, cabbages, beets, radishes and lettuce.

Our flour comes from San Francisco, coffee from Java, onions from Bombay, butter from Denmark, raisins from Spain, pickles and hams from London; and all these are sold by purveyors, called compradores, having shops or stores in Swatow. With forethought, a little care, and a knowledge of the art of good housekeeping, one may here have palatable and healthful food, of the sort that habit makes necessary to us, at an expense not exceeding that of living in the United States

I think there are few places in the world where domestic help is so efficient at its cost as here in Southern China. The bound feet of the women make them useless in occupations requiring activity, and men are employed for nearly all in door as well as out-of-door work. Women are engaged for the care of children only. A man whom one has taken in the rough, and trained as cook, often becomes as skilful in the kitchen as his instructress, and remains with her for a lifetime, thankful that she has established him in a vocation wherein he earns twice as much as among his own people. His wages, when serving his foreign teacher, is five or six dollars a month, boarding himself. General housework is done by a trained man for four dollars a month. Washing is a distinct business, the laundrymen doing their work in sheds or in the open air beside creeks or ponds.

A New England woman, "of faculty," would, in her own home, with its many labor-saving inventions, including a cistern and pump, easily do as much housework as is done here by four Chinese domestics.—Miss A. M. Fielde, in the National Baptist.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate
As a Refrigerant Drink in Fevers.

Dr. C. H. S. DAVIS, Meriden, Conn., says: "I have used it as a pleasant and cooling drink in fevers, and have been very much pleased with it."

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Combines, in a manner peculiar to itself, the best blood-purifying and strengthening remedies of the vegetable kingdom. You will find this wonderful remedy effective where other medicines have failed. Try it now. It will purify your blood, regulate the digestion, and give new life and vigor to the entire body.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla did me great good. I was tired out from overwork, and it toned me up." MRS. G. E. SIMMONS, Cohoes, N. Y.

"I suffered three years from blood poison. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and think I am cured." MRS. M. J. DAVIS, Brockport, N. Y.

Purifies the Blood

Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by three peculiarities: 1st, the combination of remedial agents; 2d, the proportion; 3d, the process of securing the active medicinal qualities. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown. Send for book containing additional evidence.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over." J. P. THOMPSON, Register of Deeds, Lowell, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla beats all others, and is worth its weight in gold." I. BARRINGTON, 130 Bank Street, New York City.

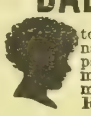
Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Made only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

7% NET Security 3 to 6 times loan. INTEREST semi-annual and paid at your home. 29th year of residence, and 10th of business. No investor ever had to pay taxes, costs of foreclosure, wait for interest, or take land. BEST of References all around you. Write if you have money to loan.
D. S. B. JOHNSTON & SON,
Negotiators of Mortgage Loans.
MENTION THIS PAPER St. Paul, Minn.

BABY'S BIRTHDAY.



A Beautiful Imported Birthday Card sent to any baby whose mother will send us the names of two or more other babies, and their parents' addresses. Also a handsome Diamond Dye Sample Card to the mother and much valuable information. Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt.

TO HAVE HEALTH THE LIVER MUST BE IN ORDER.
DR. SANFORD'S LIVER INVIGORATOR
TRADE MARK
Is a Reliable Remedy for Liver Complaints and ills caused by a deranged or torpid condition of the Liver, as Dyspepsia, Constipation, Biliousness, Jaundice, Headache, Malaria, Rheumatism, etc. It regulates the bowels, purifies the blood, strengthens the system, assists digestion.
AN INVALUABLE FAMILY MEDICINE.
Thousands of testimonials prove its merit.
ANY DRUGGIST WILL TELL YOU ITS REPUTA.

FINANCIAL.

HARVEY FISK & SONS,
28 Nassau Street, New York,
DEALERS IN
UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT
AND
OTHER DESIRABLE SECURITIES
FOR INVESTORS.
ALL STOCKS & BONDS
Listed on the New-York Stock Exchange,
Bought and Sold on Commission for Cash.

Deposit accounts received and interest allowed on monthly balances subject to draft at sight.

Coupons, registered interest, and dividends collected, and placed to credit, for our customers, without charge.

7 PER CENT. INTEREST
FIRST MORTGAGE
FARM LOANS.

Personal acquaintance with lands and values. Over 2,000 loans made. NO CUSTOMER has ever LOST A DOLLAR of principal or interest on any loans made here. Interest collected and sent to you, free of cost, each year. These loans are very safe, and pay nearly U.S. BONDS, I am three times as much as known and recommended by leading business men and clergymen, East and West—men for whom I have been making these investments for TEN YEARS PAST.

REFERENCES.
REV. WM. L. GAGE, D.D., Hartford, Ct.
M. E. GATES, PH.D., LL.D., President Rutgers College, New Brunswick, N. J.
DR. WM. J MILNE, President Geneseo Normal School, Geneseo, N. Y
HON. E. M. TOPLIFF, Manchester, N. H.
REV. JOHN W. RAY, Lake City, Minn
DR. JNO. K. BUCKLYN, Mystic Bridge, Ct.
Importers' and Traders' National Bank, New York.
First National Bank, St. Paul, Minn.
The Congregationalist, Boston, N. Y. Observer, and hundreds of others in all parts of the United States.

All are pleased with my Investments. Circular, references, letters giving experience and testimony of old customers, and a New Map of Dakota sent free on application. Mention this paper. Address

E. P. GATES,
Pres. Merchant's Bank,
Grand Forks, Dakota.

6% 7% 8%
The American Investment Company, incorporated under the laws of Iowa, with a Capital Stock of $1,000,000. Succeeding ORMSBY BROS. & CO., Emmetsburg, Iowa, ORMSBY, CLUTE & CO., Mitchell, Dakota, ORMSBY, GRAVES & CO., Huron, Dakota, Bankers and Mortgage Brokers, offer Guaranteed Mortgages, Debenture and School Bonds. Their Demand Investment Certificates drawing 5 per cent. are attractive for parties with funds idle for a short time. 20 years' experience. Write for pamphlet
Home Office, Emmetsburg, Iowa.
New York Office, 150 Nassau St.

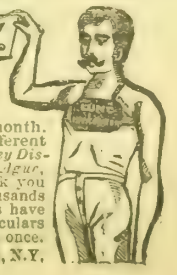
INVEST Through the Sound and Reliable
WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE CO.
F. M. PERKINS, President. LAWRENCE, KAN. L. H. PERKINS, Secretary.
CAPITAL AND SURPLUS, $250,000.
Carefully selected 1st Mortgage Farm Loans payable in N. Y. Unrivalled facilities. Absolute satisfaction. 10 years' experience. No losses. Refer to 3d Nat'l Bank, N.Y. City; Nat'l Bank, Lawrence, Kan.; and Hundreds of Investors. Send for pamphlet, forms and full information. Branch Offices in N.Y. City, Albany & Phila. N.Y. Office, 137 B'way, C.C. Hine & Son, Agts.

KENSINGTON STAMPING OUTFIT FREE!

Being fully aware of the great interest the ladies are taking in Kensington Work, we have prepared a Complete Outfit containing 50 Perforated Stamping Patterns on best government bond parchment Paper, all different, including Sprays of Golden Rod, Pansies, Wild Roses, Forget-me-nots, Thistles, Strawberries, Outlines of Boy, Girl, Bugs, Spiders, Storks Scollops for Skirts, Crazy Stitch Patterns, Crystal Etchings, Borders, Pond Lilies, Tulips, &c., &c., 50 in all, ranging in size from 1 1-4 in. to 7 inches, also 1 Box Blue Stamping Powder, 1 Box White Stamping Powder, 1 Patent reversible Ponsct, and full and complete directions for Kensington Stamping and Embroidery, Kensington Painting, Lustre, Metallic Flitter and Irridescent Painting, Colors used and mixing of Colors, Ribbon Embroidery, Chenille and Arasene Work, Correct Colors of all the different flowers, Description of every stitch used in embroidery, &c., making a Complete Outfit that cannot be bought at retail for less than $4.00. To introduce FARM AND HOUSEHOLD, the large, 32 page Illustrated Magazine devoted to the Interests of the Country Home and Household, we will send one of these Outfits complete free and postpaid, to any lady who will send 25c. for 3 mos. subscript. to the Magazine. Five for $1. Money cheerfully refunded if not more than satisfactory. Address
FARM AND HOUSEHOLD, Box 49, Hartford, Conn.

CARDS 60 Fancy Pictures, and 25 elegant Cards in Gilt Edge, Silk Fringe, Hidden Name, &c., 1 Songster, 1 $50 Prize Puzzle, and 8 parlor games, all for 10cts. Game of Authors, 10cts.
IVORY CO., Clintonville, Conn.

FAIR AND HONEST.



If you are sick or ailing no matter what your complaint, write to us and we will send you On Trial one of our large Electric Medicated Appliances to suit your case, provided you agree to pay for it, if it cures you in one month. If it does not cure you it costs you nothing to try it. Different Appliances to cure Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Diseases, Piles, Lung Diseases, Asthma, Catarrh, Lame Back, Agur, Debility, and many other diseases. Remember we do not ask you to buy them blindly but merely to try them at our risk. Thousands of cures made monthly in cases where all other treatments have failed. Price very low. Illustrated book giving full particulars and blank for statement of your case sent free. Address at once.
ELECTRIC PAD M'F'G CO., 564 STATE STREET., BROOKLYN, N.Y.

An efficient yet mild detergent without any of the objectionable properties of ordinary soaps, is what recommends the Ivory to intelligent and discriminating people. Its cheapness brings it within the reach of every one.

Free of charge. A full size cake of Ivory Soap will be sent to any one who can not get it of their grocer, if six two-cent stamps, to pay postage, are sent to Procter & Gamble, Cincinnati. Please mention this paper.

JUST ISSUED

BY THE

Presbyterian Board of Publication.

Half-Hours with the Lessons of 1886.

Forty-eight short sermons on the lessons of 1886 by twenty-four prominent Pastors and Preachers.

Specially prepared to aid Superintendents and Teachers.

12mo. Price, in cloth binding, $1.25. Paper binding, 85c.

Westminster Question Book for 1886.

A manual for teachers and older scholars, containing the Text of the Lesson, Helps for Scholars, Questions, Lesson Plan, Golden Text, Home Studies and Catechism.

Price, 15 cents, net.

My Soul, Thou Hast Much Goods.

BY HELEN R. EDSON.

24mo. Fancy Paper Cover. Price, 25 cents

Golden Promises.

SELECTED FROM GOD'S WORD.

BY REV. SAMUEL FULTON.

24mo. Fancy Paper Cover. Price, 25 cents.

Address orders to

JOHN A. BLACK, Business Sup't,

1334 CHESTNUT ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Or, Ward & Drummond, 116 Nassau St., New York, N. Y.

THE NEW MUSICAL

CURRICULUM

BY GEO. F. ROOT.

A Piano Instructor

that has never been excelled.

The regular retail price is $3.00 a copy by mail, postpaid. We will send to any MUSIC TEACHER for examination, a single sample copy, postage paid, on receipt of two dollars.

EXAMINE it yourself and be convinced of its superiority.

Specimen PAGES FREE.

PUBLISHED BY

The John Church Co., CINCINNATI, OHIO.

R. H. MACY & CO.,

14TH STREET, SIXTH AVE., AND 13TH STREET NEW YORK.

GRAND CENTRAL FANCY AND DRY GOODS ESTABLISHMENT.

Special Sale of Ladies' and Children's

MUSLIN

UNDERWEAR,

all of our own manufacture and design. Our prices are the lowest in the country.

Rare bargains in

LINENS

and Housekeeping Goods, our own direct importation.

Unapproachable bargains in

BLACK AND COLORED

Silks and Dress Goods.

Our prices below all competition.

Tremendous mark-down in

SUITS AND CLOAKS.

Our Entire Stock at Lower Prices than ever before known.

Special Care Given to Mail Orders.

R. H. MACY & CO.

THE ASSOCIATED CHARITIES OF THE

1342 Churches of London

after investigating the value of

MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD

have adopted it as the one thing most needed in restoring the sick to health, and it is given by their visiting committees.

Many of the Churches of Boston, Cleveland and other cities, have done the same for several years.

Clergymen use it to relieve Exhaustion, Dyspepsia and Constipation.

Any Clergyman wishing to try it, we will deliver to any Boston express samples free.

☞ IN GENERAL USE of all Governments, Hospitals and Physicians that have tried it, and in 52 of the leading Hospitals of London.

Murdock Liquid Food Co., Boston.

MAKE YOUR OWN INCUBATOR.

Send 50 cents in stamps for my new illustrated pamphlet which tells how to make an Incubator at a very small cost that will hatch over 90 per cent of the eggs. It also tells all about how to make Artificial Mothers, Egg Testers, etc. They are all simple, easy to make and do excellent work, and are guaranteed reliable. Address

H. S. WALDO, Quincy, Ill.

Choice Plymouth Rock Eggs for sale at $1.25 per 13

NOVELTY RUG MACHINE.

(Pat. Dec. 27, 1881.) For making Rugs, Tidies, Hoods, Mittens, etc. Sent by mail, full directions. $1. AGENTS WANTED. Man'frs Stamped Rug Patterns on Burlap. Beware of infringements. Send for circular. E. ROSS & CO., Toledo, Ohio.

FINE SILKS AND VELVETS.

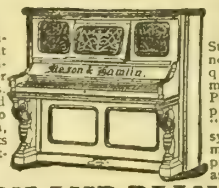
JAMES M'CREERY & CO.

offer their very large and valuable stock during this month at a very heavy reduction in prices. This opportunity is the most favorable that can be presented for the purchase of Reliable and Desirable Goods, and they advise their customers, both in and out of the city, to make their selections as soon as possible.

Broadway and Eleventh Street, New York.

Mason & Hamlin

ORGANS: Highest Honors at all Great World's Exhibitions for eighteen years. One hundred Styles, $22. to $900. For Cash, Easy Payments or Rented. Catalogues free.



PIANOS: New mode of Stringing. Do not require one-quarter as much tuning as Pianos on the prevailing "wrest-pin" system. Remarkable for purity of tone and durability.

ORGAN AND PIANO CO.

154 Tremont St., Boston. 46 E. 14th St. (Union Sq.), N. Y. 149 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

KNABE

PIANOFORTES.

UNEQUALLED IN

Tone, Touch, Workmanship and Durability.

WILLIAM KNABE & CO.,

Nos. 204 and 206 West Baltimore Street, Baltimore. No. 112 Fifth Avenue, N. Y.

LEGGAT BROS.,

CHEAPEST BOOK STORE IN THE WORLD.

989,999 MAGNIFICENT GIFT AND GORGEOUS JUVENILE BOOKS ALMOST GIVEN AWAY. GRAND HOLIDAY CATALOGUE FREE. IMMENSE TERMS TO SUNDAY-SCHOOLS, ETC.

81 Chambers St.,

Third door west of City Hall.

LE PAGE'S LIQUID GLUE

UNEQUALLED FOR CEMENTING WOOD, GLASS, CHINA, PAPER, LEATHER, &c. Awarded GOLD MEDAL, LONDON, 1883. Used by Mason & Hamlin Organ and Piano Co., Pullman Palace Car Co., &c. Mf'd only by the RUSSIA CEMENT CO., GLOUCESTER, MASS. SOLD EVERYWHERE. ☞ Sample Tin Can by Mail, 25c.

Is Good Health

A desirable possession for wives and mothers? Then remember that Willcox & Gibbs Automatic Sewing Machine is the only one that can be used without serious risk to health.

Willcox & Gibbs S. M. Co., 658 Broadway, N. Y.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

GOLD MEDAL PARIS EXPOSITION—1878.

ATLANTIC

Mutual Insurance Co.

NEW YORK OFFICE, 51 WALL STREET

ORGANIZED 1842.

Insures against Marine and Inland Navigation Risks.

And will issue Policies making Loss payable in England.

Assets for the Security of its Policies are more than TEN MILLION DOLLARS.

The profits of the Company revert to the assured and are divided annually, upon the Premiums terminated during the year, Certificates for which are issued, bearing interest in accordance with its Charter.

J. D. JONES, President.
CHARLES DENNIS, Vice President
W. H. H. MOORE, 2d Vice Pres't.
A. A. RAVEN 3d Vice Pres't.
J. H. CHAPMAN, Secretary.

CONTINENTAL Insurance Co.

Continental Buildings
100 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

Cor. COURT and MONTAGUE STS., BROOKLYN
106 BROADWAY, BROOKLYN, E.D.

Insures against loss by Fire at reasonable rates.

Reserve for re-insurance (Fire Risks)	$1,928,299 35
do do do (Inland ")	25,394 75
Reserve ample for all other claims	449,586 00
Capital paid in cash	1,000,000 00
Net surplus	1,535,221 82
Total Cash Assets, Jan. 1, 1885.	$4,938,501 92

This Company conducts its business under the restrictions of the New York Safety Fund Law. The two Safety Funds together equal $1,200,000.

H. H. LAMPORT, President.
CYRUS PECK, Secretary.

HOME INSURANCE COMPANY

OF NEW YORK.

OFFICE, No. 119 BROADWAY.

Sixty-fourth Semi-Annual Statement, Showing the Condition of the Company on the first day of July, 1885.

CASH CAPITAL	$3,000,000 00
Reserve Premium Fund	2,839,742 00
Reserve for Unpaid Losses and Claims	389,513 48
Net Surplus	1,030,802
Cash Assets	$7,260,058 32

SUMMARY OF ASSETS

Cash in Banks	$134,241 23
Bonds and Mortgages, being first lien on Real Estate	971,950 00
United States Stocks (market value)	2,882,235 00
Bank and Railroad Stocks and Bonds (market value)	1,581,772 50
State and City Bonds (market value)	222,000 00
Loans on Stocks, payable on demand	123,600 00
Interest due on 1st July, 1885	43,087
Premiums uncollected and in hands of Agents	340,835
Real Estate	960,337 88
Total	$7,260,0583

CHAS. J. MARTIN, President.
J. H. WASHBURN, Secretary

THE LINE SELECTED BY THE U. S. GOV'T TO CARRY THE FAST MAIL.

Burlington Route C.B.&Q.R.R.

It is the only line with its own track from

CHICAGO TO DENVER,

Either by way of Omaha, Pacific Junc., St. Joseph, Atchison or Kansas City.

It connects in Union Depots with through trains from NEW YORK, PHILADELPHIA, BOSTON and all Eastern points. It is the principal line to

SAN FRANCISCO, PORTLAND & CITY OF MEXICO

It traverses all of the six great States of ILLINOIS IOWA, MISSOURI, NEBRASKA, KANSAS, COLORADO with branch lines to all their important cities and towns.

From CHICAGO, PEORIA or ST. LOUIS, it runs every day in the year from one to three elegantly equipped through trains over its own tracks between

Chicago and Denver,
Chicago and Omaha,
Chicago and Council Bluffs
Chicago and St. Joseph,
Chicago and Atchison
Chicago and Kansas City,
Chicago and Topeka,
Chicago and Cedar Rapids,
Chicago and Sioux City,
Peoria and Council Bluffs,
Peoria and Kansas City,
St. Louis and Omaha,
St. Louis and St. Paul,
Kansas City and Denver,
Kansas City and St. Paul,
Kansas City and Omaha,

For all points in Northwest, West and Southwest.

Its equipment is complete and first class in every particular, and at all important points Interlocking Switches and Signals are used, thus insuring comfort and safety.

For Tickets, Rates, General Information, etc. regarding the Burlington Route, call on any Ticket Agent in the United States or Canada, or address

T. J. POTTER 1st V.P. & GEN. MGR., CHICAGO.
HENRY B. STONE, ASST. GEN. MGR., CHICAGO.
PERCEVAL LOWELL, GEN. PASS. AGT., CHICAGO.

EQUITABLE MORTGAGE COMPANY.

CAPITAL, $100,000. (Paid up.)

Aggregate capital and surplus of our associated corporations, $325,000.

7% WESTERN FARM MORTGAGES 7%

In Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, and Nebraska.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST

GUARANTEED.

Send for further information. REFERENCES: Send for further information.

First National Bank, N. Y.; B. E. Tifft, 921 Chestnut St. Phila.; Hon. Redfield Proctor, Rutland, Vt.; J. W. White, Nashua, N. H.; Kendall Bros., Reading, Pa.; Col. Lee Chamberlain, Albany, N. Y.; Rev. S. W. Boardman, Stanhope, N. J.; H. H. Fitch, 23 Court St., Boston, Mass.; Hon. S. S. Lacey, Marshall, Mich.; Gen. R. B. Crawford, Norwalk, O.

NEW YORK, 135, 137 B'way. OFFICES. PHILADELPHIA, Pa., 112 S. 4th St.
BOSTON, Mass. 23 Court St. KANSAS CITY, Mo., 9th & Walnut Sts.

J. B. WATKINS LAND MORTGAGE CO.

Capital, $750,000. Surplus, $100,000.

FARM MORTGAGES. 7% INTEREST GUARANTEED

PAYABLE BY HALF-YEARLY GUARANTEED COUPONS AT

NATIONAL BANK OF COMMERCE IN NEW YORK.

10,994 Mortgages negotiated, aggregating - - - $7,223,800

Amount of Interest and Principal paid on day of maturity, 4,118,272

Six per cent. Real Estate Mortgage Bonds, principal and interest FULLY GUARANTEED. Security SEVEN fold. For sale at our New York Office.

☞ SEND FOR PAMPHLET FORMS AND TESTIMONIALS. ☜

Address J. B. WATKINS L. M. CO., Lawrence, Kansas.

Or HENRY DICKINSON, New York Manager, 243 Broadway.

The Christian Intelligencer.

Een-dracht maakt macht.

VOL. LVII.—No. 3. WHOLE No. 2895. NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 20 1886. $2.65 A YEAR IN ADVANCE No. 48 CHURCH STREET.

EDITORS: Rev. JOHN M. FERRIS, D.D. Rev. N. H. VAN ARSDALE.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR: MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

REPORTS OF CRIME, such as appear daily in the papers, are said to be necessary as a faithful picture of life. But, not being accompanied with reports of the existing virtue, they are not faithful. Of some towns we receive only the criminal record.

THE GOVERNOR proposes to abolish the Regents of the University, but the proposition is not favorably regarded, and we are glad of it. There would be no pecuniary gain in the measure. What is now done by the Regents would require to be done by somebody, and another officer would be paid more. Besides, there is a wide field open to the Regents. They cannot make a university. Means and opportunity are wanting. Nor can they control the colleges or bring them up to a common high standard. Too many charters and local and other interests are in the way. But the whole department of preparatory instruction is under their control. Here they have done much good, but more is attainable. There should be a first-rate academy in every county—one that should be the culminating point of all the county schools, should never think of becoming a college or cherish any desire that way, and should seek to make itself in thoroughness and discipline the equal of any endowed school in the land. Here is a most important work. The curse of the day is the inadequate preparation young men make for college. Whoso contributes to render this preparation what it ought to be, is so far a benefactor of his generation.

"WE CAN HOLD A MISSION, but cannot produce a revival," the Rev. Mr. Aitken is said to have replied to one expressing a hope that the remarkable mid-day services in Trinity Church would result in a great awakening. Dr. Spencer used to say often to persons inclined to urge this or that measure at the beginning or during the course of a revival, "Let God be God. Don't you try to be God." All experience teaches that God blesses in His own time, and it also teaches that no earnest, sincere endeavor to awaken men to the supreme importance of their relations to God, to a consciousness of their unworthiness and to a conviction of their need of saving faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, is ever in vain. The months of harvest are as sure to come as in the world of nature. Experience also teaches that it is wise to engage prudent and candid evangelists, who are qualified for the work expected of them. Evangelists to-day as a class are free from some of the blemishes which detracted from the usefulness of not a few of them twenty and more years ago. Those of to-day are men of excellent gifts and attainments, and each year supplies additional proof of their usefulness. It would be easy to mention a score of blessed revivals of past years which began with the work of an evangelist. Besides, these efforts made to secure the attention of non-churchgoers of all classes, these manifestations of interest in them, of desire to win them to Christ, are just such as the Church ought to make. As the wonderful works of our Lord drew a multitude to hear His more wonderful words, so these special services attract men who have cared for none of these things, to listen to truths of more value than all other things. The result is not doubtful. If nothing else is secured such an expression of interest in the souls of men will win their respect and confidence. They know, they ought to know, that such an interest is just what the Church ought to show if it really believes the truths it professes. But that will not be the only fruit. Lasting impressions will be, in fact have already been, made upon many hearts; consciences have been and will be enlightened, strengthened and animated, and, though it may not be evident at once except to keen observers, it will become plain before long that a new life has been begun. As on the earth sunrise is preceded by a long twilight in one region and by almost none at all in another, so the rising of the Sun of Righteousness is foretokened in the world of human souls.

WHILE HEARTILY INTERESTED in the special efforts made at present to increase the zeal of those believing in our Saviour and to arouse those far from Christ to a sense of their relations to God, their unfaithfulness and disobedience, and their need of the propitiation offered on the cross, the missionary work of the Church should not be forgotten and neglected. The new impulse given to devotion to the Lord's work in our own land, by the noble opportunity presented in the Northwestern States and Territories, should not produce inattention to the fields in foreign lands where the Church has received such large encouragement by the blessing of God on her endeavors. The Missions of the Church at home and abroad are to be maintained and extended, deserve and ought to have always a place in our hearts. They are calling upon us for larger gifts, a more generous support, to provide for a growth that is substantial and full of promise. The favor of our Lord is indispensable to the success of the special efforts in behalf of the worldly, careless and mistaken souls around the churches in which we worship, and the conditions on which the presence of the Lord is to be enjoyed He has distinctly declared. He says to us: "All power is given unto Me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations: Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." He says also, as we look upward for a blessing: "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." The favor of God is not to be bought indeed by gifts of money; but God does bless a cheerfully obedient spirit, if not with temporal certainly with spiritual mercies.

THE POPE has declared a jubilee for this year of 1886. Coming from that quarter it is, of course, not a jubilee in a Scriptural sense. It does not mark or celebrate fifty years of anything. It is simply a Roman, or in properly descriptive words, a Pagan jubilee. The celebration consists in twice visiting "the Basilica of St. Peter, St. John Lateran, and St. Mary Major," in Rome, and there praying "for some time for the prosperity and exaltation of the Catholic Church and this Apostolic See, for the extinction of heresies, and the conversion of all who wander from the fold; for concord among Christian sovereigns, and for peace and unity among the entire faithful people." The suppliants are also to fast two days, "using only the aliments allowed on fasting days." They must confess their sins, "receive the most Holy Eucharist and give, in accordance with their individual means, and after consulting their confessor, a sum of money for some good work destined to propagate and promote the Catholic faith." To those performing these conditions, the encyclical says, "Relying on the mercy of God, and on the authority of the blessed Apostles Peter and Paul, by virtue of that power of loosing and binding which the Lord hath entrusted to us, albeit unworthy, we grant to all and every person, of both sexes, of Christ's faithful, in the form of a general jubilee, the fullest pardon of their sins." For all those who cannot go to Rome, the vicars or officials are authorized to select three churches to be visited twice or two churches to be visited thrice, where "the pious works above enumerated" are to be fulfilled. Provision is also made for "regulars bound to perpetual enclosure," such as nuns, for prisoners and infirm persons, even "children who have not made their first communion." For such their confessors can make "a commutation into other good works." The letter closes with these words: "Finally, let us all be most careful, during this time of Jubilee, to merit well of the great Mother of our God by their pious services. For it is our will that this Jubilee should be made in honor of Our Lady of the Rosary. We hope that there will be many whose souls, by her aid, will be enabled to lay aside their load of sin and obtain such a renewal of faith, piety and justice as may afford them not only a firm hope of life eternal, but a beginning of lasting peace on earth." The generosity of this document extends beyond this world, for it also engages, "this jubilary indulgence we allow to be applied by way of suffrage to all souls who have departed this life, bound to God by ties of charity."

This, in this nineteenth century, when millions of men have the Word of God in their hands, on almost every page rebuking and condemning such blasphemous arrogance! Those who accept and comply with this unscriptural and wicked letter will not be "Christ's faithful," but will dishonor Christ and His work. If Peter and Paul could rise from their graves they would make the world ring with their denunciation of these wicked and delusive assumptions.

The Indian Question.

THE venerable Latin motto, Festina lente, make haste slowly, is worthy of constant remembrance. Even when the house is on fire deliberate action is the best. To do this or that in a hurry is generally to do it badly, imperfectly, so that the doing must be repaired afterwards or supplemented or even undone and done over. It is wise to move deliberately in conducting Indian affairs, and such was the action proposed which the last House of Representatives, for purely partisan reasons, refused to take up and decide.

Some men who have recently come into fellowship with those who have been gathering experience in Indian matters for years, would have the Indians forced immediately into taking lands in severalty. Such is not the intention of the Dawes-Coke bill, which for two years has been and is now the measure approved by those who have had the largest and longest experience in the management of the Reservations and who know the Indians, their wants and present capacity, more perfectly than the recent recruits do. The bill, approved by the Senate after a careful discussion, originating with a Northern Republican and modified and perfected by a Southern Democrat, being therefore neither partisan nor sectional, secures time for the preparation of the tribes to hold land in severalty and for the division of the lands. It gives twenty-five years to the accomplishment of this wise proposition.

The bill provides that the United States shall secure to the tribes the possession of their reservations for twenty-five years. It amounts to saying, "Emigration is pressing upon your lands on every side. Every year increases the pressure. The United States promises to maintain you in possession for twenty-five years, but cannot make any promise for a longer time. We have guaranteed these lands to you by treaties. We now tell you frankly the time is rapidly coming when we will no longer be able to perform the engagements of these treaties to the letter. We will protect you for the next twenty-five years if necessary. We hope you will not make it necessary. We advise you to select farms to be held by you as individuals. When this is done we will sell the remainder of your lands, put the price in the national treasury and pay you interest on it for schools or such improvements as may be for your benefit."

The bill directs that the Reservations shall be surveyed, divided into sections, and that each Indian shall have the privilege of selecting a certain number of acres, which shall be his inalienable possession for twenty years. After the Indians have chosen their farms, the remainder of the Reserve is to be sold and the money received to be invested in obligations of the Government bearing interest, and this annual interest is to be expended for the benefit of the tribe owning the Reservation. This virtually fulfills the treaties.

The bill is a wise one. It was allowed to die in Committee by the House for purely partisan reasons, in common with other wise and necessary measures. The last House, being of the opposite party, was determined to enact nothing out of which a Republican administration might acquire honor. The want of time was given as the reason for inaction. There was time enough.

It is not probable that twenty-five years will be required to make the proposed disposition of Indian lands. There is no lack of shrewdness among the Indians. As soon as the proposition is explained to them and the lands surveyed, sagacious men among them will soon make their selections of homesteads, and other men will see that unless they choose their portions immediately the best lands will be taken up and the less desirable only be left. It is quite certain that the tribes which are prepared to own and manage homesteads, will make their selections in a few years, probably in less than five years. To those not ready for a profitable use of such property time is allowed to become prepared.

But to urge that the Indians shall be compelled to assume lands in severalty at once is unjust and impolitic. It is a plain violation of the treaties we have voluntarily entered into—a violation both of the letter and the spirit of those engagements. It is impolitic and cruel, because about one-half of the Indians are not prepared to cultivate farms with profit to themselves or anybody else. They are savages and must be taught. It is proper to bring them under such pressure as drives other men to learn the occupations of civilized people. To support these Indians in idleness, by providing them with rations, blankets, and some such luxuries as tobacco, is thoroughly unwise. It demoralizes them as it would anybody. They become under such treatment lazy, shiftless loafers, continue to be brutal savages, and are encouraged to make preposterous claims. It is such Indians who set out on raids, murder the defenceless, destroy property, and fill a large area with terror, arresting industry and compelling men to turn aside from their pursuits and to organize and drill and go on guard for the defence of their homes. Now to supply all the wants of such savages and to shield them from the necessity to labor for bread to eat is to follow a course separated by only a narrow line from positive instruction in base and immoral practices. This policy cannot be abandoned too soon.

But still the necessity of preparation for even a low grade of civilized life faces us and must be removed. Here the Church has a work to do, which she ought to undertake gladly. It is the fact that the Indians prepared to own and improve homesteads are almost exclusively those who have had the instruction of Christian missions. And if those who have had no such privilege are to be made ready for citizenship and for a life of intelligent industry, it must be by like education. The field ought to be a tempting one. The conditions are especially favorable, and the work is one the churches can do easily. Why is it that no one opens a Mission amongst the Apaches? a people of many fine traits, of strong character, superior resolution and courage.

President Gates has published as a pamphlet a paper read by him last summer before the Social Science Congress, entitled "Land and Law," in which the matter of distributing lands in severalty among the Indians and that of bringing them under the laws of territories and States, and of admitting them to citizenship, is each thoroughly and clearly discussed. It is a paper especially timely, worthy of the attention of all interested in the future of our American Indians.

"Old Colony" Papers.

THE CONVERTS OF PENTECOST.

THEY were indefatigable worshippers. They were found "daily in the Temple." Sabbath services were not enough for their hungering and thirsting souls. It was an incomplete day, in which they did not tread the courts of the Lord's house. There at the morning and the evening sacrifice this little company of Nazarenes might be observed in a separate group, bending reverently towards the Holy of holies. To these men despised and wondered at, what a new and fresh significance had those sacred types and ceremonies! When they saw the sacrificial victim led meekly in, and then laid quivering upon the altar, their thoughts went tenderly back to Calvary and to Him who was "led like a lamb to the slaughter." The rent curtain in front of the Shekinah recalled the true Priest, who had passed through the veil of the parted heavens to make intercession for them. Those things which were to their countrymen a barrier to the reception of Jesus, because a substitute for Him, were to them only a transparent and illuminated medium through which they saw Him walking amid the golden candlesticks. Perhaps they clung the more to the Temple from a half-defined feeling that all this was passing away. These things were but shadows which the new morning was fast scattering. But till the day dawned and the shadows fled away, they would betake themselves to the mountain of myrrh and the hill of frankincense.

God makes His House a test of His people. He puts the day and the place on a level of sanctity, saying, "Ye shall honor my Sabbaths, and reverence my sanctuary." If we are born of God, His House will be our earthly home. Its very dust and stones will be precious. Its ordinances will be sweeter than honey, and richer than gold. They may be marred or diluted by the presumptuous or feeble hands which administer them. They may be threadbare and dull, and may even grate upon our intellectual or æsthetic tastes. They may be formal and ostentatious, on the part both of minister and people. But the pious will recognize the service as primarily a matter of obedience and reverence to God; and where essential truth is present, they will never fail to draw a sufficiency of spiritual nourishment and profit.

These children of the Spirit continued equally steadfast in private and social prayer. And unless they were different from all other disciples, we touch just here the pulsating heart of their religion. Around prayer, as a citadel, all the defences and approaches of their lives concentered. Alone and trembling in a world already resounding with the wolfish howl of the persecutor, yet I venture to say that the chief burden of their petitions was for spiritual light and strength to know Christ better, and to be fitted for the work which He had given them to do. As the strongholds of Satan rose before them one above another with bristling ramparts, they might well quail before the prospect and hasten to lay hold upon the arm of Him, who while pointing them the way had said: "All power is given to me in heaven and on earth." He gives to His praying ones both power and rest.

It is not to be wondered at, that having found Jesus at the prayer-meeting they should instinctively go there to find Him again, and should feel that the place where they first recorded their vows was the best place to renew them. No mere means of grace, excepting only the truth itself, can be called indispensable. But the Lord will surely send leanness into the souls of those who, when He has set a table before them in the wilderness of the work-day week, allow any reason which is not of His own making to keep them away from His house.

I never knew any one come to prayer-meeting enough to get much good from it, who did not make it a matter of habit. He who leaves it to the sport of circumstances, a mere question of convenience or inclination at the moment, will soon stay away altogether. Only they can be counted on, who set a mark against that particular hour, holding it as sacredly engaged.

Another means of grace, of which those eager and earnest disciples frequently availed themselves, was "the breaking of bread." This may mean the agapæ, or love-feasts, and may also include the act of breaking bread which accompanied the blessing asked over ordinary meals. But it points chiefly to the Lord's Supper as a very frequent celebration. It fed alike their faith and love and hope. It was Christ's wedding-ring whereon His youthful Bride, the Church, wanted often to look in her early separation from Him whom her soul loved. It was an unspeakable bond of sympathy among the disciples. It nerved their courage for the cup which so many of them were to share with their Lord. And it was a standing testimony, a mute but eloquent appeal, to an unbelieving and murderous world.

Nor has the fine gold of that symbol of espousals become dimmed by eighteen hundred and fifty years of use. It is just as precious to-day in the eyes of His saints, and as fragrant with the memory of Him whose cheeks are as sweet flowers, His lips like the red lilies of Syria dropping myrrh, His countenance like Lebanon fringed with its goodly cedars, and who is as a roe or a young hart upon the mountains of spices. I regard the Lord's Supper as one of the most effectual touchstones of religious character, both as respects those who come to it and those who stay away. As a man eateth, so is he. According as we prize it, as we relish it, and as we grow upon it; according as it rises in our estimation from a form into a sacrament and a communion; according as it becomes transfigured from a mere table with a little bread and wine into the backward shadow of the cross and the pledge of a complete salvation,—will it mark the place our steps have reached in our pilgrimage from the world's revelings and banquetings to the Marriage Supper of the Lamb.

If one has drunk at a spring whose waters have proved refreshing in the hour of intense thirst and even saved him from perishing, he will be quite certain to regard that fountain of life with peculiar affection, and resort to it again and again. On this principle, doubtless, those who had received the Word from Peter's lips "continued steadfastly in the Apostle's doctrine,"—that is, took every opportunity of obtaining further instruction from him and his colleagues.

Our modern Pentecosts, to be sure, are unprovided with Apostles. Yet the humble and sincere convert will display the same docile spirit, and will pay the same earnest heed to his spiritual guides. The Church will be his Bethlehem, a "house of bread." And the plainest sermon, if it be filled with the marrow of the Gospel, will be welcomed by him, not as a critic, but as nutriment and stimulus for his spiritual nature. He will continue steadfast in the doctrine of his own pastor and spiritual father. There may be more attractive "pulpit orators" elsewhere. This one may not be specially congenial to his particular tastes. He may have many duties and hindrances which render it a burden to the flesh to always attend church or prayer-meeting. Yet the pentecostal convert will be found at his post to receive the pastor's teachings, which, however feeble and "foolish" they may seem to others, have proved to his own soul the wisdom and power of God unto salvation.

These early converts continued with equal steadfastness in the Apostles' "fellowship." They would seem to have followed them about and clung to them, for their presence was a continuous apostolic benediction. They had been with Jesus, and to be in their company was the next thing to being with Jesus themselves. There is no more beautiful and hopeful sign in a young Christian than a disposition to seek the society of those who are riper in religious knowledge and experience.

Religious fellowship is a great lack in our day, under which the Church grows lean and pallid. They that love the Lord do not "speak often one to another," and therefore the Lord does not "hearken and hear them" when they speak with Him. For if they spoke out of the abundance of the heart in the latter case, how could they keep silence in the former? As the matter has been familiarly illustrated, "Christians are like the spokes of a wheel, the nearer they approach the centre the nearer they approach each other." The closer our communion with Christ, the readier our communications are likely to be with His saints. The breaking down of barriers and a freedom to speak of, or rather to speak out, our religion are among the most marked signs of revival. And this is doubtless a principle reason why religion is so much more a delight at such times.

But why should we not be always living Christians, who need no reviving? Why spasmodic in any grace or duty? We need both to sanctify our social life, and to socialize our religious life; not only to write the first and great commandment over our houses and stores and farms, but to write the second, which is like unto it, upon our churches. Then shall our churches become homes, and our homes be all churches. Religion shall walk among men like its founder, not less heavenly because veiling its divine aspect under the kindly glance and cordial word and outstretched hand of human fellowship. F. N. ZABRISKIE.

THE REVISED VERSION of the Old Testament appears to have the approval of scholars. The Regius Professor of Hebrew at Oxford, Dr. S. K. Driver, gives this emphatic testimony:

"I know that it contains renderings with which I disagree. I know, also, that there are cases in in which I would gladly have seen what is now in the margin introduced into the text; but I know, besides, that for one rendering in the Revised Version with which (perhaps wrongly) I disagree, there are ten in the Authorized Version which I am sure are positively incorrect and misleading, and a hundred where, though serious error cannot be imputed, the sense is more accurately and faithfully reflected in the Revised Version."

Letter from a Veteran.

FAR ROCKAWAY, L. I., January 13th, 1886.

DEAR CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER: In your paper of 6th inst., I read in "Old Colony" Papers, under date December 29th, 1885, speaking of the Deaths of the Half Year, this announcement: "The last surviving officer of the War of 1812, Major Aaron Stafford, died at Waterville, N. Y., in the 99th year of his age." Allow me to correct that, by stating that I am a surviving officer of the War of 1812, having been commissioned on the 29th of July, 1813, as ensign in the Sixth Regiment, U. S. Infantry, and continuing in the service fifteen consecutive years (less three months), and leaving the service, by my own voluntary act of resignation, with the "brevet rank as captain for ten years' faithful services in one grade," that of first lieutenant, 1st May, 1828. So, "there is one more of the same sort left." There may be others; I do not know of any.

I am now close upon the end of the ninetieth year of my age. The last day of February next, if I live till then, will close the account that much to that date, my birthday having been on the last day of February, 1796; that was leap year, and February had twenty-nine days in it.

This is but a passing event, but it is well to have statements correct when it is practicable.

Very respectfully, yours very truly,

WALTER BICKER.

Suggestive.

"NIGHT UNTO NIGHT SHEWETH KNOWLEDGE."

Let there be light: His Spirit waketh
Out of its sleep
The dark void deep.
Then light, born of His word, He taketh,
The angel of His will,
His mandate to fulfil.
The flame His minister He maketh.

Swifter than runs the swiftest river,
The subtle ray
Flashes its way;
Swifter than shaft from archer's quiver.
If daring numbers sought
To measure, they are nought;
Swifter than aught but thought's quick shiver.

What thought of man the two combineth,
Imagining
That it can bring
In one, whence light came, whither shineth?
Its milestones are the years
Shot past ere light appears
On our dim sight. So it divineth.

We hail the morn, how little dreaming
That wealth of good,
In endless flood,
From myriad suns on us is streaming.
Dazed by the nearest sun,
As if the only one,
It is light's source to our seeming.

But down the west with regal splendor,
And out the gate,
In gorgeous state,
Goes he, and falls the evening tender.
Then from the ether far
Star shineth after star,
In beauty delicate and slender.

And then we see, by night's sweet showing
Grandly revealed,
What day concealed,
Ten thousand streams of glory flowing,
That never cease to flow;
But only night can show
What lavish light God is bestowing.

—Rev. Alexander R. Thompson, D.D., in Sunday-School Times.

PROHIBITION.—It is no wonder that prohibitionists grow impatient, when told for the ten-hundredth time "You cannot make men sober by act of Parliament." It has never been proposed nor thought of to do this. Men are sober—sober by nature, not sober by either law or suasion. The aim of prohibition is to so correct the statute by the Decalogue, that men shall not be made drunk "by act of Parliament." It is good not to do anything by the ballot, or by legislation, "Whereby thy brother stumbleth, or is offended, or is made weak." Again, it is no wonder at all that Dr. Cuyler (heaven bless the veteran) was driven from his base by the foolishness of those who refuse "to give a dime for circulating temperance Sunday-school books," on the ground that "all that kind of work is behind the times." No error could be more absurd. Maine came near losing her prohibitory law, years ago, by simply intermitting the primary, educational, and moral work. Just as soon as a generation arises that knows not the alphabet of this reform, then the shadow goes back on the dial of progress. What the country needs now, is not so much prohibitionists or moral suasionists, as a great host of intelligent, level headed men who are both. And the host is coming. A rising tide has set in; not a tidal wave, but a deepening, widening, on sweeping, steady current, which is better. We must hope for partial success, and work for immediate results; catch the plow-point into the stony turf wher ever we can; turn a spadeful if no more, and labor on with patience, all the while hoping that eventually the whole field will be plowed over, beam deep, sown with the good seed of total abstinence and prohibition, and fructified by the warm light of intelligence, and showers of fertilizing knowledge.—A. P. B., in The Evangelist.

HEALING BY FAITH.—The sickness of not a few of the persons supposed to have been miraculously healed has been protracted, if not originally caused, by a lack of faith in their own powers and refusal to exert them. Many a poor man is bed-ridden to day, who, if he could only be made to believe he could walk, could walk. A man may as well be a cripple as to be under the inexorable belief that he cannot move his limbs. In an article on Faith Healing, in the last Contemporary Review, Dr. Moxon says:

When people's own supply of faith is so deficient that they fail utterly to realize their power over their own cases, then it is that whoever or whatever can suddenly or gradually increase their faith is able to restore their power. The law may be formulated thus—in so far as the disease is a lack of faith, in just that degree is the cure an act of faith-healing.

He gives, in illustration, the case of a boy sent to him for treatment who, by a fall injuring his spine, had been "totally paralyzed in the legs for five years, and when he came to the hospital he could not feel when his legs were touched or pinched, nor could he move them in the least degree." By dint of threatening, coaxing and bribing, the doctor induced him to "walk, leaning upon and pushing a chair before him. In two weeks he was able to run races in the hospital park." If this boy had received the same treatment at Lourdes or Bethshan, in addition to the praying and anointing, and had been cured, he would have been proclaimed as a shining example of miraculous healing.—The Advance.

THE SILVER QUESTION.—The Commercial, Cincinnati, has advocated the coinage of the silver dollar vigorously, but has recently published such sound advice as this:

The line between the sound and unsound is easily and sharply drawn. It is precisely at the suspension of the coinage. We should stop the coinage of silver as we stopped the issue of greenbacks, and silver will rise, as greenbacks rose, to the level of gold. The gold men should not make the fight in the temper in which they have been pushing it. The questions are too grave for that. The plain contest should be placed on the simple proposition that the mints should not turn out any more silver lawful money unless upon international agreement. We can do with the amount of money we have on hand as they do in France. It is not done there either by opening the mints to silver or closing the banks against it. Fix the limit of the coinage of silver where it is, or near where it is, and the danger of the demonetization of gold is over. There should be a barrier of public opinion against the further coinage of legal tender silver as there is against a further issue of legal tender notes. It is time the advocates of good money should come together and act with a common purpose. The further coinage of silver, under the circumstances of the country, is inflation, and the depreciation of the standard, and purposely so. The way to cause the convocation of an international congress, and to bring it to business, is not to solicit it. Our true policy would be to make no more solicitation or suggestion to that effect. We should stop coinage and await propositions. Then if there is not the wisdom in the world to produce international action; if the money war is to go on until the nations are divided into gold and silver groups, there will be advantages in holding the highest standard, and we have the strength easily to take our place among the first.

The Commercial is certainly right. It is astonishing what arguments in favor of national dishonesty are advanced by members of Congress in their speeches and in their talk with newspaper reporters. Senators gravely argue that the needs of debtors demand a continuance of the coinage of dollars worth less than eighty cents as bullion. To them, they say, must be preserved the opportunity to pay their debts in the same currency in which they were made. It is a sufficient answer to that to say that the amount of silver dollars now stored in the vaults of the Treasury is sufficient to secure the attainment of such an end for certainly five years to come. But to continue to coin silver dollars is to steadily reduce the value of the claim of the creditor. The continuation of the coinage of two millions a month does not maintain, as the past proves, the conditions of last year or the year before or the year before that, but constantly aggravates the evils then experienced. The value of the claim of the creditor steadily declines. And members of Congress advocate persistence in this dishonesty, or rather in a course which constantly aggravates the dishonesty.

JESUITS EXCLUDED.—The Emperor of Germany has declined to allow the French Roman Catholic missionaries to settle in the newly-annexed district in West Africa known as the Cameroons. This order gives rise to serious reflection. No English government would under any conceivable circumstances pass such an order. The Jesuits are not welcome guests in England, but ungrudging hospitality is offered to every nation and tribe in the world that abides by the law. The German government give two reasons: (1st) that the Jesuits to which order the applicants belong, are not allowed in Germany, and, by parity of reason, cannot be allowed in the Colonies. (2d) that wherever the French missionary is allowed to enter, he is an intriguer, a disguised agent of the French government, one who has always France and not Christ on his brain, and would not scruple to do his best to weaken any government for the advance of French interests. We fear that such is the case; the whole history of French Roman Catholic Missions reveals the same features. Whether in Tonquin, or Madagascar, or Polynesia, or Africa, the same black feet are seen peeping out from under the skirts of the French priest's soutane. The Christian, London.

Our Church.

We are thankful for items of Church News compactly stated; or for marked copies or clippings from local exchanges, which we would not otherwise see. To insure publication in next number, they must reach us by noon on Monday. A condensation of items is unavoidable.

Special Services.

SPECIAL religious services were commenced in the 29th Street Collegiate Church on Sunday evening, 10th inst., when Dr. John Hall preached to a large, attentive, and deeply interested congregation. On Wednesday evening the mee ings were continued. Dr. Pierson, the well known and successful evangelist, preached. The congregation was large, and the impression made was profound and solemn. On Thursday and Friday Bible Readings were held at 4 o'clock P. M., and public services at 8 P. M. each day. The attendance good, the services interesting, instructive and impressive. These services are continued during the present week twice each day. A meeting for special prayer and praise is held at the close of the evening service, to which almost the entire congregation remain. Dr. Pierson will conduct the services each day, assisted by the pastor, Dr. Ormiston, Rev. Mr. Billingsley and D. H. Martin, of High Bridge, Dr. Conkling, Mr. Clark, Mr. Fagg, and others.

Last Sabbath Dr. Ormiston preached in the morning and Dr. Conkling in the evening to large congregations. Next Sunday Rev. Mr. Fagg, of Lawyersville, N. Y., will preach in the morning, and Dr. W. M. Taylor of the Broadway Tabernacle in the evening. All the seats in the church are free during all these services, and all are earnestly and urgently invited to attend.

Next week special services will be held in the church on 5th avenue and 48th street, the Rev. Dr. E. B. Coe, pastor. Meetings will be held on every evening except Saturday and Sunday, and will be conducted by the Rev. George F. Pentecost. The Gospel Hymns will be used and Mr. and Mrs. George C. Stebbins will lead the singing. A Bible Reading will be given at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The notice of two weeks ago said 3 o'clock for the Bible Readings. The hour has been changed to 4 o'clock. The seats are free and the cordial co-operation of all the Reformed churches in this city and vicinity is desired and will be welcomed gladly.

Union Proposed.

AT the General Convention of the Pittsburgh Synod of the Reformed Church in the United States, held at Berlin, Pa., September 16th, 1885, the following action occurred:

CHURCH UNION.

1. This paper was offered for adoption on this question:

Whereas, Our Lord's Prayer for the oneness of His people indicates His solicitude for the perpetual unity of His Church. And as that petition can be more fully granted by the Father only in the disappearance of the denominational distinctions now dividing Christendom, and

Whereas, The Calvinistic group of churches profess substantially an identity of doctrine as exhibited by their confessional standards and practice also a uniform system of ecclesiastical government, and

Whereas, The benefits arising from organic union among the churches would be very great, as the consolidation of Congregations, Missions and Educational Institutions; the economizing of men and means in the general work of the ministry, and the combination of Missionary resources, together with the immense advantage of presenting an undivided Christ to the heathen, therefore

Resolved, That Pittsburgh Synod respectfully request the General Synod of the Reformed Church in the United States to take such action at the meeting in Akron in 1887 as will lead to the speedy overturing of the Reformed Church in North America and the Presbyterian Church proposing to unite with them in one Ecclesiastical body.

Resolved, Further that it is the sense of this Synod that the question of organic union ought to receive the popular decision of the churches concerned.

2. The following was offered as a substitute:

Whereas, It is generally admitted that unnecessary divisions in Protestantism are an evil, and

Whereas, There are no essential differences either in doctrine or polity between the Reformed Church in America and the Reformed Church in the United States, and

Whereas, The differences in non essentials are comparatively small, therefore

Resolved, That this Synod hereby overtures the General Synod to consider the advisability and feasibility of a closer, and if possible an organic, union with the Reformed Church in America.

Resolved, That in case the way should be clear to such union, this Synod will heartily fall in with the movement in that direction.

The question being upon the substitution, both papers were referred to a special committee of five with instructions to report at the next annual meeting. This committee is Revs. D. B. Lady, A. E. Truxal, J. W. Pontius and Elders Jos. Cort and Jacob Moser.

The Day of Prayer for Colleges,

TUESDAY, 28TH JANUARY, 1886.

DEAR BROTHER: On the recurrence of the Day of Prayer for Colleges the Board of Education greets you with fraternal salutations. It ventures to express the hope that you will give faithful observance to the repeated recommendations of the General Synod, by such services as the circumstances of your people may enable you to hold.

An educated ministry is not only a luxury—it is a necessity in these times of progressive thought and scholarship. They, who "preach the Word" in the Church of God, must keep pace with the advancing strides of literature, science, and critical attainment. Argument is needless. Every thoughtful person realizes it, and rejoices in every wise effort to give students for the ministry the best possible advantages for mental culture and scholarly acquisitions.

Equally is it a necessity that more of the thoroughly educated youth of our land should devote themselves to the work of "the ministry of reconciliation." The workmen in large numbers yearly finish their work and enter into their rest and reward; while not a few others have to cease active service by reason of disability. At the same time the field is enlarging before our eyes in our own and other lands. From every quarter of the world comes the cry, give us more men and women for the service of the King. The work is hindered for want of consecrated workmen. We need not fear a surplus of ministers endowed with gifts and grace and knowledge. Our fear rather should be a dearth of suitably qualified workmen. Naturally we look to the great company of educated youth to respond to this call.

Another necessity obtains: a spiritually-minded ministry. We need ministers "full of faith and the Holy Ghost;" men mighty in the Scriptures, mighty in prayer, mighty in holiness of heart and life; men whose preaching is Scripturally spiritual. Only by entire consecration to unseen and eternal things can they withstand for themselves the tidal-wave of worldliness in the rush for wealth and honor and pleasure, and be helpers to their people in effort to make their life a manifestation of Christlike devotion to God and the interests of the kingdom of truth and righteousness in the earth. There would seem to be especial need for this spiritual endowment in these days, so that the intelligence and energy and activity of this generation may be enlisted in earnest effort to roll forward more and more rapidly the flashing wheels of the chariot of salvation.

These suggestions may help to emphasize the importance and necessity of united prayer for schools and colleges and seminaries. Especially when we connect therewith the fact that the Spirit of the Lord seems to be brooding over the Church, and to be ready to impart His vital power in answer to the prayers of the sons and daughters of God. An unusual interest and activity are manifest almost everywhere in the Church. "Prayers and supplications," we have reason to believe, are ascending to the God of grace in increased urgency and persistency, born of faith and love. May we not with enlarged assurance "open our mouth wide" unto God for the young in all educational institutions in our land? Should we not expect that our prayers and their answers will be according to our faith?

"The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you."

In behalf of the Board, JOHN GASTON, Prest.

GILES H. MANDEVILLE, Cor. Sec.

Bethany Chapel, Brooklyn, N. Y.

DESPITE the inclement weather a large audience assembled on Sunday evening, Jan. 10th, at Bethany Chapel to celebrate the anniversary of the Missionary Society. Bethany is the Mission Chapel of the Church on the Heights. It is the home of a large and successful Sunday school and of regular Sunday and week-day services. The Missionary Society is under the presidency of Mr. George F. Wiepert, and has been in active operation for eight years. In that time it has gathered and distributed $3 467 33. Of this $1 350 has been for Foreign Missionary work, and $2,228 has been appropriated to Christ's work in our own land. The report of the treasurer, Miss Edwards, gives the gratifying statement that $495 54 has been contributed during the past year. Of this sum distribution has been made to support a native helper in India; to Hampton Institute for the support of an Indian student; to the Faith Home; to the Douglas Memorial Seaside Home; to the Home for Consumptives; to the Foreign Sunday-school Association; to Market Street School, N. Y.; to the sufferers by the Galveston fire; to the McAll Mission in France; to the N. Y. Port Society; to the School for Poor Whites in Concord, N. C.; to Howard Colored Orphan Asylum.

The report of the corresponding secretary, Miss Spelman, gave most interesting responses from these various workers for Christ. An earnest and impressive address was made by Rev. Chas. Cuthbert Hall, and a charming recital by four little girls, members of the society, completed the exercises. It has rarely been the good fortune of the writer to be present at a more delightful service. Thirty seven classes of the Sunday-school were represented in the report of the offerings. The past history of the society gives cause for heartfelt thanksgiving; and the cordial enthusiasm manifested gives the best promise for continued good work for the blessed Lord in the future.

OBSERVER.

....SCHENECTADY, N. Y.—What with her new railroad depot, electric lights, sewer and water system, the municipality has had an active year, with provocation to the churches in the direction of love and good works. In the Second Church union meetings, continuing the Week of Prayer, are being held. One of the personal influences is the active presence of Mr. Studd, of Cambridge, England, now the guest of the venerable Mrs. Dr. Nott.

Across the river, last Monday night, the Rev. Robert Doig was installed over the Scotia Reformed Church. Classis was well represented, as were the men as well as the women of the neighborhood. The sermon, by Rev. Wm. Elliot Griffis, D D., outlined the doctrinal system of the Reformed Church, and emphasized its catholicity, noted what was taught in and what was not taught in the Heidelbergh Catechism, and urged that its truths be preached faithfully, not in technical but in modern language. Two former pastors, D. K. Van Doren and Herman Vanderwart, besides Revs Carr and Veenschoten, took edifying and highly enjoyable part. The historic old village rejoices in a live pastor, whom all the Classis regard as an ornament and acquisition to its membership.

The mother church of the Classis, the First Church, venerable parent of nine churches, celebrated her Christmas eve service, after despatching a plethoric box of things, new, warm, pretty, useful, and various, worth over $150, to Orange City, Iowa; having remembered the Northwestern Classical Academy previously. The children of the main and two mission schools were later regaled with music by the Rutgers College Glee Club. The primary department had also its Christmas cheer, among the "tots" present being the first "church baby born in twenty-five years," as a bachelor and former pastor puts it.

The envelope system, (for beneficence only), which provides for contributions from every man, woman, child and infant in the congregation, was introduced January 10th with gratifying indications of success. It allows any one to give at any time for any purpose, and combines the special collection with the stated annual amount pledged.

Finally, on Sabbath afternoon of the same date, Hope Chapel was dedicated. This mission school was begun in 1873, in the First Ward, by a young lady in the church. It has been steadily nurtured for eleven years by Mr. John Westinghouse. All the Westinghouses, even George, the one of air-brake fame, who, by the way, contributed liberally to Hope Chapel, were reared in the old church here. The new building is 47 feet square, and seats easily 325 people. The material is of brick. The total cost within and without is about $3,000. Memorial stained-glass windows to Daniel Vedder, William Munn, Nelson Lansing and Cornelia Northrup—all of beloved memory—temper the light. In the centre window over the door, the gift of the founder of the enterprise, Miss Frances C. Paige, is the emblem of "Hope as an anchor of the soul." The edifice was dedicated according to the Liturgy of the Reformed Church. The sermon, by the Rev. Dr. Wm. Elliot Griffis, was from the texts, "This is the king's chapel," and "Hope we have as an anchor to the soul." Rev. Lauren Vandervee', of the Reformed Church of Rotterdam, prepared and read the historical sketch. The average attendance on Sabbaths is 175, on Thursday evening 75.

The pocket Church Manual, No. 4, containing lists of officers, committees, services of the First Church, prayer-meeting leaders and topics, plans of beneficence, services at church and chapels for 1886, etc., will issue from the printer's this week. Nisi Dominus frustra.

JAN. 13, '86.

....At the PASTORS' ASSOCIATION Dr. Oerter read an interesting paper on "Christian Socialism;" subject next Monday, Jan. 25th, 1886, "Methods of Conducting Revival Services," to be opened by Rev. W. E. Davis.

...THE SOUTH CLASSIS OF LONG ISLAND met in special session at the North Church, Clermont avenue, Brooklyn, on Wednesday evening, January 13th, 1886 to receive and install Rev. Wm. D. Perry as pastor over the North Church. The President of Classis, Rev. D. N. Van Derveer, D.D., conducted the services, read the form for installation and preached the sermon. The opening prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. Taylor, who, with great acceptance to the congregation, has occupied the pulpit for the past three months. Rev. Jacob West, D.D., read the Scriptures and offered prayer. The charge to the pastor, delivered by the Rev. Daniel Van Pelt, of East New York, clearly set forth the duties of the pastoral office and the mutual relation of pastor and people. The Rev. Dr. C. L. Wells, of Flatbush, in his charge to the people, clearly and forcibly set forth the fact that a solemn obligation rested upon the people to perform their part of this mutual contract.

Several anthems were well sung by a large and well-trained choir. A large audience gave evidence that the church has with new zeal entered upon the work of firmly establishing itself among the churches of Brooklyn.

....HARLEM'S "MISSION," N. Y. CITY.—Despite the severity of the weather, the attendance at the evangelistic service held on last Sabbath evening in the Harlem Reformed Church, taxed the seating capacity of that spacious edifice to its utmost. After short preliminary exercises conducted by the pastor of the church, the Rev. G. H. Smyth, a sermon was delivered by the Rev. Talbot W. Chambers, D.D., of the Collegiate Dutch Church, from the text, "Be not weary in well doing." The reverend gentlemen after reviewing the various interpretations given to the words of his text, recounted the nature of well doing as exemplified in church work and the various helps and hindrances to be met with by those engaged in it, in his usual incisive and logical style of treatment. At the close of the service an invitation was extended to any that might feel concerned as to their soul's welfare, or disposed to enlist themselves among the number of the church's workers, to meet the pastor in the consistory house adjoining the church.

Similar exercises will be held in this church on Wednesday and Thursday evenings of this week. W.

JAN. 12, '86.

....THE REV. C. VANDERVEEN is not engaged as a supply for the winter by the Second Church of Grand Haven, Mich., as a local paper led us to say last week. The truth is that the church has no pastor and when he is in town he supplies it. Brother Vanderveen has recently returned from a period of rest, spent in Colorado and California, and is ready to assume a pastoral charge. In our estimation he is a preacher and pastor to be desired. His address for the present is Grand Haven, Mich.

....PEEKSKILL, N. Y., seems to receive additions at almost every sacramental season. At the communion of the 10th two more were welcomed on confession. Revival services are in progress, in which the presence of the Holy Spirit is manifest.

....TYRE, N. Y.—A series of meetings, conducted by M. V. Bronk, of Athens, N. Y., began Dec. 16th, in the Church of Tyre. For some time the condition of the church had been low, coldness and worldliness had crept in, and so the work began under difficulties, but as time passed on the interest deepened and the number in attendance increased. Mr. Bronk was with us fifteen nights, and the last night the house was filled; people had come miles to see, having heard of the good work. The presence of God was seen in the earnestness of God's children, the turning of many souls from sin unto the ways of righteousness, and in causing many who would not yield to the influence to tremble under a sense of their sins. The work has been mostly among the young, yet reaching those of riper years, and even those in older life. It was not confined to the Reformed Church, but reached all the churches around. About seventy are rejoicing in having found peace in believing in Christ as their Saviour, and still the work is going on. COM.

....GLENVILLE, N. Y.—Rev. N. F. Nickerson preached his first anniversary sermon to a large congregation, Sunday, Jan. 10th. During the year two seasons of revival had been enjoyed, and twenty six new members received; twenty-two by profession. There had been an increased interest in mission work, and a Christmas box sent by the ladies and Sunday-school to the Brown Memorial School on the prairies of Iowa. With these, he gave other items of interest to the congregation, which indicated prosperity.

...CASTLETON, N. Y.—We noticed in the last number of the INTELLIGENCER an article regarding the accident in our church. We would like to correct it. During the morning services on Sunday, Dec. 27th, part of the ceiling and brick arch back of the gallery fell; the plastering had been loose for quite a time. No one was injured, neither was our organ harmed The consistory have decided to give the church thorough repairs, and in consequence the services will for the present be held in Van Hoesen's Hall. J.

....THE TREASURERS OF CLASSES in arrears for the Minutes of the General Synod are requested to remit the amounts due to the Stated Clerk without unnecessary delay. S. C.

....NEW YORK.—Rev. A. Wormser, of Cedar Grove, Wis., preached very acceptably last Sabbath for the Holland Church of this city and it is probable will receive a call as the successor of the late Rev. Bechthold.

....REV. DR. GLEASON'S RESIGNATION.—The Classis of Newark formally received the resignation of Rev. Dr. Gleason, of the First Reformed Church, and dismissed him to the church at Hudson. The following minute was adopted by the church and presented to the Classis:

"Resolved, That it is with severest regret we recognize the necessity of parting with our pastor, who has endeared himself to us by his earnest Christian character, his faithful and zealous labors and frequent sacrifice of health and comfort in his tender regard for the spiritual and temporal welfare of this church. In expressing the unanimous voice of this Consistory, we believe we also express the voice of the whole church and congregation, that while our hearts are made tender and sad by this separation, our sincerest love and heartiest good will and feeling will follow Dr. Gleason to his new field of labor, with the assurance of the continued prayerful interest of our whole membership; and most heartily and unitedly do we commend him to the love and regard of the people to whom he goes, and to the tender care of the dear Father in heaven, whose richest blessings we pray may ever attend him and his in all their future ways."

The Classis made the following record on its minutes: "In severing the pastoral relation between the Rev. William H. Gleason, D.D., and the First Reformed Church of Newark, the Classis of Newark herein records its sincere regret for the providential necessity which takes from us a brother beloved, whose earnest ministry has been richly blest of the Master, and beneficial to the church and the city in which it has been fulfilled during the past nine years. Yielding to the urgency of the case and recognizing the wisdom of the will of God in this event, which transfers him to another inviting field of service, we commend our brother to the Good Shepherd's care and give him our parting benedictions."

....PARK REFORMED CHURCH, JERSEY CITY.—The Rev. J. Howard Suydam, D.D., preached his seventeenth anniversary sermon as pastor of this church on the evening of the 10th inst. He divided his discourse into remarks professional, pertaining to the ministry as an office; remarks personal, since it was his anniversary that was being celebrated; and remarks pastoral, pertaining to the individual church and the community wherein it is located. An appropriate text furnished the foundation for each division. It was listened to by a large and interested audience. The pulpit was profusely decorated with flowers and smilax. Two set pieces embodied immortelles in the figures 1869-1886. The relation of pastor and people during this long period has been of the most cordial character. Their active coöperation has resulted in a course of continuous prosperity in a community marked by constant change. On the following Sunday 13 were received into the communion of the church—7 upon confession of their faith.

....ZEELAND, MICH.—In the "Western Items" of January 6 h I saw that Vriesland was credited as having contributed $146.60 to the Board of Foreign Missions. This is an error, as it was the Sabbath school of the Church of Zeeland. We have the custom of opening our mission box on Christmas, and on last Christmas our pastor, Rev. J. Kremer, preached in the morning and in the afternoon the Sabbath-school engaged in Christmas exercises and festivities. A supper was provided for the pupils, and presents were given to the infant class, which contributed $17 60, while the rest of the school gave $139, making a total of $146.60. A portion of this sum is used to support a native helper in India, and the balance for general missionary purposes. Though the Sabbath-school of the Church of Vriesland was unduly credited with the $146 60 that our school gave, yet we are informed that a single family in that church has promised to contribute this year $500 for foreign missions. V. H.

...THE CATALOGUE OF RUTGERS COLLEGE for 1885-'86 shows 4 young men pursuing the post-graduate course, 21 Seniors, 18 Juniors, 28 Sophomores, 38 Freshmen, and 11 special course men, making a total of 120. It is pleasant to see so large a proportion of the young men in the Classical Sections of each class. The best all-around men are those who take the full course. We never look over the Course of Instruction without admiration. It would be hard to find a better one anywhere, and it is now well known that it is carried out with exemplary thoroughness. The Agricultural College continues its beneficent work, remains free from speculative theories and maintains its practical character. The Catalogue throughout is one to be regarded with gratification.

....The New Brunswick papers report: Rev. Dr. William H. Campbell, ex-President of Rutgers College, has severed all connection with the college. This was done at his own request, as advancing years made it impossible to do justice to the duties which were in his charge.. His department, "The Evidences of Christianity," will in the future be in charge of President Gates. The resignation of Dr. Campbell was accepted with reluctance, though the trustees of the college fully appreciated his motives in resigning.

....GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—At a special meeting of the Classis of Grand River, held in this city, January 13th, it was resolved to grant the request of over 40 members of the Second Church to organize a Fifth Reformed Church in the southern part of this city. A committee was appointed to carry out this resolution, which, with the consistory of the new organization, is to determine the location of their church. P. M.

....BUSHWICK, L. I.—Great good will and serenity prevail in the South Bushwick church. It is the old Bushwick church which unhappily is somewhat disturbed, we hope not seriously, by a secession of officers and teachers of the Sabbath-school who seem to wish to make the school independent of the government of the church.

....REV. DR. W. V. V. MABON will receive the sympathy of the Church in his sorrow for the loss of his only daughter, who was buried last Saturday. Light and life beyond expression go out of a household when the only daughter is taken away.

...Miss Wolff, a wealthy lady (Episcopalian) of this city, has given $75,000 for the erection of a "clergy house." The building is to be used as headquarters for the diocese, having offices, committee rooms, etc.

News of the Week.

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 13.—Parliament opened in London yesterday. Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Bradlaugh were cheered on their way to the House....Prince Alexander and the Porte have come to an understanding. Bulgaria is to help Turkey in case of war, and Turkey is to recognize the union of the Bulgarians....England has accepted the proposal of Russia that the Powers insist on the disarmament of Greece, Servia and Bulgaria....A severe battle took place between Russian and Persian troops.... Sixty Dacoits were killed in Burmah in a battle with the British....A great deal of suffering and want is experienced in Montreal on account of the severe floods and rise of St. Lawrence river....Gov. Hill has sent in another message to the Legislature at Albany....Large flour and woollen mills were burned in Chicago. The loss is estimated at $300,000 ...Ten men of the wrecked steamer "Hylton Castle" are supposed to be lost....A farmer was killed in Delaware for trying to drive across his neighbor's wheat field....Three suicides due to poverty are reported from New York city....Yesterday was the coldest day of the season.

THURSDAY, 14.—War imminent in Samoa. Samoan Island seized by the German government....Count Laubespin has made a gift of 40,000 francs to M. Pasteur. ....The volcano Cotopaxi is believed to be in a state of eruption, and there is great excitement among the people....Large fire reported in Montreal. Loss will reach nearly half a million....A panic was narrowly averted in the Chicago Opera House. A lamp was overturned under the footlights and a piece of paper burned....An explosion occurred in the boiler-room of St. Mary's Catholic Church at Fort Wayne. The church was destroyed and two lives lost ...The missing sailors from the "Hylton Castle" found. One man sent to the hospital....A terrible tornado lasting twenty minutes passed over the middle counties of England. Trees uprooted, houses unroofed ...Cattle are reported to be dying by the hundreds on the snow-covered prairies of Texas....A large and substantial ice bridge was formed in the Niagara river, and will probably remain through the season....Ice dealers are not very happy over the present indications There is plenty of ice, but not the kind fit for use. The ice at present is chopped, snowy and dirty.

FRIDAY, 15.—It is stated on good authority that Mr. Gladstone and the Liberal leaders have all become reconciled, and that he will take the first opportunity to overthrow the Conservative government....A French Prefect was assassinated and robbed on a railway train in France, and his body was thrown from the train while in motion.... Emperor William opened the Prussian Diet in person yesterday....President Grevy of France has sent a message to the Senate, and has signed a decree granting amnesty to persons convicted of political offences since 1870....Germany denies any intention of annexing the island of Samoa....Volcanic eruptions are reported in Ecquador, and earthquakes in Central America....A train in Peru was wrecked and thirty soldiers were killed....The Socialists of Chicago are supposed to be preparing for a revolution....A reception was given to Senator Sherman at Columbus, Ohio....The Newark children who were bitten by a rabid dog and sent to Paris have returned safe and sound....A schooner with a crew of sixteen men has been given up as lost. The Apaches are reported to be on the war path; several murders are reported.... Cleveland, Ohio, is threatened with a water famine....The first State dinner of the season was given at the White House last night....The Grant Monument Association has been incorporated....The skating season has opened at Central and Prospect Parks

SATURDAY, 16.—It is now said that the Parnellites will unite with the English and Scotch Radicals in protesting against the evictions in Ireland and Scotland ...Greece offers to withdraw her forces if her territorial claims are allowed by the Balkan Conference ...The Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland asks for aid for starving people in Ireland. It is feared that another famine is about to come upon them.

(Continued on page thirteen.)

Our Contributors.

The Life Clock.

BY GEORGE W. BUNGAY.

THE human heart's a wonderful clock,
It runs to-day, to-morrow a shock
May stop the wheels and silence the sound,
And drop the weights in the open ground.
Now slow, now quick, now slow, now quick,
Hear how it beats, tick! tick! tick! tick!
How fast the quick hands go round and round.

The human heart in old age and youth
Should be true to life and true to the truth,
As the dial is to the sun that shines,
Not casting a shade on doubtful lines.
Now slow, now quick, now slow, now quick,
Hear how it beats, tick! tick! tick! tick!
It never keeps time when 'tis forced with wines.

The human heart beating swift or slow,
In joy and gladness, in sorrow and woe,
Should be set by the Hand that started time,
Then it will beat with the life sublime.
Now slow, now quick, now slow, now quick,
Hear how it beats, tick! tick! tick! tick!
May the brain and heart keep rhythmic chime.

The human heart is the clock of life,
How it beats in joy, how it strikes in strife,
Until at last it beats out the breath,
And is stopped by the cold hand of death.
Now slow, now quick, now slow, now quick,
Hear how it beats, tick! tick! tick! tick!
Until stopped at last by the hand of death.

The Heretic Priest; A Tale of Reformation Days in the Netherlands.

(Translated from the Dutch of E. Gerdes, for the Christian Intelligencer, by Rev. Daniel Van Pelt.)

CHAPTER III.—A DEALER IN SACRED IMAGES.

THE person who entered the room was laboring under a heavy burden, which forced many a groan from him, and made him lean heavily upon a walking staff. He went directly to the table and rested both hands upon it. Sister Brigitta followed him with a lighted lamp, which she placed upon the table.

Floris now saw that this was an aged man, with a long gray beard falling upon his breast, clad in a partially ragged and patched coat, over which a well worn mantle was carelessly thrown. A pair of boots that seemed better suited to a trooper reached up to his knees, and the short breeches were tucked into their wide tops. But what seemed stranger than all the rest about the old man, was the great square wooden chest he carried, filled with all kinds of books and pamphlets, colored prints and small images of the Virgin and Child, and of the saints.

Sister Brigitta left the room, and Floris, who had retired to his corner of the room and was quite invisible within the deep shadow of his high desk, could see how the old man remained in the same bent position, seemingly indifferent to surrounding objects.

The priest, who had but just returned home, and who was now in his oratory, being informed of this new arrival by Sister Brigitta, hastened to the study. Floris saw him carefully bolting the door upon his entrance; next, going to the window, he drew the heavy green curtains together, and then turned to his visitor.

The latter meanwhile had not been idle. No sooner had the curtains been drawn and the door bolted, than he flung away his broad brimmed hat, loosened a band that was tied around his head, and to the infinite astonishment of Floris the gray wig and long white beard fell simultaneously and revealed the light brown locks and beard of a young man. The priest assisted him in unstrapping the huge chest and taking it from his back. A few brushes of the hand removed certain pencillings of gray paint from the forehead and eyebrows, and the aged visitor stood transformed into a vigorous youth, whose whole bearing expressed courage and determination.

"Justus, my dear brother," he observed, addressing the priest, "you see I have come."

"Herman!" replied the priest, pressing the youth to his heart. "How dared you venture?"

"I came, dear brother, but to ask one question: the Bible that I brought you eight weeks ago; have you read it?"

"Certainly, certainly, Herman!" replied the priest. "And oh! I am inexpressibly indebted to you for it. But tell me how did you succeed in coming here, and what are your plans."

The young man cast a furtive glance about the room and asked: "Are we alone, Justus?"

"Yes, we are alone, but speak softly, for sometimes the very walls have ears, and remember, one word about this Bible would bring me into the greatest peril."

"And what peril? Do you fear God less than men? We should not recklessly run into danger, but when we are called upon to be faithful to our Saviour, then, dear Justus, we must follow Him no matter how great the risk. And after all is it not the worst of all perils to be plunged into the darkness of superstition and unbelief. The Lord be praised! time and again the pure doctrines of the Reformation deliver some poor captive who was held fast in the superstitious toils of the Romish Church. You remember your fellow-student, Philip Cruize, the uncle of your pupil, Floris Berthem, his mother's brother; he has joined our ranks."

At these words Floris with difficulty suppressed an outcry of surprise. The clergyman whispered into his brother's ear:

"I know it; he told me himself a few hours ago."

"A few hours ago? Was he here? And I not know it! Where is he now? I thought he was at this moment in prison at Brussels. How did he escape; did he tell you?"

"I can tell you very little about it, brother, for we could spend but a few moments together. I did not know him at first, he was so well disguised. He informed me that he had embraced the doctrines of Calvin, had for this reason been led a prisoner to Brussels, that he was expecting his execution, but had found a means of escape from his jailers. Since that time he had wandered about the country in the disguise of a peddler."

"Of a peddler?" pensively repeated Herman Van der Woude. "Did he wear a brown, patched cloak?"

"Yes," replied his brother. "But why do you ask that?"

"Because in that case I very much fear he will be taken. Yesterday I heard, while at Louvain, that they were in search of a heretic who was clad in a brown, patched cloak. Granvelle's spies will soon be on his track."

"I can set your mind at rest on that point. He changed his disguise here; in fact this was his object in coming. He was somewhat uncertain whether he could expect any help from me. But you know how dearly I ever loved Philip, and when he mentioned the peril he was in, I could not but assist him. I gave him a better cloak and hid the cloak he wore in my oratory."

"And whither did he go?"

"He did not explain fully. I conducted him as far as the river and bade him farewell."

"And said he nothing to you in parting?"

"Yes, and I shall never forget his words: 'Dear Justus, the Lord is righteous and faithful; but His promises are only for those who confess Him openly before men.'"

"'Who confess Him openly before men,'" repeated Floris to himself behind the desk.

"And what do you intend to do, dear brother?" eagerly inquired Herman.

"I shall do that which pleases God, Herman," solemnly replied the clergyman, bowing the head.

"Then I expect of you that you immediately forsake the service of the Church of Rome and give your adherence to the Reformation. This is God's command!"

This was a critical moment for the parish priest of Weersbeek. On the one hand stood his brother, who, as it were in the name of God, called out to him: Leave your Church, abandon your parish. On the other hand, he thought of the people whom he loved, whom he had ignorantly, indeed, but zealously, instructed in religious things; and the Church which he had so long venerated could not be easily forsaken, even without reflecting upon the extreme peril such a step involved. What must he do?

He grasped his brother's hand and said:

"Dear Herman, be assured that I do not hesitate to follow you on account of the fear of man. I thank the Lord that within a few days He has opened my eyes to many errors, but remember that a great responsibility rests upon me. Things are not yet quite so clear to me as they are to you. Be at rest about me, however. When God calls I shall no longer hesitate. True courage, Herman, does not consist in recklessly courting danger, but, when one is in danger, in acting like a man of understanding, in defending and maintaining the cause for which one is battling. I do not think it well to rashly anticipate the Providence of God, but when His will is made clear shall say: 'Thy will be done.'" Herman Van der Woude pressed his brother's hand warmly, and a tear of joy stood in his eyes.

"But tell me now, Herman," rejoined the clergyman after a moment's silence, "what is your real object in coming to these parts, and what are your intentions?"

"I have already told you, Justus, that I came here in the first place to see you, and to induce you to renounce the errors of Rome. But I have another purpose. You remember that we had a conference at the house of the Berthem's, Floris' parents, some time ago. I am going to attend another meeting there."

"And when is this meeting to occur?"

"The day after to-morrow."

"And you meet at the Berthem's?"

"Yes. But why do you inquire so particularly?"

"Have I not told you that I would do as God pleaseth?"

"And suppose it should please God to call you to-morrow?" asked Herman, with expectant look.

"Then I trust to meet you the day after to morrow at the Berthem's."

"Brother, give me your hand!" exclaimed Herman. "God the Lord will undoubtedly call. We must part now, but we shall meet again. It is my firm conviction. But I must leave. Night has fully come, and I can proceed on my journey with more security. In the day time the brother of the Weersbeek priest is too well known. I shall leave this chest with saints' images; you may give it to Father Josephus."

Herman Van der Woude threw the wig and false beard to one side, picked up the walking staff, and placing his hat firmly upon the head, he looked his brother tenderly in the face, and embracing him he said:

"Dear brother, will you grant me one more request?"

"If I can, with all my heart."

"You can, Justus. You have prayed so frequently alone in your oratory. Will you now kneel down with me and join me in prayer?"

Without replying, the priest took his brother's hand and knelt down by his side; then, bowing their heads reverently, they poured out their hearts together in prayer.

"Amen," said the priest.

"Amen," repeated Herman.

At this instant the voice of Father Josephus was heard at the further end of the hall.

"Quick, brother, quick," said the priest. "Hasten, it is the spy."

Herman Van der Woude made an involuntary move toward the door. But it was too late; the monk had reached it and began to knock, crying out:

"Brother Justus, Brother Justus, important news!"

But the priest did not answer him. He silently pointed to the window. His brother understood the hint, drew aside the curtains, opened the sash and sprang to the ground.

"Brother Justus, Brother Justus!" called out the monk again; "open the door; important news!"

"I am coming, I am coming," replied the priest, who wished to gain time, as the window was still open and the chest with the images was still standing in the middle of the floor. He knew not how to remove both these difficulties at once. The monk gave him no peace, but kept hammering upon the door. He resolved to open the door but not to permit him to enter the room.

"I am coming," said the priest, slowly removing the bolts. Then opening the door a little way, he intended to press through, push back the clamoring monk, and draw him along to the rear of the hall and into a room at the back of the house. But the monk was not to be disposed of in this way. The latter thought he had heard some voices in the study, and he was determined to enter the room and see who was there. The priest's tardiness only excited him the more. Under the vociferous and reiterated pretence of having some important news to communicate, he succeeded in forcing himself into the study.

He eagerly cast his eyes around the room, but he saw no person or object that could arouse his suspicions. "Well," he thought, "the priest must have talked aloud in his sleep while taking a nap."

The clergyman, too, was surprised as he looked about him; for the window was shut, and the chest with the sacred images had vanished from sight. There was not a sign left of his brother's visit.

The pastor of Weersbeek had now recovered his usual composure, and addressing the Father, he asked:

"What is the important news that you wished to communicate?"

"Oh!" answered the monk, and a malignant smile spread over his heavy countenance, "you need not be so eager to know; the news is not so agreeable."

He put his hand inside his gown, and drew forth a paper, saying, "Read this, your reverence."

The priest opened the large folded document, and read that Mr. Justus Van der Woude, priest of the parish at Weersbeek, was commanded to appear at the Episcopal Palace at Mechlin within three days, in order to defend himself, if possible, against charges which had been preferred against him.

Pater Josephus was preparing to gloat over the expected dismay of the priest. But the latter had sufficient presence of mind not to betray what was passing in his mind. He calmly returned the document to the monk.

"And what will you do?" he asked.

"That which shall please God," was the reply.

The monk had nothing to say in reply to this. With a look full of threatening and hatred he turned and left the study. The priest remained a few moments plunged in deep thought. Then he, too, left the room, and went to his oratory to betake himself to prayer.

Floris Berthem was again left alone. He had received a new insight into religious questions, and had learned something better than the conjugation of moneo.

(To be continued.)

That Sunday Newspaper!

BY REV. RALPH W. BROKAW.

THE Sabbath question is second in importance to no other now engaging public attention. Violation of the Fourth Commandment comes of a moral sickness in society that threatens death. The disease is in the vital organs. Mere skin applications cannot reach it. The benumbed consciences and respectability of those stricken with it make the cure very difficult. By no means least among the Sabbath-breaking Anakim who walk abroad so defiantly, is the Sunday newspaper. His gigantic strength and ugly visage should arouse preachers and philanthropists to bold, plain speech on this subject until a sentiment is developed powerful enough to say effectively, "The Sunday newspapers must go." And for these reasons:

First, because of the work which they create. This begins in the editorial and publication rooms, continues in the news agencies and railroad trains carrying them far and near, and ends in the labors of the young men and little boys who distribute them to individuals. What an army is thus kept busy in holy time! One of the saddest phases of this whole business is the fact that innocent children are compelled to sin in helping to satisfy a demand of those who should be their benefactors. Then, too, what a refreshing literary dish is served up to us Christians on Monday mornings during the summer in descriptions of newspaper train races! Here we are told about the splendid enterprise of the Tribune or Herald; how they outstripped their rivals in reaching Richfield or Saratoga; how fast the horses of Green or Brown went over the hills to the Springs despite mud and rain, and of how eagerly the boarders bought up the supply of papers and devoured their contents. If, perchance, the Presbyterian General Assembly is in session there, the editors make it out (no matter about the truth) that numerous ministers and elders were customers of the newsboys. Like Pontius Pilate, they would be glad to wash their hands of all responsibility for the Sunday issue by saying they are compelled to meet the requirements of their Christian and other patrons.

O, what a tender regard these immaculates have for the people! Of course, they do not care a pin for the financial product of their nefarious work. It is all for the benefit of the dear public. Yet the divine law says, "But the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God; in IT thou shalt not do ANY work." Works of necessity and mercy are excepted, to be sure. But who can point out either the necessity or mercy of Sunday newspapers? London gets along without them. So can we.

Is it urged that if one does not take the Sunday paper because of the work it creates on Sunday, he ought not take the Monday paper for the same reason? Well, then away with the Monday paper! The Monday paper, however, need cost but little, if any, Sunday labor. And even that can be confined to a few persons within a small space. Possibly, that much might be justified on account of the necessities of trade and commerce. But, what should we lose, if, to obey God, we were content to get the Monday papers a couple of hours later than on other days? In that case, surely, the newspaper men would not have to trespass on holy time at all.

Second, because of the nature of their contents. They are not fit for Sabbath reading. Society and theatrical and financial gossip; accounts of murders, robberies, divorces, scandals; pictures of noted hotel proprietors, prize fighters or actresses, and the like, fill their columns. Can a Christian read articles, look at pictures, meditate on topics like these, and then honestly say, "I am keeping the Lord's day holy?" It is alleged that these papers furnish much valuable religious matter. Yes, they do furnish some, not much. But under the circumstances a proper description of this so-called "religious matter" would be, a little pretended pious sauce to tickle the palates of the church-folk readers, a clothing of one of their small fingers with "the livery of the court of heaven to serve the devil in." Let us not be deluded by this "snare of the fowler." We wonder if, when men have read this "religious matter" they throw the paper aside? And, supposing they do, are they then justified, when the very existence of such papers is as wrong as the Fourth Commandment is right?

Third, because they unfit their readers for the proper enjoyment of worship.

They come in the morning and demand first attention. They draw the mind away from themes calculated to make our thoughts and words acceptable to God. They start our meditations upon forbidden paths. They do not aid us in the contemplation of the divine holiness, assist us in self-examination, bring to our hearts the love of Christ or pour in upon our careworn spirits the consolations of promise and hope. On the contrary, they do the very opposite, tending to resolve Sabbath keeping into a mere cessation of ordinary activity and robbing the rest of its most valuable feature, viz., a helpful and holy diversion of soul.

A Christian ought not "to rush into God's presence as the horse rusheth into battle." We need the preparation of prayer and Bible reading to acceptably worship Him "whose way is in the sanctuary." What would be thought of a minister, if it were known that on Sunday mornings when the church bell rings, he drops a secular newspaper from his hands to lift them up in petition before the congregation? What is wrong for him is wrong for everybody. Those Christian homes where the antechamber to the place of the Divine presence is an irreligious newspaper, must not expect many spiritual blessings. Just as Nehemiah shut the gates of Jerusalem when the Sabbath began and kept them shut until it was over, so we should shut our heart-gates to everything which may detract from our proper employment of the Lord's day.

Fourth, because they keep many people away from church. Men take up their Sunday newspapers, become interested in them, do not want to be disturbed, and stay at home. Perhaps they ease their consciences by saying to themselves, "I will read Dr. T.'s sermon and that will take the place of the sermon I would hear from the pastor." At all events, what is found in these papers does not stimulate a thirst for the sanctuary. After spending an hour or so with them a man is not ready to exclaim, "How amiable are thy tabernacles, O Lord of Hosts! My soul longeth for the courts of the Lord." Are not the Sunday papers harmful then in this direction?

None but a misanthrope can desire to lessen the influence of the pulpit. Every real patriot knows full well that it would be a great calamity if men should forsake the assembling of themselves together to hear God's Word explained and emphasized. And if these papers interfere with the public or personal good by obstructing the way to church, we Christians ought to know how to regard and treat them. If we are on the Lord's side we are indeed on the people's side and, therefore, we must fight against His enemies and theirs.

Fifth, because they stand in the way of religious reading, especially Bible reading. In this busy world men get but little time at the most, during the week to read the Scriptures. We must pursue the objects of our ambition with hot haste in these days in order to catch them. Life was never so intense as now. But this does not diminish the importance of God's Book to any man. Hence the greater need of keeping the Sabbath clear of everything which prevents men from getting the spiritual food which it and thousands of other clean and wholesome books contain.

If to keep up in the race for wealth or position almost everything else must be forgotten for six days, so much the more reason why we should forget all else on the seventh day, that we may "run so as to obtain."

Finally, the Sunday newspapers ought to go because they lower the standard of Sabbath keeping by opening the door to all kinds of business on that day. Being neither of necessity nor mercy, we ask if work in this department of industry, why not in all? We denounce the saloons, demanding that they be closed on Sundays. It is well. But it is inconsistent to make this demand and yet patronize ice cream and candy shops, tobacco stores and news stands on Sundays. Whatever business ministers to actual necessities or relieves actual suffering is allowable; outside this limit what can be said against one kind of Sunday traffic can be said of every kind.

The rumseller has just as much right to sell his goods on that day as the news dealer. And neither has any right at all, by human law or Divine. And both and all are about equally demoralizing in the long run. If we pretend to sweep let us sweep clean.

Above all men, disciples of the Lord Jesus ought to forego the Sunday newspaper. It is utterly unjustifiable and altogether the outgrowth of inordinate selfishness. What if we do miss a portion of the world's daily record? Can we not better afford this than put souls in danger of losing heaven? Besides, if we decline to buy these papers they will soon cease to be offered for sale. Christians are not in the minority of their purchasers. The strength of our religion is so great that if once pitted against this evil the newspaper companies could not afford to make the Sunday issue. Especially is this true of the less disreputable great city dailies.

Reader of this article and of the papers of which its treats, ask yourself questions like these: Does my patronage of the Sunday press help the news boy or the news dealer heavenward? Does it furnish my children with reading that tends to nurture them in the way of the Lord? Am I aiding, thereby, to rid society of its multiform Sabbath day evils? Am I building up my own Christian character by doing this thing? Pure religion and pure morality, the highest philanthropy and the truest love of God, time and eternity, all speak to us in regard to this matter, saying, with no uncertain sound, Christian, stand firmly against the Sunday newspaper.

BELLEVILLE, N. J., Dec. 23d, 1885.

Christian Earnestness.

SURELY if any one in the world is in earnest it ought to be the Christian. And yet, how many are half-hearted, cold, almost careless followers of Christ. We need in this respect a new baptism of the Holy Ghost, to set our souls on fire with love, devotion, consecration such as shall win new glory for our Lord and Master. See those early disciples after the tongues of fire had come upon them. Forth they went in town, in city, by the wayside, telling all they met of Jesus, the crucified and risen Redeemer. How earnestly they prayed and labored, "and the hand of the Lord was with them, and a great multitude believed and turned to the Lord." Where is the true follower of Christ who will not be as earnest as these early disciples when he realizes his own responsibility and the condition of many about him. How very short is the time in which we are here to serve and honor the Master. Every day and hour is precious,—yet how dare we waste so much of it in easy and half-hearted living. Immortal souls are living and dying without a saving faith in Christ,—yet how dare we pray so coldly and infrequently for them. Oh, if in communion with Him we did only breathe in more deeply of the Master's spirit, how much more heartily would we serve Him and how our supplications for a lost world would increase in fervor! What an example of loving earnestness does Christ give to us! How He sorrowed over unrepentant Jerusalem, and Galilee, and Nazareth! How He supplicated for the lost and unbelieving even in the last dark hours of His passion! How He reached out the hand of help, and how eagerly He received the first signs of faith from the weak and sinning ones about Him! How He delighted to speak those gracious words, "Thy sins be forgiven thee." How He must have loved us when He drank that bitter cup and gave Himself a victim to the Cross, that we might find life and peace. As we think of these things, how can our hearts keep from burning within us? How can we help being eager, unceasing in prayer? Think how much Jesus has done and suffered for you. Think how short may be the time in which you can watch and pray and work for Him. Think how many souls are still lost in sin. O be earnest. Be intensely earnest. Be earnest day and night that you may serve your Lord and build up His kingdom.

Be earnest in your closets, pleading and watching for souls, "as those who must give an account." Be earnest everywhere, that you may glorify His name, and attract men unto Him. Receiving the tongue of fire according to the promise and in response to His patient waiting at the throne, the earnest, consecrated follower of Jesus will have a life of fire that will be ever kindling new desires, holier purposes, and brighter altars of devotion in other hearts. To the Cross—to the Cross that our dying flame of love may be set to burning with greater brightness and power.

C. P. D.

NISKAYUNA, N. Y.

The Reading Room.

Our Book-Shelves.

....“THE GREEK ISLANDS, AND TURKEY AFTER THE WAR.” By Henry M. Field. Dr. Field is too well known as a traveller and raconteur to need introduction or recommendation to our readers. His facile pen has already furnished several volumes of travel which have met a cordial reception in book form after their first appearance in the columns of the Evangelist. A special interest attaches to the present volume by reason of its recital of the causes which led to and the results which followed the late Russo Turkish war. His account of the atrocities which roused all Europe, and indeed all Christendom, is simply blood curdling, but alas! too true. They are the ineffaceable condemnation of “the unspeakable Turk.” (Scribner & Co.)

....“APOSTOLIC LIFE AS REVEALED IN THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.” By Joseph Parker, D.D. Vol. III. This volumes completes the work of Dr. Parker on the Acts. At the close of the volume are a few lectures on the Apostolic conceptions of Christ and the work of the Holy Spirit, drawn from the epistles. In these volumes the author has not only given us a good commentary on the Acts, but has struck out from the flint and steel of his original mind many bright, flashing thoughts that kindle thought in other minds on kindred topics. He is remarkably suggestive, and brings out in a few clear and striking sentences the meaning which he finds in the text. His prayers are well worth studying. (Funk & Wagnalls.)

....A new edition has been issued of “DR. DEEMS' SERMONS,” preached on the first 48 Sunday mornings in which he officiated in the Church of the Strangers. They awakened such a deep interest at the time of their delivery, that his parishioners requested them for publication; and so acceptable have they proved to the larger audience reached through the press that this new edition has been put forth. The sermons display scholarly culture, close and logical thought, clearly expressed, abound with a devout spirit, and give evidence of a ripe Christian experience. (Funk & Wagnalls.)

....“THE ORIGIN OF REPUBLICAN FORM OF GOVERNMENT IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.” By Oscar S. Straus. A well written and very readable book, showing much historical research, designed to trace a connection between the Hebrew commonwealth and the American Republic, through the Old Testament teachings of the Puritan New England pulpit at the Revolution, the writer, perhaps, going too far in viewing the Hebrew civil code as a popular choice, at the expense of its supernatural origin. (G. P. Putnam's Sons.)

....“THE CHILDREN OF LAMECH.” A Poem. By James A. Whitney, LL.D. A poem in blank verse of 2,012 Iambic pentameters, an interesting and reverential elaboration of the fourth chapter of Genesis, full of attractive descriptions, with a skilful yet sombre grouping of the early patriarchs, Adam and Cain, with Lamech and his wives. (N. Tibbals & Sons.)

....“LIVE COALS” is the apt title of an authorized collection of discourses delivered during the past year by Dr. T. Dewitt Talmage. As to the “live” character of these “chapters,” there can be no question. They are throbbing with the preacher's heart-beats, and are the intense talks of a living man with living men on living interests, and they are as hot and lurid, with his marvellous imagination, as coals at white heat. Among the topics are such as “Gnats and Camels,” “The Old Folks' Visit,” “Ordinary People,” “The Needle,” “Religion an Antiseptic,” “Religion in Dress,” “The Roller Skating Craze,” “Books,” “Abuse of Trust Funds,” “Easy Divorce,” “Bossism,” and “Capital and Labor.” The treatment is thoroughly Talmagian, which means vivacity, brilliant fancy and crowded illustration, “as interesting as a novel” from beginning to end. There are several engravings, and the volume is an octavo of 678 pages. (Wilbur B. Ketcham.)

....“NUTTIE'S FATHER.” By Charlotte M. Yonge. Miss Yonge is a veteran novelist, her first book, “The Heir of Redclyffe,” which made her reputation, having been published more than thirty years ago. The new generation has new tastes, but that delightful story would be notable at any time, and still holds its own as a classic of its kind. The authoress still deservedly commands an audience, but we cannot say that this last book is up to the level of her first, nor of “The Chaplet of Pearls.” In fact, Miss Yonge is decidedly at her best in the historic novel. “Nuttie's Father” is, however, a very pleasant story of English life, and has sufficient plot to make it interesting throughout, though the story proceeds rather slowly. Her books are always wholesome and instructive. (Macmillan & Co.)

....“THE CHURCH IN THE NATION, Pure and Apostolical, God's Authorized Representative,” is the title of the Bishop Paddock Lectures, 1885, by Henry C. Lay, D.D., LL.D., Bishop of Easton. Bishop Lay delivered only four of these six lectures, being then taken of the illness of which he died six months afterwards. “The Church” which he upholds as national is the Episcopal Church, in which he was a distinguished and zealous bishop, and which he describes as a “Church of prescriptive right,—Legitimacy, Purity and Catholicity.” The lectures are based on the High Church ideal, and on the assumption of its fitness and destiny to become the National Church of the United States. (E. P. Dutton & Co.)

....For “HYPERESTHESIA,” by Mary Cruger, we can only say that it is probably the first work of a writer who may in time do better, and that it is feeble and sentimental to the point of weariness. (Fords, Howard & Hulbert.)

....“FIVE MINUTE DECLAMATIONS.” Selected and Adapted by Walter K. Forbes. This is a more complete little volume than we have ever before seen for the purpose for which it is designed. The selections are all prose, and from the speeches of the greatest orators the world has ever produced. The variety is sufficient to suit the taste of any student who may have occasion to select from it for declamation. We recommend it above any book of the kind of which we have knowledge. (Lee & Shepard.)

....“TELL YOUR WIFE” is a sprightly story, and is cleverly put together so as to keep up the interest of the reader, but it is not of a high order as a literary production, nor a very wholesome kind of reading. It turns upon marital unhappiness, though not of a criminal nature, and it is extremely sensational. The moral, however, is one which cannot be too diligently heeded, and the book will do good if it shall lead to a more perfect confidence between husbands and wives. (Lee & Shepard.)

....“THE STORY OF A RANCH.” By Alice Wellington Rollins. In a bright and racy style, the author gives a very graphic picture of life upon a sheep ranch in Kansas. She writes with an enthusiasm which is quite contagious, of the soil, the climate, the healthful recreations, the profitable occupations, the delightful society, the wonderful growth and prosperity of the country—to sum all up in a few words—of the supreme bliss of a life in Kansas. The story is certainly a very pleasant one and the publishers have done their part in giving it an attractive exterior—both appropriate and tasteful. (Cassell & Co.)

Our Library Table.

Periodicals, Serials and Notes.

....Lippincott's Magazine for January is unrecognizable externally. The cover is white, to represent parchment, and the title is printed in red ink. This is distinctly an improvement, as is also the broad page and larger type in place of the double column. The contents are thus made more readable in appearance,—a thing which has more to do with the success of a publication than is sometimes realized. We do not discover any great change in the nature of the contents, unless it be the introduction of more noted names as authors, (which does not always insure superior quality,) and the reduction of short stories to a single one, “Palingenesis” by Miss Tincker. Two serials are begun: “A Bachelor's Blunder,” by W. E. Norris, the English novelist; and “Taken By Siege,” a New York story, by an anonymous writer. The great feature of this number is George Eliot's “Criticisms on her Contemporaries,” recently unearthed from the Westminster Review of thirty years ago. They evince remarkable critical acumen and foresight. Grant Allen contributes one of his popular scientific essays on “Gray Wethers,” or Druid Stones. Gail Hamilton is never less agreeable to our taste than when she writes on politics, unless it be when she intrudes into the realms of theology. Her smart attack on “Civil Service Reform” is no exception to this statement, and it is unfortunate for Mr Blaine that it should emanate from a member of his own family. We like the “Monthly Gossip” very much, especially Brander Matthews on “The Future Literary Capital of the U. S.” Why is it, that so little of the best poetry which is written seems ever to get into the magazines?

....The Maandbericht of the Netherland's Missionary Society for December records gratefully the Lord's goodness, and the year 1885 was closed with much more joy than 1884 Two or three considerable legacies were received, and the regular contributions were enlarged, so that the outlook is hopeful. A retrospective glance by one of the laborers who has been thirty years in the field is very encouraging. He frankly admits that Kediri is not what it ought to be, yet says that a good work has really been accomplished, in view of which he looks forward to the early and the latter rain which is sure to come. It is pleasant to see such a hopeful spirit, recognizing that there is a seed time and also a harvest time, and refusing to complain because God is pleased to put an interval between the two.

....The Homiletic Review for January surpasses, in our judgment, any number yet issued. It is crowded with good things. The symposiums and other articles in the “Review Section” are ably and as thoroughly treated as the space allows, by such men as Drs. Henry J. Van Dyke, Sr., James M. Ludlow, Howard Crosby, Arthur T. Pierson, President D. S. Gregory, and Professor A. Winchell. The “Sermonic Section” and other departments are admirably sustained. This excellent magazine takes no backward steps; it is constantly improving.

...The Pulpit Treasury for January opens with a portrait of Dr. S. G. Burney, Professor in the Theological School of Cumberland University, Lebanon, Tenn., who contributes a thoughtful sermon on “Faith.” The other sermons in full are by Archdeacon F. W. Farrar on “Christ's Service,” and Rev. Alfred H. Moment, of Brooklyn, on “The Time of Visitation.” Rev. J. L. Harris, of Boston, contributes a good, strong article on “Positive Preaching.” This magazine is now in its third volume, is growing better and better as it grows older, and starts off well in the new year.

....Wide Awake is an excellent magazine for young people. Its attractiveness increases from month to month. The January number opens with a story which gives incidents connected with “Floyd Ireson's Ride,” celebrated by the poet Whittier. “Through the Heart of Paris” is a descriptive article with many illustrations. A very pretty picture, “Three Tobogganese,” is explained by the verse beneath it. In “Ways to Do Things,” Lina Beard gives instructions for making an “Impression Album”—a book of printed flowers and leaves. The “Search Questions in English Literature” have become an important feature of the magazine and one that must be helpful to older children.

....Science has passed into strong hands and has improved very much. Dr. D. C. Gilman of Johns Hopkins University, is now at the head of the management, and associated with him are Prof. Simon Newcomb, Gardiner G. Hubbard, Alex Graham Bell, Prof O. C. Marsh and Mr. J. W. Powell. These gentleman are not only masters in science, but have learned how to put their knowledge in a popular form. The seventh volume began with the number of January 1st. The work of the Coast Survey is defended editorially and by Mr. David P. Todd, courteously but in words not to be misunderstood. The Abbott Collection of stone implements at the Peabody Museum is described; the letters are from Prof. S. P. Langley on The Temperature of the Moon; Sir William Thomson on Prof. Rowland's Gratings; Cyrus Thomas on The Davenport Tablet; by Geo. F. Kunz on a New Meteoric Iron from Western Virginia, Prof. J. S. Newberry on Equatorial Currents in Star and Planetary Atmospheres, and others. There are also astronomical, botanical, and other scientific notes. The number will be highly valued by those interested in scientific research. Science is published every Friday, at 743 Broadway, New York, for $5 a year. A single number costs 15 cents.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

Funk & Wagnalls: The People's Bible: Discourses upon Holy Scripture. By Joseph Parker, D.D. Vol. 2. The Book of Exodus. 8vo pp. 328. $1.50.

Presbyterian Board of Publication: The Professor's Girls. By Annette Lucile Noble. 12mo, pp. 324. $1 25.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co.: Progressive Orthodoxy. A Contribution to the Christian Interpretation of Christian Doctrines. By the Editors of “The Andover Review,” Professors in Andover Theological Seminary. 12mo, pp. 258. $1.

G. P. Putnam's Sons: The Story of the Jews. By James K. Hosmer. 12mo, pp. 381. $1.50.

Charles Scribner's Sons: The Doctrine of Endless Punishment. By William G. T. Shedd, D D. 8vo, pp. 161. $1 50; also,

God's Revelations of Himself to Men, as Successively Made in the Patriarchal, Jewish, and Christian Dispensations, and in the Messianic Kingdom. By Samuel J. Andrews. 8vo, pp. 391. $2.50; also,

A History of German Literature. By W. Scherer. Translated from the Third German Edition by Mrs. F. C. Conybeare. Edited by F. Max Müller. 2 Vols. 12mo, pp. 401-425. $3.50; also,

How To Be Happy Though Married: Being a Hand-book to Marriage. By a Graduate in the University of Matrimony. 12mo, pp 285. $1.25.

UNBOUND BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

Vick's Floral Guide. 1886 Illustrated 8vo, pp. 32 and 128.

Little Talks to Little Missionaries. Packet of 12 32mo tracts. 10 cents. Presbyterian Board.

Sixty-First Annual Report of the Managers of Juvenile Delinquents to the Legislature of the State and the Corporation of the City of New York. 1885.

Lester's Secret. A Novel. By Mary Cecil Hay. (No. 49, Harper's Handy Series.) 16mo, pp. 306. 30 cents; also,

A Country Gentleman. A Novel. By Mrs. Oliphant. (No. 507, Harper's Franklin Square Library.) 4to, pp 77. 20 cents.

War Songs. For Anniversaries and Gatherings of Soldiers, to which is added a Selection of Songs and Hymns for Memorial Day. The Choruses of all the Songs are arranged for Male Voices. 8vo, pp. 96; also,

Fresh Flowers. A Song Book for the Infant Class of Sunday-Schools. By Emma Pitt. Square 16mo, pp. 64; also,

Gems for Little Singers. A Collection of Easy and Pleasing Songs for Primary and Kindergarten Schools and the Nursery. By Elizabeth U. Emerson and Gertrude Swayne, assisted by L. O. Emerson. With Illustrations. Square 16mo, pp. 63; also,

The Puritan. The Race March Galop. Sheet Music. Pp. 5. Oliver Ditson & Co.

PERIODICALS.

January.—The Lutheran Church Review, The Pansy, The Literary News, The Expositor.

February.—The Quiver, Harpers, The Magazine of Art, Cassell's Family Magazine.

NEW BOOKS.

The History of German Literature.

By Professor WILLIAM SCHERER. Translated under the supervision of Prof. Max Müller. 2 vols. 12mo. $3.50.

Professor Scherer's is the first history of German literature worthy to be called at the same time masterly, in a scholarly sense, and popular. It is already a recognized authority of the highest rank in its own country; and this translation, with the sponsorship of the first of Anglo-German scholars, will occupy a place among our own means of instruction which there has been nothing else to fill.

"Professor Scherer has written a history of German literature which is as full of entertainment as it is of instruction, and comprises within convenient space all that is important to know of German literature."—Prof. H. H. Boyesen.

Doctrine of Endless Punishment.

By Professor W. G. T. SHEDD, D.D. 1 vol. 8vo. $1.50.

Dr. Shedd has performed a valuable service in writing this book, which contains a comprehensive and most able defense of the belief of the Church upon the subject. The argument for endless punishment has never been more cogently and clearly stated.

God's Revelations of Himself to Men

As successively made in the Patriarchal, Jewish and Christian Dispensations, and in the Messianic Kingdom. By SAMUEL J. ANDREWS, author of "The Life of Our Lord Upon Earth." 1 vol. Crown 8vo. $2.50.

Dr. Andrews has written a clear and scholarly history of the different ways in which God has revealed himself to man. In showing the increasing fulness of these successive revelations, and in pointing out their relations to one another, he has followed the most interesting line of study in all historical theology.

How To Be Happy Though Married.

Being a Hand-book to Marriage. By a Graduate in the University of Matrimony. 1 vol. 12mo. $1.25.

"We strongly recommend this book as one of the best of wedding presents. It is a complete handbook to an earthly Paradise, and its author may be regarded as the Murray of Matrimony and the Baedeker of Bliss."—Pall Mall Gazette.

 These books for sale by all booksellers, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, by

Charles Scribner's Sons,

743--745 Broadway, New York.

NOW READY.

224 Pages of the choicest gems of Sunday School Songs from more than 100 popular composers.

Hymns of Praise

Contains Music for Each Hymn.

$30 per 100 Copies, in Board Covers.

The book in beautiful Cloth Covers will still be furnished at $40 per 100 Copies.

Hymns of Praise Is the Best and Cheapest.

EXAMINE IT before you buy a new book. Intelligent S. S. workers who appreciate a first-class book are adopting HYMNS OF PRAISE.

BIGLOW & MAIN, 76 East Ninth St., N. Y.
81 Randolph St., Chicago.

JUST PUBLISHED
BY MORRIS COSTER,
1166 Broadway, New York,
NO. 5 OF THE
THIRD VOLUME
OF THE

New Amsterdam Gazette,

Containing among other articles, a sketch of William H. Vanderbilt, by Judge Fitch of New York; Poetry by Revs. Daniel Van Pelt and Sipko Rederus; The Huguenots in Holland; News from Holland and Colonies, etc., etc.

Price per year of 12 monthly numbers, $1.50 on fine paper. First and Second Volumes together, $1 extra. All illustrated with views from Holland, etc.

Subscriptions also taken at the office of THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER.

A. S. BARNES & CO., Publishers of the authorized Hymn and Tune Book for the Reformed Church in America. Write for introductory terms 111 and 113 WILLIAM STREET, NEW YORK

THE NEW MUSICAL
CURRICULUM
BY GEO. F. ROOT.
A Piano Instructor
that has never been excelled.

The regular retail price is $3.00 a copy by mail, postpaid. We will send to any MUSIC TEACHER for examination, a single sample copy, postage paid, on receipt of two dollars.

EXAMINE it yourself and be convinced of its superiority.

Specimen PAGES FREE.

CURRICULUM

PUBLISHED BY
The John Church Co.,
CINCINNATI, OHIO.

JUST ISSUED

BY THE

Presbyterian Board of Publication.

Half-Hours with the Lessons of 1886.

Forty-eight short sermons on the lessons of 1886 by twenty-four prominent Pastors and Preachers.

Specially prepared to aid Superintendents and Teachers.

12mo. Price, in cloth binding, $1.25. Paper binding, 85c.

Westminster Question Book for 1886.

A manual for teachers and older scholars, containing the Text of the Lesson, Helps for Scholars, Questions, Lesson Plan, Golden Text, Home Studies and Catechism.

Price, 15 cents, net.

My Soul, Thou Hast Much Goods.

BY HELEN R. EDSON.

24mo. Fancy Paper Cover. Price, 25 cents

Golden Promises.

SELECTED FROM GOD'S WORD.
BY REV. SAMUEL FULTON.

24mo. Fancy Paper Cover. Price, 25 cents.

Address orders to

JOHN A. BLACK, Business Sup't,
1334 CHESTNUT ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Or, Ward & Drummond, 116 Nassau St., New York, N. Y.

FOR ONE MONTH.

GREAT BARGAINS IN THEOLOGICAL, SUNDAY-SCHOOL AND MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.

FAMILY AND TEACHERS' BIBLES A SPECIALTY.

Come and see at

N. TIBBALS & SONS,
124 Nassau St., New York City.

AGENTS WANTED FOR OUR CHARMING NEW BOOK.

"Some Noted Princes, Authors and Statesmen of Our Time."

By 20 of our best writers—Canon Farrar, Jas. T. Fields, Jas. Parton, Dickens's daughter, and others. Over 60 fine portraits and engravings. ["The book is brimming over with choice and rare things."—N. Y. OBSERVER.] Intelligent young men and ladies can have permanent employment. A few General Agents wanted. THE HENRY BILL PUB. CO., Norwich, Ct.

POPULAR LECTURES.

SUBJECTS

1.—The Romance of the Revolution.
2.—An Evening with Longfellow
3.—The Tudors
4.—Monologue—National Poems and Events

Address MRS. E. T. BARRETT,
SING SING. N. Y

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.

EPPS'S COCOA.

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood, and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins by Grocers, labelled thus:
JAS. EPPS & CO., Homœopathic Chemists. London, England.

THE DINGEE & CONARD CO'S
BEAUTIFUL EVER-BLOOMING

ROSES

Our Great Specialty is growing and distributing ROSES. We have all the latest novelties and finest standard sorts, in different sizes and prices to suit all wants. Over 450 choicest varieties to choose from. We send strong Pot Roses safely by mail to all Post Offices, purchaser's choice of varieties, all labeled,

3 TO 12 PLANTS $1. $8 to $15 per Hundred.

according to value. Two year Roses by express. Our New Guide, 78 pages, elegantly illustrated, Free. Address THE DINGEE & CONARD CO., Rose Growers, West Grove, Chester Co. Pa.

Will be mailed FREE to all applicants, and to customers of last year without ordering it. It contains about 130 pages, 600 illustrations, prices, accurate descriptions and valuable directions for planting all varieties of VEGETABLE and FLOWER SEEDS, BULBS, etc. Invaluable to all, especially to Market Gardeners. Send for it.
D. M. FERRY & CO., Detroit, Michigan.

PILES. Instant relief. Final cure in 10 days, and never returns. No purge, no salve no suppository. Sufferers will learn of a simple remedy Free, by addressing C. J. MASON, 78 Nassau St., N. Y.

NEW MUSIC BOOKS.

Temperance Song Herald.

By J. C. Macy.

For Temperance Lodges and Meetings. A Choice Collection of New Temperance Songs and Glees, with some Old Favorites, and a few Rousing War Songs with Temperance Words. Anybody can "join in the chorus." Price 35 cts. or $3.60 per dozen.

Choice Vocal Duets. Just Published.

A first class set of duets, by such masters as Rubenstein, Nicolai, Campana, Tours, Abt, and others. 26 Duets on 144 large pages. Abts' "Like the Lark," and Rubenstein's "Angel" are good specimens. Price $1.

The Apograph ($1 00) is an excellent collection of Octavo Choruses, Sacred and Secular. Selected by CARL ZERRAHN, for the use of Musical Conventions, etc.

American Song and Chorus Collection. 50 cts.
American Ballad Collection. 50 cts.
American Dance Music Collection. For Piano. 50c.
American Piano Music Collection. 50 cts.

Four large, handsome, and every way desirable collections of good music at low prices. Mailed for 65 cts. each.

Kindergarten Chimes. $1.50 Cloth; $1 Boards. Has received marked commendation from the lovers of the Kindergarten and is a beautiful and valuable book for teachers and children.

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston.
Chas. H. Ditson & Co., 867 Broadway, N. Y.

OUR New Catalogue of Books for family, Sunday-school, ministers, students, or teachers' Library will be sent free to any address on receipt of a postal request. Address PHILLIPS & HUNT, Publishers, 805 Broadway, New York

---

UNIVERSITY
of the City of New York.

JOHN HALL, D.D., LL.D., Chancellor.

1. DEPARTMENT OF ARTS, Tuition Free.
2. DEPARTMENT OF SCIENCE, Tuition Free.
3. SCHOOL OF CIVIL ENGINEERING, Tuition $100.
4. DEPARTMENT OF LAW.
5. DEPARTMENT OF MEDICINE.

 Catalogues, with full particulars of all Courses, may be had upon application to the Registrar.

BEST TEACHERS AMERICAN and FOREIGN, promptly provided for Families, Schools, Colleges Skilled Teachers supplied with Positions. Circulars of Good Schools free to Parents. School Property rented and sold. School and Kindergarten Material, etc.
J. W. SCHERMERHORN & CO.,
AMERICAN SCHOOL INSTITUTE, 7 East 14th St., N. Y

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD
GOLD MEDAL PARIS EXPOSITION—1878.

Agents Make $5 a Day Selling Perfect FAMILY SCALES
Entirely new in principle. Weigh one ounce to 25 pounds. What every family needs and will buy. Rapid sales surprise old agents. FORSHEE & McMAKIN, CINCINNATI, O.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY

GOOD NEWS TO LADIES.

Greatest inducements ever offered. Now's your time to get up orders for our celebrated Teas and Coffees, and secure a beautiful Gold Band or Moss Rose China Tea Set, or Handsome Decorated Gold Band Moss Rose Dinner Set, or Gold Band Moss Decorated Toilet Set. For full particulars address
THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO.,
P. O. Box 289. 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

CLAREMONT COLONY!
CLAREMONT COLONY!
CLAREMONT COLONY!
CLAREMONT COLONY!
CLAREMONT COLONY!
CLAREMONT COLONY!
CLAREMONT COLONY!

A New House every 10 days in the last 6 years. Our village, only 32 months old, has 5 stores, 2 hotels, 2 churches school, newspaper, factory, foundry, 4 steamboats, 2 trains and 2 mails daily. Land rapidly advancing. Send, send send, by all means, send for circulars with 4 maps, 36 Photographic cuts of houses, all about the wonderful growth of our colony, its soil, climate, markets, business opportunities, health, prices, terms, and 96 other distinct subjects. Farms for $3 0 on monthly instalments to those having employment without leaving their situation. Address J. F. MANCHA, Claremont, Surry Co., Va.

PLAID SHAWL GIVEN AWAY!

Through the failure of a large manufacturer of Cashmere Pattern Fringe Shawls, there has come into our hands a large consignment of Plaid Shawls, perfect goods, which we propose to present to the ladies in the following manner: Send us 25 cents for 8 mos. subscription to Farm and Household, a large 32 page illustrated paper, devoted to Farm and Household topics, Stories and general miscellany, and we will send you one of these beautiful shawls FREE by mail postpaid, or we will send 5 shawls and 5 subscriptions to one address for $1.00
Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Address
FARM AND HOUSEHOLD, Box 49, Hartford, Conn.

CURE FOR THE DEAF

Peck's Patent Improved Cushioned Ear Drums
PERFECTLY RESTORE THE HEARING, and perform the work of the Natural Drum. Always in position, but invisible to others and comfortable to wear. All Conversation and even whispers heard distinctly. We refer to those using them. Send for illustrated book with testimonials, free. Address, F. HISCOX, 853 Broadway, N. Y. Mention this paper.

---

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS.

ATLANTIC
Mutual Insurance Co.

NEW YORK OFFICE, 51 WALL STREET
ORGANIZED 1842.

Insures against Marine and Inland Navigation Risks.
And will issue Policies making Loss payable in England.

Assets for the Security of its Policies are more than TEN MILLION DOLLARS.

The profits of the Company revert to the assured and are divided annually, upon the Premiums terminated during the year, Certificates for which are issued, bearing interest in accordance with its Charter.

J. D. JONES, President.
CHARLES DENNIS, Vice President
W. H. H. MOORE, 2d Vice Pres't.
A. A. RAVEN 3d Vice Pres't.
J. H. CHAPMAN, Secretary.

CONTINENTAL
Insurance Co.

Continental Buildings
100 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

Cor. COURT and MONTAGUE STS., BROOKLYN
106 BROADWAY, BROOKLYN, E.D.

Insures against loss by Fire at reasonable rates.

Reserve for re-insurance (Fire Risks)	$1,928,299 35
do do do (Inland ")	25,394 75
Reserve ample for all other claims	449,586 00
Capital paid in cash	1,000,000 00
Net surplus	1,535,221 82
Total Cash Assets, Jan. 1, 1885.	$4,938,501 92

This Company conducts its business under the restrictions of the New York Safety Fund Law. The two Safety Funds together equal $1,200,000.

H. H. LAMPORT, President.
CYRUS PECK, Secretary.

HOME
INSURANCE COMPANY
OF NEW YORK.

OFFICE, No. 119 BROADWAY.

Sixty-fifth Semi-Annual Statement, Showing the Condition of the Company on the first day of January, 1886.

CASH CAPITAL	$3,000,000 00
Reserve Premium Fund	3,111,637 00
Reserve for Unpaid Losses and Claims	378,483 98
Net Surplus	1,227,995 10
Cash Assets	$7,618,116 08

SUMMARY OF ASSETS

Cash in Banks	$245,795 99
Bonds and Mortgages, being first lien on Real Estate	897,550 00
United States Stocks (market value)	2,879,390 00
Bank and Railroad Stocks and Bonds (market value)	1,522,550 00
State and City Bonds (market value)	222,000 00
Loans on Stocks, payable on demand	122,800 00
Interest due on 1st January, 1886	97,056 62
Premiums uncollected and in hands of Agents	358 290 30
Real Estate	1,272,633 77
Total	$7,618,116 08

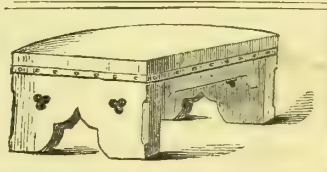
CHAS. J. MARTIN, President.
D. A. HEALD, Vice-President.
J. H. WASHBURN, V. P. & Sec'y.
T. B. GREENE, W. L. BIGELOW, E. G. SNOW, JR., } Ass't Sec's.



Kneeling Bench for use in Church or at Home. Arranged to hold Books.

-CHURCH FURNISHINGS.-

STAINED GLASS MEMORIAL WINDOWS.
MEMORIAL TABLETS OF BRASS, BRONZE, &C.
COMMUNION SERVICES OF SILVER.
S. S. BANNERS, EMBROIDERY, DECORATIONS.
CHURCH FURNITURE.

SEND FOR HAND-BOOKS.

J. & R. LAMB, 59 CARMINE ST., NEW YORK.

BELLS.

McShane Bell Foundry
Finest Grade of Bells,
CHIMES AND PEALS for CHURCHES, &c.
Send for Price and Catalogue. Address
H. McSHANE & CO.,
Mention this paper. Baltimore, Md.

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY.
Bells of Pure Copper and Tin for Churches, Schools, Fire Alarms, Farms, etc. FULLY WARRANTED. Catalogue sent Free.
VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

CINCINNATI BELL FOUNDRY CO
SUCCESSORS-IN BELLS-TO THE
BLYMYER MANUFACTURING CO
CATALOGUE W THOUSANDS TESTIMONIALS
BELLS. CHURCH. SCHOOL. FIRE ALARM

MENEELY & COMPANY,
West Troy, N. Y. Bells,
For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others

---

WANTED An active Man or Woman in every county to sell our goods. Salary $75 per Month and Expenses. Canvassing Outfit and Particulars FREE. STANDARD SILVER-WARE CO., Boston, Mass.

The Home.

AUNT MARJORIE'S CORNER

Harry's Leisure.

"TALKING of resources," said a friend the other day, "you have no idea how I hate to hear the word. My childhood was rendered perfectly wretched by my father's determination that we should all be abundantly provided with resources for our evenings, for our future, for our solitude, for our social hours. Each of us had a garden, and whether or not we liked gardening was never considered; to garden was part of our daily occupation, nine months in the year. As for the practising of our various instruments, it must have driven my poor mother wild had she not been a very saint for patience, and when I think of the tools we had, the games, mechanical toys and puzzles, to say nothing of books on every subject under the sun, I only wonder that we were not the most conceited little prigs in the world. When you begin to talk of resources for your boy, I feel like running out a danger flag and waving it violently."

My friend's opinion to the contrary, I continued to be anxious about Harry's leisure, your Harry and mine. So long as he is in school and engaged over his books, or at home with plenty to do, the boy is comparatively safe, and busy and happy. Ennui does not assail the occupied person, young or old. But

> "Satan finds some mischief still
> For idle hands to do."

That Harry may not be drawn from home, weary with its vacuity and despairing of its dullness, into undesirable companionship or evil associations, the wise parent will provide him with some antidote to dullness, some charm against the tempter. Resources are not always chosen with discretion, and when what should be pleasure assumes the form of a penance, a mistake has obviously been made. To condemn a child who has no aptitude for time and tunes to spend laborious hours in strumming on keys and fingering chords, is almost wholly a pitiable waste of temper, nerves and money, and to give a course in art to one who has no eye for beauty of color or grace of form, may be equally fatuous. Still, it must not be forgotten that the initial attempts of the novice in art and science are usually of the nature of drudgery, and that, left to themselves, few young people would ever acquire anything which requires severe application. It is afterward, not in the beginning, that the student is repaid for the hard work and the persevering effort.

A very limited amount of skill as a performer on the piano or violin, while giving no eclat, while not even pleasing people of cultivated taste, may be a genuine source of enjoyment to Harry and may save his leisure from monotony. A little music will serve as a reason for asking a set of refined companions to gather in his home. Three or four young men, one playing the cornet, another the violin, another the piano, still another the guitar, will find it very charming to spend two or three evenings a week in company, and if their sisters sometimes join the circle it will be a still pleasanter way of passing the time.

Even the banjo, played with skill, is capable of very agreeable effects, and it is so easily learned that Harry will not deem its practice tedious.

The question resolves into this: "Shall we leave our boys' leisure to accident, or shall we in some manner provide for its pleasure as well as its profit?"

No thoughtful person will deny that a man is much better furnished for life if he have some pursuit outside his business or profession, in which he can so interest himself as to relieve himself of the tension which the business implies.

A taste for research in some department of science or literature, a "fad" for collecting bric à brac, old chins, or old books, a turn for tools, so that the professional man shall rest his brain by making chairs and tables or doing other amateur carpentry, a fondness for studying the ways of butterflies and birds, or investigating the life of plants; each of these is a boon not to its possessor only, but to his family and friends.

It would be interesting and helpful if in a direct and practical manner, some of the women whose eyes seek this column would write and tell their experience in finding outlets for their boys' energy, and in providing entertainment for their leisure. Also, I would suggest that some of you shall tell the rest of us whether your sons have any regular duties, any little care or charge for which they are responsible, apart from their school work. Write just as you would talk if we were sitting together around the fire, and address "Aunt Marjorie," at the office of THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER.

A Word to Mothers on the Threshold of the Year.

BY GERTRUDE L. VANDERBILT.

THE memory of some words which were spoken many years ago, came to me as I stood looking at the delicate tracery of the trees against the glow of the sunset on New Year's evening.

A little colored girl stood at my side one New Year's evening—she is a grandmother now, it is so many, many years ago. Her parents and her grandparents had been reared in the family at a time when, if the social position of a servant was more fixed than it is now, yet there was a stronger tie of affection between the head of the house and the dependents, and a union of interest which united them in most kindly relations.

The child and I stood, as I did on this New Year's evening, watching the sky, and in thoughtful mood I said to her, "This is the close of the first day in the new year. The old year is gone, gone forever."

She looked up earnestly at me, and then she said, "I am afraid."

"Of what?" I asked.

"I am afraid of living forever in heaven. I am afraid of living forever anywhere, and I know that my spirit cannot die."

Her earnestness struck me. It was like the awakening of her higher nature. Her soul seemed aroused to the consciousness of its own immortality. An overwhelming recognition of the value of life and the swift passage of time overpowered her, and the child sat down beside me and cried.

I was too young myself to know just how to comfort her, but I wished that some one could speak with her. Through all these intervening years the memory of that hour brings this thought to me: Are we sufficiently sympathetic with the higher moods and feelings of children? Do we credit them with having such? How can we doubt it—here was a child in whom you would least expect to find such emotions! Have you not had such moods when you were yourself a child?

If we were in thorough sympathy with our children and encouraged them to unburden their cares to us, what moulding power we should possess at such times over their hearts and minds.

Alas, for those who do not realize this until it is too late; then they waken to the truth to find that the opinions and views of those whom they love so well are not like their own. Then they stand by powerless, for the plastic mind has taken its impression and it has become hardened into a shape that they cannot approve.

Mothers, because children do not express to you such emotions, do not be led into the fatal error of thinking that they do not possess them. None of us can express all that we feel; many of us cannot express our feelings at all. George Eliot speaks somewhere (I quote from memory) of "the poet's sensibility without his voice—the poet's sensibility that finds no vent but in silent tears—or in an inward shudder at the sound of harsh human tones, or the sight of a cold human eye—this dumb passion brings with it a fatal solitude of soul in the society of one's fellow men."

Your child also may have the "poet's sensibility without his voice," but do not, therefore, mistake his silence. Invite his confidence, for even now he may be standing in thoughtful attitude at the opening door of the new year saying, I am afraid.

Self-Control.

WE cannot always control our thoughts, and our faces sometimes speak more plainly than they ought when we are annoyed or irritated. But our words are our own, and nobody can compel us to speak hastily, if we are in the habit of restraining the impatient tongue and of thinking first, so that we may not have to repent afterwards.

A Heavenly Temper.

"THE life," says Thomas à Kempis, "of a religious man ought not only so to abound with holiness as that the flame of his spirit may be at least equal to his outward behaviour; but there ought to be much more holiness within than is discernable without."

The common sense of this observation is at least as conspicuous as its piety. Unless there be a glow at the heart of the flame, it will diffuse neither brightness nor warmth, and unless the love of the soul be fervent, deep and pure, there will be little radiance. If we are to live so that we shall commend our religion to all whom we meet, we must be much with Jesus. A heavenly disposition can be gained only by sitting at His feet.

Timely Recipes.

COFFEE BREAD.—(To eat in the morning with coffee; used much by the Germans, who dip it in their coffee.) One-half cup of sugar, one egg, one cup of milk, one-half cup of yeast, enough flour for a sponge. When it is risen, add one half cup of butter, worked in with the hand (not kneaded), and flour enough to make it soft, so that it can be patted down into a greased pan to be baked in. When it is risen, put little specks of butter over the top, press them down in, and sprinkle sugar and cinnamon over it. Bake in a quick oven (twenty minutes, when the oven is right). Serve cold. Cut in strips about an inch wide, for breakfast or lunch.

BROWN BREAD (with sour milk).—Two cups of corn meal, three of rye meal, one and one-half cups of flour, one and one-half cups of molasses, three and one-half cups of sour milk, two teaspoonfuls of soda, and a little salt. Steam three hours, and bake one-half hour.

RYE DROP CAKES.—Two cups (or one pint) of milk, one egg, one teaspoonful of butter, one teaspoonful of sugar, one teaspoonful of cream of tartar, one-half teaspoonful of soda. Mix a cupful of rye meal and a cupful of flour. Stir in the cream of tartar, dissolve the soda in the milk, mix all together, and beat well. Then add equal quantities of rye and flour till you have a stiff batter. Bake in muffin-pans.

CORN CAKE.—One cup of corn meal, one cup of milk, one-fourth cup of sugar, two eggs, one and one-fourth cups of flour, one teaspoonful of soda, and two of cream of tartar, three tablespoonfuls of melted butter. Beat up the eggs and sugar, dissolve the soda in the milk and add it, then stir in the corn meal. Mix the cream of tartar and flour together, and add. Put in the melted butter last. Bake in a flat pan.

CORN OR WHEAT MUFFINS.—One cup of meal, one of flour, one and one half cups of sweet milk, a little salt, a tablespoonful of white sugar, one egg, a piece of butter the size of a walnut, one scant teaspoonful of soda, two scant teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar, or two heaping teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Bake in muffin-tins.

CORN MUFFINS (made over night).—One half pint (or a cup) of meal, two eggs, a pinch of salt, a small piece of butter, one and one-half cups of milk. Scald the meal and butter with the milk, when boiling, at night, and let it remain till morning. Then dissolve one-half teaspoonful of cream of tartar in a little water, and stir in the meal. Add the egg and salt, and beat five minutes. Then beat in a half-teaspoonful of soda dissolved in a spoonful of water. Bake in muffin-rings, in a quick oven.—Good Cheer.

Books for the Home.

...."CORRESPONDENCIES OF FAITH AND VIEWS OF MADAME GUION." By Henry T. Cheever. This is an interesting but discursive volume. The author points out many unintended agreements between experimental writers upon religion, even when they belong to widely different folds of the one Christian Church. He quotes from Edwards and Leighton and Carvosso and Fenelon and Wesley and Dr. C. A. Bartol, and brings out the unity of true believers in a refreshing manner. The latter part of the volume states the religious life and history of Madame Guion in some detail, and presents the chief peculiarities of her views in an attractive light. The closing portion is an excellent stimulant and guide in the way of entire consecration and eminent holiness. (Randolph & Co.)

...."FAITH-WORK, CHRISTIAN SCIENCE, AND OTHER CURES." By L. T. Townsend, D.D., Professor in Boston University. The author of this little volume takes a safe middle ground on the subject of healing by faith. He says "the Bible gives support to faith cure," but adds "the Bible encourages the use of visible agencies." He discusses the various methods of treating disease, showing their successes and failures, the use of visible agencies, and especially the use of invisible agencies, the one being supplemental of the other, and contends that "doctors should add religious therapeutics to their other remedies." The author treats the advocates of the "Faith Cure" with fairness, but has no patience with fanaticism or extravagance. The difficulty with this whole subject is that while faith-work is beautiful in every day life it is spoiled by being made a professional occupation, just as personal holiness is deprived of its beauty when professional methods of attaining it are followed in what are termed "Holiness Meetings," as if all religious services were not intended to promote holiness of heart and life. Professors of holiness are not always safe or attractive examples to follow; in fact it has been said of one man by a bishop of the Methodist Church, that "he went to the devil while editing the Guide to Holiness." (W. A. Wilde & Co.)

CHILDREN'S PORTFOLIO.

A Talk About a Bible Verse.

"I write unto you, little children, because ye have known the Father."—1 JOHN 2:13.

SHOULD one of you be playing in the street some pleasant day, when your papa happened to pass by, would you not leave your playmates, run to meet him, put your hand in his, and walk beside him? Suppose a little playmate should call out: "I would not leave if I were you!" would you not answer back, "Oh, yes you would! You do not know papa, or you would love him as I do!"

Or, you might be making me a visit, and receive while here a letter from your home, written by your brother or your sister. You would open it and read:

"Papa sends you a great deal of love, and wishes me to say to you, for him, that you are never out of his mind, and he is joyfully looking forward to the time when he will come for you and bring you home. Every day he is planning how to make you most happy after this separation. He hopes you remember him lovingly, and try continually to do what you know is pleasing to him. Be ever ready to meet him with a light and happy heart, for any day you may see his face and hear his voice."

This letter would fill you with delight, and you would say to me, "It is just like my dear, kind, loving papa to write so—these are his very words!" Although he had asked one of his other children to put them in your letter, you know your papa so well that you would be sure the whole glad message came from him.

The beautiful epistle, or letter, from which I have taken these words, "I write unto you, little children, because ye have known the Father," is filled with loving messages sent by God, our Father, to His little children who are absent from His home; and each one of His little children knows Him so well that their brother, who has written this letter, is sure that it will be received as coming from his Father and theirs. It is very much longer than the one which your dear papa might have written to you, as my little guest; but there are parts of this letter from our Father in heaven which remind me of sentences in that letter.

Let me repeat a few words: "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us." "And this is the promise which he hath promised us, even eternal life." "We have known and believed the love that God hath to us." "We love him because he first loved us." "My little children, let us not love in word, neither in tongue, but in deed and in truth." "This is the love of God that we keep his commandments." "And now little children abide in him that when he shall appear we may have confidence and not be ashamed before him at his coming."

Our brother, John the Evangelist, the Bringer of Glad Tidings, here says to each little brother and sister: "We are sure that God our heavenly Father loves us dearly, and we love Him in return. We remember His promise that He will give to us a life full of unending joy in His beautiful home above. Let us prove to Him our love and gratitude, not only by telling Him we love Him, and are grateful, but by doing those things which are pleasing in His sight. Let us think of Him as close beside us, wherever we may be, and act as His loving, obedient children, watching and waiting for His appearing; for some day we will see Him as He is, our loving Father-God."

There is a sweet little verse which is sometimes sung in our Church. When I sing it, it seems as if it were written just for me, although I am only one of the congregation. I first say to myself: "This is my Father's house; I have come here to be with Him." Then I sing the verse:

"Here would I find a settled rest,
While others go and come;
No more a stranger, or a guest,
But like a child at home!"

Had you invited that little playmate who, as we were supposing, called out to you not to go with your papa, to accompany you home, and the invitation had been accepted, you might have given your friend much pleasure; but after some happy hours spent with you and your papa in the sitting room, your guest would have said "Good-by," and left you without being much better acquainted with your papa than before. It would take a long, long while to learn to know him as well as you do. So some boys and girls come to church when they are invited and enjoy meeting their friends, and listening to the preaching and the singing, who do not know nor love God, and, therefore, cannot feel like children in their Father's house; they feel and act more like strangers or guests.

Perhaps you are saying to yourself, "I do not know God as I know my papa; and I do not love God as I love my papa. I am not as much 'at home' in church as I am in papa's house, and I would be very sorry to leave dear papa and my happy home to go and live with God in heaven."

These are just the very words I would expect to hear from every little child who does not know our heavenly Father; and, therefore, does not love Him. As your little playmate needs to know your papa as you know him, before your papa can be loved as you love him, so must you know God in order to love Him and to want to be where He is.

While in my home, as my little guest, I would want you to be happy and to be contented to remain with me until your papa should come for you; and the more you might love me, the better pleased would I be; but I would not expect you to forget your papa or your home for any reason whatever. I would try to keep them always in your mind, being sure that you would be happier when the time should come for you to go to them.

So, my dear little friend, be as fond of papa as ever, love your home, and be very happy all day long, but do not forget that you have a Father in heaven who loves you more than papa loves you, and has a home more beautiful by far than any home on earth, to which He will bring you by and by if you ask Him. It grieves Him if you do not love Him, and do not care to know Him. Ask Him to teach you from His Holy Book what you need to know about His goodness to you; His care over you; His willingness to make you all that His little child should be. I am sure He will listen to you, just as your dear papa listens when you have something to say to him; and will, even more gladly than your papa, do for you what you ask.

But, perhaps, you do know and love our dear Father in heaven, and are every day trying to please Him; perhaps many of your playmates know and love Him also. I hope with my whole heart it is so; then to you and to them these words are written:

"I write unto you, little children, because ye have known the Father." "Beloved, let us love one another; for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God and knoweth God; for God is love."

"Therefore, O our God and Father,
Little children though we be,
We around Thy throne would gather,
Love and serve and worship Thee."

EMILY.

Migration of Birds.

NOT long ago large numbers of British migratory birds (dead) were found floating in the sea off the Eddystone Lighthouse. It is probable that during their night journey from the Devonshire shores a fog overtook them, and that the bright light proceeding from the lantern of the lighthouse attracted them and so stupefied them that they dashed themselves against the thick glass and were killed in large numbers. The fishermen who trawl for turbot, soles, skate, etc., on the Varne Ridge Banks, between Dover and Calais, not unfrequently hear the sound of flocks of migratory birds flying overhead. The speed at which birds can go when on their migratory flight has been noticed. Quails are said to accomplish 150 miles in a night, and undigested African seeds and plants have been found in the crops of these birds when they reach the French coast....It is said that the migration of birds will foretell severe weather, and it is well known by the bird-catcher that when the larks and other northern birds appear snow and hard weather will follow the flight. These warnings of migratory birds, though apparently insignificant, may be of vast political and even national importance. If the Emperor Napoleon, when on the road to Moscow with his army in 1811, had condescended to observe the flights of storks and cranes passing over his fated battalions, subsequent events in the politics of Europe might have been very different. These storks and cranes knew of the coming on of a great and terrible winter; the birds hastened toward the South, Napoleon and his army toward the North.—Frank Buckland.

Which Do You Like Best?

THERE'S a little frolicsome maid I know
Who has a question she puts to me
Whenever close to my side she comes,
Or into my lap, where she loves to be.

"Which do you like best?" says the little maid,
Her face with comical furrows lined,
"Summer or winter?" and then she waits
To give me a chance to make up my mind.

If "summer" I answer, she pinches me well—
You wouldn't believe that she had such might—
And says, at each nip with her finger and thumb,
"Skeeters! skeeters! Oh, how they bite!"

If "winter" I say, she will double her fists
And pommel me well; and at every blow,
"Snow-balls! snow-balls!" she cries aloud,
And laughs to find that she hurts me so.

'Tis a pretty play, and I do not care
How thick the snow-balls or "skeeters" fall;
For I love both summer and winter time,
But I love my darling the best of all.

—Josephine Pollard, in Harper's Young People.

A BEE'S working tools comprise a variety equal to that of the average mechanic. The feet of the common working bee exhibit the combination of a basket, a brush and a pair of pincers. The brush, the hairs of which are arranged in symmetrical rows, is only to be seen with the microscope. With this brush of fairy delicacy, the bee brushes its velvet robe to remove the pollen dust with which it becomes loaded while sucking up the nectar. Another article, hollowed like a spoon, receives all the gleanings the insect carries to the hive.

NEXT Easter falls on the latest date on which it possibly can occur, April 25th, under the rule of the Council of Nice, which decrees that Easter shall be observed on the Sunday after the full moon following the 21st of March. Its earliest possible date is March 22d. It is 152 years since Easter day has been so late. It will not again fall on that day till 1943 Ash Wednesday will fall this year on the 10th of March.—Boston Journal.

Little Heads Together.

ENIGMA.

I am a proverb of 19 letters.
My 12, 13, 4, 3, is a place in which public assemblies are held.
My 11, 8, 18, is a luminary.
My 5, 17, 7, is a place to be avoided.
My 1, 19, 2, 16, is abhored by farmers.
My 14, 10, 9, 6, is used by fishermen.
My 15, 8, 18, every boy loves.

BEHEADINGS.

1. Behead a young lady and leave assistance.
2. Behead something little and leave a girl.
3. Behead a great noise and leave something that should be carefully handled.
4. Behead an adjective meaning acid and leave a possessive pronoun.
5. Behead an adjective frequently used and leave something cold.
6. Behead a sleeping vision and leave a quantity of paper.
7. Behead the earth and leave a part of the ear.
8. Behead a journey and leave to tear open.
9. Behead an unintentional fault and leave what you use every day.
10. Behead a small animal and leave a large one.
11. Behead something used by carpenters and leave an indisposition.
12. Behead a fern and leave a garden tool.

DIAMOND.

1. In butcher. 2. Essential to a lawn. 3. Diminished. 4. A part of Syria. 5. A great general. 6. To disturb. 7. A mournful piece of music. 8. Part of an active verb. 9. In eventually.

Answers to Puzzles of December 30th.

Double Zigzag.—

A G U E
E N V Y
B A A L
N E A P
O G R E
L I E F
L U L L
O D I N
A N A S
E A S Y

Zigzags.—An April Day. Evangeline.

Decapitations.—1. J-am. 2. O-pen. 3. H-and. 4. N-ode. 5. M-anna. 6. F-ought. 7. E-mend. 8. R-anker. 9. R-ankle. 10. I-con. 11. S-team. John M. Ferris.

Two Diamonds.—1.

B
N O E
B O O K S
E K E
S

2.

S
A T E
S T O V E
E V A
E

PRIZES.

Correct Answers from Rappie Bowne and "Midwout." "Rappie" is to receive the prize for the best list of answers made in November and December, and "Midwout" the prize for the best puzzle. The latter will please send name and address to Cousin Lois.

Gute Nacht.

"GOOD night!" she said, turning away,
But lingered, time suborning;
There were so many things to say,
Her eyes looked still "Good morning!"
She held a candle in one hand,
Its flame the other shielding;
"Good night!" she said, and then did stand,
Half-going, and half-yielding.

There was a flash, a morning glow
Fell on her neck and shoulder.
Ah, me! it did bewilder so,
To stand there and behold her.
Her mouth was like a half-blown rose,
Such laughter in it hidden;
And so bewitching was her pose,
Like fruit, high-hung, forbidden.

She seemed to dare me, as she stood,
Now chatting and now heaving;
She looked so sweet, and pure and good—
A star, just disappearing.
She seemed to dare me, if I durst
One instant, to detain her;
She guessed I loved her, chief and first—
I knew how to explain her.

Between her lips, that said "Good night!"
Her heart, that counseled waiting,
The East began to break with light,
And still we stood debating.
She said "Good night!" I could not go!
I took nor heed, nor warning;
I'd loved her long, I'd loved her so,
I kissed her there "Good morning!"

—Rev. J. E. Rankin, D.D., Orange, N. J., in The Advance.

Dutch Etiquette Again.

EDITOR OF THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER: I was surprised in looking over a recent number of your paper to find that place had been given to a singularly written article on Dutch Etiquette, taken from the Home Journal. If that paper is destined, as its name indicates, to visit the homes of American people, it could be wished that more care should be exercised in the selection of its reading matter.

The writer of the article speaks of things which, as she says, "only a woman would notice," and being also a woman with a special interest in knowing of the things which are practised by "Our Dutch," I take the liberty of placing my own experience beside hers for comparison.

I am a thorough American, educated in New England schools, and have practised my profession of artist-teacher in several cities of the Union. Not many years since I wished to visit Holland, and wrote letters of inquiry to several acquaintances who had travelled largely and had included Holland in their journeyings. The reply was the same in substance from each of these persons: "You will have less difficulty in travelling alone in Holland than perhaps in any other country. With the proper letters of introduction you will receive the greatest courtesy and politeness, and will find the Hollanders especially charming in their home life. They have all the politeness of the French with the sincerity of the German." I studied the Dutch language a little and read "Holland and its People," by De Amicis, the gifted Italian who, with the keen eye of insight, seizes the genius and character of a people, and with a pen which seems almost inspired gives one an inward glance at their life and heart. De Amicis, who has studied so deeply the character of the Dutch, led me to believe that I should find them all that could be wished in politeness and courtesy.

I went to Holland for the express purpose of studying the manners and customs of the Dutch people. I passed three weeks in the best hotels of Amsterdam and The Hague, was visited by and visited a number of families to whom I had letters, and was for nine weeks resident in a well-to-do Dutch family in The Hague. To aid me in my study of the manners of the people in public and private life I held many conversations in the Dutch language with Hollanders of all classes of society. The result of this study and observation was to show me that politeness and chivalrous deportment was the rule rather than the exception.

In the musical festivals, which are held in the open air and attended by thousands of all ranks and classes, the most delightful intercourse prevails. In these gatherings the keynote of Dutch life is very easily taken. In the pauses of the music the heads of a household often make the rounds of the assembly, greeting friends, stopping here and there for a little longer talk, and always the Dutchman is the gentleman in courtesy. A natural and dignified air marks the conduct of the ladies and gentlemen with each other. Anything else would be a little out of character, for the Dutch conduct seems to be regulated by reflection and consideration, and all their actions have a corresponding dignity. I went into a number of libraries, confectioneries and other places accompanied by Dutch ladies, but although we saw gentlemen there we supposed them to be gentlemen, and never "retired precipitately" or saw any other ladies do so.

I inquired particularly, of many with whom I conversed, as to the relative place of man and wife in the family, and received invariably the same answer. Neither is superior; man and wife have equal right and authority in the household. Each being supreme and independent in his (or her) own department, the best harmony is secured.

I met many peasants in Holland, but few boors in our sense of the word. I do not remember a single case of rudeness, and I went all over Holland alone. Many a Dutchman went out of his way to do me a kindness or to show me a courtesy, as I gratefully remember, and it is only a feeling of simple justice which impels me to write these few lines out of my experience among "Our Dutch" in their native country.

C. WEST VAN HELDEN.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 14th, 1886.

The Weather and the Stars.

LAST week was the coldest week we have had in this vicinity in many years. The mean temperature was about 15½ degrees. The storm was coincident with an outbreak on the sun. At the beginning of the week a rectangular spot above medium size appeared on the sun, and was followed in the latter part of the week by a group of active spots of small size, surrounded by distinct faculae.

The rainfall last year in this region was seriously deficient and wells are beginning to run low. It amounted to nearly 36 inches, against 55½ inches in 1884, nearly 42 inches in 1883, and 47½ inches in 1882. The last minimum sun spot period was one of drought. The present minimum period, which began at about October, 1884, is thus far of the same character.

Venus continues brilliant in the western sky in the early evening, will rise 10 degrees in northern declination this month and will continue to move eastwardly until the 29th, then westward until March 9th, and then again eastward. In the spring this lovely planet will again be at its greatest brilliancy.

Mars is rapidly advancing to opposition, when the earth will pass between it and the sun. It is increasing rather rapidly in apparent size and brightness, and is seen soon after eleven o'clock in the evening, well up in the eastern sky, a little south of east, and will be readily distinguished by its ruddy light. Just below Mars, soon after eleven o'clock, and not far above the horizon, Jupiter is seen, now constantly increasing in brightness and apparent size. This greatest planet is also approaching opposition, an event that will occur in about two months. On the 24th Jupiter and the moon will be very near each other, being separated by only about a quarter of a degree. The spectacle will be an interesting one.

F.

THE YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION will hold its thirty-third anniversary in Association Hall, 23d street corner 4th avenue, on Monday, January 25th, at 8 o'clock P. M. An abstract of the report of the work of the Association and its branches will be read, and addresses will be delivered by Right Rev. Henry C. Potter, D.D., Assistant Bishop of the Diocese of New York, and Hon. Seth Low. Admission is free by ticket, which can be secured on application at Association Building.

THE NEW YORK SOCIETY FOR THE SUPPRESSION OF VICE will hold its twelfth anniversary in Association Hall, corner of 23d street and 4th avenue, New York city, Tuesday evening, January 26th, 1886, commencing at 8 o'clock.

The work of this Society is one that should enlist the sympathy and support of all good citizens; its primary object being to suppress the sources of immorality that especially assail the young.

Addresses by Right Rev. F. D. Huntington, D.D., Bishop of Central New York, and Rev. A. J. F. Behrends, of Brooklyn. The annual report will contain matter of especial interest.

THE EVANGELISTIC SERVICES, which opened in Washington Hall, Paterson, N. J., on Monday, Jan. 4th, were closed at that place on Thursday evening of last week. The hall was crowded in every part, and many went away unable to get in. Two union services were held on Friday evening, one in the First Baptist Church, and the other in the Second Presbyterian Church, with which the two weeks of union effort closed. At these closing services there was a large attendance, and a deep interest taken in all the exercises. The inquiry meeting, which in the hall followed the general services, was omitted, but quite a number rose for prayer. It is estimated that an average of fifty persons rose for prayer each night during the meetings, many of whom retired to the inquiry room, where the pastors and a number of Christian laymen talked and prayed with them. The most of them seemed to be under deep conviction of sin, and some, before the meetings closed, professed conversion. While a large majority of those who attended these meetings were Christians, there were hundreds of the unconverted present, and non-church goers, which class it was hoped might be reached. There is but one opinion about the influence of these meetings upon the community, that it is widespread and excellent; that it has turned the attention of the people to religious subjects. Christians feel their reviving effects, and the churches were unusually well attended last Sabbath, many strangers being present, drawn hither undoubtedly by the influence of the union meetings. The meetings were all conducted by the pastors, Mr. and Mrs. Stebbins and a choir of one hundred and fifty singers assisting in leading the great congregations in the service of song. The churches are following up the advantages gained by the union effort with meetings in their places of worship every night. By this means they hope to gather in many.

THE summaries in the Congregational Year-Book show the following: Whole number of churches, 4,170; gain, 78 Whole number of ministers, 4,043, of whom 1,179 are without pastoral charge. Number of church members, 418,564; gain, 17,015; added on confession, 21,729.

Financial.

TUESDAY, Jan. 18th.

OF specie $1,400,000 was shipped last week. The Bank of England gained $2,600,000 in round numbers in gold. The Bank of England, Bank of France and Bank of Germany hold £82,890,148 in gold, against £73,073,323 at this time last year. Our National Treasury reduced its gold balance last week $2,326,817, and since January 1st has lost $7,600,000 in gold and gained $2,900,000 in silver. The Associated Banks reported a decrease of $527,800 in loans, and increase of $3,990,100 in specie and of $2,301,700 in legal tenders and of $6,505,000 in deposits. Nearly 5 millions were added to the surplus of reserve, raising it to $33,015,950. The banks hold in cash only about 9 millions less than at this time last year. The deposits exceed the loans by over 50 millions or only 8 millions less than a year ago. Money was abundant at 1 1-2 to 2 per cent on call, but yesterday the rate was 2 to 3 per cent, chiefly 2 1-2. The Bank of England rate remains at 4 per cent.

The valuation of imports of merchandise at this port last week was $9,251,076, and of exports $5,670,-839. Sterling exchange sold yesterday for $4.87 for 60 day bills and $4.89 1-2 for demand.

The Stock Market is depressed by the shipment of gold, the cutting of rates by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, and the uncertainty in regard to the coinage of silver dollars. Nearly the whole list is lower. The price of bonds is fairly well maintained, but concessions are made even here. There is no reason why the Baltimore & Ohio should be regarded or rated as a New York road. It was built to divert trade to Baltimore, has done a profitable business, has accumulated a large surplus after paying large dividends, but has not diverted trade to any considerable degree to Baltimore. It now seeks to rule rates between New York and Chicago and the Northwest. It wants the world. The war it is making is unreasonable.

Wheat is higher in New York than in Liverpool and is low enough here. It is now said that the reserves of wheat in England are not excessive. Quotations for grain yesterday were: Wheat here 88 5-8, in Chicago 78 1-4; corn here 48 7-8, in Chicago 36 1-8; oats here 36 3-4, in Chicago 28 1-4. The closing quotations for cotton yesterday were: Jan. 9.23-25; Feb. 9.27-28; March, 9.38-39; April, 9.50; May, 9.60-61; June, 9.70-71. Hay and straw are firm but the demand is not brisk. Choice Timothy is quoted at 90 to 95 cents, clover mixed 70 to 75; long rye straw scarce and firm at $1.05 and $1.10, short rye 65 to 75, oat straw 40 to 50, wheat straw 40 to 65 cents.

Trade is affected by strikes actual or threatened, by uncertainty in regard to the action of Congress on the tariff and coinage of silver dollars. The chief cause of depression, however, is over-production. There is more of pretty much everything than there is a demand for—more labor, more money, and more of the products of labor.

Unauthorized use of the name of Dr. Mott, late Government Chemist, by the Royal Baking Powder Co.

The statements published by the Royal Baking Powder Company as emanating from me and reflecting upon the purity of "Cleveland's Baking Powder" are false. I never knew of such publications until I saw them in print on the fifteenth of this month, January, 1885.

I have, on several occasions during the past few years and without the knowledge of the manufacturers, analytically examined cans of Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder purchased by myself in the markets, and I take pleasure in recommending it to public favor as a baking powder that can be relied upon for purity, wholesomeness and strength, as I have never found it to be adulterated with Lime or to be impure in any sense whatever.

NEW YORK, January 16, 1885.

Dr. H A. MOTT,

Professor of Chemistry New York Medical College, &c.

News of the Week.

(Continued from page five.)

In Congress the House passed the Hoar Presidential Bill....The water famine in Cleveland, O., was caused by needle ice getting into the pipes; the danger is now past....There is a lockout of thousands of cigar makers in New York, because the manufacturers decide to fight....The reports of Dairy Commissioner Brown and Commissioner Perry have been made public in Albany....All the large mills near Fulton, N. Y., on the Oswego river are idle because of the ice gorge. The loss is estimated at $75,000....Six persons were frozen to death in South Carolina....An adverse decision has been rendered against the Pennsylvania Railroad in the case of South Pennsylvania and Beach Creek roads.... Sad reports of wrecks at sea and loss of life continne to come....The last fall of snow and cold weather is said to be a good protection to the wheat crop.

MONDAY, 18 —The Conservative party in England is urged to take a decided stand and precipitate action....The Franco-Malagasy treaty has been ratified in France.. Archbishop Walsh denounced the English press severely yesterday....The ministry of Greece have threatened the King that they would resign unless he assented to an alliance with Servia and the maintainance of an army on a war footing....The French are to have a resident Minister at Madagascar....Two schooners given up as lost have arrived in port, with sailors suffering greatly....Miss Kate Bayard died suddenly of heart disease in Washington....Fire damp in a coal mine in the Rocky Mountains caused a serious loss of life and property. ....The report of the Inter State Commerce Committee is ready for Congress... A woman in Ohio was bought for five cents.... The Sub-Treasury vacancy in New York remains still unfilled....The cigar makers are ready for the lockout, which will take place Tuesday night....A woman was burned to death in Connecticut ...Many casualities are reported from different quarters from fire.

TUESDAY, 19 —Baltimore and Ohio road threatens to extend its senseless war on rates....In Florida, it is now certain, all orange trees were frozen last week. The foliage on the trees is black. How much the trees are injured not yet known ... Ocean vessels are coming in daily more or less injured by the storm....Daniel A. Jones, ex-President of Chicago Board of Trade, bequeathed $250,000 to Old Peoples' Home, $10,000 each to Presbyterian Foreign and Home Missions and Hospital ..Boycotting is ordered in Syracuse, N. Y....Dr. Zukertort won yesterday the fourth game of chess championship, making three for him.... Miss Bayard's body is to be buried this afternoon at Wilmington....Subscriptions of $37,000 reported last evening in aid of Mr. Parnell....The Queen will not sign a bill giving Ireland a parliament. The Protestants of Northern Ireland protest against a separate Irish government....Bismarck sends a conciliatory letter to the Pope.... Mr. Stead, editor of Pall Mall Gazette, was released from prison yesterday....Another flood in Montreal.

Notice to Subscribers.

The little yellow label on your wrapper informs you to what time your subscription is paid. Kindly consult same, and if in arrears remit the amount due.

FOR DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, Depression of Spirits and General Debility, in the various forms; also as a preventive against Fever and Ague, and other Intermittent Fevers, the "Ferro Phosphorated Elixir of Calisaya," made by Caswell, Hazard & Co., New York, and sold by all druggists, is the best tonic; and for patients recovering from Fever or other sickness has no equal.

Market Report.

Review of the New York Market for Butter, Cheese, etc. Reported by DAVID W. LEWIS & Co., Produce Commission Merchants, 49 Pearl St., New York.

Commission on Butter, Eggs, Poultry, etc., is five per cent; Flour, Grain, etc., 2½ per cent. Marking-plates furnished when desired.

NEW YORK, January 16, 1886.

BUTTER.—Receipts for the week, 18,654 pks.; exports 3,500 pks.

There was intensely cold weather, the thermometer ranging from 20° to 30° below zero through the dairy districts, and this together with a severe and extended snow storm diminished receipts and caused a firmer market. Strictly fancy Western fresh make was in light supply and had good sale at 33a35c. Most of the creamery butter arriving was poor and prices were rangy, say from 25a30c. All grades of State butter have ruled dull. Finest October dairy make had most enquiry at 23a26c., and strictly fancy entire dairies at 20a22c., and we note, say of 150 firkins fine Delaware and Chenango for export at 18c; also 300a400 tubs finest held June creamery, well kept, at 17c., and 200 tubs fall make, Western creamery make, poorly kept, at 11½c. Market closes with large lines of fair to good N. Y. State butter offering at 12a16c., and one line of 1,000 packages, odds and ends of Western make, offered at 6c., and 5c. bid. We quote:

Solid silky grain-fed fresh Elgin creamery	33 @35
Fancy fresh grain-fed Eastern creamery	33 @35
Heavy bodied, grainy, high-flavored dairy, fresh	25 @27
A strictly fancy Delaware dairy, entire	21 @22
Common to fair dairies [nominal]	13 @18
Fine summer firkins	— @20
Fresh Western imitation creamery	22 @25
Western creameries, fancy summer make	16 @17
" " good held butter	10 @15
" store-packed butter	7 @10
Winter make, common roll butter	9 @13
Grease	4 @ 5

CHEESE.—Receipts for the week, 11,365 boxes; exports 20 997 boxes.

There was only moderate business done for export. Fancy colored cheese was most enquired for and sold both for export and home trade at 9¾a10¼c., while white went slowly at 9¼a9½c. There was some call for full cream early make cheese at 7a8c., and night milk skims at 6a7c., and full skims at 3a5c. On the whole, there was less business than was expected, and prices were slightly in buyers' favor. We quote:

	Fancy.	Fine.	Faulty
Factory, full cream.	9½@10¼	9 @ 9¼	6 @ 8
Night's milk.
" skimmed.	6 @ 7	4 @ 5	2 @ 3

EGGS.—Receipts for the week, 6,489 bbls., and imports 3,889 cases.

Market advanced 3a4c. per doz. immediately following our last, and eggs sold all through the fore part of the week at 28a30c. Friday and to-day there were more offering, and with prospects of warmer weather market closes weak at about last week's quotations. We quote:

Fresh laid, per doz	26 @27
Western and Canada, per doz	25 @26
Limed eggs, per doz	19 @21

POULTRY AND GAME.—Fresh arrivals of freshkilled stock have had good demand. Game has been taken at full prices. We quote:

Dressed turkies, per lb	11 18
do chickens, per lb	11 12
do fowls, per lb	8 12
do ducks, per lb	12 15
do geese, per lb	10 12
Quail, per doz	— $2 00
Partridges, per pair	75 $1 00
Grouse, per pair	75 $1 12

Our readers will confer a favor upon the publishers of this paper and, perhaps, find it to their own advantage if, when answering an advertisement found in these columns, mention is made that it was seen in THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER.

Publisher's Department.

LEARN THE TRUTH ABOUT Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar. It softens the cough, relieves the windpipe and bronchial tubes of mucus, tones the lungs and the membranes of the throat, and restores to the organs of respiration their natural strength and vigor. 75c., 50c. and $1.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap heals and beautifies, 25c.
German Corn Remover kills Corns, Bunions, 25c
Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye—Black & Brown, 50c.
Pike's Toothache Drops cure in 1 Minute, 25c.

Good-night, my love; sweet be thy sleep.
Thy dreams with rapture filled.
With prayers that thou might happy be
My throbbing heart is filled

These are words from a very musical serenade, which are of a number of very acceptable songs and pieces, sent us by the publishing firm of Oliver Ditson & Co., Boston. Their titles are:

Good-night, my Love, Serenade, (30 cts.,) Song by Rudolph King.

Unless I change my Mind, (25 cts.) Song by F. T. Baker.

The Mountain Fern, (30 cts.) Easy piano piece by J. Pridham.

The Fairies Schottische, (30 cts.) Easy piano piece by J Pridham.

Spring, (35 cts.) A Reverie for Piano, by Blind Boone.

Excursion Polka, (35 cts) By H. Zur Nieden.

Mikado March, (30 cts) Arranged by J. C. Macy.

Beautiful Ever-Blooming Roses.

All lovers of Choice Flowers should send to the Dingee & Conard Co., West Grove, Pa., for some of their lovely Roses. These Roses are certain to bloom, and are the finest in the world. They are sent safely by mail, post paid, to all post-offices in the United States This company is perfectly reliable, and noted for liberal dealing. They give away in Premiums and Extras more roses than most establishments grow. Send for their New Guide, a complete treatise on the Rose, (78 pages, elegantly illustrated) free. See advertisement in this paper.

The greatest consolation to one growing old, is the improved surroundings which come with age, experience and wisdom.

We are reminded of this fact by the appearance of the new Seed Annual of D. M. Ferry & Co., the celebrated seedsmen of Detroit, Mich. (They enjoy the enviable reputation of being the widest and best known firm in any business in the United States.) Millions of people, gardening both for profit and pleasure, have found ever-increasing satisfaction and delight in using their seeds.

Every one desiring seeds of the highest type and best quality, should secure their Annual. It is sent free on application.

People with gray hair may conceal from the world the fact that they are becoming aged, and passing on to decay, by the use of Hall's Hair Renewer. It is a fact that this article renews, cleanses, brightens, invigorates and restores faded or gray hair to its youthful color and lustre, cheaply, quickly and surely.

No Opium in Piso's Cure for Consumption. Cures where other remedies fail. 25c.

That feeling of extreme debility is entirely overcome by Hood's Sarsaparilla. "I was tired all over, but Hood's Sarsaparilla gave me new life and strength," says a Pawtucket, R. I., lady. Hood's Sarsaparilla is sold by all druggists. $1 a bottle, or six bottles for $5.

MARRIAGES.

AMERMAN—PROVOST.—At the residence of the bride's uncle, Mr. Abm. Quick, Jan. 5th, by Rev. C H. Pool, L. H. Amerman to Anna M. Provost, all of Raritan.

BROOKS—ADAIR.—At the residence of the bride's uncle, Belleville, N. J, by Rev. Ralph W. Brokaw, Mr. William C. Brooks, of Newark, and Miss Jennie Adair, of Wallingford, Vt.

COOK—VAN NESTE.—In the Reformed church, Kiskatom, N. Y., Jan. 13th by Rev. George J. Van Neste, assisted by Rev. Wm. D Buckelew, Richard T. Cook, of Trenton, N. J., and Sarah S. Van Neste, only daughter of the officiating clergyman.

HASBROUCK—MUNN.—At Kingston, N. Y., Jan. 13th, by Rev. J. G. Van Slyke, at the residence of the bride's mother, Hon. Gilbert D. B. Hasbrouck and Julia M. Munn, eldest daughter of the late Rev. Anson F. Munn.

HOLMES—CARPENTER.—On Jan. 13th, at the home of the bride, South Schodack, N. Y., by Rev William Veenschoten, Mr John K. Holmes, of South Schodack, to Miss Mary Kate Carpenter, daughter of the late John W. Carpenter.

MALE—RUOPP.—At Niskayuna, N. Y., on Jan 9th, by Rev. C. P. Ditmars, Edwin Male, Jr., of Watervliet, N. Y., to Barbara Ruopp, of Niskayuna, N. Y.

ROYAL—VEDDER.—Jan. 13th, at Schoharie, N. Y., at the residence of the bride's parents, by the Rev. E. Vedder, assisted by the Rev. John G. Smart, Thomas Cooke Royal, M.D., of Mt. Pleasant, Mich., and Carrie Ellene, daughter of the officiating clergyman.

SAXE—OVERBAUGH.—Dec. 29th, 1885, by Rev. George J. Van Neste, John F. Saxe and Isabella, daughter of Matthew D. Overbaugh, all of Kiskatom, Greene Co., N. Y.

DEATHS.

Obituary notices five cents per line (nine word to the line.) For subscribers we will insert fifteen lines free; all lines in excess of that number will be charged same as non-subscribers.

DE WITT.—At Elizabeth, N. J., on Sunday morning, January 17th, after a short illness, Margaret W., wife of Alfred De Witt.

Notices and Acknowledgments

THE HUDSON RIVER MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION will meet in the Reformed Church of Saugerties on Monday, Jan. 25th, at 3 P M. Exegesis by Revs. A. J. Sebring and W. A. Shaw—Luke 22: 18: "The fruit of the vine." Sermon by Rev. W. D. Perry. Essay by Rev. J. Forsyth, D D. Members expecting to attend please send postal to Rev. D. Wortman, D.D., Saugerties, N. Y.

J. B. DRURY, Sec'y.

Woman's Board of Foreign Missions.

RECEIPTS FROM DEC. 12, 1885, TO JAN. 11, 1886.

From Saugerties, aux., $28.24; Nellie Amerman Mission Circle, 15; Married Women's Society, Zeeland, Mich., 40; Greenport, Col. Co., N.Y., aux., 31; Bethlehem, Albany Co., N.Y., 33.44; Newburgh, aux., 125; Rev. John Forsyth, D.D., 25; 5th ave. and 29th st., N.Y. city, 117.50; New Hurley, N.Y., 10.38; 1st Coxsackie, N.Y., 22; Utica, aux., 42.67; Jamaica, L.I., 10.80; Madison ave., N.Y. city, 200; Catskill, N.Y., 72; Freehold, N.J., 50; Mrs. Samuel W. Howland, 5; Miss Agnes Baird, 8; Treasure Seekers' Band, North Ch., Newark, N.J., 62; Special birthday thank offering from same, 4; Cohoes, N.Y., 30.20; Fonda, N.Y., 21.65. Total, $953.88.

Parties wishing to remit will please do so by check, if possible, made payable to the Treasurer, or by registered letter, but not by Post-Office order.

MRS. PETER DONALD, Treasurer,
39 West 46th street, New York City.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity strength and wholesomeness. More economica than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans. ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall-st., N. Y.

JAMES PYLE'S

PEARLINE

The Great Invention,
For EASY WASHING,
IN HARD OR SOFT, HOT OR COLD WATER.
Without Harm to FABRIC or HANDS,
and particularly adapted to Warm Climates.
No family, rich or poor, should be without it.
Sold by all Grocers, but beware of vile imitations. PEARLINE is manufactured only by

JAMES PYLE, NEW YORK.

AYER'S
SUGAR
CATHARTIC COATED PILLS

CURE

Headache, Nausea, Dizziness, and Drowsiness. They stimulate the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels, to healthy action, assist digestion, and increase the appetite. They combine cathartic, diuretic, and tonic properties of the greatest value, are a purely vegetable compound, and may be taken with perfect safety, either by children or adults. E. L. Thomas, Framingham, Mass., writes: "For a number of years I was subject to violent Headaches, arising from a disordered condition of the stomach and bowels. About a year ago I commenced the use of Ayer's Pills, and have not had a headache since." W. P. Hannah, Gormley P. O., York Co., Ont., writes: "I have used Ayer's Pills for the last thirty years, and can safely say that I have never found their equal as a cathartic medicine. I am never without them in my house." C. D. Moore, Elgin, Ill., writes: "Indigestion, Headache, and Loss of Appetite, had so weakened and debilitated my system, that I was obliged to give up work. After being under the doctor's care for two weeks, without getting any relief, I began taking Ayer's Pills. My appetite and strength returned, and I was soon enabled to resume my work, in perfect health."

Ayer's Pills,

PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists.

The Church.

Second Reformed Church of Jersey City.

THE pastor, Rev. P. D. Van Cleef, preached his thirty sixth anniversary sermon on Sabbath, January 3d, taking as a text the 5th and 6th verses of the 4th chapter of Isaiah. His theme was The Pillar of Fire and Cloud over the Home and the Church. By a rapid glance over the history of the Church since the Christian era, and especially by a comparison of the present state of Christianity in the world with that of former periods, he showed that the promise of the text had been amply fulfilled, and that the Church is still marching on toward an era of prosperity such as the world has never seen. There are typical periods in the history of the Church, periods of darkness before the dawn, of awakening zeal, of widening influence, of revival in spiritual life, and the present seems to be such a period. It is true, we have cause to lament the prevalence of crime in every form—of Sabbath breaking, of dishonesty, of immorality and infidelity, but new forces are organized for the suppression of these evils. The Lord has lifted up a standard against the incoming flood of iniquity. There has never been such a general and powerful resistance and protest against evil as we see to-day in our churches and other benevolent and religious organizations. In 1813 there were in Princeton College only two or three students who professed religion. William and Mary College was a hot bed of infidelity, the students making the Sabbath a day for hunting and other sports. Drinking habits prevailed among ministers and people, and even a solemn ordination service was made an occasion of festivity and copious drinking, sometimes ending with a ball. In 1824 public military honors were paid to Gen. Lafayette in New York on the Sabbath, and a public meeting held in 1827 at the City Hall by Rev. Dr. Gardner Spring and other influential gentlemen for promoting the better observance of the Sabbath, was violently interfered with by a crowd of opposers.

We lament the lack of spirituality, but we must not forget how Whitfield, and the Tennents, and the Frelinghuysens were persecuted for preaching the doctrine of Justification, and insisting upon the necessity of regeneration.

This century has witnessed an amazing progress in the spread of Christianity over the world, and in the growth of a vital and intelligent piety and a higher toned morality in the churches of this country. If scandals are frequent among the clergy and the people professing religion, it may be said that there is a demand for a higher standard of Christian living, and a keener sensitiveness to the violations of the laws of morality and the precepts of the Gospel. Derelictions which formerly were allowed to pass unnoticed now produce a stir in the community. Progress is seldom made in straight lines and steadily forward. The Israelites were led by a circuitous path through the wilderness. So the Church in all ages has been conducted, but the pillar of fire and cloud has always led the way and hovered over the tabernacle of God's people and over their homes and domestic altars. On every dwelling place of Mount Zion and upon all her assemblies the Lord has created a cloud and smoke by day and the shining of a flaming fire by night, and upon all the glory has been a defence. The same gracious promise extends to the households of God's people. The light of His smiling Providence has rested upon their dwellings, and the shining of a heavenly flame has enlightened and cheered them in the night of sorrow.

After reciting some facts and statistics of interest particularly to his own people, the pastor closed his discourse with an appeal to the Church, and especially to the younger portion, to realize the grandeur of the opportunities within their grasp at the present time, such as have never been offered before in the history of the world. Not even the martyr age, or the period of the Reformation, presented such an opportunity for doing good without successful opposition, and of laboring for the Master amid the sympathies and coöperation of so many thousands of earnest souls. There never was a time when a consecrated Christian could do as much for God, for the Church, and for humanity as he can to-day. If we wish to enter the field and work for God we must be up and doing quickly, for events ripen fast. Christianity is not dying out as Voltaire predicted more than a century ago. The six million volumes of infidel publications which the followers of Voltaire and Rousseau circulated throughout Europe at the beginning of this century have proved fertilizers for the numerous Bible and Missionary Societies which have sprung up and covered the globe with the healing leaves of the tree of life. God does not need us as much as we need Him. If we are willing to labor for Him, He will give us work and wages; if not, others will take our places and receive the reward.

Our Way Planned for Us.

WHAT a comfort it is to know that God has a plan for our lives, and that His covenant for us is "ordered in all things and sure!" This very fact ought to make us very careful to follow Him softly and with care.

If we take the ordering of our own lives into our own hands, so as many do, we are sure to break and spoil God's plans for us; and then the best He can do for us is to overrule our mistakes, and bring some good out of our evil. Alas! how much this is done. How many plans we make, how many steps we take, without asking God! Indeed, we do not wait to be led, and are not humble enough to ask for guidance, but take our lives in our own hands, as it were, and plunge ahead—usually to misfortune and disaster. If not disaster in a worldly sense, at least in a spiritual sense. We cry out: "Give us meat!" "Give us a king!" Or more often we take the meat without crying for it, and set a king over us without as much as consulting God; and then, though we get carnal fatness, and for a time carnal and worldly pride is satisfied, there comes leanness to our souls and distress and trouble to our lives.

Let us avoid these evils to which we are so prone, and take our places before God, to be guided by Him. "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" ought to be our daily cry. And then when the clear word of instruction comes, as it is sure to come, if this is really and truly the desire and purpose of our lives, let us obey it simply and earnestly, not ourselves taking care for the outcome of it, nor being distressed by what may seem to be a tangled way in the wilderness if that is the way through which God leads us. This way of simple faith and following is not the way of the world, and will, without doubt, cause you to seem a very peculiar person, not only in the eyes of the world, but also in the eyes of your friends—and, sadly enough, in the eyes of the ordinary run of Christians. The way of faith and following is an unworldly way; it is often apparently an inconsistent way.

God may say to you, as He did to Abraham, "Pitch your tent here or there," and then, before you have got yourself fairly settled down, the word may come, "Strike your tent, and go yonder and pitch again." There may seem to be no reason which even "sanctified common sense" can make out; but God has a reason, and the secret of the Lord will be revealed to them that fear Him.—G. F. Pentecost, D.D.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Home Readings.

LESSON 5, FIRST QUARTER.

M. The Captive Children.....Dan. 1:1-7.
T. Daniel in Babylon.....Dan. 1:8-21.
W. "The Undefiled in the Way."....Ps. 119:1-16.
T. Favor from the Lord.....Gen. 39:1-6.
F. Wisdom Promised.....James 1:1-17.
S. Wisdom Given.....1 Kings 3:5-15.
S. "Unto the Perfect Day."....Prov. 4:18-27.

—From the Westminster Question Book.

XLVII. Lord's Day.

Q. 112. Which is the first petition?

A. "Hallowed be thy name;" that is, grant us rightly to know thee, and to sanctify, glorify and praise thee, in all thy works, in which thy power, wisdom, goodness, justice, mercy and truth, are clearly displayed; and further, also, that we may so order and direct our whole lives, our thoughts, words and actions, that thy name may never be blasphemed, but rather honored and praised on our account.—Heidelbergh Catechism.

International Sunday-School Lesson.

BY REV. JOHN C. VAN DEVENTER.

Jan. 31st.—Daniel in Babylon.—Dan. 1:8-21.

Golden Text.—"Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his way? by taking heed thereto according to thy word."—Ps. 119:9.

CENTRAL TRUTH.—"Them that honor me I will honor."—1 SAM. 2:30.

INTRODUCTION.

DANIEL is one of the chief heroes in Bible story, not only in human opinion but according to the declaration of God, who associates him with Noah and Job, evidently because of the peculiar difficulties which each of these faithful men met in the path of holiness. He was taken from Jerusalem, probably as a hostage, when only a lad, and was immediately thrown into associations which naturally tended to weaken a young man's principles and demoralize his practice. The natural endowments and acquired advantages which Daniel possessed are set forth in v. 4, in which the king's instructions are recorded. It was evidently the king's intention to improve his kingdom by the infusion of new elements into the college of the wise men. Daniel and three of his companions alone are mentioned by name, probably because the others succumbed to the evil influences about them. When we appreciate the strength of principle exhibited by these young men at the outset of their career in Babylon, we are not surprised to find them faithful in severer conflicts later in life.

The young men who were candidates for public position in the kingdom were subjected to a training of body and mind extending over three years, after which time they were presented to the king for examination and approval. The first step in the naturalization of these young Jews was the change of their names, so that instead of being reminded of the God of their fathers by their names, these should be associated with the heathen gods.

THE LESSON.

I. FAITHFULNESS.—VS. 8–12.

V. 8.—"Daniel purposed in his heart." To appreciate the firmness required by such a resolution we must remember that he was but a lad between fourteen and twenty years of age. This is a time of life when boys are easily influenced, and when a stand for the right has a very decided effect upon the entire career. Daniel had been taught to avoid the possibility of contamination with idols, and now resolved to do right no matter what the consequences to himself might be. He was willing to damage all his worldly prospects rather than injure his soul. "That he would not defile himself." Three reasons can be found for this fear of defilement; (1), the enervating effects of a rich diet in a warm climate; (2), the eating of food ceremonially unclean; (3), the fact that such food was first consecrated to idols. The latter was probably the strongest reason with Daniel and his friends. "He requested." Although firm in principle he was not deficient in courtesy or tact. Without unnecessary parade of his sentiments he requested to be relieved from the necessity of partaking of the corrupting food.

V. 9—God, who had brought Daniel into this position of trial, and had given him this determination to do right at any cost, had been preparing help for his young servant. "God had brought Daniel into favor and tender love with the prince of the eunuchs." The wisdom of this world would say, obtain the favor of this man by yielding, and so make a friend at court; the wisdom that is from above says, obtain God's favor by faithfulness, and He will provide earthly friends.

V. 10.—"I fear my lord the king." The prince of eunuchs had no objection to allege against the course proposed except the fear of consequences to himself. We must not judge of him by the same standard which we apply to Daniel, for he did not see the question of religion involved. He was evidently willing that Daniel should have his wish if he could be relieved of responsibility.

V. 11.—"Then said Daniel to Melzar." This is not properly a proper name, but a title, "the melzar" or steward, who had charge of the young men's provisions.

V. 12.—"Prove thy servants I beseech thee ten days." There is no need of trying to explain Daniel's confidence in the issue of this trial by his knowledge of the superior nature of a vegetable diet. He knew he was trying to obey God rather than man, and was willing to leave the results with Him, "Pulse to eat, and water to drink." This was the simplest diet possible. The pulse does not indicate one particular vegetable or grain, but applies to whatever grows from seed.

II. PROVING.—VS. 13–16.

V. 13.—Daniel sought to shield his superiors from injury on account of his convictions. He had suggested a brief period for the test of the matter, and was prepared to abide by the result. It is not wise to ask what he would have done if the test had failed to vindicate him, for this implies the failure of God to deliver His servants when they put themselves in danger by adhering to Him.

V. 14.—"So he consented to them." God had prepared the heart of this man also to a kind regard for His servants, so that the difficulties were one by one removed from their path.

V. 15.—"Their countenances appeared fairer and fatter." God had blessed the provision of their table so that their health had been promoted by their faithfulness. This does not necessarily teach the wisdom of a vegetable diet, but it does most emphatically teach the wisdom of obeying God even in apparent trifles.

V. 16.—When those in charge of the young men found that they would not be imperilled by yielding to their request, they consented to the arrangement, and suffered them to keep their consciences "void of offence."

III. PROMOTION.—VS. 17–21.

V. 17.—"God gave them knowledge and skill." He not only enabled them to stand firm and to overcome, but He abundantly prospered them in the path of obedience. Their companions who had disregarded His requirements, and had yielded to the influences about them, have been lost in oblivion, while even the heathen youths, with every natural advantage, were left behind in the race. "Godliness is profitable unto all things." "Daniel had understanding in all visions and dreams." The plain implication of the narrative is that Daniel had more force of character than his companions, possibly he was the eldest, and so God gave him the greater blessing.

V. 18—"Now at the end of the days." When the period of training had expired. This was a day of testing for both pupils and teachers. We can imagine the fear in the mind of the prince of the eunuchs lest after all he had made a mistake which that day would reveal.

V. 19.—"The king communed with them." Probably not in a formal examination, but with sufficient detail to test their endowments and acquirements. "Among them all there was found none like Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah." The approval of God was thus recorded and ratified by the approval of the heathen monarch. As these young heroes stood before the king as his chief advisers, the thought was doubtless often in their minds, "What hath God wrought!"

V. 20.—"In all matters of wisdom and understanding." We are not to suppose that these men adopted the methods of the soothsayers in giving wise counsel to the king. Their dependence was upon God, and that is the reason why "he found them ten times better than all the magicians and astrologers."

V. 21.—"And Daniel continued unto the first year of King Cyrus." He appears to have seen his last vision in the third year of Cyrus, and to have not only been spared to see his people return from captivity, but to have had a large share of the confidence of the monarchs of those changing times.

LESSONS FOR TO-DAY.

1. Avoid whatever weakens body or soul.
2. Shun even the appearance of evil.
3. It is better to have the soul well nourished than the body.
4. God helps those who seek to serve Him.
5. No difficulty is so great that it cannot be overcome by grace.
6. All safe preferment is of the Lord, hence to please Him is the best policy.
7. "A sound mind in a sound body" is of great benefit in doing the work of this life.
8. Obedience to God's commands is the surest method of attaining this soundness.

A Marked Road.

WHILE driving in the month of October from Concord, Mass., to Lexington, the eye feasted upon the beauty of foliage for which New England is renowned. The gorgeous autumnal tints mingled with the heavy masses of pine in most pleasing contrast. But about a mile from Concord towards Lexington, where a road joins the main road, my attention was attracted to the stone wall by the roadside, and from that point marks by the roadside, with their suggested thoughts, drew my attention away from the beauties of the landscape. The face of a massive boulder in the stone wall had been smoothed and on it there had been placed this inscription:

MERRIAM'S CORNER.

The British troops returning from the old North Bridge were here attacked in flank by the men of Concord and neighboring towns and driven under a hot fire to Charlestown.

I looked back to the hills over which lay Concord and that "old" bridge which I had left but half an hour before, and where I had been admiring the statue of the Minute-man and the other monuments that mark the spot and tell the story of the conflict. As I looked back the whole scene of the past century came vividly before me. On the road where I was the British regulars were marching towards Lexington after finishing their raid on Concord. As they came to this bend in the road, suddenly from behind the sheltering rocks there came upon them the scattering, but deadly fire of the Minute-men. Across the fields yonder they could see hurrying groups, who, as they came within firing distance, joined in the attack. A short, desperate resistance, and the British hurry in confusion along the road to Lexington, over which I pursue my drive. About a mile and a half from Merriam's Corner I notice a rocky bluff, about fifty feet high, around the base of which the road curves. A grand place to make a rally is the instant thought as the eye falls upon it. When I reach the bluff I find inserted in the face of the rock a polished slab on which are these words:

"This bluff was used as a rallying point by the British, April 19th, 1775. After a sharp fight they retreated to Fiske's Hill, from which they were driven in great confusion."

I follow the road, then marked with blood, and try to imagine the confused column of the retreating regulars and the groups of Minute-men pressing on the rear and flanks of the retreating column, galling them with a continued scattering fire from the abundant shelter of the masses of rock that stretch along both sides of the road. Passing along the road for nearly two miles I find another "mark." By the side of the large gate of a farmyard there is placed in the stone wall a slab with this inscription:

"At this well April 19, 1775, James Hayward of Acton met a British soldier, who, raising his gun said, 'You are a dead man.' 'So are you,' replied Hayward. Both fired; the soldier was instantly killed and Hayward was mortally wounded."

I fasten the horse to the fence and go and stand by the well. I take a drink of its cool, refreshing water. The house is quiet, no sound comes from the barn. It is hard to realize that on this spot were heard the angry shouts and the death-shots, and that as I pour the water on the ground it sprinkles one of the baptismal spots of liberty. I look down at the green sward, almost expecting to see still the crimson seal that more than a century ago set apart this land as the home of freedom. As I drive on Lexington comes into view, and as I drive into the streets of the beautiful town I stop to read on a house that stands with its gable towards the street and the green square opposite, a tablet in the side of the house with these historic words:

Built 1690.
Known as the Buckman Tavern—a rendez vous of the Minute Men—a mark for British bullets.
April 19, 1775.

I left the carriage for a nearer look, and on the giant elm under whose boughs I passed I saw and read this inscription:

This tree was forty years old in 1794, and was then used to assist in the raising of the steeple of the church built on the green opposite at that time.

I lay my hand on its shaggy bark to make sure that it is not a vision. It is still in well-preserved, thrifty manhood, but in its youth it was a witness of the opening strife that gave liberty to the land, and its tender shoots were cut and torn by the flying bullets. Driving on through the village, leaving the monuments and memorials of the battle field of Lexington for another time, I pass at the lower end of the village a house that seems of older fashion than its neighbors, and on it see a tablet with these words:

Mr. Merriam's house—one of the Minute Men—left by the family and pillaged by the British,
April 19, 1775.

In Lexington, as by the roadside, there is but the one date. I looked back along the marked road and thought so is our life road marked. It tells the story of our conflict—of our defeat or of our victory. I recall the story of the Prophet Samuel and the memorial stone of victory that he set up by the roadside to tell of the victory gained—a victory gained, because he could write on the stone "Eben-ezer" and say, "Hitherto hath the Lord helped us." If, by the grace of God, we can look back and see such waymarks, which tell of victory over sin and the world, we may look forward with hope and press on with joy, for as we have written, "Hitherto hath the Lord helped us," as we have called for help and found deliverance, so we may be assured that with the pen of His promise we may write, "Henceforth the Lord will deliver, and the road of life's struggle will lead into the gate of the King's palace."—V. A. L., in The Presbyterian.

Force and Fuss.

THERE is more resemblance in the sound of these two words than in their sense. Yet thoughtless people often mistake the latter for the former. Force is power; fuss is noise. The one is work; the other is talk. The one is the moving of the engine; the other is the escape of steam. There may be sound in force; there is nothing but sound in fuss. The one may be quiet and gentle, and yet retain its essential character; the other loses its identity when quietness comes. Force moves steadily onward to the production of the result in view; fuss raves and roars and agitates, yet accomplishes nothing. Force is radical; fuss is superficial.

In Sunday-school work there are superintendents and teachers who have force, and who always succeed. There are others who have only fuss, and who always fail. One superintendent has the best of order in his school and the strictest attention to duty, though he is never noisy or excited; another cannot get his school to order, or keep them in order after some one else has quieted their turbulence, and this notwithstanding his vociferation and excitement, and bell-clanging, and piteous appeals for silence. It is simply the difference between force and fuss.

Force is the concentration of energy on the work in hand; fuss is the scattering of energy in every direction, without touching any special point. Some of the most quiet men have an immense amount of force which they know how to use when the time comes, and which they do use with wonderful results; while others, far more demonstrative and self-asserting, have but little to show as the result of their labor. The duty of every Christian worker is to have a thorough consecration of all his powers to God's service, and thus to seek not to draw attention to himself by an unseemly show of misplaced energy, but rather by the attractive power of a loving heart to draw all to Christ.—The Sunday-School Journal.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate,
Very Satisfactory in Prostration.

Dr. P. P. GILMARTIN, Detroit, Mich., says: "I have found it very satisfactory in its effects, notably in the prostration attendant upon alcoholism."

DYSPEPSIA

Causes its victims to be miserable, hopeless, confused, and depressed in mind, very irritable, languid, and drowsy. It is a disease which does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy to throw off the causes and tone up the digestive organs till they perform their duties willingly. Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven just the required remedy in hundreds of cases.

"I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla for dyspepsia, from which I have suffered two years. I tried many other medicines, but none proved so satisfactory as Hood's Sarsaparilla." THOMAS COOK, Brush Electric Light Co., New York City.

Sick Headache

"For the past two years I have been afflicted with severe headaches and dyspepsia. I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and have found great relief. I cheerfully recommend it to all." MRS. E. F. ANNABLE, New Haven, Conn.

Mrs. Mary C. Smith, Cambridgeport, Mass., was a sufferer from dyspepsia and sick headache. She took Hood's Sarsaparilla and found it the best remedy she ever used.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Made only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

7% NET Security 3 to 6 times loan. INTEREST semi-annual and paid at your home. 29th year of residence, and 10th of business. No investor ever had to pay taxes, costs of foreclosure, wait for interest, or take land. BEST of References all around you. Write if you have money to loan.
D. S. B. JOHNSTON & SON,
Negotiators of Mortgage Loans.
MENTION THIS PAPER. St. Paul, Minn

YOU CAN DYE ANYTHING ANY COLOR
With Diamond Dyes, for 10 cts. They never fail. 32 fast colors. They also make inks, color photo's, etc. Send for colored samples and Dye book. Gold, Silver, Copper and Bronze Paints for any use—only 10 cents a pk'ge. Druggists sell or we send post-paid.
WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

GEO. MATHER'S SONS,
PRINTING INK
Manufacturers. Superior Black and Colored Ink Lithographic and Plate Ink. Varnishes, etc. 60 John street, New York.
The Intelligencer is printed with our ink.

FINANCIAL.

HARVEY FISK & SONS,
28 Nassau Street, New York,
DEALERS IN
UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT
AND
OTHER DESIRABLE SECURITIES
FOR INVESTORS.
ALL STOCKS & BONDS
Listed on the New-York Stock Exchange,
Bought and Sold on Commission for Cash.

Deposit accounts received and interest allowed on monthly balances subject to draft at sight.

Coupons, registered interest, and dividends collected, and placed to credit, for our customers, without charge.

7 PER CENT. INTEREST
FIRST MORTGAGE
FARM LOANS.

Personal acquaintance with lands and values. Over 2,000 loans made. NO CUSTOMER has ever LOST A DOLLAR of principal or interest on any loans made here. Interest collected and sent to you, free of cost, each year. These loans are very safe, and pay nearly U.S. BONDS. I am three times as much as known and recommended by leading business men and clergymen, East and West—men for whom I have been making these investments for TEN YEARS PAST.

REFERENCES.
REV. WM. L. GAGE, D.D., Hartford, Ct.
M. E. GATES, PH.D., LL.D., President Rutgers College, New Brunswick, N. J.
DR. WM. J MILNE, President Geneseo Normal School, Geneseo, N. Y
HON. E. M. TOPLIFF, Manchester, N. H.
REV. JOHN W. RAY, Lake City, Minn
DR. JNO. K. BUCKLYN, Mystic Bridge, Ct.
Importers' and Traders' National Bank, New York.
First National Bank, St. Paul, Minn.
The Congregationalist, Boston, N. Y. Observer, and hundreds of others in all parts of the United States.

All are pleased with my Investments. Circular, references, letters giving experience and testimony of old customers, and a New Map of Dakota sent free on application. Mention this paper. Address

E. P. GATES,
Pres. Merchant's Bank,
Grand Forks, Dakota.

6%, 7%, 8%.
The American Investment Company, incorporated under the laws of Iowa, with a Capital Stock of $1,000,000. Succeeding ORMSBY BROS. & CO., Emmetsburg, Iowa, ORMSBY, CLUTE & CO., Mitchell, Dakota, ORMSBY, GRAVES & CO., Huron, Dakota, Bankers and Mortgage Brokers, offer Guaranteed Mortgages, Debenture and School Bonds. Their Demand Investment Certificates drawing 5 per cent. are attractive for parties with funds idle for a short time. 20 years' experience. Write for pamphlet
Home Office, Emmetsburg, Iowa.
New York Office, 150 Nassau St.

INVEST Through the Sound and Reliable
WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE CO.
F. M. PERKINS, President. LAWRENCE, KAN. L. H. PERKINS, Secretary.
CAPITAL AND SURPLUS, $250,000.
Carefully selected 1st Mortgage Farm Loans payable in N. Y. Unrivalled facilities. Absolute satisfaction. 10 years' experience. No losses. Refer to 3d Nat'l Bank, N.Y. City; Nat'l Bank, Lawrence, Kan.; and Hundreds of Investors. Send for pamphlet, forms and full information. Branch Offices in N.Y. City, Albany & Phila. N.Y. Office, 137 B'way, C.C. Hine & Son, Agts.

PAYSON'S INDELIBLE INK.
No preparation and only a common pen needed. Established 50 Years. Superior and popular for decorative work on linen. Received ...nnial Medal & Diploma. Sold everywhere.

Sawing Made Easy.
MONARCH LIGHTNING SAWING MACHINE

SENT ON 30 DAYS' TEST TRIAL.

For logging camps, wood-yards, farmers getting out stove wood, and all sorts of log-cutting—it is unrivaled. Thousands sold yearly. A boy of 16 can saw logs fast and easy. Immense saving of labor and money. Write for elegantly illustrated catalogue in 6 brilliant colors, also brilliantly illuminated poster in 5 colors. All free. Agents Wanted. Big money made quickly.
MONARCH M'F'G CO., (A) 206 State St., Chicago, Ill.

CARDS 60 Fancy Pictures, and 25 elegant Cards in Gilt Edge, Silk Fringe, Hidden Name, &c., 1 Songster, 1 450 Prize Puzzle, and 8 parlor games, all for 10cts. Game of Authors, 10cts.
IVORY CO., Clintonville, Conn.

If you are sick or ailing no matter what your complaint, write to us and we will send you On Trial one of our large Electric Medicated Appliances to suit your case, provided you agree to pay for it, if it cures you in one month. If it does not cure you it costs you nothing to try it. Different Appliances to cure Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Diseases, Piles, Lung Diseases, Asthma, Catarrh, Lame Back, Ague, Debility, and many other diseases. Remember we do not ask you to buy them blindly but merely to try them at our risk. Thousands of cures made monthly in cases where all other treatments have failed. Price very low. Illustrated book giving full particulars and blank for statement of your case sent free. Address at once.
ELECTRIC PAD M'F'G CO., 564 STATE STREET., BROOKLYN, N.Y.

For washing the hair only the very best of soap and pure water should be used. The average soap contains too much free alkali, which draws the natural oil from the hair and scalp, and leaves the former harsh and lusterless, while it roughens the latter, causing scurf or dandruff. The purity and mildness of the IVORY SOAP gives it pre-eminence for cleaning the hair and scalp. It contains no free alkali, so its use insures a clean and healthy head of hair of the luster and softness of silk.

Free of charge. A full size cake of Ivory Soap will be sent to any one who can not get it of their grocer, if six two-cent stamps, to pay postage, are sent to Procter & Gamble, Cincinnati. Please mention this paper.

R. H. MACY & CO.,

14TH STREET, SIXTH AVE., AND 13TH STREET NEW YORK.

GRAND CENTRAL FANCY AND DRY GOODS ESTABLISHMENT.

Special Sale of Ladies' and Children's

MUSLIN

UNDERWEAR,

all of our own manufacture and design. Our prices are the lowest in the country.

Rare bargains in

LINENS

and Housekeeping Goods, our own direct importation.

Unapproachable bargains in

BLACK AND COLORED

Silks and Dress Goods.

Our prices below all competition.

Tremendous mark-down in

SUITS AND CLOAKS.

Our Entire Stock at Lower Prices than ever before known.

Special Care Given to Mail Orders.

R. H. MACY & CO.

SILKS AND VELVETS.

JAMES M'CREERY & CO.

Commence on Monday, Jan. 4, their ANNUAL SALE of SILKS and VELVETS.

HEAVY REDUCTIONS have been made in all Sections of the Vast Stocks which they exhibit.

An early inspection is invited.

Broadway and Eleventh Street, New York.

Sole Agents for the

CLIFTON SILK MILLS.

SOLD BY ALL THE LEADING DRUGGISTS.

CLOGGED PIPES WITH CONSEQUENT IMPURE AIR AND DISEASE PREVENTED.

PHYSICIANS' AND PLUMBERS' BILLS AVOIDED BY USING PERFORATED PAPER.

Perforated PAPER THE STANDARD

31 Somerset St.,
Boston, Mass

A. P. W. PAPER CO.

Gentlemen:—Your "Medicated Toilet Paper" is useful in the treatment of Anal diseases, allaying to a great extent the intense itching, and is a remedy easily applied. Its cheapness and neatness are commendable, and a trial is convincing of its merits.

F. M. JOHNSON, M.D.
July 1, 1885.

PRINTED PAPER, or that containing Chemicals incident to the ordinary process of manufacture, is a Cause of Hemorrhoids. The "STANDARD" Brand is not medicated, but is entirely free from any deliterous substance The division into sheets by peforations, secures economy, unattainable in the Unperforated Roll and Package, while the rapid dissolution of the paper in water prevents loss of health from impure air due to stoppage of pipes and drains, with accompanying Physicians' and Plumbers' Bill.

Special Express Contracts now enable us TO DELIVER ONE DOZEN ONE-THOUSAND SHEET ROLLS AND NICKEL FIXTURE, at any Express Office in the United States, on receipt of $3 00; or we can forward as heretofore, TWO ROLLS AND NICKEL FIXTURE for $1.00, charges prepaid.

PERFORATED WRAPPING, TOILET, WAXED, ANTI-RUST & CARBOLATED PAPERS.

MEDICATED PAPER.

Our specially prepared paper for the use of sufferers from Hemorrhoids is heavily charged with ointment, and has the endorsement of physicians, in that the regular application of recognized remedies is accomplished through absence of the annoyance attending the use of ointment in the usual manner. The Itching type of this disease quickly yields to its influence, and its remarkable success is unquestionably due to the use of paper as a vehicle for the remedy

Pocket Packet, - - - - - 10
Price per Roll of 1,000 Sheets securely wrapped in Tin Foil, 50
Ten Packets and Neat Pocket Case, $1
Two 1,000 Sheet Rolls, and Nickel Fixture, - - - - - 1.30

Delivered Free, anywhere in the United States, on receipt of price. Address,

ALBANY PERFORATED WRAPPING PAPER CO.—ALBANY, N.Y.

THE LEADING DRUGGISTS SELL OUR GOODS.

In answering this advertisement please mention The Christian Intelligencer.

M'COMBER'S PATENT BOOTS AND SHOES.

Everybody can now enjoy my Patent Boots and Shoes. I am now manufacturing my Patent Boots and Shoes on a large scale with new and improved machinery, and selling at greatly reduced prices so as to place them within the reach of all. I will send to all applicants price lists, full instructions for self-measurement for men, women and children, and return the shoes as quickly as they can be made. They will fit beautifully, will never warp, distort, or injure the tenderest foot, and will restore bad and distorted feet to symmetry and comfort. I make no shoddy goods, and my highest class boots and shoes are unsurpassed either in material or workmanship, and my lowest class goods are superior in every respect to all others at the same price. Those who desire perfect boots and shoes should send for my free illustrated pamphlets, JOEL M'COMBER, Inventor and Manufacturer, of M'COMBER'S PATENT BOOTS AND SHOES, AND M'COMBER'S PATENT LASTS, 52 East 10th Street, New York.

To preserve the leather of all kinds, for ladies' or gentlemen's boots and shoes, and to make them soft and beautiful, use my Seal Polish Blacking. Mention the INTELLIGENCER

BENJ. F. TRUMPY,

Real Estate Office,

336 Broome Street,

ONE DOOR EAST OF BOWERY.

Management of Estates, Renting and Sale of Property, and Collecting of Rents.

AGENT FOR

German American Insurance Co.
Westchester Insurance Co.
Hamburg Bremen Insurance Co.
Mutual Life Insurance Co.

VIRGINIA LAND AGENCY.

Cheap Farms. Splendid Climate. Short Mild Winters Good Markets. Descriptive Land List Free.
GRIFFIN & JERVIS, Petersburg, Va.

CONSUMPTION

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., N.Y.

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS, a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you.
Address, DR. H. G. ROOT, 183 Pearl St., New York.

THE ASSOCIATED CHARITIES OF THE

1342 Churches of London

after investigating the value of

MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD

have adopted it as the one thing most needed in restoring the sick to health, and it is given by their visiting committees.

Many of the Churches of Boston, Cleveland and other cities, have done the same for several years.

Clergymen use it to relieve Exhaustion, Dyspepsia and Constipation.

Any Clergyman wishing to try it, we will deliver to any Boston express samples free.

☞ IN GENERAL USE of all Governments, Hospitals and Physicians that have tried it, and in 52 of the leading Hospitals of London.

Murdock Liquid Food Co., Boston.

LECCAT BROS.,

CHEAPEST BOOK STORE IN THE WORLD.

989,999 MAGNIFICENT GIFT AND GORGEOUS JUVENILE BOOKS ALMOST GIVEN AWAY. GRAND HOLIDAY CATALOGUE FREE. IMMENSE TERMS TO SUNDAY-SCHOOLS, ETC.

81 Chambers St.,

Third door west of City Hall.

A New Departure.

A LIFE POLICY WHICH WILL

SATISFY EVERYBODY

ISSUED BY

THE TRAVELERS INSURANCE COMPANY. HARTFORD, CONN.

No Burdensome Conditions or Restrictions.

LOWEST CASH RATES OF ANY LIBERAL POLICY YET ISSUED.

INDEFEASIBLE, NON-FORFEITABLE,

WORLD-WIDE TRAVEL.

Cash Surrender Values, Paid up Policy, or Special Term Insurance, plainly stated in every Policy issued.

Ask Agents to show a copy,

—AND SEE FOR YOURSELF.—

Important Notice of The Travelers'

SPECIAL TERM PLAN.

No Life or Endowment Policy issued by this Company lapses by reason of failure to pay the premium when due (after it has been in force for three years); but is, if the insured wishes, carried for its face for the time specified in the Policy, without further payment of premium.

This is Insurance that Fully Insures.

ALL CLAIMS PAID AT SIGHT UPON RECEIPT OF SATISFACTORY PROOFS OF DEATH.

THE

SECURITY

MUTUAL BENEFIT SOCIETY,

No. 233 Broadway, New York.

ONLY TWELVE ASSESSMENTS

Have been levied from 1881 to 1886, averaging three a year, and making the cost for assessments to a man of 40 years, but $4.40 a year for each $1000 of insurance.

Send for Circulars. Agents Wanted!

☞ Remunerative employment offered energetic and reliable men.

DON'T put all your eggs in one basket, but remember that the EQUITABLE MORTGAGE CO. guarantees its 7 per cent Farm Mortgages, principal and interest. Office, 135 and 137 Broadway, New York.

LE PAGE'S LIQUID GLUE

Is used by thousands of first class Manufacturers and Mechanics on their best work. Received GOLD MEDAL, London, '83. Pronounced strongest glue known. Send card of dealer who does not keep it, with five 2c stamps for SAMPLE CAN FREE

Russia Cement Co., Gloucester, Mass.

KNABE PIANOFORTES.

UNEQUALLED IN

Tone, Touch, Workmanship and Durability.

WILLIAM KNABE & CO.,
Nos. 204 and 206 West Baltimore Street, Baltimore. No. 112 Fifth Avenue, N. Y.

The Christian Intelligencer.

Een-dracht maakt macht.

VOL. LVII.—No. 4. WHOLE No. 2896. NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 27, 1886. $2.65 A YEAR IN ADVANCE No. 48 CHURCH STREET.

EDITORS: Rev. JOHN M. FERRIS, D.D. Rev. N. H. VAN ARSDALE.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR: MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

PROHIBITION AGAIN.—Now and then a subscriber wishes to know why the INTELLIGENCER does not take more decided ground in favor of prohibition. The fact is noticed for the sake of showing just what position such a paper as this is driven to by the attempt to form a third party. When prohibition is made the plank in the platform of a new political party and nominations are made on that platform we must be still, so far as these columns are concerned. The third party as a rule secures only the defeat of Republican candidates, therefore a paper such as this can not advocate the aims of the third party. Men of both, of all parties take the INTELLIGENCER, take it not as political but as a religious paper, and especially as the representative of the life and interests of the Reformed Church in America. It is understood that it is not to be a political paper. When, then, prohibition is organized as a party and defeats the candidates of one of the chief parties of the country, the contest becomes one we cannot enter. Whether it is wise or unwise to form a third party to accomplish national prohibition, is a question we do not feel called upon to discuss. We are in favor of the largest possible restriction of the liquor traffic. We would like to see a vote on the question, "Shall the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors be prohibited in this State?" and see a vote on that question in entire independence upon any party in every State of the Union. The vote would probably be a surprise to politicians and would have a great moral effect.

"CONTINUE IN PRAYER" is a direction coming from heaven, from the throne which answers prayer. It is wise to remember it just now wherever the special services which have been held, or other means which have been diligently used, have not resulted in the general awakening which was desired, and also where the special services have been attended by large numbers manifesting unusual interest. Our strength is in God. The victory, which will overcome the world, is our faith. The resistance is mighty. From some cause a practical atheism prevails. Many who think they believe in a God, believe only in a being of their own making, one vastly inferior to the true God. A regard for God, the fear of God, a desire for His approbation, has died out in a multitude of men. Whether the materialism of evolution, the sceptical philosophy of the time, or the love of money and of display, has been the prime cause or not, through some influence hundreds of thousands of men around us are living ungodly lives. The day is approaching when they must meet the God they have despised, whose mercy they have abused, and then they will not be able to answer for one in a thousand of their sins. Effort for their deliverance from delusions should not cease until they know the truth. They will be delivered only by the power of the Holy Spirit. Our Lord teaches His Church to pray for the Holy Spirit and to be importunate in prayer. The language of the former times was: "Then shall ye call upon me, and ye shall go and pray unto me, and I will hearken unto you. And ye shall seek me, and find me, when ye shall search for me with all your heart." Experience sustains the exhortation: "Wait on the Lord; be of good courage, and He shall strengthen thine heart; wait, I say, on the Lord." The people of God should remember the assertion of Isaiah: "I will wait upon the Lord, that hideth his face from the house of Jacob, and I will look for Him." The great present need is the presence of God. If that be given the churches of this land will be filled with the glory of the Lord. There will not be a shining cloud resting upon the building, entering and filling it, but there will be a presence of God within which will fill men with reverence and awe, awaken within them a sense of the majesty of God, lead them to feel the value of His favor and to desire it, and bring them in repentance to the foot of the Cross. God being present, the most plain declarations of His Word will be clothed with power. Let the churches "continue in prayer" until God comes in His saving strength.

IGNORANCE.—A recent magazine article speaking of the centurion Cornelius says that "The history of the man is related to show how Peter was convinced that the Gospel would find reception among the Gentiles as well as among the Jews." But it is certain that this is not the fact. What the history teaches, and was designed to teach, was that the Gentiles could become Christians without first becoming Jews—a piece of information of which Peter stood greatly in need. How a professor in a theological seminary could make such a blunder as is contained in the quotation above seems incomprehensible. Better informed persons might well put to him the question asked of Nicodemus: "Art thou a master of Israel and knowest not these things?" or perhaps might suggest that it would be better to study Scripture more and philosophy less.

THE HIGH LICENSE BILL.—This bill, which originated with the Society for the Prevention of Crime in this city, and is strongly supported by the Temperance Society of the Episcopal Church, has been introduced into the Legislature at Albany. Its fate will be watched with deep interest by both the friends of temperance and the saloon keepers. The prime object of the bill is, by the charge of a high license fee, to reduce the number of saloons, in the hope that there might result a corresponding reduction of drinking and drunkenness. Whether this end will be gained, and this hoped for result will necessarily follow, if the bill becomes law, remains, of course, to be seen. That this might be the outcome, upon its passage by the legislature and its enforcement by the city government, is strongly desired by all who have the city's best interests at heart.

In respect to the working of the high license system in Chicago, where it has been in operation for some time, there are conflicting reports, which make it difficult to determine with any satisfactory degree of accuracy as to what the results have been. One account says that the amount of revenue derived from liquor licenses in that city under the new law has increased from $200,000 to $1,500,000 a year, and the number of saloons had decreased from 13,000 to 9,000. This is certainly an exhibit very gratifying to the friends of the measure, and, if true, one upon which they have a right to felicitate themselves. But here is another account, which, if correct, will have the effect of a wet blanket upon their spirits and tend to quench their enthusiasm. It is clipped from the Chicago Advance:

It has been stated over and over that the high license has reduced the number of saloons in Chicago more than one-third, and added several hundred thousand dollars to the city treasury. The latter part of the statement is true. The first part of the statement is not true. At the time that high license went into effect, there were between 3,600 and 3,900 saloons in Chicago. It was not easy to get at the exact numbers. Not long ago there were somewhat over 3,300 licensed saloons in Chicago, and ten days ago the Tribune stated, apparently on official information, that there are about 400 saloons running without license. This would make the aggregate about 3,700. For my own part I am unable to see that high license has appreciably reduced the number of saloons in the city.

This statement from the Advance, which is published in the city where the law is on trial, is more likely to be received than the first statement, which is credited to the Macon Telegraph. It seems to us, however, letting the statistics presented pass for what they are worth, that the Telegraph is logical and sound in its conclusions, that to reduce the number of saloons must be a gain to the community in three ways: 1. Those that are closed are usually of the lowest order. 2. The temptations to drink are diminished. 3. The police supervision of the traffic is made easier by a reduction in the number of drinking places, and by the interest of those who pay high license in aiding in the suppression of unlicensed sale.

THE CONGREGATIONAL PASTORS of this city and neighborhood, it is said, are preparing to discuss the management and influence of the daily papers. Those in charge of the collection of facts have endeavored to ascertain how many of the editors and reporters are members of Christian churches or attendants on Christian worship. The enquiry is resisted, rebuked and resented as impertinent. It is difficult to understand why. The religious affiliations of other men who seek to influence public opinion are easily ascertained. It is not hard to find out who manage other organizations or corporations exerting intellectual and moral power. But the newspapers hide behind an impersonal corporation or a corps. Such concealment breeds suspicion and is dangerous to the community. It is a legitimate question, "Who makes your paper? Is he Jew or Gentile? Has he any religious belief?"

But it must be remembered that the daily paper supplies a demand. If there were no customers for scandals, for reports of slugging matches, of murders and all manner of crimes, of the saddest and meanest infirmities of human nature, for flings at religion, such things would not be printed. At a breakfast table we know of, the inquiry for some time, as the morning paper was brought in, was, "Where is the man who tried to kill his wife and then to kill himself?" Often the answer was, "Here he is at the head of a column." Usually he was a person of no importance, whose only importance was in the fact that he was a man. The breakfast table we speak of has no sympathy with, no desire for such records. But there is a constituency which does desire them and is large enough to secure their publication. Such reports will cease when the tastes of that constituency are changed.

Last week, very briefly, we said that the claim that these criminal records hold the mirror up to nature is not well founded. In fact, the life of many communities is grossly misrepresented. We can tell of a town which during the last ten years has been brought into public notice by the publication in the daily journals of less than half a dozen crimes and social scandals. It is a most orderly, quiet town of intelligent families, is remarkably free from exhibitions of vice. Yet it is known to the country only by its criminal record. Men do not stop to notice that the record includes less than half a dozen crimes or scandals in ten years, but if you speak of G—— say, "That is where such and such an offence occurred." The newspaper reports give an incorrect view of the life of many localities, lift into prominence the most worthless members of society, and ignore the intelligence, the virtue, the sympathy and philanthropy which are the chief characteristics of the society they misrepresent.

Literature on the Lord's Day.

WITHIN the last eighteen months no less than half a dozen volumes on this subject have appeared from the American press. One was entitled "Eight Studies of the Lord's Day." Its author, the late Rev. Geo. S. Gray, discussed the question in a very fresh and interesting way with candor and with force. A second book, by Dr. W. W. Everts, bears the name "The Sabbath: Its Permanence, Promise and Defence" (E. B. Treat). The first part states the Scriptural law on the subject; the second, its beneficial influences, and the third answers objections. Its style is somewhat discursive, but it is earnest and vigorous. A third volume is styled "The Sabbath for Man," by Rev. W. F. Crafts (Funk & Wagnalls). This is every way original in treatment, and is remarkable for the vast fund of information it collects from various sources, showing how the Sabbath is surrendered or imperilled, and setting forth how it is to be rescued and preserved. The book is a thesaurus of trustworthy knowledge on the practical questions involved, and is worthy of a wide circulation. The fourth volume on our list is called "The Abiding Sabbath: An Argument for the Perpetual Obligation of the Lord's Day" (American Tract Society). It received the Fletcher Prize for 1884, and deserved it. Its three divisions are, Sabbath of Nature, Sabbath of the Law, and Sabbath of Redemption. These are set forth in a simple but engaging form. The book is alike easy and profitable to read. The fifth volume bears the title, "Day of Rest: Its Obligations and Advantages," by the Rev. James Stacy, D.D. (Richmond, Va.: Whittet & Shepperson). Its chief divisions are I. The Origin of the Day; II. Its Perpetuity, and III. How it is to be observed. The rhetoric of the work is not unexceptionable, but the author has evidently thought the subject out for himself, and puts some of his points very forcibly. The sixth and last volume to be mentioned is "The Lord's Day: Its Universal and Perpetual Obligation," by A. E. Waffle (American S. S. Union). This is a Premium Essay. After a short introduction on the State of the Question, it treats first of the Necessity of the Sabbath, then shows that it was Made for All Men, and finally urges its Nature and Importance, closing with a useful appendix and a well-made index. The book is written in a very good spirit, from competent knowledge and with logical force. Its answer to Bacon, Alford, Hesse and Robertson (pp. 227–252) is very conclusive.

It is gratifying to know that all these writers, no two of whom, so far as we know, belong to the same communion, maintain the divine authority of the Lord's day as resting upon the Fourth Commandment. For this is the key of the position. Nothing else will secure the recognition and due observance of the Christian Sabbath. The law of love, man's own interest, the needs of his body, of his mind, of his soul, the claims of the brute creation, the authority of the Church, the testimony of experience, all these and many similar considerations come in very well as subsidiary arguments, but they fail to lay hold of the conscience. To do that with any efficacy or permanence, we need to appeal to the revealed will of God. A "Thus saith the Lord" is worth ten thousand arguments drawn from reason, history or the nature of things. This indeed is the validity of all ethics. It is not enough to show the wisdom or expediency of any given course, for that admits of argument, and it is always open to the objector to say, "I do not see the force of what you state" or, "admitting its general correctness, I prefer to take my own course and run the risk." But the written word speaks with authority, and demands obedience on pain of the displeasure of Him who made man, who governs man, and who will one day hold him to account. The Church must take this ground, if it means to preserve the day of rest and worship. Nothing else, absolutely nothing else will answer. The tenor of the volumes described above leads to the pleasant conviction that there is a growing tendency among the friends of the Lord's Day to put its claims upon this immutable foundation.

"Old Colony" Papers.

SOME PREACHERS I HAVE LATELY HEARD.

X. Rev. R. S. Macarthur, D.D.

THE word "success," as applied to a church, is in these days rather an equivocal term. But there can be no questioning its accuracy, when applied to the Calvary Baptist Church since Dr. Macarthur came there, fresh from Rochester Seminary, in 1870. Whether in attendance, membership, income, benevolence, or organized activity, its growth has been almost without a parallel in any denomination.

Dr. Macarthur is of medium height, with a compact and sturdy form, a springy step, a bright eye, and a general alertness of appearance. His well-shaped head rises high above the ears, and his forehead is lofty and full. His features indicate keenness, alacrity and energy of mind and temperament. His face is smooth, except a small moustache. His dress is plain and unpretending, as is his general appearance, and yet no one can even see him pass in the street without recognizing an attractive and forceful personality. His voice is a clear musical head-tone, well managed except a somewhat drawling tendency at the start, but rising to quicker and sharper and even staccato tones as he proceeds and warms with his theme. In exhortation he rose at times to the loudness and fervor of what are known as "camp-meeting" tones. His gestures also, which were at first chiefly demonstrative, with the pointed finger or the hand brought down side-wise on the desk, became excited and dramatic, with hands uplifted or spread or joined together or forcibly striking the desk. Yet in all these contrasts of gesture and voice, his manner and tones were always agreeable and under control.

In fact, the success of Dr. Macarthur is largely attributable to an instinct, tact and balance, which almost unconsciously adapts itself to the situation and audience. He is eminently "level," practical, and sympathetic, a man of affairs, a born leader and organizer of men. This was shown in his peculiarly pleasant and yet effective way of giving out the long list of notices. He never seemed to command, but to invite. It was done with a winning urgency, and yet no one could feel either bored or dragooned. In stirring up to new duties, he gave full credit for duty already done. Three of the notices were especially noteworthy. One was an invitation to all, especially strangers, to meet him for a few moments of conversation after the benediction. Another was an announcement that next Sabbath would be the second anniversary of their occupation of this church. Dr. Macarthur remarked that he had never made much of the anniversaries of his own pastorate, though he hoped, if he should ever complete twenty years in that relation, to have somewhat to say. But it was well to commemorate at times humbly and gratefully the gracious dealings of God with them as a church. A third notice was in connection with the offerings of the day in behalf of the education of young men for the ministry. He eloquently advocated the beneficiary system, indignantly repelling the charge that it was inconsistent with the self-respect of the young men thus aided. It is simply the Church's doing what the State does for its military and naval cadets, except that where the latter provides clothing, food, books and entire support, the former merely aids to the extent of a pittance of $100 or $150. To this assistance many of the best young men, doing the most brilliant work, owe their education. The best thing one can invest his money in is a man.

There is nothing in which the real pastor, as both the spiritual and executive leader of the church, is manifest more than in the character of the "notices" and the way in which he presents them. It was easy to see from this episode of the service, that the hiding of Dr. Macarthur's power is as much in his shepherding and organizing qualities as in his pulpit performance.

The sermon, which was forty minutes long, was preached from a very few notes, that lay upon the desk but were seldom resorted to. It was apparently characteristic of the preacher's homiletic methods,—closely expository, familiarly illustrative, intensely practical, soundly and sweetly evangelical. This is not only the ideal of preaching as a sacred art, but it is what the hearts of men crave, and what they never grow weary of. And it is a comforting and hopeful thought that so large a portion of the most prominent pulpits of New York are favored with this kind of ministrations. I give a bare outline.

The text was Isaiah 55: 1, "Ho, every one that thirsteth! Come ye to the waters. . . . yea, come buy wine and milk without money and without price." The 51st chapter presents the fullest statement in the Bible of Christ's atoning sacrifice, more so than even the Gospels and the Epistles. Though written seven hundred years before the event, it reads more like history than prophecy. That chapter is a divine fountain of truth, from which this 55th flows as a glorious stream for the healing of the nations. Because of the facts revealed in the former, the invitations of this chapter are made possible and practical.

The prophet condescends to employ the exact cry of the water vender, heard to this day in the streets of an Eastern city. (This illustration was minutely explained.) The appeal is to the great class of the Thirsty. There is no suffering so keen, nor want so imperious as thirst,—as shown in shipwrecks, on the desert and on battle fields, and in fevers. This extorted the only cry of physical suffering from our Lord upon the cross. It is the only cry that comes to us from the world of lost spirits. It is one of the beatitudes of heaven, that we shall not "thirst any more." Man's spiritual thirst indicates alike the loftiness and the lowliness of his nature.

The Invitation is not limited to the elect, to the rich or poor, to the learned or unlearned, but simply to all who thirst. The offer to such is a blessed trinity of gifts,—water, wine and milk. (The peculiar preciousness of water in the East was here fully and beautifully illustrated, not only from its actual value as water, but from the legendary and superstitious associations with wells and fountains, yet all coming short of the more than magical potency of the water of Life and the wells of salvation). Wine illustrates the comforting and exhilarating effects of the Gospel, with no attendant reaction or exhaustion. Milk is the only food which has all the elements needful for the physical support of man in every stage of life; so Christ's religion offers satisfaction for our entire nature, affectional, intellectual, spiritual. "I am looking to-day into the faces of many who are good husbands, good business men, good in all the relations of the present life, and yet who have not sought or obtained this boon. I respect you highly. But I cannot help pitying you. You are robbing yourself of the true crown of your manhood, and trampling it under foot, if you seek not this love of God."

The Conditions of purchase—"without money and without price"—are a stumbling block to many. Rowland Hill, crying his Gospel wares beside the "Cheap Jacks" of the fairs and thoroughfares, was wont to say: "These men have great difficulty in getting you up to their price; my trouble is to get you down to mine!" But the terms could not be any different. There are some things you cannot formulate in figures or material values. I held my little child for a moment over the bannisters the other day. "Take care, don't drop baby!" cried its little sister. "I wouldn't drop her for a million dollars," was my reply. "But wouldn't you for forty millions, papa?" The thing was ridiculous, when attempted to be stated in any such way. It was unthinkable, and still more inexpressible. So the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ is an "unspeakable gift." Like Paul's vision of heaven, human language breaks down before it. (The expiatory and vicarious atonement was here very plainly, as well as affectingly, presented.) Our sin broke Christ's heart; how then could we possibly bear it ourselves? Yes, "Jesus paid it all, all the debt I owe." Therefore He can offer the release absolutely free. The demands of justice required a complete expiation. Moreover, it is God's way. He is a Great Giver. As well might you think of Jesus asking the blind beggar "how many shekels he had saved," before He would open his eyes; or inquiring into the condition of Martha's bank account, before He restored her brother from the grave! It is God-like to give.

Besides, we have nothing to offer in compensation. Beware how any of you say, "I'm better than many professors of religion, I pay a hundred cents on the dollar," and the like talk. You mean, that you would buy salvation. But what kind of a price is that for eternal life? Ought you not to be honest? Do you say, "I don't feel that I am a sinner"? That merely shows how great a sinner you are, that you have become insensible to it. If the Gospel of salvation is such good news to that man who has fallen very low in moral ruin, it is still better news to you.

Now, will you come? There are just three things God would have you to do. I. Come and inspect these wares which He offers. II. Take them on His own terms, as a free gift. And III., make sure you receive them into your spiritual nature. If I have a marvellous medicine, it is useless to talk about it unless I am prepared to give it, and as useless still unless it is taken. And yet some of you are in just this position, sitting at the table where the water, wine and milk of God are offered, looking at and discussing them, and yet dying in your sins.

The closing prayer was very tender and pleading, as befitted a sermon which pleaded so tenderly with man. F. N. ZABRISKIE.

The Place of Blessing.

BY REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D.

"HE blessed him there." Where? On the spot. The scene of Jacob's wrestling with the heavenly personage (whether an angel or the Son of God in a human form) was the scene of Jacob's blessing. It was a critical time in the history of a man who had committed some great wrongs, and needed to get into a new position towards God. That midnight interview and mysterious wrestling brought to Jacob a deliverance from deserved punishment by Esau; it brought a pacification with his wronged and indignant brother; it brought him the spiritual knighthood of a new name, "Israel," or the Prevailing Prince; it made another man of him. So different was he after that wonderful night with God that he afterwards said, "the Angel of the Lord redeemed me from all evil."

So much for the place in which Jacob received the remarkable blessings which gave color to his whole life. Let us enquire if there be no places and postures in which we may receive the precious benefits which we so much need. For everything depends on our getting into the right attitude towards God. The sun is just as hot on this January day as it is in July; the reason why we are shivering with the cold is that our globe lies at another angle towards the great solar furnace and only catches its indirect rays. We must change our position before the summer warmth can come again. Precisely so it is with our souls if we wish to come into the sunlight of His countenance and under the dews and warm showers of His grace. In the case of the Prodigal Son, everything depended on his attitude. As long as he was revelling with harlots or sulking among the swine he could find no favor with his father. As soon as he sets his penitent face towards home, the parental love runs out to welcome him. There are positions in which God will not and cannot bless a church, or a minister, or any individual soul.

He never blesses a man while in the attitude of disobedience. Jonah playing truant is heaved out into the sea; but Jonah going to Nineveh as God ordered him, received a blessing on his work. In keeping His commandments, and while keeping them, there is great reward. God never blesses us while shirking our duty. Christians who prefer pleasure haunts to prayer rooms must expect leanness; if they refuse to labor for souls they will reap no harvest. God never blesses a bereaved and suffering heart as long as that heart cavils and quarrels with Him. Submission brings the sweetness of His smile. No inquirer after salvation—even though a whole church were praying for him—can expect forgiveness and acceptance as long as he holds on to his besetting sin. Nor will anyone ever receive the crowning gift of eternal life while resisting the Holy Spirit and rejecting the loving, pleading Saviour.

A young lawyer, during a powerful revival in my church at B——, left town in order to escape from its influence. Conscience went with him, pricking him every hour, and in a week he returned home. The next day after his return he was intensely wrought upon by the Spirit, and in great distress he yielded himself to Christ. When he obeyed conscience he found the place of blessing. There are many such places; let me enumerate a few of them.

(1.) The Mercy seat is one of these, and when we come to it in the right spirit we do not fail to receive some genuine benefit. If not just what we expected, it may be something more needed, something better. God always puts a premium on sincerity, on faith, and on importunate perseverance. Opposite the names of Elijah, Elisha, Daniel, Bartimeus and the Syro-phenician mother, there is written, "He blessed them there." God grants to a large faith what He denies to a little faith. For faith creates such a condition of things that it is wise and right for God to grant what might otherwise be denied. There are many things in the Divine Providence that we must submit to without a murmur. But there are certain things which lie across our path expressly that we may wrestle with them and hurl them out of our way. No parent has any right to sit down satisfied to see his or her children remain unconverted. No pastor or church eldership has any right to let the snowbanks of worldliness and frigid unbelief heap up around the church, as long as faith can find a shovel or kindle a fire. When the right kind of praying begins, and the right kind of earnest personal effort for souls begins, then God sends the blessing. He loves to reward perseverance. Wrestling prayer brings the daybreak.

(2.) A second place of blessing is the place of penitence. Jacob confessed that he "was not worthy of the least of God's mercies," and it was in that humble attitude that God blessed him. The Pharisee was a heinous sinner and did not know it. The Publican did know it, did confess it and did find mercy. Good friend, if you will lay your once proud heart right down before the Cross, and beg for forgiveness, the infinitely loving Jesus will bless you there.

(3.) The place of self sacrifice is another spot on which the heavenly blessings fall. Abraham really sacrificed self when he offered up the beloved Isaac. When we put the knife to the right eye or the right hand, in order to please our Lord, He is sure to send us something a thousandfold better in lieu of them.

(4.) Life is a continued fight with the adversary. "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation." The oftener we slay a lion the oftener we shall, like Samson, find honey in the carcass.

(5.) Finally, every place of prompt honest obedience to our Lord is a place of blessing. Anxious inquirer! obey conscience and obey Christ, and you will find salvation, just as surely as the paralytic who "stretched out his hand" found recovery. If Jesus bids you confess Him and join His Church, do it. Cowardice and distrust bring no peace and no strength.

In many congregations the question now is, "How shall we obtain a blessing?" The true answer would seem to be, get into the right attitude for it. Our gracious God will surely grant His blessing to us when we cling to Christ in godly living and cling to His promise in honest, earnest, persevering prayer.

A Great Botanical Work.

PROFESSOR ASA GRAY, Professor of Natural History in Harvard University, has in progress a series of volumes, entitled "GRAY'S BOTANICAL TEXT-BOOK." They may be regarded as the crowning achievement of his long and illustrious life.

"STRUCTURAL BOTANY," by Asa Gray, LL.D., Vol. I., and "PHYSIOLOGICAL BOTANY," by George L. Goodale, A.M., M.D., Vol. II., are the titles of the treatises already published, and to them will be added the "INTRODUCTION TO CRYPTOGAMIC BOTANY, STRUCTURAL AND SYSTEMATIC," by Prof. William B. Farlow, Vol. III.; and a "SKETCH OF THE NATURAL ORDERS OF PHÆNOGAMOUS PLANTS," with a consideration of their "Special Morphology and Useful Products," by Prof. Gray, Vol. IV.

Closely allied to these books is the "MANUAL OF THE BOTANY OF THE ROCKY MOUNTAIN REGION," by John M. Coulter, Ph.D., Prof. of Botany in Wabash College, to which in a separate edition is prefixed "GRAY'S LESSONS IN BOTANY AND VEGETABLE PHYSIOLOGY."

For the use of academies and colleges nothing equal to the Botanical Text-Book has hitherto been published in this country, and it is doubtful whether anything so comprehensive, dealing so thoroughly with details, exists in any other country. Those who desire to or must learn the science of Botany without a teacher will find nothing which will so completely satisfy their wants. They should begin with "Gray's Lessons in Botany," and after fairly apprehending it will be prepared to follow the course of the Text-Book.

In "Structural Botany" Prof. Gray commences with the embryo in the seed and its advance into independent life. The sending out of roots and the variety of roots, the sending up of a stem and the diverse kinds of stems, the formation of buds and leaves, flowers and seed, and the structural differences of these parts of plant life in various Classes are described minutely in the natural order. Pages are devoted to stems, to buds, to flowers, etc. Chapters are added on the classification, the naming and description of the varieties of plants, on the preparation of specimens for examination with the microscope, and on the drying and preservation of collections. This is but an outline of an almost exhaustive discussion of the structure of the multitude of forms which populate the vegetable world.

In his "Physiological Botany" Prof. Goodale has condensed a wonderful amount of information. He speaks of the preparation of the book as a "formidable and burdensome task." It is impossible to indicate adequately the extent of territory he traverses and surveys minutely. His book is a dissection of plants and then an account of the processes of life, or rather he begins with the cell and the protoplasm which occupies it and from that builds up plants, shrubs and trees, subjecting each part,—cells, fibre, bark, the skin and mouths of leaves, and everything making up vegetable life, to examination with the microscope. This is followed with a full record of the processes of vegetable life—of how a plant or tree lives and grows. Wherever necessary instructions are given how to obtain objects for the microscope and how to observe, what chemical experiments to make, in short, how to be a practical botanist.

Of "Gray's Lessons in Botany" not a word is necessary. The book has been in use about thirty years, has been repeatedly revised and improved, and has certainly no superior; in our judgment, no equal.

Professor Coulter has compiled a descriptive catalogue of both the Phænogamia or Flowering Plants and the Cryptogamia or Flowerless Plants—such as ferns—to be found in the Rocky Mountain Region from New Mexico to the British Possessions. Each plant is briefly described in its peculiarities of structure and its habitat, and the name of the discoverer given in many cases. The work represents an immense amount of labor and is invaluable.

To Prof. Gray's books are added Glossaries, made to serve also as indexes. Wherever an illustration can be helpful in any of the volumes one is found, accurately drawn. We do not know of the equals of these engravings in any other work on botany. They indicate just the object under consideration and present an exact portrait.

The text is without errors so far as we have noticed. We have taken up these volumes again and again during the last four weeks, reading pages on each occasion, and have not encountered a misprint. The work of the publishers is well done in every respect.

A great deal more we would like to say. This Botanical Text Book is really a great work. It abounds in wonders and is full of objects of exceedingly delicate structure and exquisite beauty. Of much that is here revealed Prof. Gray is justified in saying that it treats of "subjects which certainly ought to be as generally understood by all educated people as the elements of Natural Philosophy and Astronomy are." (Ivison, Blakeman, Taylor & Co.)

Our Church.

We are thankful for items of Church News compactly stated; or for marked copies or clippings from local exchanges, which we would not therwise see. To insure publication in next number, they must reach us by noon on Monday. A condensation of items is unavoidable.

Special Services.

IN the Collegiate Church on Fifth avenue and Forty-eighth street the Rev. George F. Pentecost, D.D., is conducting a service every evening at 8 o'clock and a Bible Reading every afternoon at 4 o'clock, except on Saturdays. The meetings will continue until and including February 5th. Mr. and Mrs. George C. Stebbins lead the singing. The prayers of Christians are greatly desired for the blessing of God upon this effort, and their co-operation in securing the attendance of their friends and acquaintances. The neighborhood has been visited. From an open letter of the pastor, Rev. Edward B. Coe, D.D., which has been distributed in the vicinity of the church, the following extract is taken:

"A positive spiritual blessing is within your reach if you will take it; a revival of religious feeling, a renewal of Christian hope, a deeper joy in God's presence and love, if you are already a disciple of Christ; and, if you are not, a clear and earnest presentation of the way of salvation and an affectionate endeavor to lead you to the only Saviour of sinful men.

"Do not let the occasion pass without putting yourself, as often as you can, under the power of Divine truth and within the range of the special influences of the Holy Spirit.

"Do not let anything else interfere with your earnest and prayerful consideration, during these two weeks at least, of your personal relation to God.

"Do not stand in the way of others who need the same blessing, but do what you can to help them to obtain it.

"And may God make these services a means of great good, not only to the church where they are held, but to the surrounding community."

The Seminary Museum.

THE New Brunswick Theological Seminary has received some important acquisitions of late to its Library and Museum. For the former, Professor J. G. Lansing, D.D., has secured through his father in Cairo, Egypt, a very valuable and well-preserved Papyrus Roll, one of the finest of modern discovery. This rare and coveted manuscript of ancient Egypt is now on its way to New Brunswick, where it will be unrolled and deciphered. After it was bought, prominent representatives of foreign museums offered more than double the amount paid for it.

The Museum, in which there has been made a new start, has been enlarged by a number of valuable objects, and others are on the way from Egypt and Palestine. Among the things already added to the collection are various desirable articles of antiquity, and others belonging to modern usages, customs, etc., such as the following: A large painting belonging to the fifth dynasty taken from the tombs of Sakkarah, the Biblical Noph; ancient seal, inscribed stones, sacred beetles, crocodiles, nimbus, together with various ancient representations of Bes or Satan, etc.; relics from ancient localities such as Zoan, Joseph's Well, Brook Kedron, Solomon's Temple, etc.; a number of fine modern musical instruments, and identical with those used in ancient times, such as the harp, guitar, tambourine, etc.; a complete Oriental suit of the better class, and placed upon a figure so as to represent a Scribe; objects belonging to social usages, such as a complete eating set containing large tinned copper tray, stool finely inlaid with pearl and ivory, brass basin and water pitcher, drinking cups, coffee set, etc.; ornaments, modern but similar to those worn in ancient times as neck laces, bracelets, rings, anklets, etc.; various styles of lattice work, and a fine book stand, partly lattice work; Soudanese weapons used in the late war; coral from the Red Sea; petrified wood; frankincense, pottage or lentiles, husks, palm branches; a fish caught near Khartoum and found only there, etc.

Among those on the way are a mummy, manuscripts, antiquities, etc. The historical and Scriptural value of these is very great. The professor has also received as a present to himself a very fine mummy from the recent find in Akhmeem, and an inscribed tablet, the inscriptions on both which he is engaged in deciphering.

It is earnestly hoped that the Museum will receive the hearty support of all the friends of the Seminary. Professor Lansing is raising funds by lecturing for the benefit of this collection. All the proceeds of his lectures, above his expenses, are to be expended on the Museum. He is very much gratified and encouraged by the interest that is developing in his praiseworthy undertaking. It has been our pleasure to listen to two of his lectures, and we can testify that they are prepared with great painstaking; are entertaining, eloquent and instructive. He lectured last week with great acceptance at Franklin Park, N. J., Port Jackson, N. Y., Nyack, N. Y., and New Utrecht, L. I. This week he lectures at New Brunswick, and delivers the course at Newark, N. J.

Some gifts of small amounts have been made toward procuring articles illustrative of Oriental life for the Museum. There are perhaps some persons in localities which probably will not be reached by the lectures, who will be pleased to remit a gift of a moderate amount. Professor J. G. Lansing, D.D., New Brunswick, N. J., will be very happy to receive such additions to the fund.

....THE DAY OF PRAYER FOR COLLEGES, Jan, 28th, will be observed at the New York University by a public service in the morning in the chapel, when a sermon will be preached by the Rev. Ashbel G. Vermilye, D.D., of the class of 1840. All the Christian churches of the city unite in a union service to be held at 4 o'clock in the afternoon in the Brick Church at Fifth avenue and Thirty-seventh street, which all interested in the spiritual welfare of those under instruction in schools and colleges are requested to attend.

....MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.—The Classis of Newark will hold a missionary conference at Trinity Reformed Church, Plainfield, Fed. 3d, afternoon and evening.

The first session, beginning at 3 o'clock, will be devoted to woman's work. A paper from Mrs. M. E. Sangster will be read, and another by Mrs. P. D. Van Cleef. Mrs. Jacob Chamberlain, of India, will talk and an address will be delivered by Rev. J. F. Riggs, of Bergen Point.

In the evening there will be addresses by Secretaries Cobb and West, the Rev. F. F. Ellinwood, D.D., of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, and others.

A large attendance is desired. The Plainfield church doubtless will thoroughly sustain its reputation for hospitality.

....NEW YORK CITY.—The Union Reformed Church of Highbridge at its communion on Sabbath, Jan. 10th, received into regular membership twenty persons, eighteen of whom were on confession of faith. This joyful ingathering is the result of no attempt at "getting up" a revival. No extra meetings have been held. The Holy Spirit has blessed the plain and practical preaching and teaching of Gospel truth. The pastor, Rev. D. H. Martin, has been with this church not quite two years, but its original membership has been nearly doubled in that time.

COM.

....HOPEWELL, N. Y.—Among those who united with this church last communion was an old lady of 83 years, who then first professed her faith in Christ.

The revival services held by the pastor for seven weeks last winter have, besides a number of conversions, produced two other good and permanent results,—the first of which is the establishment of a regular Sabbath evening prayer meeting conducted entirely by laymen, while the pastor lectures in various parts of the congregation. Fifteen different gentlemen have agreed to take their turn as leaders. Another good result is a Young Men's Christian Association, which has rapidly increased in numbers and interest since its organization last summer. In this the young converts are at work. The Association already numbers sixty members and has made arrangements for holding a course of lectures in the church, the proceeds of which will be applied to the benefit of the Association. The pastor has been collecting contributions for a library, which will be presented to the Association this week, and this, in addition to the Lyceum exercises, will furnish the young men with ample means for mental improvement. The Y. M. C. A. prayer meeting, held every Sunday afternoon, is well sustained and considerable interest manifested. The ladies also have sent a barrel of toys, books, etc., to our Mission Church, at Marion, Dakota.

....FLATBUSH, ULSTER CO., N. Y.—There has been much religious interest in this church and in the community. The Lord has graciously granted His Spirit, and a revival which began in November is still in progress.

The pastor, Rev. A. A. Zabriskie, has been untiring in his labors among the people, with no assistance but such as has been occasionally given by some visiting brother; and last communion joyfully welcomed fifteen to the Lord's table for the first time. Since then many more have come out on the Lord's side, (among them several heads of families,) and others are anxiously inquiring the way of salvation.

The pastor is now conducting special services in Glasco and Glenerie with marked success.

....SCHUYLERVILLE, N. Y., JAN. 18TH.—The Rev. E. A. McCullum, of Lisha's Kill, who has accepted a call from the Reformed Church of this place, will begin his labors here the first Sunday in February.

In compliance with an assessment made by the Classis upon this church for $85 as its share towards the $100,000 voted by the last General Synod for the Board of Foreign Missions, a collection was taken last Sabbath morning and nearly the entire amount was raised, and with a little personal effort the whole sum will undoubtedly be sent forward.

All the services of the church are well sustained, and the new pastor will commence his labors with a working church free of debt. At the annual election of officers of the Sunday-school, last Sunday, Mr. J. H. De Ridden was unanimously re elected superintendent, by a rising vote, for the sixteenth consecutive time. From the reports we find that there are on the roll 212 scholars and a balance in the treasury of $84 03, with an invested fund of $700. At Christmas time the Sunday-school rendered the cantata St. Nicholas, in connection with a Christmas tree, at the Opera House, every seat in the house being taken before the exercises began. COM.

....A SUGGESTIVE ANNIVERSARY.—The first anniversary of the Sabbath evening sermon reading service in the chapel of the Reformed Church of South Bend, Ind., was attended by a large and interested audience on Sunday evening, Jan. 17. Deacon F. E. Peck, chorister and organist, opened the service as usual with an excellent baritone solo, and the Mission Sunday-school scholars furnished spirited singing. Elder J. E. Lewis, the lay reader, gave an account of the sermons read during the year, which had been chiefly the fresh utterances of the most noted and soundest evangelical preachers, and had been heard with good attention and profit.

The pastor, Rev. N. D. Williamson, who preached the anniversary sermon from 2 Cor. 3: 5, cautioned the sermon reader and his hearers against depending on the eloquent utterances of great preachers; and emphasized the need and advantage of their entering fully into the spirit of the apostolic utterance, "But our sufficiency is of God." Are there not other congregations unable to pay assistant pastors, with chapels or school rooms remote from their church buildings, that could profitably establish Sabbath evening lay reading sermon services? UTILITY.

....THE CLASSIS OF POUGHKEEPSIE in special session on the 18th, approved a call of the Church of Rhinebeck on the Rev. J. B. Campbell and made appointments for his installation at Rhinebeck on Feb. 2d.

....BROOKLYN, N. Y.—The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the South Church opened a Free Reading Room on January 18th, with a very agreeable musical entertainment and with addresses by the Rev. Ralph W. Brokaw, of Belleville, N. J., and the pastor, the Rev. A. D. W. Mason. The Society has a library well stocked with books and has a useful variety of periodicals.

....ELLENVILLE, N. Y.—The church here has been passing through a season of quiet but sweet refreshing. At the late communion, eleven were added to the membership, seven of whom were catechumens, and came upon the confession of their faith.

....BROOKLYN, N. Y.—The First Church, Rev. D. N. Vanderveer, D D., pastor, and the Church-on-the-Heights, Rev. A. J. Hutton, pastor, are uniting with the First and Second Presbyterian Churches, and the Church of the Pilgrims, Dr. Storrs, pastor, in a series of meetings for religious conference and prayer. They are held in the lecture-room of Dr. Storrs' church, and were opened on Wednesday of last week with an audience of about six hundred persons, and have since continued to be held daily. They are led by the pastors in rotation, the leading address occupying fifteen or twenty minutes. The meetings are marked by deep religious seriousness and earnestness.

....ORANGEBURG, S. C.—The Rev. William L. Johnson and family and the Freedmen's Mission at Orangeburg, were the grateful recipients of two missionary boxes of books, toys, candies, Sunday-school papers, and also a barrel of new and second-hand clothing, groceries, etc., from the Reformed church at Tompkinsville, Staten Island, N. Y. The articles were generously contributed by the Mission Band of the Sabbath-school of Rev. W. W. Clark's church, and packed and shipped under the superintendence of Mrs. Elizabeth W. Clark and Miss Emma J. Walser. The articles arrived a few days before Christmas, freight prepaid, and were placed on a Christmas tree, Dec. 28th, and the Freedmen's children of the Sabbath-school connected with the mission, numbering about one hundred, heartily enjoyed the Christmas gifts of their young Northern benefactors.

The festival was preceded by singing, recitations of sacred verse and Scripture, and prayer. At the close of the festival a vote of thanks to Mrs. Clark, Miss Walser, and Mr. Clark's Sabbath-school was proposed, and accorded by a hundred "ayes."

THE REV. MR. JOHNSON most gratefully acknowledges the receipt, freight prepaid, of a large box of second-hand library books, some of which were given as Christmas presents from the tree on Dec. 28th, from the Knox Memorial Sabbath-school, New York city, Rev. Abraham Thompson, pastor, through the kindness of Mr. Ernest Leins.

He, also, thanks Dr. Thompson's Bible class, for their generous renewal of subscriptions for THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER, the N. Y. Observer, Weekly Tribune, S. S. Times and lesson leaves, which they have for several years sent to him and his Sabbath-school through Mr. Ernest Leins.

ORANGEBURG, S. C., Jan. 15th, 1886.

....THE REV. PAUL F. SUTPHEN, after a very successful pastorate in the Third Presbyterian Church of Elizabeth, N. J., has recently accepted the call of the Woodland Avenue Presbyterian Church of Cleveland, Ohio. The Journal of Elizabeth says: "He has won the respect and regard of the whole community, and his departure will be generally regretted." Mr. Sutphen graduated from Rutgers in 1876. He made profession of faith in Christ in the Second Reformed Church of New Brunswick.

....WESTERN ITEMS.—Hope College acknowledges contributions to January 1st, since its last report, amounting to $1,075.56. ....Rev. J. W. Dunnewold, Gibbsville, Wis., was married on January 12th to Mrs. J. de Jager....Rev. W. Moerdyke, South Holland, Ill., has recently received a gold watch from his congregation....Rev. H. E. Dosker, of Grand Rapids, Mich., we are sorry to learn, has been compelled to submit to a surgical operation on the tongue.... Pews in Hope Church, Holland, Mich., were rented last week to the extent of $736. Last year pew rents, Sabbath and special collections, amounted to $1,526....Rev. J. F. Zwemer, Alto, Wis., has declined a joint call from the Northwestern Classical Academy and the Church of Orange Lake, Iowa....Pieter Van Zanten, many years an elder in the Church of Kalamazoo, Mich., died on December 31st, 1885, aged 79 years.

....NEW PROSPECT, N. Y.—On January 20th, the Ladies' Aid Society of this church held their sixteenth annual oyster supper at the parsonage. It was largely attended and the proceeds amounted to $44.25. It is reported to the credit of the ladies that the society is in a flourishing condition.

....THE CLASSIS OF MONTGOMERY on January 4th, in acquiescing with the request to dissolve the pastoral relation between the Church of Mohawk and the Rev. James Edmonson, Ph.D., who had been called to the Presidency of the Sedalia University, Mo., expressed the reluctance and regret with which they yielded to the request, their appreciation of "his refined, courteous and manly bearing in all our social intercourse; his scholarly taste, culture and attainments; his glowing zeal, devotion and success as a minister of the everlasting Gospel," and that their "kindest wishes and earnest prayers for his abundant success would follow him to his new field."

....PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The Fourth Church and Sabbath-school, Rev. Cornelius Schenck, pastor, having raised over $3,000 the past year, are determined to do still better the present year, and wipe out all indebtedness on the church and chapel. On a recent evening, a congregational meeting was held at the close of the prayer-meeting, when the sum of $1,300 was secured, and a committee appointed to wait on the members who were not present at that meeting, so as to give all a share in the work. The prayer-meeting, conducted by the young men of the church, held every Sabbath evening in the chapel, at the close of the preaching service, is increasing in interest.

....RUTGERS MEN IN JAPAN.—Rev. Dr. Griffis has just brought in a neat pamphet, his paper read at the last Commencement season on the work by Rutgers men in Japan. It forms a very interesting and honorable record. There are also brief biographical sketches of a number of the Japanese young men who were students at New Brunswick.

The Arcot Mission, India.

CHITTOOR, 15th December, 1885.

OUR work here is a peculiar one. Every advance costs money. Every step in the higher education of our preachers involves additional expense. The parents of our boys cannot bear much of this. With the exception of our three pastors and the masters of our boarding schools, not one of our helpers gets more than rupees 15, less than $6, a month, and very few even that. They cannot do much towards the education of their sons and daughters, and the laity are still less able. Then, too, every new village taken up brings expense. If we could reach the caste people who are more wealthy, we might hope for self-supporting churches, but we have not yet been able to do that, nor has any mission to a large extent. If, like the Roman Catholics, we simply took converts and did not attempt to educate them, we might get on with much less money. But these people are very poor Christians, without being able to read. They cannot make much progress. Therefore we always open a school with the church. I have been "combining" two villages under one teacher in several instances the past year, but can hardly tell yet how the plan will work. Besides, my villages are smaller and nearer together than many in other parts of the field.

We ought to have, besides, a strong corps of men constantly touring in the "regions beyond." We claim hundreds of square miles of territory over which we cannot preach. The number of inhabited villages in the North Arcot District alone is 4,465, and our field extends also into South Arcot and Cuddapah. Therefore, we must face the probability, not to say certainty, that for years to come the amount of money needed for our work, if we are to expand at all, will increase and not decrease. I think the unanimous conclusion of the missionaries is, that unless the Church at home is prepared to meet these increases, the field or the missionary force or both should be reduced. J. W. CONKLIN.

Gleanings from our Exchanges.

....The observance of the Week of Prayer was marked by such a deep interest in many of our churches that the meetings have been continued into the weeks following with gratifying results.

....Of the interesting series of historical sermons being preached by the Rev. Henry M. Cox, of Herkimer, N. Y., the first three have been published in full in the Journal and Courier of Little Falls, N. Y.

....The Church of Zeeland, Mich., has received a new bell 40 inches in diameter, and weighing 1,339 pounds.

....The First Church of Hackensack, N. J., has executed a call upon Rev. Herman Vanderwart, of Athens, N. Y.

....The one hundred shares offered at the Alumni Meeting of Rutgers College held last June have been subscribed for. This brings to the college an increase of income of nearly $7,000 yearly.

....We copy the following from the New Paltz items in the Kingston Argus: There will be a general feeling of regret that Rev. Mr. Vennema has concluded to accept the call tendered to him by the church at Kalamazoo, Mich. Mr. Vennema has been at New Paltz about three and a half years as settled pastor, and about four years including the time that he preached here as a supply during Rev. Dr. Peltz's illness. The call which he has accepted comes from a young church, consisting principally of the sons and daughters of Hollanders.

....The friends of Rev. T. S. Brown, pastor of the church at Chatham, N. Y., have presented him with a purse of over $200.

Rutgers College Notes.

THE Day of Prayer for Colleges, the 28th inst, is to be observed at the College. Dr. William M. Taylor, of the Broadway Tabernacle, will preach in the chapel at 10.45 A.M. The pastors of the city will take part in the services. At 3 P. M. there will be a prayer and consecration meeting of the students and faculties of the Seminary, the College and the Grammar School, led by one of the Seminary students. A union prayer-meeting will be held in the evening at the Second Reformed Church.

The State Conference of College Y. M. C. Associations of New Jersey will be held with the Rutgers Association, beginning on the evening of Friday, Feb. 5th, and continuing through Saturday and Sunday. Large delegations have been invited from all the colleges and theological seminaries of the State and from certain of the more important preparatory schools where associations have been or are soon to be organized. Mr. J. H. K. Studd, of Cambridge, England, who is spending the winter in Christian work among the college men of the United States, will be present and will speak of the wonderful work among the students of Cambridge, England, at the time of Mr. Moody's visit there, and of the missionary movement which followed. Mr. Wishard, the College Secretary of the International Committee, Mr. Cephas Brainerd, of New York, Mr. J. T. Bowne, of the new "School for Christian Workers," at Springfield, Mass., and other experienced workers and speakers will be present.

The dates for the five Vedder Lectures, by the Rev. George S. Bishop, D.D., of Orange, N. J., have been fixed for Sunday evening, Feb. 28th, and the two succeeding Mondays and Thursdays.

President Gates was in Washington on Thursday and Friday of last week, to attend the annual meeting of the Board of Indian Commissioners, of which he is a member, and to make an address at the meeting in the interest of the Indian, at the Congregational Church there, on Thursday evening. Senator Chase, of Rhode Island, Dr. Strieby, Gen. Armstrong, of the Hampton School, and Captain Pratt, of the Indian School at Carlisle, were the other speakers. Dr. Gates is to address the State "Association in the Interest of the Indian," at Hartford, Conn., at their annual meeting, Feb. 1st. The first edition of his address on Land and Law for Indians, to which you called attention last week, has been for some time exhausted. A second edition has been ordered printed by the Board at Washington.

Dr. Cook was also in Washington last week, and with Justice Bradley called upon the President. CON.

Dutch Foreing Missions.

THE January issue of the Maandbericht of the Netherlands' Missionary Society recounts with gratitude the success of the effort made during the past year to relieve the treasury (which had become so low that some feared an extinction of the Society) and secure a permanent increase of yearly contributions. This was so marked as to recall previous days of trial since 1797, in all of which was fulfilled the old promise, "In the Mount of the Lord it shall be provided." The list of the missions shows the following as the force at work:

Amboyna.—One missionary.

Celebes (Minahassa).—Two missionaries, with eleven assistant missionaries and thirty-four native helpers.

Java.—Five missionaries, with twenty-seven assistants and native helpers.

Sarve.—One missionary, with nine pioneer teachers.

This does not seem much for a society within eleven years of reaching its second century. But the difficulties have been very many, owing chiefly to the indifference or hostility of the colonial officers. The Malay Archipelago has yielded less return than almost any other mission field in the round world.

THE venerable Rev. G. S. Webb, D.D., in his prime long the efficient and beloved pastor of the First Baptist Church of New Brunswick, N. J., died last Saturday at New Brunswick, in the 97th year of his age.

News of the Week.

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 20. — Deputations from the various branches of Loyal and Patriotic unions waited on Lord Salisbury, the Premier, and urged a strict enforcement of existing laws; he dismissed them very abruptly. Mr. Gladstone refused to receive the delegation and also caused offence.... Three hundred Chinamen are said to be starving to death at Port Henry, British Columbia....Skirmishing continues between the British and Dacoits in Burmah. ....In the U. S. Senate Senator Vest denounced the people of Dakota, and objected to receiving that territory as a State....In the House the bill for the relief of the Cheyenne Indians was passed, and the committee reported the Fitz-John Porter bill favorably....A man's kidney was removed by surgeons in Indiana, and the patient is said to be recovering....The Mayors of the cities of Iowa think prohibition a failure. ....The funeral of Miss Bayard, eldest daughter of the Secretary of State, was held yesterday at Wilmington. She was 29 years old....Billy Porter, the notorious safe burglar, is again arrested....Six thousand employees have been turned out of employment by the action of the cigar manufacturers.

THURSDAY, 21.—Forecasts of the Queen's speech have been made public. The Tories are more hopeful of retaining power than before. The Queen has arrived in London. ....Irish Loyalists are strongly opposed to Home Rule in Ireland ...The tunnel under the Mersey connecting Liverpool with Birkenhead was formally opened by the Prince of Wales....Several changes, it is said, are likely to be made in the English Cabinet. ...The Pretending Prince of Burmah, with two of his adherents, were shot yesterday....An active volcano at Colima has been photographed....A new Russian army has crossed over into Asia....Mr. Canda's name was sent to the Senate for U. S. Sub-Treasurer at New York....The bill authorizing the purchase of the old Produce Exchange for the National Government passed the House....A fight between officers and Hungarians is reported from the coke regions of Pennsylvania....Foster, a notorious burglar in Ohio, was shot by a policeman. ....The investigation of the election frauds in Ohio continues....Over $100,000 worth of cotton was burned at the American Docks at Staten Island....The advantages of ensilage have been discussed by farmers in New York city.

FRIDAY, 22.—Parliament was opened with great pomp yesterday in London. The Queen attended. Her address was read from the throne. She opposed Irish independence. A reply was moved in the House of Lords. Mr. Gladstone made a speech of nearly one hour and a half in the House of Commons, and was cheered heartily.... Notice was given in the House of Commons of bills that will be offered for Ireland's welfare....Spain is to send governors and garrisons to the Caroline and Pelew islands. ....The rebels in Burmah have been defeated....Another uprising is feared among the Indians of the Northwest....A very severe storm swept over the Pacific coast, doing a vast amount of damage in San Francisco. The city is completely cut off from telegraph communication with the outer world....A bill was introduced in the Albany Legislature to reduce fares on the elevated railroad of New York to five cents. ....Efforts are being renewed to reach the entombed miners at Nanticoke, Pa....The trouble with the Hungarian strikers in the Pennsylvania coke regions continues....A collision occurred on the N. Y. Elevated Railroad. No lives were lost....The cigar-makers are still locked out, and there is little hope of arbitration....Two ladies at Hastings were robbed of money and jewelry by masked burglars.

SATURDAY, 23. — The Irish National League, if it is pronounced illegal in Ireland, will go to England....The Irish newspapers comment severely upon the Queen's speech ...Bimetalism is being discussed in England. There is a reaction in favor of silver ...A number of lives were lost in burning buildings at Belville, France.

(Continued on page twelve.)

Our Contributors.

Pioneers of Africa's Regeneration.*

"ETHIOPIA shall haste to stretch out her hands unto God." (R. V.) This prophecy is receiving its rapid and wonderful fulfillment. The life of a single generation spans the interval between pioneer labors for the introduction of the Gospel into the interior of Africa—then unexplored, a land of darkness and mystery—and the complete opening of the "Dark Continent" to the knowledge, commerce and civilization of the world, and to missionary effort—the crossing and recrossing from East to West, from North to South of those unexplored regions till the whole map is measurably filled out, the planting of mission stations and colonies on all its great lakes and rivers, and the foundation of a great Free State, to be conducted on Christian principles and under the protectorate of all the Christian powers, in the broad basin of one of the greatest of them all.

Among all those, and they are many and noble, whose agency has contributed to this result, none are more worthy of honor or more certain to be "had in everlasting remembrance," than the heroic Robert Moffat and his no less heroic wife and companion, Mary Moffat. The Christian Church has always and justly been proud of its "noble army of martyrs," those whose memory it inherits from Old Testament times, embalmed in its sacred records and the long roll of whose names is written in the 11th chapter of the Epistle to the Hebrews, as well as those of later times whose names are worthy to be written side by side with theirs. It has not been wont to reckon among them its missionaries to the heathen, unless, as some have done, they have actually laid down their lives for the sake of Jesus and His Gospel.

Yet there is a life-long martyrdom, no less trying to faith and not less deserving of recognition and honor—no less worthy to lie at the foundations of the kingdom of God newly laid in any portion of the world—than that which is accomplished by the sword, in the arena or at the stake. The pang of the sword is sharp but short; the fire of the stake is intense but brief; the fight with wild beasts is terrible, but quickly has its end in death and peace and the martyr's crown.

Not so the long scorching heats of an African sun, the pangs of almost mortal thirst and hunger many times repeated; the life-long contact and the not infrequent conflict—with moral and spiritual if not with physical strength and weapons—with men scarcely less savage, less brutal or less cruel than the wild beasts of their own desert or jungle. Such was the missionary life of Robert and Mary Moffat, begun by him in 1816 and by her three years later, and continued by both together in most perfect, mutual helpfulness and harmony till 1870.

The fruits of such lives, crowned with the blessing of Him whom they served, are what might have been expected, even among the savage tribes among whom their lot was cast. They are thus described in a remarkable article that appeared in the London Times on the day after Moffat's burial in 1883, (his wife having preceded him in death by several years): "His chief work was among the Bechuanas. His picture of what they were when he first knew them would hardly now be recognized, so entirely have they changed under the new influences which Moffat was among the first to bring to bear upon them. He found them mere savages, idol worshippers, constantly at war among themselves and with their neighbors, ignorant of the arts of agriculture, and in the utterly degraded state for which we must seek a counterpart now in the more distant tribes whom the message of civilization has not yet reached. It was Moffat's mission to civilize as well as to instruct, to free those with whom he was brought into contact from the curse under which they seemed to lie, to raise them to a higher life, and so to fit them to become recipients of the sacred message of good tidings which it was his main ultimate purpose to announce."

Of the churches gathered, the native pastors raised and trained from this once savage people, the Gospel institutions planted, the Times says nothing, but they are his enduring monument. Not less so is the translation of the Scriptures into the Sechuana tongue, which he had himself reduced to writing. It is not a little remarkable that a man with comparatively little early education and almost no literary or scholastic training, should have been able, by dint of hard and faithful labor, aided by his own strong intelligence, clear and admirable judgment and perfect sympathy with the Word, to accomplish that which is usually regarded as preëminently the work of scholars.

In all his labors, toils, privations, trials, triumphs, Mary Moffat was his constant, faithful, helpful companion and co-laborer. Indeed, hers was not infrequently the harder lot, since it was often her part to wait in patience while he acted and was absent. Yet her patience and courage never failed.

The story of their lives is fit to arouse enthusiasm. Without finding fault with this noble book, a little more enthusiasm on the part of the writer would not have been amiss, nor a little less taking for granted a knowledge of circumstances, persons and details that might be familiar to the reader of Moffat's Southern Africa, or of current missionary literature since, but can hardly be known to the general reader. These faults aside, it is still a "noble book," for the characters it presents, the labors it illustrates, the testimony it bears to the faithfulness of God to those who honor Him by simple devotion to His service, trust in His promises and obedience to His commands. Happy the continent that has such men and women as the pioneers of its civilization and founders of the Church of God.

*The Lives of Robert and Mary Moffat. By their son, John S. Moffat. With an Introduction by Rev. Wm. M. Taylor, D.D. With Portraits and Maps. New York: A. C. Armstrong & Son. 1885.

The Heretic Priest; A Tale of Reformation Days in the Netherlands.

(Translated from the Dutch of E. Gerdes, for the Christian Intelligencer, by Rev. Daniel Van Pelt.)

CHAPTER IV.—TEACHER AND PUPIL PART.

AFTER the departure of the monk and the priest, Floris remained still a few moments in his hiding place, for he feared that either of them might return. But to his joy all soon became quiet within the house. He had heard Father Josephus go out by the back door, which opened to the road leading past the monastery.

He had been deeply impressed by the mention that had been made of his uncle, Philip Cruize. From the moment that he had heard the recital of his conversion and his subsequent persecution and wanderings, an irresistible longing had sprung up within him to join his fate and follow his example, and openly accept the faith of Calvin. All that he had thus far learned concerning the new doctrines had made him desire strongly to know more about them. A light had dawned upon him which had caused many an obscurity created by the Romish faith to be dispelled. But here in superstitious and monk-ridden Weersbeek, within the very shadow of the ancient monastery, the thirst for knowledge and the desire for light which possessed the lad could never be satisfied. He had also learned with intense satisfaction that his copied extracts from the Bible had not remained without effect upon his parents. The conferences held at their house indicated beyond question that they had embraced the opinions of the Reformed; and this made his purpose all the stronger to leave this place, go to his home and enjoy the opportunities there afforded of gaining a deeper insight into the doctrines of the Reformation. He must find his uncle, and in his society seek the parental roof.

Less than half an hour after the events that transpired in the study, a soft knock was heard upon the door of the oratory, to which the priest had repaired. The latter arose, invited the one who knocked to come in, and at the same time stepped towards the door to greet him on his entrance. But he drew back in some astonishment when by the feeble light of the lamp he thought he saw again the dealer in sacred images, for he noticed the same wooden box which his brother had carried, and had left behind him in the study. His mind was soon set at rest, however, for when the pretended dealer had entered the room he at once perceived that it was none other than his pupil, Floris Berthem.

"You here?" he exclaimed, "and in this disguise! What does this mean?"

"Pardon me, your reverence," replied Floris, loosening the straps that held the box, "pardon me for disturbing you at this unseasonable hour. But I have a fault to confess; I have also a request to make and to inform you of a resolution I have come to."

"Well, what is the fault you wish to confess, Floris?"

"That I, in spite of myself, have become an observer of and a listener to strange people and strange matters."

"Explain yourself, Floris."

"I was in the study behind my desk when that dealer in sacred images threw away his false beard, and learned that he was—"

"My brother! and did you hear all that was said?"

"All, your reverence. Also the order to appear before the Bishop at Mechlin."

The clergyman buried his face in his hands, as if he would hide from himself the vision which these words called up before him. A moment or two later he said:

"And did you hear what I told my brother about your uncle, Philip Cruize?"

"Yes, your reverence; and it is concerning him that I wish to make a request."

"What is it?" asked the priest, in surprise.

"You informed your brother that my uncle left here a brown, patched cloak."

"Yes; but you don't want that?"

"This is just my request."

"And what do you intend to do with it?" inquired his preceptor, more surprised than ever.

"Your reverence, excuse a mere lad for using such bold language to you. But I must tell you of the resolution I have formed. All that I have before read in the Bible, and all that I have heard to-day, has inspired me with such zeal for the cause of the Reformation, that, young as I am, I mean to devote myself to it, body and soul. In the Providence of God it has so happened that you and I have long remained in ignorance of the truth. But now it has dawned upon me in the fulness of the Gospel light, I feel I must leave Weersbeek and join myself to the adherents of the new faith. My intention is to first find my Uncle Philip, to warn him against the spies that beset him, to stand by him in danger, and to go with him wherever he may journey. It is for this reason that I ask you to give me his cloak; I wish to disguise myself in this, and thus divert the search from his whereabouts, whenever occasion serves, as he is known to wear this, and another seen in it will distract the spies of the inquisition. I have also the wig and beard cast aside by your brother. They may aid in subsequent disguises."

The priest was utterly dumbfounded. He did not know what to admire most; the prudence and wise fore-thought or the dauntless courage of this youth of scarce seventeen summers.

"But, Floris," he remarked, after a pause of some length, "you have never read God's Word, you have not even seen a Bible! How then, can the Gospel doctrines have taken such a hold upon you? Do you know what you are risking?"

"Yes, your reverence," Floris continued modestly, but firmly. "I know that persecutions of various kinds and perhaps the stake await me. And I have seen and read the Bible. Many an extract have I copied from yours and sent them to my parents, and you know now with what result. And I also have a Bible of my own. I found one at the bottom of the box your brother left, beneath the saints' books and saints' images. I will keep and use it till I meet its owner, when I shall purchase it from him."

"And have you now told me the whole of your intentions?"

"No, your reverence, I have one more word to add. From the moment that I leave this house, I shall not cease to pray God that He will move your heart to leave Weersbeek, or rather, to forsake the Romish Church, to renounce its idolatry and to embrace the teachings of the true Gospel. I trust that God will hear my prayers, and I know that Uncle Philip will join his to mine."

The heart of the priest was deeply stirred as Floris spoke these words. An emotion not unlike that which was awakened within Felix as Paul admonished him, took possession of him; or like that which expressed itself in Agrippa's words to the Apostle, "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian." It was a remarkable circumstance; the inexperienced lad exhorting the learned clergyman. Did it not convince him that in order to a firmness in the faith and a determination to follow the Master and the light of His Spirit, no great learning or extensive investigations were necessary? This youth had heard but little Gospel truth spoken, he had read but few passages in the Bible, yet his convictions were firm, and his stand was resolutely taken on the side of the truth. Was not his own hesitancy rebuked by this noble example? This thought arose within him. He bent a look full of love and admiration upon his pupil, and felt that he could do nothing to hinder him in the carrying out of his purpose. He opened the door of a wardrobe, took the cloak therefrom, and after throwing it about the shoulders of Floris, he fervently pressed his hand and said:

"My dear Floris, God be with you. May He be your shield and your portion in all your ways. You have appealed to His Word, may that Word be a light upon your path. Do nothing without prayer to God, and let us hope for happier times."

"And may I hope to soon meet you again, your reverence?" asked the youth, deeply moved.

"If it please God, yes. But where, that I cannot tell."

"And suppose it be at the stake?"

The clergyman shuddered at these words; but quickly recovering his wonted composure, he replied with a look of lofty determination:

"If it please God!"

The teacher and pupil pressed each other's hands once more, and then the youth left the oratory.

"What shall I do?" communed the priest with himself, after the departure of Floris. "Shall I heed the Bishop's command, and—perhaps languish an indefinite period in prison? Or shall I do what seems God's bidding? Philip Cruize said, 'The Lord's promises are only for those who will confess Him openly before men.' O my God," he exclaimed, casting himself prostrate on the floor, "deliver me from this conflict of thought and feeling; show me plainly the path that is in accordance with Thy will and Thy truth!"

On leaving the oratory, Floris crept softly past the kitchen. Curious to see what Sister Brigitta was doing, and longing to catch a last glimpse of her, he looked through the half-open door and saw her upon her knees. To allay her suspicions Herman Van der Woude had given her one of his books, which purported to have been written by St. Gregorius, and which gave an account of a miraculous cure of rheumatism. The cure would be repeated in the case of any similarly afflicted, if the person would kneel upon the last page of the book—duly blest by said holy father for that purpose—and, while in this position, would repeat a prescribed number of Ave Marias.

"Poor soul," sighed Floris, "and will it ever be that she shall escape the darkness of superstition? Would that I could now tell her of better things. But I will do what I can."

Taking a piece of paper from his pocket, whereon were written some passages of Scripture, he laid it carefully upon the doorsill. Then advancing to the front door, he opened it, wrapped his uncle's cloak closely about his shoulders, passed out into the night and soon disappeared in the darkness.

About two hours after leaving the parsonage our youthful pilgrim reached the banks of the Demer river. It was with great difficulty that he had kept himself from losing his way; for although he was well acquainted with all the roads in this vicinity, the darkness had been so great that he could scarcely recognize the most familiar landmarks. The moon was hid behind black clouds, which were accumulating in ever darker masses over the whole sky, threatening a severe thunderstorm, or at least heavy rain. Fortunately, however, he found himself at the river at last. But now, how should he get to the other side? He saw no light anywhere, and could discover no dwelling near, where he might ask some one to carry him across with a boat. Somewhat despondent on this account, he laid aside his box and sat down on the bank to dip his hand in the water and cool his brow, for the exciting experiences of the last few hours had made his blood somewhat feverish. While thus engaged a sound struck his quick ear, as of some one rowing a boat. Hurriedly adjusting his box again, he went to the spot which the boat was approaching, and hailed the boatman before he reached the shore.

"Who is there?" called out the latter.

"Some one who wishes to be put across the river; will you row me over?"

"Not I, my friend!" replied the oarsman. "Just a moment ago I was called out of bed to carry some one across, and I don't feel like doing it again. Besides, it is beginning to rain, and I have no mind to get drenched. If you wait till morning the ferry-man will take you over."

"And aren't you the ferry-man?"

"Not at all; I am in the service of the monastery, and only take the monks across. I just took one over."

"May I ask who it was?" anxiously inquired Floris, fearing that he could guess but too well without being told.

"Why yes; it was Father Josephus. Do you think him a good customer for your wares, and wish to follow him? Why can't you wait till morning."

Floris was more than ever determined to cross the river. He was filled with forebodings for the safety of his Uncle Philip and the parish priest, as well as for his own, now that he knew that Father Josephus had left the monastery and was probably on his way to Brussels.

"I would not mind waiting," he answered the boatman, "but some one is in great danger, and I must get to him as soon as possible."

"And do you think you could protect him? You look as if you needed protection yourself."

"I know that," replied Floris, "and therefore I have taken care to secure a Protector."

"And who is that? Your patron saint?"

"My Protector is the God of heaven and earth, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, without whose will not a hair shall fall from my head." It cost Floris some effort to say this, but he remembered his uncle's admonition about confessing the Saviour before men.

These few words had an unlooked-for effect upon the boatman. He had placed one foot upon the bank, but now at once withdrew it and said to Floris:

"If you have Him for your Protector, I dare not refuse you. Step into the boat. Take this old coat to protect you from the rain. Now then, off we go!"

(To be continued.)

Prof. Steffens on Hebrew in Our Colleges.

"HEBREW in Our Colleges;" that is the heading of Prof. Steffens' article in the INTELLIGENCER of January 13th. The heading would have been different if the spirit shown in the article had been expressed.

Prof. Steffens should have some knowledge of the Arabic before throwing down the gauntlet or assuming the role of judge. For I take it that he has no knowledge of the Arabic, or he would not make such wild statements as he does, nor yet conclude by passing such an admonitory sentence, a sentence all out of harmony with facts and experience, viz., "I doubt whether it would be wise to introduce it (Arabic) under the present condition of affairs into any seminary." To this sentiment he is led on by the animus of the article, for he seems to think differently in the outset.

In the outset he agrees theoretically "that the study of the Arabic ought to be introduced into our seminary as soon as it is practicable." (The italics also belong to Prof. Steffens. Comments unnecessary.) But he doubts its practicability. Why? Because he thinks that students will not be able to take up the study of the Arabic without endangering their harmonious development as teachers and pastors of the Church. On the other hand, I am certain that they will endanger their harmonious development as teachers and pastors if they do not take up the study of Arabic. My Arabic was of incalculable help to me as teacher and pastor during the seven years I was in the pastorate.

He understands the brethren contending for the study of the Arabic in the seminary that it is "in order to equip our future pastors better for the sound interpretation of the Old Testament." O, that is not all! It is in order to equip them better to study and understand Hebrew grammar, Hebrew lexicography, Hebrew language, Old Testament exegesis, the sound interpretation of the Holy Scriptures. In all of these departments, from the first rudiments to the latest acquisitions, there are multitudes of things that must remain unintelligible or unexplained, or they must be made intelligent and given an explanation through the Arabic. How does Prof. Steffens treat them?

At this point Prof. Steffens misrepresents the position. We are not contending for the study of the Arabic as a specialty. We are contending for the study of the Arabic as necessary to an easier and more correct study and understanding of Hebrew grammar, language, exegesis, etc., and as necessary for the better equipment of the theological student, and for the economizing of his time.

Now, strange to say, it is just at this point of time that Prof. Steffens builds his doubt; which also goes to show that he is not acquainted with the Arabic and its great help in the study of the Hebrew from the very outset. He represents the young man fresh from college with only three years before him in his seminary course. Then he says: "My experience tells me that these three years are hardly sufficient to give to our students such a knowledge of Hebrew as to make it a joy for them to continue their studies after they have left the seminary." This assumes what is denied—denied by fact and personal testimony, viz., that the Arabic is an extra burden instead of an elisted and essential aid in the study and continued study of the Hebrew. How much experience has Prof. Steffens had with students who studied Arabic through their seminary course, and the results of such study? Now my experience tells me—and I have been through the experience in both ways, and not only in one—that the student who studies Arabic along with Hebrew through his seminary course knows far more about Hebrew at the end of his seminary course than the student who does not take up the Arabic. Prof. Steffens says that he has read my Inaugural Address. Then he either entirely overlooks or entirely discredits a statement made by me there to be found on the 51st page, viz., that theological students and graduates in foreign lands, speaking the Arabic as their native tongue, and knowing the Arabic only, acquire a larger and better understanding of the Hebrew at the end of one year's study, than do European and American theological students, unacquainted with the Arabic, acquire at the end of three years' study. This is the statement of a fact susceptible of ample proof. This statement is the rule and not the exception. How does Prof. Steffens account for it?

More of the same kind follows. His connection with Classes showed him that seminary graduates had a very superficial knowledge of Hebrew. But why? Simply because they did not study the Arabic along with the Hebrew through their course. This is true, or else Prof. Steffens must deny the truth of the statement made as to the relative attainments made by Arabic and non-Arabic theological students. Proceeding upon a false premise he also jumps at the false conclusion that the result of introducing Arabic into the seminary will be that the student "leaving the seminary will know a little less Hebrew than formerly and a smattering of Arabic, which is of no practical value at all to him." All of which is denied and the precise opposite affirmed. He will know far more Hebrew, or deny the statement of the fact already referred to and many similar facts which can be adduced and proved if necessary. He will know a good deal of Arabic because every progress made in the one language will be progress made in the other if carried along with it, so involved in each other are the two languages. Of no practical value at all? I oppose to that my experience of seven years in the pastorate, and my experience with the Arabic. Prof. Steffens has had experience in the pastorate, but he has not had experience in Arabic or he would not make such a rash statement; but he would have found, as I found, the greatest help from the Arabic in performing the chief duties of a pastoral charge.

Of no practical value at all? Indeed! Why, there are scores of things in the very rudiments of Hebrew grammar that Prof. Steffens must leave unaccounted for, or he must account for them through the Arabic. Does he leave them unaccounted for? He cannot give a correct definition of the Hebrew conjugations without the help of the Arabic. What does he do about it? His Hebrew lexicon abounds with meanings taken from the Arabic chiefly, while many others should be there. Will he throw them out? Passages after passages of Scripture he cannot read intelligently without the help of the Arabic. Will he leave the sense of the original languages of the Word of God a matter of approximation instead of a matter of accuracy? As a "teacher of Hebrew" in Hope, how does he deal with these things and many like them?

We agree and would coöperate most heartily with Prof. Steffens as to the matter of having Hebrew introduced into our colleges; but for reasons sufficiently indicated we would not make that the condition upon which Arabic should be introduced into seminaries. Yes, we would introduce Hebrew in colleges, and—Arabic also.

Prof. Steffens does not wish to dampen the enthusiasm of those of us who are contending for the study of the Arabic. There is no danger. It cannot be dampened.

An excellent committee of General Synod recently gave us a new and excellent Seminary Curriculum, containing many additional things. Another excellent committee, in some time not distant, will add the Arabic to the regular studies. It's coming. In the meantime we are studying Arabic as an optional in our seminary in New Brunswick; and in the Arabic we have a magnificent class doing magnificent work. We propose to continue so doing.

J. G. LANSING.

THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY, New Brunswick, N. J.

MR. STANLEY SMITH, one of the young university men led to consecrate himself to foreign missionary service, wrote on September 18th to a friend in England: "I hear the Gospel is getting into the palace. Princess Kung has thrown away her idols, and, in company with fifteen others, worships God through Jesus. One outcome of the Peking meeting we held is that the missionaries there, to the number of twenty to thirty, including their wives, have signed a circular, which they are sending to all the missionaries in China, asking them to unite daily in praying for an outpouring of the Spirit on themselves and China."

The Reading Room.

Our Book-Shelves.

....The third "STORY OF THE NATIONS" has for its subject "The Jews," and is written by Prof. James K. Hosmer, whose Life of Samuel Adams recently appeared in the "American Statesmen" series. The same qualities belong to this book as those which we noted in the previous one,—a graphic and picturesque style, but rather unduly florid and sensational at times. This latter, however, is not nearly so great a fault as to be dull. In fact, it were hard to be prosaic on such a theme as the miracle, romance, and tragedy of Jewish history.

Prof. Hosmer presents the story in a series of pictures, or pivotal scenes in a drama, such as "The Morning Time in Palestine," "Israel at Nineveh," "Judas Maccabæus, the Hebrew William Tell," "Titus on the Ruins of Zion," "The Holocausts in Spain," "The Money Kings," "Hebrew Statesmen," etc. The Scriptural history is given only in outline. The connection between the Old and the New Testament history, the destruction and dispersion of the nation, the mediæval history, the modern doings and development of this remarkable people, are given with considerable fulness of detail and wealth of information. We venture to say that few of our readers would not find a vast deal which is new to them in the chapters on the obscure and suffering annals of the Jew from the destruction of Jerusalem till a hundred years ago, and even since. The story of the Mendelssohns, the Rothschilds, the Disraelis, Gambetta, Heine, Montefiore, and others who have been conspicuous in recent times, is made very interesting, though in some instances disproportionately expanded. The book is not exactly a children's "story," but could not fail to be fascinating to intelligent young people of twelve years and over, as well as to persons in later life. (G. P. Putnam's Sons.)

...."ALONG THE OLD ROAD." By Mary Hubbard Howell. The purpose of the author in writing this book is to revive fresh interest in the Pilgrim's Progress; especially to remind the young of the beauty and power of that wonderful allegory. The story is skilfully planned, and gracefully told. Though the characters, which are graphically portrayed, are seen moving in different spheres of modern society and activity, rather than on a pilgrimage, as in the allegory, still they find a slough of despond, a hill difficulty, a valley of humiliation, a vanity fair, etc., and catch glimpses of Delectable mountains. The cover (cloth) is beautifully designed and every way elegant. (The American Sunday School Union.)

...."THE PASTORS' DIARY AND CLERICAL RECORD." Prepared by Rev. Louis H. Jordan, D.D. This is the most complete book of the kind that has ever come to our notice. There is not a record that the pastor needs to make, but he will find a place provided for it here, together with a diary of ample space allotted to each day in the year for the entry of prominent events. Being undenominational, it can be used by any pastor. The Calendar, International Lessons, series for 1886, and other tables of postal and money order rates are convenient for reference. It is neatly bound in flexible cloth. It is in its second edition, and has met great favor both in this country and England. (Funk & Wagnalls.)

...."THIRTY THOUSAND THOUGHTS. Being Extracts Covering a Comprehensive Circle of Religious and Allied Topics." Edited by the Rev. Canon, H. D. M. Spence, M. A., Rev. Joseph S. Exell, M.A., and Rev. Charles Neil, M.A. This is the fourth volume of this great work, embracing four sections. Section XII., Jehovistic Names and Titles of God; XIII., The Attributes of God; XIV., Sins; and XV., Christian Dogmatics. As the opportunity is afforded us through the enterprising publishers of examining each succeeding volume as it leaves the press, we are more and more impressed with the excellence of this work, amazed at its magnitude, and gratified with the rare taste and judgment displayed in its compilation and orderly, logical arrangement. While it is eclectic, it is evident that there has been great and laborious research that the best thoughts on the large range of subjects presented might be gleaned from the widest, most authentic and reliable sources. The choicest gems of thought and illustration sparkle on well nigh every page, shedding a pure, white light on the profoundest subjects that can occupy the minds of men. From the nature of the volumes received we are prepared to bear witness that, though the finished work may not be an exhaustive, it will be in itself a comprehensive and quite complete theological library. (Funk & Wagnalls.)

....The number of pure and wholesome books for the Sunday-school library, and which parents can safely put into the hands of their children, has been increased by the following:

"EAST AND WEST," illustrative of Christian work among the poor of London. It shows how the Christ-Spirit brings rich and poor together, and how obedience to Christ elevates and beautifies the life of the humblest.

"SECRET OF THE FOREST" is an interesting story combining the eventful and unexpected with healthful lessons in purity and faithfulness. Its great moral is that character is superior to riches.

"DAVID ELIOTT" shows the power of Christ to deliver from temptation and sin, and the insufficiency of any other influence. It illustrates the potency of faith to brighten life's pathway and take away the fear of death.

"ON THE CLIFF," a story whose chapters illustrate the beatitudes.

"FIVE MINUTES TOO LATE," a healthful book for boys, appealing to their love of chivalry, and proposing an order of knighthood, having for it principles, truth, honor, purity in words and action, protection of the weak, especially animals, and total abstinence from everything intoxicating.

"AFLOAT," a story with all the unexpected and marvellous that children can desire, with a good moral and a happy ending.

"SENT TO COVENTRY" well exhibits the characteristics which mark even in a schoolboy the gentleman and the Christian.

"LOST MAGGIE," a story appropriate to Christmas. It illustrates the beauty of a child's confidence in God and the efficacy of prayer.

"OUGHT AND CROSSES," an interesting book for boys. It exhibits the duty and reward of doing right even when it involves crosses and self-denial.

The setting of all these stories is English. (Robert Carter & Brothers.)

...."THE SCHOOL IN THE LIGHTHOUSE," by Edward A. Rand, is Round No. 2 in the "Up The Ladder-Club Series." The first volume dealt with the play element in boyhood. This one is a step higher—the school round in the ladder. The next will be the work round. Boys will like this story by a writer who knows how to write for them. (Phillips & Hunt.)

...."GRACE WINSLOW; or, Gold and Dross." A very interesting story, well told, with more than one moral to it, and a Christian purpose. (N. Tibbals & Sons.)

...."A WOMAN'S INHERITANCE." By Amanda M. Douglas. This is a readable novel of Scottish, English, and American scenes. The plot turns on the management and preservation of some mills through a trustee's son who, after various vicissitudes of love, marries the heiress, assuming her name. Most of the characters are uninspiringly selfish and worldly. (Lee & Shepard.)

...."THE WONDERS OF POMPEII." By Marc Monnier. This translation from the French is a valuable addition to the series of "Wonders of Art and Archæology." It furnishes in an agreeable and lively way a full account of the features of ancient Roman life, derived from the city which for many centuries lay buried and at last was disinterred. It mingles instruction and entertainment, and may be very heartily commended. (Scribners.)

...."A COMMENTARY ON THE CONFESSION OF FAITH." By the Rev. A. A. Hodge, D.D. This revised edition of Prof. Hodge's Commentary on the Westminster Confession presents an analysis of its chapters and sections with proofs of its doctrines. The author labors "to bring out the natural and historically established sense of the text." It is, in fact, a hand-book of orthodox theology, with questions at the end of each section suited for Bible classes or theological students. Its first chapter is a short history of Creeds and Confessions, and at the end are two appendices, one containing the opinions of Prof. Charles Hodge and Prof. Henry B. Smith as to the way in which the New School Presbyterians, as well as Old School, can receive the Confession; and the other giving the Auburn Declaration of 1837 and the other giving the Auburn Statement in 1879. We notice, however, that this volume expounds the Atonement in the strict Old School manner, that Christ died to execute the decree of election and with the definite design of saving the elect. We trust all coming Presbyterians ministers may agree with Dr. Hodge, though we doubt whether his exposition will be accepted by some leading ministers or professors at Auburn and New York, at the present time. (Presbyterian Board of Publication.)

Our Library Table.

Periodicals, Serials and Notes.

...In taking up Harper's one naturally looks first over the pictures, of which there are perceptibly fewer in the February number than usual,—and to our mind this is an improvement, for we sometimes get an unpleasant feeling that the articles are written simply for the sake of the pictures. The great article this month is Sir Edward Reed's "The British Navy," encyclopædic with historical and scientific information. We have never seen such clear and perfect engravings of ships. In delightful contrast are the exquisite illustrations of "The Blue-Grass Region of Kentucky." "Mr. Henri Dauge's article, Mr. Wegg's Party on the Kissimmee," has the rare merit of being even better than the pictures. The author's graphic humor is charming, and he has quite added a new figure to literature in the person of the "guide, philosopher and friend" of the party. Olive Thorne Miller makes an excursion into a little known and very entertaining branch of natural history in her account of "Living Balls," that is, the class of ant-eaters, hedgehogs, duck-bills, and the like. Charles Dudley Warner, who is making as enviable a reputation for serious and sensible writing as his original fame as a humorist, writes thoughtfully and intelligently on "Education as a Factor in Prison Reform," and Charles H. Ham on "Manual Training." Our late Minister to Persia, S. G. W. Benjamin, writes on "The Taziêh, or Passion Play of Persia." There are two short stories of average merit, and the closing instalment of Mr. Howells's "Indian Summer." It can hardly be said that "East Angels" are "few or far between," this being the fourteenth part of the novel of that name, with another promised next month, and the end not yet! The Editorial departments are the unequalled feature of Harper's, and were never better than this month.

....The portrait in the Book Buyer for the month is of President Noah Porter. The success of the periodical encourages the publishers to make permanent additions to begin with the February number. Illustrations from new books will appear every month, and the literary department will be enlarged, including a great deal about authors—who they are and what they are doing. One dollar a year will be the subscription.

...The Magazine of American History gives pleasure by a capital steel engraving of the Hon. John A. Logan, who, in an article on Slavery in America, records his opinions frankly but not offensively. Nobody writes more acceptably for the magazine than Mrs. Lamb, and she appears in an essay on the New Year's Holiday: Its Origin and Observances. A spirited sketch of Paul Revere, by E. H. Goss, another graphic description by Gen. W. F. (Baldy) Smith of the operations resulting in the capture of Forts Henry and Donelson, an account of Washington's First Campaign—of which little has been said—by Mr. T. J. Chapman, letters from James Meyrick to Benedict Arnold and John Hancock to Gen. Washington, with a number of other important papers and facts, will captivate lovers of history.

....In the Sidereal Messenger, Prof. Young, of Princeton, takes up the mooted question of Small and Large Telescopes and tells his experience. The editor writes on the Biela Meteors. The first part of an instructive dissertation on the Velocity of Light appears. The Editorial Notes furnish facts from various observers in relation to the recently discovered comets, new nebulæ, the November meteors, the occultations of the Hyades now frequently occurring, and other interesting phenomena. The Messenger enlists more and more the services of American observers and increases in value. It is published at Carleton College Observatory Northfield, Minn., at $2 a year. The January number is the first of Vol. 5.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

National Temperance Society: One Hundred Years of Temperance. A Memorial Volume of the Centennial Temperance Conference held in Philadelphia, Pa., September, 1885. 8vo, pp. 659. $3.

Presbyterian Board of Publication: Roland's Daughter. A Nineteenth-Century Maiden. By Julia McNair Wright, author of "Almost a Nun." 12mo, pp. 316. $1.25.

Scribner & Welford: Madame de Maintenon: An Etude. By J. Cotter Morison. 32mo, pp. 86; 50 cents.

Roberts Brothers: Zeph. A Posthumous Story. By Helen Jackson (H. H.) 12mo, pp. 253. $1.25; also,

Our Little Ann. By the author of "Tip Cat," etc. 16mo, pp. 276. $1.

UNBOUND BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

Seventy-Fifth Annual Report of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. Presented at the Meeting held at Boston, Mass., October 13-16, 1885. Stanley & Usher, Boston.

A Sermon before the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions at the Seventy-Sixth Annual Meeting held at Boston, Mass., October 13, 1885. By Rev. George Leon Walker, D.D., Hartford, Conn. Stanley & Usher, Boston.

The Thirty-Ninth Annual Report of the American Missionary Association and the Proceedings at the Annual Meeting held in Madison, Wis., October 27-29, 1885, together with a List of the Life Members added during the Year.

The Evangelical Alliance for the United States of America, Concerning so-called "Freedom of Worship" Bills and other Assaults upon Civil and Religious Liberty. George F. Nesbitt & Co.

A Man o' Honor. A Novel. By J. S. Winter. Illustrated. (No. 50, Harper's Handy Series.) 16mo, pp. 113. 25 cents.

War and Peace. A Historical Novel. By Count Léon Tolstoï. Translated into French by a Russian Lady, and from the French by Clara Bell. Revised and Corrected in the United States. (No. 508, Harper's Franklin Square Library.) 4to, pp. 94. 25 cents.

War and Peace. A Historical Novel. By Count Léon Tolstoï. Translated into French by a Russian Lady, and from the French by Clara Bell. Before Fire, 1805-1807. Two Volumes, pp. 322-357. 50 cents per vol. William S. Gottsberger.

PERIODICALS.

December.—University Quarterly, Hudson's Army and Navy List.

January.—Our Little Ones and The Nursery, The Homiletic Magazine, The Expositor.

February.—American Agriculturist, St. Nicholas, The Domestic Monthly, The Pulpit Treasury, Popular Science Monthly.

JUST ISSUED

BY THE

Presbyterian Board of Publication.

Half-Hours with the Lessons of 1886.

Forty-eight short sermons on the lessons of 1886 by twenty-four prominent Pastors and Preachers.

Specially prepared to aid Superintendents and Teachers.

12mo. Price, in cloth binding, $1.25. Paper binding, 85c.

Westminster Question Book for 1886.

A manual for teachers and older scholars, containing the Text of the Lesson, Helps for Scholars, Questions, Lesson Plan, Golden Text, Home Studies and Catechism.

Price, 15 cents, net.

My Soul, Thou Hast Much Goods.

BY HELEN R. EDSON.

24mo. Fancy Paper Cover. Price, 25 cents

Golden Promises.

SELECTED FROM GOD'S WORD.

BY REV. SAMUEL FULTON.

24mo. Fancy Paper Cover. Price, 25 cents.

Address orders to

JOHN A. BLACK, Business Sup't,

1334 CHESTNUT ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Or, Ward & Drummond, 116 Nassau St., New York, N. Y.

NOW READY.

224 Pages of the choicest gems of Sunday School Songs from more than 100 popular composers.

Hymns of Praise

Contains Music for Each Hymn.

$30 per 100 Copies, in Board Covers.

The book in beautiful Cloth Covers will still be furnished at $40 per 100 Copies.

Hymns of Praise

Is the Best and Cheapest.

EXAMINE IT before you buy a new book. Intelligent S. S. workers who appreciate a first-class book are adopting HYMNS OF PRAISE.

BIGLOW & MAIN, 76 East Ninth St., N. Y. 81 Randolph St., Chicago.

JUST PUBLISHED

BY MORRIS COSTER,

1166 Broadway, New York,

NO. 5 OF THE

THIRD VOLUME

OF THE

New Amsterdam Gazette,

Containing among other articles, a sketch of William H. Vanderbilt, by Judge Fitch of New York; Poetry by Revs. Daniel Van Pelt and Sipko Rederus; The Huguenots in Holland; News from Holland and Colonies, etc., etc.

Price per year of 12 monthly numbers, $1.50 on fine paper. First and Second Volumes together, $1 extra. All illustrated with views from Holland, etc.

Subscriptions also taken at the office of THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER.

THE NEW MUSICAL

CURRICULUM

BY GEO. F. ROOT.

A Piano Instructor that has never been excelled.

EXAMINE it yourself and be convinced of its superiority.

Specimen PAGES FREE.

The regular retail price is $3.00 a copy by mail, postpaid. We will send to any MUSIC TEACHER for examination, a single sample copy, postage paid, on receipt of two dollars.

PUBLISHED BY

The John Church Co.,

CINCINNATI, OHIO.

PILES. Instant relief. Final cure in 10 days, and never returns. No purge, no salve no suppository. Sufferers will learn of a simple remedy Free, by addressing C. J. MASON, 78 Nassau St., N. Y.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY

GOOD NEWS TO LADIES.

Greatest inducements ever offered. Now's your time to get up orders for our celebrated Teas and Coffees, and secure a beautiful Gold Band or Moss Rose China Tea Set, or Handsome Decorated Gold Band Moss Rose Dinner Set, or Gold Band Moss Decorated Toilet Set. For full particulars address

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO., P. O. Box 289, 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

NEW MUSIC BOOKS.

Temperance Song Herald. By J. C. Macy.

For Temperance Lodges and Meetings. A Choice Collection of New Temperance Songs and Glees, with some Old Favorites, and a few Rousing War Songs with Temperance Words. Anybody can "join in the chorus." Price 35 cts. or $3.60 per dozen.

Choice Vocal Duets. Just Published.

A first class set of duets, by such masters as Rubenstein, Nicolai, Campana, Tours, Abt, and others. 26 Duets on 144 large pages. Abts' "Like the Lark," and Rubenstein's "Angel" are good specimens. Price $1.

The Apograph ($1 00) is an excellent collection of Octavo Choruses, Sacred and Secular. Selected by CARL ZERRAHN, for the use of Musical Conventions, etc.

American Song and Chorus Collection. 50 cts.
American Ballad Collection. 50 cts.
American Dance Music Collection. For Piano. 50c.
American Piano Music Collection. 50 cts.

Four large, handsome, and every way desirable collections of good music at low prices. Mailed for 65 cts. each.

Kindergarten Chimes. $1.50 Cloth; $1 Boards. Has received marked commendation from the lovers of the Kindergartea and is a beautiful and valuable book for teachers and children.

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston.

Chas. H. Ditson & Co., 867 Broadway, N. Y.

$1,000 Cash for naming the author of BUNTLING BALL To be paid March 1st. "The New King Arthur." Hon. S. S. Cox says Lowell wrote them; W. A. Croffut says W. S. Gilbert; Edw. Everett Hale says Robt. Grant; Croffut says "As a study of verse 'N. K. A.' is more skilfully done than anything of Longfellow's, or Lowell's, or Stedman's"; Oliver Wendell Holmes says "'B. B.' is ingenious, witty, fluent, and wholesome. I should like to know who the author is." Price of either book, $1.50. FUNK & WAGNALLS, 10-12 Dey St., N. Y.

POPULAR LECTURES.

SUBJECTS

1.—The Romance of the Revolution.
2.—An Evening with Longfellow
3.—The Tudors
4.—Monologue—National Poems and Events

Address MRS. E. T. BARRETT, SING SING, N. Y

AGENTS WANTED FOR OUR CHARMING NEW BOOK.

"Some Noted Princes, Authors and Statesmen of Our Time."

By 20 of our best writers—Canon Farrar, Jas. T. Fields, Jas. Parton, Dickens's daughter, and others. Over 60 fine portraits and engravings. ["The book is brimming over with choice and rare things."—N. Y. OBSERVER.] Intelligent young men and ladies can have permanent employment. A few General Agents wanted. THE HENRY BILL PUB. CO., Norwich, Ct.

CLAREMONT COLONY!
CLAREMONT COLONY!
CLAREMONT COLONY!
CLAREMONT COLONY!
CLAREMONT COLONY!
CLAREMONT COLONY!

A New House every 16 days in the last 6 years. Our village, only 32 months old, has 5 stores, 2 hotels, 2 churches, school, newspaper, factory, foundry, 4 steamboats, 2 trains and 2 mails daily. Land rapidly advancing. Send, send, send, by all means, send for circulars with 4 maps, 36 Photographic cuts of houses, all about the wonderful growth of our colony, its soil, climate, markets, business opportunities, health, prices, terms, and 96 other distinct subjects. Farms for $2 0 on monthly instal ments to those having employment, without leaving their situation. Address J. F. MANCHA, Claremont, Surry Co., Va.

THE ASSOCIATED CHARITIES

OF THE

1342 Churches of London

after investigating the value of

MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD

have adopted it as the one thing most needed in restoring the sick to health, and it is given by their visiting committees.

Many of the Churches of Boston, Cleveland and other cities, have done the same for several years.

Clergymen use it to relieve Exhaustion, Dyspepsia and Constipation.

Any Clergyman wishing to try it, we will deliver to any Boston express samples free.

☞ IN GENERAL USE of all Governments, Hospitals and Physicians that have tried it, and in 52 of the leading Hospitals of London.

Murdock Liquid Food Co., Boston.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.

CATARRH

Also good for Cold in the Head, Headache, Hay Fever, &c. 50 cents.

Agents Make $5 a Day Selling Perfect FAMILY SCALES Entirely new in principle. Weigh one ounce to 25 pounds. What every family needs and will buy. Rapid sales surprise old agents. FORSHEE & McMAKIN, CINCINNATI, O.

OUR New Catalogue of Books for family, Sunday-school, ministers, students, or teachers' Library will be sent free to any address on receipt of a postal request. Address PHILLIPS & HUNT, Publishers, 805 Broadway, New York.

EDUCATIONAL.

UNIVERSITY of the City of New York.

JOHN HALL, D.D., LL.D., Chancellor.

1. DEPARTMENT OF ARTS, Tuition Free.
2. DEPARTMENT OF SCIENCE, Tuition Free.
3. SCHOOL OF CIVIL ENGINEERING, Tuition $100.
4. DEPARTMENT OF LAW.
5. DEPARTMENT OF MEDICINE.

 Catalogues, with full particulars of all Courses, may be had upon application to the Registrar.

BEST TEACHERS AMERICAN and FOREIGN, promptly provided for Families, Schools, Colleges Skilled Teachers supplied with Positions. Circulars of Good Schools free to Parents. School Property rented and sold. School and Kindergarten Material, etc.

J. W. SCHERMERHORN & CO.,

AMERICAN SCHOOL INSTITUTE. 7 East 14th St., N. Y

VASSAR COLLEGE, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. FOR THE LIBERAL EDUCATION OF WOMEN, with a complete College Course, Schools of Painting and Music, Astronomical Observatory, Laboratory of Chemistry and Physics, Cabinets of Natural History, a Museum of Art, a Library of 15,000 Volumes, ten Professors, twenty-three Teachers, and thoroughly equipped for its work. Students at present admitted to a preparatory course. Catalogues sent on application. J. RYLAND KENDRICK, D. D., Acting President.

A. S. BARNES & CO., Publishers of the authorized Hymn and Tune Book for the Reformed Church in America. Write for introductory terms 111 and 113 WILLIAM STREET, NEW YORK.

Mason & Hamlin

ORGANS: Highest Honors at all Great World's Exhibitions for eighteen years. One hundred Styles, $22. to $900. For Cash, Easy Payments or Rented. Catalogues free.

PIANOS: New mode of Stringing. Do not require one-quarter as much tuning as Pianos on the prevailing "wrest-pin" system. Remarkable for purity of tone and durability.

ORGAN AND PIANO CO.

154 Tremont St., Boston. 46 E. 14th St. (Union Sq.), N. Y. 149 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

Is Good Health

A desirable possession for wives and mothers? Then remember that Willcox & Gibbs Automatic Sewing Machine is the only one that can be used without serious risk to health.

Willcox & Gibbs S. M. Co., 658 Broadway, N. Y.

THE LINE SELECTED BY THE U. S. GOV'T TO CARRY THE FAST MAIL.

Burlington Route

C.B.&Q.R.R.

It is the only line with its own track from

CHICAGO TO DENVER,

Either by way of Omaha, Pacific Junc., St. Joseph, Atchison or Kansas City.

It connects in Union Depots with through trains from NEW YORK, PHILADELPHIA, BOSTON and all Eastern points. It is the principal line to

SAN FRANCISCO, PORTLAND & CITY OF MEXICO

It traverses all of the six great States of ILLINOIS, IOWA, MISSOURI, NEBRASKA, KANSAS, COLORADO with branch lines to all their important cities and towns.

From CHICAGO, PEORIA or ST. LOUIS, it runs every day in the year from one to three elegantly equipped through trains over its own tracks between

Chicago and Denver,
Chicago and Omaha,
Chicago and Council Bluffs,
Chicago and St. Joseph,
Chicago and Atchison,
Chicago and Kansas City,
Chicago and Topeka,
Chicago and Cedar Rapids,
Chicago and Sioux City,
Peoria and Council Bluffs,
Peoria and Kansas City,
St. Louis and Omaha,
St. Louis and St. Paul,
Kansas City and Denver,
Kansas City and St. Paul,
Kansas City and Omaha,

For all points in Northwest, West and Southwest.

Its equipment is complete and first class in every particular, and at all important points interlocking Switches and Signals are used, thus insuring comfort and safety.

For Tickets, Rates, General Information, etc., regarding the Burlington Route, call on any Ticket Agent in the United States or Canada, or address

T. J. POTTER 1st V.P. & GEN. MGR., CHICAGO.
HENRY B. STONE, ASST. GEN. MGR., CHICAGO.
PERCEVAL LOWELL, GEN. PASS. AGT., CHICAGO.

The Great Church LIGHT.

FRINK'S Patent Reflectors give the Most Powerful, the Softest, Cheapest and the Best Light known for Churches, Stores, Show Windows, Parlors, Banks, Offices, Picture Galleries, Theatres, Depots, etc. New and elegant designs. Send size of room. Get circular and estimate. A liberal discount to churches and the trade. I. P. FRINK, 551 Pearl Street, N. Y.

ATLANTIC

Mutual Insurance Co.

NEW YORK OFFICE, 51 WALL STREET

ORGANIZED 1842.

Insures against Marine and Inland Navigation Risks.

And will issue Policies making Loss payable in England.

Assets for the Security of its Policies are more than TEN MILLION DOLLARS.

The profits of the Company revert to the assured and are divided annually, upon the Premiums terminated during the year, Certificates for which are issued, bearing interest in accordance with its Charter.

J. D. JONES, President.
CHARLES DENNIS, Vice President
W. H. H. MOORE, 2d Vice Pres't.
A. A. RAVEN 3d Vice Pres't.

J. H. CHAPMAN, Secretary.

CONTINENTAL

Insurance Co.

Continental Buildings
100 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

Cor. COURT and MONTAGUE STS., BROOKLYN
106 BROADWAY, BROOKLYN, E.D.

Insures against loss by Fire at reasonable rates.

Reserve for re-insurance (Fire Risks)	$1,928,299 35
do do do (Inland ")	25,394 75
Reserve ample for all other claims	449,586 00
Capital paid in cash	1,000,000 00
Net surplus	1,535,221 82
Total Cash Assets, Jan. 1, 1885.	$4,938,501 92

This Company conducts its business under the restrictions of the New York Safety Fund Law. The two Safety Funds together equal $1,200,000.

H. H. LAMPORT, President.
CYRUS PECK, Secretary.

HOME

INSURANCE COMPANY

OF NEW YORK.

OFFICE, No. 119 BROADWAY.

Sixty-fifth Semi-Annual Statement, Showing the Condition of the Company on the first day of January, 1886.

CASH CAPITAL	$3,000,000 00
Reserve Premium Fund	3,011,637 00
Reserve for Unpaid Losses and Claims	378,483 93
Net Surplus	1,227,995 10
Cash Assets	$7,618,116 08

SUMMARY OF ASSETS

Cash in Banks	$245,795 99
Bonds and Mortgages, being first lien on Real Estate	897,550 00
United States Stocks (market value)	2,879,390 00
Bank and Railroad Stocks and Bonds (market value)	1,522,550 00
State and City Bonds (market value)	222,000 00
Loans on Stocks, payable on demand	122,850 00
Interest due on 1st January, 1886	97,056 02
Premiums uncollected and in hands of Agents	358,290 30
Real Estate	1,272,633 77
Total	$7,618,116 08

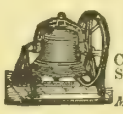
CHAS. J. MARTIN, President.
D. A. HEALD, Vice-President.
J. H. WASHBURN, V. P. & Sec'y.
T. B. GREENE, W. L. BIGELOW, E. G. SNOW, JR., } Ass't Sec's.

BELLS.



McShane Bell Foundry

Finest Grade of Bells,

CHIMES AND PEALS for CHURCHES, &c. Send for Price and Catalogue. Address H. McSHANE & CO., Mention this paper. Baltimore, Md.

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY.

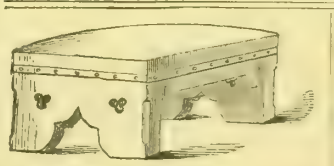
Bells of Pure Copper and Tin for Churches, Schools, Fire Alarms, Farms, etc. FULLY WARRANTED. Catalogue sent Free.

VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

MENEELY & COMPANY

West Troy, N. Y. Bells,

For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others



Kneeling Bench for use in Church or at Home.

Arranged to hold Books.

–CHURCH FURNISHINGS.–

STAINED GLASS MEMORIAL WINDOWS.
MEMORIAL TABLETS OF BRASS, BRONZE, &C.
COMMUNION SERVICES OF SILVER.
S. S. BANNERS, EMBROIDERY, DECORATIONS.
CHURCH FURNITURE.

SEND FOR HAND-BOOKS.

J. & R. LAMB, 59 CARMINE ST., NEW YORK.

Our readers will confer a favor upon the publishers of this paper and, perhaps, find it to their own advantage if, when answering an advertisement found in these columns, mention is made that it was seen in THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER.

The Home.

AUNT MARJORIE'S CORNER

The Human Side of Animals.

BY MARY R. BALDWIN.

AS a rule, the home animals live and die unknown beyond their narrow scene of action; but now and then we read the record of the remarkable character of a home pet, and either persuade ourselves that the wonderful gifts are only real to love's partial sight, or else, having ourselves observed the human side of animals, we declare that we have a story to tell as marvellous as that recorded.

Many of our novelists in their works which hold the highest claim to immortality, have, through their imagination, transformed for us the brute creation so far that it has brought us into a more sympathetic relation to the animals which we were accustomed to regard with indifference, and perhaps with dislike. Among these writers whose magic has presented these pictures to our view, R. D. Blackmore seems to stand forth as a power. If one can read "The Rescue" and "The Rough Ride" of his "Lorne Doone" without being conscious of his sympathetic relation towards the animals, he must himself lack in the essential elements of sympathy.

First, the description of the old drake's danger: "Being borne up high and dry by the tumult of the torrent, he gave me a look from his one little eye, (having lost the other in a fight with a turkey-cock,) a gaze of appealing sorrow, and then a loud quack to second it."

Annie is described as crying and wringing her hands at the peril of her pet drake, and John Ridd is about to enter the flood to rescue it, when the outlaw, Tom Faggus, their cousin, rides up upon his mare "Winnie."

"'Ho, there!' he cried, 'get thee back boy! The flood will carry thee down like a straw! I will do it for thee and no trouble!'

"With that he leaned forward and spoke to his mare—she was just the tint of a strawberry, a young thing, very beautiful—and she arched up her neck, as misliking the job, yet trusting him would attempt it. She entered the flood with her dainty forelegs sloped farther and farther in front of her, and her delicate ears pricked forward, and the size of her great eyes increasing; but he kept her straight in the turbid rush by the pressure of his knee. Then she looked back and wondered at him as the force of the current grew stronger, but he bade her go on, and on she went, and it foamed up over her shoulders; and she tossed up her lip and scorned it, for now her courage was waking."

Observe how the writer supposes a mental reasoning or impulse for each appearance of the animal that is essentially human; "as misliking the job, yet trusting him, would attempt it." "Then she looked back and wondered at him." "And she tossed up her lip and scorned it, for now her courage was up."

"Then, after he had caught up old Tom, he would not listen to the words of gratitude for the rescue, but said to Winnie, 'Sweetheart, I know thou could'st have leaped it, but I had good reason for making thee go through it.' She answered him kindly with her soft eyes, and sniffed at him lovingly, and they understood one another." The italics are ours to emphasize the human idea.

The description of the "Rough Ride," while more graphic, is perhaps also more suggestive of human intelligence. John, with the insistence of a boy who, "knowing nothing, fears nothing," determines to have a ride upon the young creature whose intelligence had gained her the reputation of a "witch" about the country. "'Your mare?' said I, standing stoutly up, being a tall boy now, 'I never saw such a beauty. Will you let me ride her?'

"'Think thou could'st ride her, lad? She will have no burden but mine. Thou could'st never ride her. Tut, I would be loath to kill thee.'"

The youngster pleaded, and Winnie's master tried to put him off, but in vain; telling his own story, the boy John owned to a secret fear of the animal, not a common fear, but one inspired by the feeling that the glory of sitting upon her must necessarily have its price, especially as she had been reputed a witch.

"Mr. Faggus gave his mare a wink and she walked demurely after him, a bright young thing flowing over with life, yet dropping her soul to a higher one, and led by love as the manner of females is when they know what is best for them."

Dropping her soul to a higher one. This sentence seems to hold the secret of the animal's peculiar gifts, for we know that with the human species whenever a lower nature drops itself to a higher one there must of necessity be developed a likeness to the higher nature. In support of this theory many have declared that certain dogs in one or more respects were like their masters. But to return to the adventure.

"'Up for it still, boy, be ye?' Tom Faggus laughed very quietly, turning round to Winnie so that she might enter into it, and she for her part seemed to know exactly where the fun lay."

Through the boastful words of young John the master at last became full of wrathful pride for his favorite; then in pity for the bold boy, as he thought of the possible danger for him in the ride which he had decided to allow him, for the double purpose of proving Winnie and of taking down the upstart's conceit, "He spoke very softly to the filly, who could now scarce subdue herself; but she drew in her nostrils, and breathed to his breath, and did all she could to answer him.

"'Not too hard, my dear,' he said, 'let him down softly on the mixen—that will be quite enough for him.' Then he turned the saddle off, and I was up in a moment."

The description gives the gentleness and loving manner with which the mare bore her young rider, until he began to treat her as if she were a coarser nature—"grinding his heels into her and crying, 'Gee wugg, Polly; Gee wugg, Polly, and show what thou beest made of!' Nevertheless she outraged not, though her eyes were frightening Annie. Then her master gave a shrill, clear whistle, when her ears were bent toward him and I felt her form beneath me gathering up like whalebone and her hind legs coming under her, and I knew that I was in for it."

The scene which follows is in the inimitable style of the author and shows the efforts of the desperate and outraged creature to throw off the insolent boy, who hung to her through a determination as fixed and as fierce as her own. One sentence alone will describe the spirit of the two: "Then she took the courtyard gate at a leap, knocking my words between my teeth, and then right over a quickset hedge as if the sky were a breath to her, and away for the water-meadows, while I lay on her neck like a child at the breast, and wished I had never been born."

Winnie was still following out the command of her master to humble the boy's pride—as she had interpreted the shrill whistle—when suddenly "there came another whistle from up the home hill, where the people had hurried to watch us, and the mare stopped as if with a bullet, then set off for home with the speed of a swallow, and going as smoothly and silently. I never had dreamed of such delicate motion, fluent, and graceful, and ambient, soft as the breeze flitting over the flowers, but swift as the summer lightning. I sat up again, and though she rose at one gate like a bird I tumbled off into the mixen."

Following the career of the dumb creature with such human instincts we come to the adventure where Tom Faggus is wounded and John Ridd found him a seeming corpse.

"But the mare either could not understand or else would not believe it. She reached her long neck forth and felt him with her under lip, passing it over his skin as softly as a mother would do to an infant; and then she looked up to me again, as much as to say, 'He is all right.'"

John Ridd puts the wounded man, at signs which he understood as a dying request, upon his favorite's back. "He leaned almost on the neck of the mare, which, as I knew, must close the wound, and the light of his eyes was quite different, and the pain of his forehead unstrung itself, as he felt the undulous readiness of her volatile paces under him."

Throughout this speaking picture we are impressed with the fact that the animal not only, as has been said, "dropped her soul to his"—the higher—but that there was a certain recognition by the master of equality in the nature of the mare, Winnie. And it is the experience of people out of books, that when one tries to discover the human side to a dumb creature he is rewarded by the development of the animal toward himself. Treat a dog as if he were simply a cur and he seems to deserve the name; treat him as a friend and companion and he grows to be such.

The private experience of many of us must prove, at least to ourselves, the human side of our favorites. As the word favorites is written, the dog upon the rug seems to be talking in his sleep. The writer asks, "Rex, what can be the matter?" He raises his head, looks in a bewildered way toward the speaker, and seems to reply, "Oh, I was dreaming; only dreaming." He casts his eyes toward the window; outside the storm is driving in fury, as only a Western tempest can drive. He settles himself back and seems to say, "I was dreaming of pleasant days, when the prairies were green and the sky was bright; when the cattle fed in the meadows between the bluffs. Only a dream," he sighs, as he settles back.

"Ah, Rex!" we whisper, "we know what dreams of old days are; we who, like you, have accepted new conditions. It was through many a day of disappointment that you learned to accept the limitations of city life after your free prairie experience. We remember how you watched for the coming of the master who had gone upon the long, last journey. How at sight of a prairie team you sprang out with a joyous expectancy, only to find driver and horses strangers to you. How you came back with slow feet and a dejected manner, and though your new mistress tried to comfort you, and gave you many caresses, it was long before you could consent to receive them with any sign of appreciation. Then at last, as if you had received a sudden revelation, you began to offer your friendship to the new home, and to watch with eagerness for the coming of the new master. You heard the cough—such a pathetic herald to the mistress—while he was a block away, and ran with your signs of joy to meet him. You seemed to have the key to the foreboding of the mistress, and thus was in a degree human with her—so human that she found herself telling you her secret fears."

Then "Dad," the house cat, a marauding animal, whose reputation as a bruiser has extended to the farthest limits of the neighborhood, whose claws are also extended in warfare against every cat and every other cat's against him. Dad has his fighting side toward the world, and his gentle side toward the home. His claws are always covered when he seeks for rest and consolation after his outside conflicts, from his master and mistress. He, too, has learned the sign of his master's coming and meets his friend, asking for a ride home upon his shoulder. He has proved that one with the spirit of a warrior can show himself gentle toward weakness. Little Yellow Speck, a mite of a kitten, was received from a friend with fear and trembling on account of Dad's fighting propensities. But, much to the joy of the home, he at once began to show tenderness toward the little creature whose kittenish friskiness made her a delight. Dad seemed to accept gracefully the new conditions and to regard the new claimant for affection with interest himself, and at last to watch her antics, seeming to say, "it's all child's play, and yet it is refreshing to staid, sensible ones like myself even." But Yellow Speck's days were numbered. At first she was only slightly less frolicsome, then she seemed languid, and at last gave herself quite up to her illness. Dad seemed as much surprised and pained as his mistress, and when at last the yellow mite lay motionless in her bed he licked her, and then sat by regarding her with much concern of manner. Yet the little creature, when she was stroked, moved her tail as if mindful of her mistress' love and fear, until at last the hand resting upon her lightly felt through the irresponsive yellow fur that life had gone out. For days something was missed out of the home life, and those who shed a few secret tears for the little sunbeam were not ashamed of them, and they, through their nearness to the little creature's life as to that of the other home animals, have had the idea of the human side of dumb creatures emphasized to them.

Winter Pictures from the Poets.

SAYS Christina Rossetti:

"On the wind of January,
Down flits the snow,
Travelling from the frozen North,
As cold as it can blow.
Poor robin redbreast,
Look where he comes;
Let him in to feel your fire,
And toss him of your crumbs."

Longfellow is graphic:

"Where, twisted round the barren oak,
The summer vine in beauty clung,
And summer winds the stillness broke,
The crystal icicle is hung.

"Where, from their frozen urns, mute springs
Pour out the river's gradual tide,
Shrilly the skater's iron rings,
And voices fill the woodland side.

"Alas, how changed from that fair scene,
When birds sang out their mellow lay,
And winds were soft, and woods were green,
And the song ceased not with the day."

CHILDREN'S PORTFOLIO.

Nazareth.

SING, every boy and maiden,
To Him, with gratitude,
Whose youth, though heavy laden,
Was one beatitude;
For Jesus, meek and purely,
Through boyhood's duties trod,
As Mary's child, though surely
The very Son of God.

The helper of His mother,
A faithful Hebrew lad,
For sister and for brother
Christ wrought with spirit glad;
And made that cottage lowly,
That work-bench by the door,
A labor-lesson holy
To love forevermore.

All rev'rently obeying,
He bore His daily part
Toward her who kept each saying
Safe in her wond'ring heart.
Along the ways where nature
Spake low, by hill and glen,
He grew in wisdom, stature,
And grace with God and men.

O sing! ye tired and fearful,
What this sweet story saith:
For all that's brave and cheerful
Comes out of Nazareth!
Let serving hands fly faster,
New years new burdens bring,—
Enough! if like your Master,
The Carpenter and King!

—M. Woolsey Stryker, in S. S. Times.

The Time to Begin.

THEY who begin in their early years to serve the Lord are in possession of the best riches. They are quite sure to have the best education; to secure the best of human friendships; to be placed in the best positions for service, and to find the very best enjoyments for head and heart. The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom, and wisdom is the principal thing. Whosoever has the almighty power of God and the infinite love of Christ to show the way of life, will make few mistakes, however many his years, or keen his disappointments, or bitter the sorrows to be encountered. Life is indeed worth the living, through all changes, if the Christ of God be secured as the friend who never forsakes, and the Saviour who can and will save to the uttermost all who trust Him and walk in His ways.

On the other hand, a godless youth is usually followed by a vain and dishonorable career. No tree can stand up against the summer storm if its roots have been cut and weakened by the insidious worms that creep beneath the surface of the ground, under tufts of greenest grass, and around bulbs of the fairest and most fragrant flowers.

"Youth is the time to serve the Lord,
The time to insure the great reward."

Nearly all biographies of great, good and useful people, whether contained in the sacred Scriptures or in purely human literature, prove that early piety is of unspeakable value. Without it as a foundation no education can be complete.

Such, indeed, is the invariable testimony of the ages. Hence the chief care of all parents and teachers is to train the young in the nurture and fear and service of the Lord. The great and enlarging work of the Church is happily in our day directed to the wants of the young, and hence the increasing multitudes of serious compositions, in prose and poetry, to persuade, encourage, and guide boys and girls to enter upon the paths of life without delay. Here is a short prayer in rhyme, which can be easily committed to memory and repeated with silent reverence and sincere yearning of soul where none but God can hear. But He will hear and reward openly.

PRAYER.

Guide me, oh Lord, in wisdom's way,
Not from Thy precepts let me stray;
May truth and love for me prevail,
Nor evil thoughts my mind assail.

Give me the faith that conquers all,
And grace that will not let me fall,
And let me in Thy presence live,
And daily blessing freely give.

Do Thou, oh Christ, preserve my soul
From wicked passions, and control
My heart's desires to do Thy will
And all my duties to fulfill.

Thy law is holy, just and good,
And when it is well understood,
It grows into a song of praise
To gladden all our earthly days.

CLAVERACK, N. Y. E. S. P.

Advantage of Economy.

A FATHER picked up a horseshoe in the road, which his son refused to touch, and sold it for three farthings, with which he bought some cherries. They journeyed on, and the boy became thirsty and tired. The father dropped now and then a cherry, which the son was glad to pick up. When the last was eaten, the father said: "Look, my son! If you had chosen to stoop once, and pick up a piece of horseshoe, you would not have been obliged at last to stoop so often to pick up the cherries."—British Workman.

A Little Boy's Sermon.

TWO little boys were playing together.

"Eddie," said Harry, "I'll be a minister and preach you a sermon."

"All right," said Eddie, "I'll be the people."

Harry began, "My text is a short and easy one: 'Be kind.' There are some texts in the Bible on purpose for little children, and this is one of them. There are a great many heads to my sermon.

"First, Be kind to papa, and don't make a noise when he has a headache. I don't believe, Eddie, you know what a headache is; but I do. I had one once, and didn't want to hear anyone speak a word; and if I heard a noise the pain was dreadful!

"Second, Be kind to mamma, and don't make her tell you to do a thing more than once. Think how tired she must get saying, 'It is time for you to go to bed,' half a dozen times over.

"Third, Be kind to baby."

"You have leaved out, be kind to Harry," interrupted Eddie.

"Yes," said Harry, "but you will be kind to me if you are kind to all the others, because you will forget to be unkind. I was saying, be kind to baby, and lend her your red soldier when she wants it.

"Fourth, Be kind to Jane, and don't kick and scream when she washes you."

Here Eddie looked a little ashamed, and said: "But she pulled my hair with the comb."

"People mustn't talk in meeting," said Harry.

"Fifth, Be kind to kitty. Do what will make her purr, not what will make her cry."

"O Harry," cried Eddie, with tears in his eyes, "don't preach any more, 'cause I will always be kind now."—The Christian Advocate.

Something About Beavers.

I DO not think the dams made by beavers show as much ingenuity as their canals. It is much easier and safer for them to carry their food and building material by water than land. So sometimes they cut a canal across the bend of a stream to shorten the distance. Sometimes again, it is cut through the mud, until they reach firm ground for their burrows. These canals are usually about three feet wide and three deep, and they are sometimes five hundred feet long. Any engineer will tell you that it needs a good deal of skill and ingenuity to decide where to lay out such a canal as that, and then to cut it regularly, so that the water shall flow smoothly through. And the most remarkable thing of all, is that they know how to combine the principles of the canal and the dam, so that when they come to an obstruction, such as a rock in the bed of their stream, they immediately make a dam to secure the necessary flow of water. Successive generations evidently work for many years upon these canals, and I can hardly think of anything else done by an animal that shows so much contrivance.

The home or lodge is always separate from the dam. Sometimes a cord of wood is used in building one house. There is an entrance under water like that of the musquash, and sometimes two. These openings are very neatly made. The beavers drag their branches and pieces of bark into the water, and then take them into the dining-room by the hidden entrance. Indeed, I believe the house is all dining-room, but it is always very neatly swept. There are not often more than eight or ten beavers, old and young, in a single house. Besides the houses, they like to have burrows in the banks, and spend part of their time in each. The young beavers live at home for almost two years before they go to housekeeping for themselves. They are queer little things, and their cry is like that of a young child. Mr. Morgan once saw a little beaver in an Indian's house, and it was lapping milk out of a saucer like a kitten, and an Indian baby was pulling its fur. Then there was a little cry, and Mr. Morgan thought it was the Indian baby, till he found it was the baby beaver.

It has always been an interesting question for naturalists how the beaver learns to build. Does he learn it by observing his parents, or would he know how to do it if he were brought up alone? Buffon, a great naturalist, thought that it was all learned by observation. So Cunir, another great naturalist, took a very young beaver and brought him up by hand, apart from all his kind. They gave him branches of willow, he cut the branches and piled them in one corner of his cage. Then they gave him earth, which he made into lumps with his forefeet, and piled them with the branches into a solid mass. This shows it was instinct that taught the beaver to build.—T. W. Higginson.

The Tongue Guard.

IN a town near Hartford a number of young ladies have organized a novel club, which they call "The Tongue Guard." Each member pledges herself to pay a penny into its treasury every time she says anything against another person. She provides a home box for the pennies, and at the end of three months sends the contents to headquarters, where the money is utilized for charitable purposes. If every one would follow the example of the Tongue Guard a great many poor children could be comfortably clothed for the winter. It would be rather interesting to know how this club will succeed, and the length of time it will last.—Hartford Times.

Dicky Bird Society.

BIRDS when they are treated kindly love to be near people and houses and gardens. Boys who throw stones at birds are mean and cruel. They ought to admire and love them instead of hating and persecuting them. In Newcastle, England, a kind gentleman has established a society which has this member's pledge:

"I hereby promise to be kind to all living things, to protect them to the utmost of my power, to feed the birds in the winter time, and never to take or destroy a nest. I also promise to get as many boys and girls as possible to join the Dicky Bird Society."

An Ingenious Machine.

BY means of an ingenious machine, wood intended for paper pulp is shaved off so finely that it is ready to go at once into the boiler. The machine takes a log twelve inches in length, which it revolves at a speed of one thousand revolutions per minute, and a sharp cutter shaves off a shaving so thin that it would take 750 of them to make an inch, a nicety of execution which may be judged of by the fact that 200 sheets of ordinary paper are required to make an inch. As described, the knife of this machine has a sliding motion, and gradually moves forward as the block decreases in diameter, and in order that it shall not become dull, and the fibre consequently fail to be of uniform thickness, there is provided a unique arrangement of whetstones constantly at work on the knife.

Little Heads Together.

HIDDEN PROVERB.

Take one word from each of the following quotations in order to find a proverb of Solomon.

1. The wicked is snared by the transgression of his lips.
2. Better is the poor that walketh in his integrity, than he that is perverse in his lips, and is a fool.
3. The discretion of a man deferreth his anger; and it is his glory to pass over a transgression.
4. Cease, my son, to hear the instruction that causeth to err from the words of knowledge.
5. By the blessing of the upright the city is exalted.
6. He that tilleth his land shall be satisfied with bread.
7. A good man sheweth favor, and lendeth: he will guide his affairs with discretion.
8. Deceit is in the heart of them that imagine evil: but to the counsellors of peace is joy.

ENIGMA.

I am an old adage, composed of 23 letters.
My 18, 17, 16, 12, 13, is considered cold.
My 7, 8, 6, 18, is an adverb of time.
My 19, 23, is a pronoun
My 2, 4, 10, 14, looks best when ornamented.
My 3, 9, 1, 5, must be sometimes incurred.
My 21, 22, is an interjection.
My 20, 15, 1, 23, 11, 3, is a near relative.

DIAMOND.

1. In Wisconsin. 2. To hinder. 3. Rounded projections. 4 An American statesman. 5. A prefix denoting four. 6. A body of water. 7. In evaporation.

Answers to Puzzles of January 6th.

Charade.—Man-u-fact-ure

Transpositions.—1. Nut-tun. 2. Emit-time. 3. But-tub. 4. Bud-dub. 5. Noon-noon. 6. Level-level. 7. Gem-meg. 8. Gum-mug. 9. Nap-pan.

Square Word.—

E P I C
P O R E
I R O N
C E N T

Correct Answers from Rappie Bowne, Lewis D. and Jennie Lansgh.

Original puzzles for this department are solicited. Address Cousin Lois, office of THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER.

Prof. Driver on the Revision.

MR. EDITOR: By a simple inadvertence, as I suppose, Prof. S. R. Driver, of Oxford, is, in your last issue, quoted in favor of the Revision. A representative of rationalistic scholarship, Prof. Driver's testimony on such a subject is almost equal in value, not quite, to that of Prof. Robertson Smith.

Dr. Driver is the foremost defender of that unspeakable absurdity which asserts no past and no future in the order of time in the Hebrew, and therefore no necessary definiteness in what the Holy Spirit has written. A follower of Ewald, the great leader of the modern rationalists, Dr. Driver himself says of his German master: "In the treatment of details Ewald was indeed liable to be arbitrary and inattentive, but he excelled in the power of grouping the broader features"—i. e., in the power of finding many authors in the Pentateuch and in the plausible disintegration of Scripture.

Of Dr. Driver's work as represented by that of Dr. Briggs, his ally and expounder in this country, Mr. Benjamin Douglass, in his recent able pamphlet, has said: "The advance which he and other young men are making is one in the wrong direction, in my judgment; and the new 'principles' which he now advocates will furnish sceptics, scoffers and infidels with all the material they want to take all the life out of the Old Testament and make it mean anything or nothing, as they please." Yours very truly,

A SUBSCRIBER.

Dutch Hymns to Modern Music.

BY REV. DANIEL VAN PELT.

OUR Holland brethren in this country employ in their worship versified Psalms exclusively. The Established Reformed Church in the fatherland introduced in 1805 a collection of Psalms and hymns (192) combined; but during the secession of 1834 it was made a matter of principle to discard the hymns. The emigration of 1847 being composed of the so-called "Separatists" (Afgescheidenen), this custom in regard to the use of spiritual soup in the sanctuary prevails among the Dutch congregations of our communion. And those who have attended worship in some of our Holland-speaking churches must have been struck with the peculiarity of the mode of singing. No distinction of parts was perceived, and every note prolonged beyond ordinary length; still the mighty unison of a hundred or a thousand voices, and the slow and stately swell of sound which the prolongation of each note permitted, could not fail to impress. There was about it all a certain majesty of musical movement, a grand volume of solemn melody, that seemed determined to lift itself up to the very gates of heaven. And an additional interest attaches to this remarkable psalmody when we reflect that it comes rolling down to us from remote ages in the history of ecclesiastical music. It is a direct descendant, if not the identical perpetuation, of the Gregorian "Plain-song," or "Plain chant," thus designated because without the four parts to which we are now accustomed.

While these circumstances are of curious interest, still a change seems desirable. Actuated by this conviction three Holland speaking ministers devoted to the interests of the Hollanders in this country (Revs. P. De Pree, A. Kriekaard and H. Uiterwyk, all of Grand Rapids, Mich.,) have labored assiduously during the last two years to compile a Dutch hymn book which should bring the worship of Dutch congregations more into line with modern methods.

This new collection, published only a week or two ago, contains 207 hymns. Of the "Evangelical Hymns" ("Evangelische Gezangen") of 1805, 75 have been transferred to this book; also about 55 of the hymns in the so-called "Vervolgbundel" ("Additional Hymns") published by the Reformed (State) Church of Holland in 1882. A number are translations of well-known German, English and French hymns, and many of them are choice productions from the pens of Prof. Beets, ten Kate and de Genestet, who are all poets of the greatest celebrity in Holland and have risen to fame since the collection of 1805. The names of authors, so far as known, are subjoined to their respective compositions, and but few anonymous ones occur. The book presents an attractive appearance and is modelled after our own "Hymns of the Church," being bound in black cloth, red-edged pages. To secure fine execution the work was given for publication to the Aldine Printing Works, of Cincinnati, O.

This new collection deals boldly and radically with the question of music. We find in it no reproduction of the ancient and solemn measures of the Gregorian days, which themselves dated back to Jewish times and survived the uprootings and iconoclasms of the Reformation. The music has neither an outlandish nor an antique look. The hymns are set to music in four parts, in accordance with the practice in our American churches. Yet have not the former airs been all recklessly discarded to secure this result. The old style of music was by no means without its many sweet and beautiful melodies. These only needed a little quickening in the measure and an arrangement in four parts; and accordingly, with these modifications, they have been retained. But the remainder are tunes selected and adapted from American hymn books, and nearly all set to the half-standard time.

The feature of the music constitutes the special aptitude of this little book to the present times and the main warrant for its success. Herein, it seems to us, it raises itself to the rank of a desideratum. There is no reason why the words of fine Dutch Psalms or hymns, should not be far more edifying and impressive, when sung to the dignified yet somewhat more rapid tunes of our English hymns, than when intoned in minor keys, sung in quavering and gyrating fashion, and drawn out to extraordinary length of note. Allowing to this music all that is due to its majesty and grandeur, it may be a question whether it is not too much like a musical curiosity, or has not too depressing a flavor of antiquity, to be continued with profit among the rising generations in this country.

Such a book as this, therefore, aiming to effect a result in a particular of so much moment, cannot but awaken interest in all connected with our Reformed Church. We may not all be able to read these hymns. But we can all understand the historical significance of this attempt. And we can certainly perceive with great plainness how a transition to more modern not only, but to our own American manner of singing, must have great influence in removing some of that unlikeness or separation which is yet too prominent between our Holland brethren and ourselves, and to which their use of a foreign language and maintenance of some foreign customs so greatly contribute. If the latter cannot be at once or speedily obviated, it is the part of brotherly kindness to get at least as near as possible in other ways, and to remove distinctions that are not essential.

The Sunday Papers.

MR. EDITOR: I have just read with great interest, the article in your last issue concerning Sunday papers. I should like to mention one fact which I know about Monday papers. The late David Hale, editor of the Journal of Commerce, (a morning paper) was a friend of mine. He told me that his office was always closed on Saturday at midnight, and not reopened until after the midnight of Sunday. He said, that that arrangement gave just as much time to prepare Monday's paper, as there was on Monday night to get up Tuesday's paper, and that there was not the slightest need to trespass upon the Sabbath. He was a member of the Broadway Tabernacle Church, and a member of its choir—and was always in his place, morning and evening.

I would like to take this opportunity to inquire whether there are published any tracts or pamphlets, relative to the effect upon workingmen, of secularizing the Sabbath, and where they may be obtained.

A READER.

NEW BRUNSWICK, Jan. 24th.

(NOTE.—Who can give a satisfactory answer to the request of the last sentence? Have any of our friends found any particular tract or pamphlet useful?—ED.)

The General Outlook.

....The receipts of "Hospital Day" in this city now amount to over $30,000.

....The West Presbyterian Church of this city, of which Rev. John R. Paxton is the pastor, opened a Sabbath-school a year ago in the neighborhood of Tenth avenue and Sixty-fourth street. What is now needed is a chapel. A pew-holder in the church has offered to give three lots at West Sixty-fifth street and Tenth avenue, provided a chapel is built at once. Dr. Paxton announced all this to his congregation on a recent Sunday, taking them by surprise, stating further that the plans for the new building called for an expenditure of $50,000. He then asked for contributions, and in a few minutes $21,000 were contributed. The chapel will soon be built, and is to be called Christ Chapel.

....Since the year 1883, the Presbyterian Church has received into its ministry 230 ordained ministers from other churches, 64 in 1883, 85 in 1884 and 81 in 1885.

....One of the results of the meetings lately held in Birmingham, Ala., was the reception of one hundred members into the Baptist church. The pastor thinks that he will receive fifty others.

....In the Memphis Conference there was upwards of 7,000 conversions during the year; over 5,000 additions to the Methodist Church—a net increase of about 3,000 members.

....The executors of the late William H. Vanderbilt have paid over the bequests to the Domestic and Foreign Missionary Societies of the Episcopal Church, $200,000 in all.

...."Yellow Hawk," ten years ago a painted savage, is now the pastor of a Congregational church in Dakota, living on his own farm of 160 acres, under fence, well stocked and in good cultivation, with garden and flower beds, his comfortable house and furniture being as civilized as those of most white settlers on the frontier.

....The Second Presbyterian Church, Covington, Ky., has been the third time destroyed by fire in ten years, the last on Sunday, January 10th; loss $25,000, partly insured.

....The net gain in communicants the past year was nine times greater in foreign missions than in Christendom.

....While the average proportion of churches to the population in the United States is 1 to every 516 people, it is in Boston 1 to 1,600, in New York 1 to 2,400, in St. Louis 1 to 2,800, while in some it is but 1 to every 5,000.

....Bishop Warren, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, says Utah is the hardest missionary field the Church has. We have had 50 missionaries who have from time to time gone there full of zeal, full of faith and the Holy Ghost. One by one they have been discouraged. But the new day has dawned, the Government is asserting its power.

....The number of additions to the Congregational churches in Chicago last year was unusually large. The First Church received 130; the Union Park 100; the Lincoln Park, Plymouth and the South churches received each between eighty and one hundred.

....There has been one of the most powerful revivals of religion in Mowrystown, Highland County, Ohio, under the labors of Rev. J. W. Cummins, of the United Brethren Church, ever known in that section. Up to the present time there have been about 75 accessions and conversions. Some of the most intelligent men in the community are among the converts, and a number of them school teachers. Many heads of families have been brought in, and in all cases the convictions are deep and pungent, and the evidences of conversion bright and clear. The church is more than doubled in financial and numerical strength.

Financial.

TUESDAY, Jan. 26th.

VALUE of imports of merchandise at this port last week $6,497,543, of exports $6,395,749. Export of specie $899,360, probably not to settle balances of trade, but for some other purpose. Sterling exchange yesterday $4.87 for 60 day bills, $4.89 for demand.

Banks here reduced loans $648,200; gained in specie $1,212,100, in legal tenders $868,000; lost in deposits $69,900. Surplus of reserve increased $2,097,575, making it $35,113,525. Average rate of money on call 2 per cent, on best commercial paper 3 1 2 to 5. Rate on call yesterday 2 per cent. Bank of England reduced rate from 4 to 3 per cent.

Stocks and bonds generally declined. Baltimore & Ohio Railroad continues the war on rates, that it may be reckoned a New York line, which it is not. Railroad reports not as encouraging as they were. Stock market unsettled.

Quotations for grain yesterday were: Wheat here 89 1-2, in Chicago 81; corn here 49 7-8, in Chicago 36 7-8; oats here 37 3-4, in Chicago 29 1-8. European markets yesterday reported firm.

Hay firm. No 1 timothy 90 to 95 cents. No 1 rye straw $1 to $1.05, oat straw 65 to 70. Supply not large.

Provisions.—Pork very firm at $10.50 to $10.75. Beef, extra mess $10, city extra India mess in tierces $17.50 to $18.

Cotton yesterday at Liverpool in buyer's favor. Quotations here at close: Jan. 9.08–11; Feb. 9.08–12; March 9.19–23; April 9.29–34; May 9.39–44; June 9.50–55.

Prospects of spring trade regarded as good. Real estate in fair and steady demand at good prices.

The Chemist of the New York State Agricultural Society Finds Ammonia in the Royal Baking Powder, and Says:

"Ammonia is used in a baking powder to make the powder cost less. I have always been opposed to its employment, considering that it is not a constituent of pure baking powders. I would not use such an article, nor recommend it."

And adds: "The results of a complete analysis of several packages of Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder, purchased by myself of grocers, confirm the fact that it is made of pure and healthful materials, well manufactured, and is in every particular reliable and most wholesome. Having had the examination of the materials used in manufacturing the Cleveland Powder for many years, it affords me pleasure to recommend it without reserve."

WM. M. HABIRSHAW, F. C. S.,

Analyst for the Chemical Trade of New York; Chemist of the N. Y. State Agricultural Society; Analytical Chemist to the New York Produce Exchange.

News of the Week.

(Continued from page five.)

The Mexican Government has failed to pay the interest on its debt....The quarantine which has been placed on Canadian passengers and goods going into the United States will be raised on Monday....A sharp debate took place in Congress over the Norfolk Navy Yard....A severe blizzard is sweeping over the West. Trains are blocked in many places and the mercury is far below zero....Thirty-nine men are at the bottom of the shaft of the Newburgh colliery....The bill to extend the entrance of the Brooklyn Bridge has passed the State Senate....Three burglaries upon elderly persons were committed by masked men in Tarrytown. ...A young man committed suicide and murder in Chicago....Mr. and Mrs. William D. Sloane give a large amount of money to erect a maternity hospital in this city....Nineteen gamblers were arrested in Long Island City....The damage done to orange trees at Florida is very great....A severe conflict is in progress in the Ohio Senate in relation to the Senators from Cincinnati. The presiding officer decided that they could not vote on questions in regard to their own election. This gave the Republicans a majority, and after a sharp debate, the Democrats left for their homes.

MONDAY, 25.—Double guards have been placed around public buildings in England because of a rumored conspiracy. Eaton Hall, where the Prince of Wales resides, is also strongly guarded....An effort is being made to Germanize Poland....A special Turkish envoy has been sent to Bucharest. ....The British Minister declared at Athens that England would send a fleet to prevent Greece from attacking Turkey ...The Greek fleet sailed with sealed orders....The Italian Minister of Finance announces a deficit of $10,000,000....There are strong indications of Parnell's alliance with the Liberals....Seven brothers are insane over financial loss in St. Louis....President Cleveland has promised to enfore the eight-hour labor law in Government buildings. ....D. P. Morgan, the well known Wall street speculator, died suddenly at Washington....Keeper Boyle was attacked by a maddened convict at Auburn, N. Y....The West Shore ferryhouse at 42d street, New York, was destroyed by fire....The County Poor House at Jackson, Michigan, was destroyed by fire and five inmates lost their lives....The frost in Florida has done damage estimated at $2,000,000....Stages have begun running again in Fifth avenue....Congressman Rankin of Wisconsin died yesterday at Washington.

TUESDAY, 26.—The trial of Gen. Shaler, accused of taking a bribe in the purchase of land for armories in this city, began yesterday....The loss on orange orchards and crop in Florida by the recent cold weather is reckoned at about $50,000,000....Temperature yesterday in Maine 40 degrees below zero. Snow-slides, rains, floods reported from Oregon, California and neighboring territory....A plan is reported to sell lands to the Mormons in the Sandwich Islands and settle them there....The contention continues in the Ohio Senate....Greece threatens Turkey with a naval attack. England orders her Mediterranean fleet to Greece to enforce a command to disarm. The Greeks say that giving Roumelia to Bulgaria surrenders the rights of 100,000 people who belong to Greece....The Moniteur, the organ of the Papacy, criticises the Queen's speech, denying a separate government to Ireland, and wishes to see "Protestantism entirely extirpated from Ireland"....The young Emperor of China, ten years old, is about to marry and to take the Government into his own hands.

INVESTMENTS.—How to make a safe investment is becoming a matter of some difficulty. There are elements of uncertainty and some risks in all securities. These are unavoidable. Absolute exemption from loss is secured by no man. In regard to one form of loans, those on bond and mortgage, made by Mr. E. P. Gates, President of the Merchants' Bank, Grand Forks, Dakota, we have heard in various ways and from different persons. All testify in favor of the prudence and sagacity and integrity of Mr. Gates. He has been making these investments for somewhat over ten years, and his patrons commend his methods and his personal qualities. So far as we can judge, these loans on bond and mortgage on Dakota farms, made by Mr. Gates, are fairly entitled to rank with what are regarded as safe investments.

The best Ankle Boot and Collar Pads are made of zinc and leather. Try them.

Notice to Subscribers.

The little yellow label on your wrapper informs you to what time your subscription is paid. Kindly consult same, and if in arrears remit the amount due.

The purest, sweetest and best Cod Liver Oil in the world, manufactured from fresh, healthly livers, upon the sea-shore. It is absolutely pure and sweet Patients who have once taken it prefer it to all others. Physicians have decided it superior to any of the other oils in the market. Made by CASWELL, HAZARD & CO., New York.

PIMPLES removed and the Skin made smooth by using Juniper Tar Soap, manufactured by Caswell Hazard & Co., New York
Sold by druggists.

Market Report.

Review of the New York Market for Butter, Cheese, etc. Reported by DAVID W. LEWIS & Co., Produce Commission Merchants, 49 Pearl St., New York.
Commission on Butter, Eggs, Poultry, etc., is five per cent; Flour, Grain, etc., 2½ per cent.
Marking-plates furnished when desired.

NEW YORK, January 23, 1886.

BUTTER.—Receipts for the week, 21,123 pks.; exports 1,930 pks.

One cent more of a drop, and prices on common butter will be the same as for lard, and still another cent would bring it to a tallow basis—4¾a5c. for tallow, 6a7c. for lard, and 7a8½c. for common butter. Fresh Elgin creamery grain-fed make of butter sold at 35c., and as near the same grade of goods as may be, brought 32a33c.; even N. Y. State fancy fall, quick-flavored butter, either creamery or dairy, (if it could be found) would bring 26a27a28c., and at the moment there is scarcely fine fresh butter enough to go around. Ninety firkins Cortland County creamery butter sold here at 12c.; 400 to 500 packages of N. Y. State dairy, solid boring butter, sold at 12c.; several hundred packages of Western butter sold at from 5a8c. One heavy Oleo. manufacturer shut up. Held Western creamery, June make, well kept, sold at a range from 16a20c. Imitation creamery is coming poor and help to clutter up the market on lower grades, which close utterly demoralized, while fine fresh makes of butter are wanted. We quote:

Solid silky grain-fed fresh Elgin creamery.	33 @35
Fancy fresh grain-fed Eastern creamery	33 @35
Heavy bodied, grainy, high-flavored dairy, fresh	25 @27
A strictly fancy Delaware dairy, entire	21 @22
Fair to good dairies [nominal]	12 @15
Creamery N. Y. State butter	9 @12
Fine summer firkins	— @20
Fresh Western imitation creamery	22 @25
Western creameries, fancy summer make	16 @17
" good held butter	10 @15
" store-packed butter	7 @10
Winter make, common roll butter	9 @13
Grease	4 @ 5

CHEESE.—Receipts for the week, 21,668 boxes; exports 18,085 boxes.

Our market has ruled about same as last week. Exporters have been liberal buyers of winter make skims, and took 5,000a6,000 boxes at 3a3½c. Night milk skims sold at 6a7½c. We also note sale of large line of white cheese for same account at 9¼a 9½c., and finest colored at 9¾a10c. Home trade bought sparingly, paying 9a9½c. for late October and November make, both white and colored, and 7a8c. for finest October night milk skims. Early sharp full cream cheese are salable only to "wagon boys" for bar use at 4a6c. We quote:

	FANCY.	FINE.	FAULTY.
Factory, full cream	9½@10¼	9 @ 9¼	6 @ 8
Night's milk.
" skimmed	7 @ 8	4 @ 5	2 @ 3

Publisher's Department.

LEARN THE TRUTH ABOUT Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar. It softens the cough, relieves the windpipe and bronchial tubes of mucus, tones the lungs and the membranes of the throat, and restores to the organs of respiration their natural strength and vigor. 25c., 50c. and $1.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap heals and beautifies, 25c.
German Corn Remover kills Corns, Bunions, 25c
Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye—Black & Brown, 50c.
Pike's Toothache Drops cure in 1 Minute, 25c.

"Everything for the Garden,"

Seems a broad term for any one firm to adopt, yet the widely known seed and plant house of Peter Henderson & Co., 35 & 37 Cortlandt St., New York, supply every want of the cultivator both for the greenhouse and garden. In their handsome and comprehensive catalogue for 1886 will be found offered, not only "everything for the garden," but all things needful for the farm as well. Our readers will miss it if they fail to send for this catalogue, which way be had of Messrs. Henderson & Co., by sending them six cents (the postage only) in stamps.

BURPEE'S FARM ANNUAL for 1886, advertised elsewhere, is a very handsome and complete catalogue of garden, farm and flower seeds, bulbs, plants, thoroughbred live stock and fancy poultry. It contains 128 pages, two colored plates, hundreds of illustrations, and is beautifully bound in an illuminated cover. It contains much information of value to every farmer and gardener, and will be sent free on application to W. Atlee Burpee & Co., the well-known seedsmen of Philadelphia, Pa.

Every day adds to the great amount of evidence as to the curative powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla. It is unequalled for general debility, and as a blood purifier, expelling every trace of scrofula or other impurity. Now is the time to take it. Sold by all druggists.

Bronchitis is cured by frequent small doses of Piso's Cure for Consumption.

Emigrants and travellers will find in Ayer's Sarsaparilla an effectual cure for the eruptions, boils, pimples, eczema, etc., that break out on the skin—the effects of disorder in the blood caused by sea-diet and life on board ship. It is the best medicine for everyone in the spring.

MARRIAGES.

COUTANT—HOTALING.—At Binnewaters, Jan. 20, by Rev. D. B. Wyckoff, Mr. Ira Coutant, of Rosendale, N. Y., to Miss Jennie E., daughter of Abram B. Hotaling, Esq., of Rondout.

GARNSEY—VAN SLYCK.—At Schenectady, N.Y., at the residence of the bride's parents, by the Rev. Wm. Elliot Griffis, Mr Lewis Rogers Garnsey to Miss Lizzie Van Slyck, all of Schenectady.

GORSLINE—FOX.—On the 6th inst., in Somerville, N. J., at the residence of Samuel J. Galpin, Esq., by Rev. John F. Mesick, D.D., Hon. Wm. D. Gorsline, of Miller's Falls, Herkimer Co., N. Y., and Miss Ida E. Fox, of Fort Plain, Montgomery Co., N. Y.

LE FEVRE—DU BOIS.—At the residence of the bride's parents, on Thursday, Jan. 21, by Rev. Ame Vennema, Isaac Le Fevre and Melissa Bu Bois, all of New Paltz, N. Y.

MARKLE—SMITH.—At Gardiner, Jan. 19, by Rev. C. E. Lasher, Richard Markle, of Rochester, N. Y., and Marilla W. Smith, of Rosendale, N. Y.

MOREHOUSE—JACOBIE.—At Hurley, N. J., Jan. 13, by Rev. D. B. Wyckoff, Mr. Horace A. Morehouse, of Milan, Dutchess Co., to Miss Kittie E. Jacobie, of Pine Plains, N. Y.

WATTS—CRAWFORD.—Wednesday evening, Jan. 20, at the residence of the bride's parents, by the Rev. E. O. Moffett, Robert Watts, of Pine Bush, N. Y., to Miss Lizzie Crawford, of West Hopewell, N.Y.

DEATHS.

Obituary notices five cents per line (nine word to the line.) For subscribers we will insert fifteen lines free; all lines in excess of that number will be charged same as non-subscribers.

BURT.—At Westminster, Carroll Co., Md., Jan. 2, 1886, in the fiftieth year of her age, Mrs. John Burt, formerly of Warwick, N. Y.

Mrs. Burt was for many years an active member of the Reformed Church of Warwick, and the first Secretary of its Auxiliary of the Woman's Board. In that church she lives in the fond memory of her many friends. Gracious and gentle in manner, gifted and cultured in mind, alert and energetic in action, wise and persuasive in council, her absence has been felt as an irreparable loss. Evidence of declining health prompted her to leave her Northern home in the fall of 1882. The change of climate doubtless prolonged her days, but the end, though thus delayed, was not distant. She has gone before, leaving a precious legacy—the record of a victorious faith and a saintly life—to those to whom her living example was a constant inspiration.

The hearts of many thank God that she lived. The way to Christ is more distinct to them who trace her footsteps pressing on towards Him whom she loved supremely. V. B. C.

COPLEY.—At her residence in Montgomery, N. Y., Jan. 11, 1886, Nancy Crist, widow of Harvey D. Copley, in the 76th year of her age.

More than half a century ago, under the early ministry of the late beloved Rev. Robt. P. Lee, D.D., she openly professed her faith in her Saviour, and during all these years has adorned the doctrine by a quiet walk and conversation.

GARRETSON.—At Somerville, N. J., Dec 8, 1885, John C. Garretson, in the 80th year of his age.

HARDENBERGH.—Entered into rest on the 7th day of January, 1886, in Middletown, Orange Co., N. Y., Herman R. Hardenbergh, formerly of the town of Shawangunk, Ulster Co., N. Y., aged 42 years.

"Rest for the toiling hand,
Rest for the anxious brow;
Rest for the weary, way-worn feet,
Rest from all labor now.

"Rest for the fevered brain,
Rest for the throbbing eye;
Thro' those parched lips of thine no more
Shall pass the moan or sigh.

"Brother, though from yonder sky
Cometh neither voice nor cry,
Yet we know from thee to-day
Every pain hath passed away.

"Not for thee shall tears be given,
Child of God, and heir of heaven;
For He gave thee sweet release;
Thine the Christian's death of peace.

"Brother, in that solemn trust
We commend thee; dust to dust!
In that faith we wait, till risen,
Thou shalt meet us all in heaven.

"While we weep as Jesus wept,
Thou shalt sleep as Jesus slept;
With thy Saviour thou shalt rest,
Crowned, and glorified, and blest."

MABON.—The death of Miss Elizabeth Mabon, only daughter of Rev. Dr. Wm. V. V. Mabon and Mrs. Emma D. Mabon, has filled with sorrow many hearts. She was the light of her home, the joy of parents, brothers, kinsfolk, and of all who crossed its threshold. The law of kindness ruled her life. She rejoiced when others were glad, and sorrowed with and helped all the sorrowful. Nature had done very much for her both as to her outward form and inward characters, but grace had done far more Her joy was to wear the yoke of Christ, and to do the will of Him who had redeemed her from the condemnation and the power of sin. In His service her soul neither fainted nor was weary. In the Suydam Street Reformed Church she was an active helper from the first. She rejoiced at every step of its progress, and was glad that her name was enrolled among its founders. Her voice was never more gladsome than when she was telling how the Lord seemed to be smiling upon it at every step of its progress. With the relatives and friends of Miss Mabon, every member of the Suydam Street Church takes the place of a mourner. Last Sabbath morning, January 17th, the schoolroom, in which the services are still held, was indeed a Bochim, for all were weeping But we weep not as those without hope. The effects of her labors and prayers will be an abiding blessing, and her example will quicken the faith and zeal of all of us who are still in the Valley of Conflict. W. H. C.

STORM.—Entered into rest at Hopewell, N. Y., Jan. 14, Chas. G. Storm, at the age of 84 years.

Among his last words were "Precious Jesus," "O my Saviour take me."

YOUNGBLOOD.—Passed from time into eternity Jan. 9, 1886, in this city, Josephine Millspaugh, widow of Rev. Wm. Youngblood, missionary for many years of the Reformed Church to Borneo. The remains were interred at Montgomery, N. Y.

"Oh how sweet it will be in that beautiful land,
So free from all sorrow and pain,
With songs on our lips and harps in our hands,
To meet one another again."

Notices and Acknowledgments

THE CLASSIS OF POUGHKEEPSIE en January 18th, made the following arrangement for the installation of Rev. J. B. Campbell in the Church o Rhinebeck, on Tuesday, February 2d: To preach the sermon, Rev. A. P. Van Gieson, primarius, Rev. J. Elmendorf, secundus; to charge the pastor, Rev. H. Ward, primarius, Rev. I. F. Shaw, secundus; to charge the people, Rev. C. W. Fritts, primarius, Rev. C. H. Polhemus, secundus.

A. P. VAN GIESON, S C.

Absolutely Pure.

This Powder never varies. A marvel of purity strength and wholesomeness. More economica than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight plum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans. ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall-st., N. Y.

Be Warned

in time. Kidney diseases may be prevented by purifying, renewing, and invigorating the blood with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. When, through debility, the action of the kidneys is perverted, these organs rob the blood of its needed constituent, albumen, which is passed off in the urine, while worn out matter, which they should carry off from the blood, is allowed to remain. By the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the kidneys are restored to proper action, and Albuminuria, or

Bright's Disease

is prevented. Ayer's Sarsaparilla also prevents inflammation of the kidneys, and other disorders of these organs. Mrs. Jas. W. Weld, Forest Hill st., Jamaica Plain, Mass., writes: "I have had a complication of diseases, but my greatest trouble has been with my kidneys. Four bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla made me feel like a new person; as well and strong as ever." W. M. McDonald, 46 Summer st., Boston, Mass., had been troubled for years with Kidney Complaint. By the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, he not only the disease from assuming a fatal form, but was restored to perfect health. John McLellan, cor. Bridge and Third sts., Lowell, Mass., writes: "For several years I suffered from Dyspepsia and Kidney Complaint, the latter being so severe at times that I could scarcely attend to my work. My appetite was poor, and I was much emaciated; but by using my appetite and digestion improved, and my health has been perfectly restored."

Prevented

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

Sold by all Druggists.

Price $1; Six bottles, $5.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass., U. S. A.

The Church.

Not As I Will.

BLINDFOLDED and alone I stand
With unknown thresholds on each hand;
The darkness deepens as I grope,
Afraid to fear, afraid to hope;
Yet this one thing I learn to know
Each day more surely as I go,
That doors are opened, ways are made,
Burdens are lifted or are laid
By some great law unseen and still,
Unfathomed purpose to fulfill,
"Not as I will."

Blindfolded and alone I wait,
Loss seems too bitter gain too late;
Too heavy burdens in the load,
And too few helpers on the road;
And joy is weak and grief is strong,
And years and days so long, so long;
Yet this one thing I learn to know
Each day more surely as I go,
That I am glad the good and ill
By changeless law are ordered still
"Not as I will."

"Not as I will!"—the sound grows sweet
Each time my lips the words repeat.
"Not as I will!"—the darkness feels
More safe than light when His thought steals
Like whispered voice to calm and bless
All unrest and all loneliness.
"Not as I will," because the One
Who loved us first and best has gone
Before us on the road, and still
For us must all His love fulfill—
"Not as we will." —Helen Hunt Jackson.

Continuing in Prayer.

"Continue in prayer, and watch in the same with thanksgiving."—COLOSSIANS 4: 2.

THERE are three exhortations in the text connected with prayer. The first is continue; the second is watch; and the third is, give thanks. "Continuance" sits like Moses on the top of the hill, while Watching and Thanksgiving, like Aaron and Hur, hold up its hands.

And first, in regard to prayer, the Apostle saith "CONTINUE."

Be ye not, O ye intercessors with God for men—be ye not as those whose goodness is as the morning cloud and as the early dew. Do not begin to pray, and then suddenly cease your supplications. That will prove an ignorance as to the value of the mercy which you seek, and a want of earnestness as to your obtaining it.

I think, further, that the exhortation to continue may be put in opposition to the common dealings of many with God, who pray and pause, and pray and pause—are earnest and then cool, earnest and colder still. There is a sharp frost—a rapid thaw, and then a frost again. Their spiritual state is as variable as our own weather; a shower, sunshine, mist, shower, sunshine again. They are everything by turns, and nothing long. There are too many churches which are just of this character. See them one week, you would believe they would carry all before them, and convert the town or village in which they are located. See them next week, and they are "As sound asleep as a church," which is a common proverb, a church being too often the sleepiest thing in all the world. Sometimes they ran, and they did run well; what did hinder them? But they stopped, they paused, they looked about them, and after a while they ran again; but they moved not swiftly enough to be able to make up the time lost when they were standing still.

But why should the Church—to come to the question—why should the Church continue in prayer? For several reasons, and the first is, God will answer her. It is not possible that God should refuse to hear prayer. It is possible for Him to bid the sun stand still, and the moon to stay her monthly march; it is possible for Him to bid the waves freeze in the sea, possible for Him to quench the light of the stars in eternal darkness; but it is not possible for Him to refuse to hear prayer which is based upon His promise and offered in faith. He can reverse nature, but He cannot reverse His own nature, and He must do this before He can forbear to hear and answer prayer. The prayers of God's Church are God's intentions—you will not misunderstand me; what God writes in the book of His decree, which no eye can see, that He in process of time writes in the book of Christian hearts, where all can see and read. The book of the believer's desire, if those desires be inspired of the Holy Spirit, is just an exact copy of the book of the Divine decree. And if the Church be determined to day to lift up her heart in prayer for the conversion of men, it is because God determined from before all worlds that men should be converted; your feeble prayer to day, believer, can fly to heaven, and awake the echoes of the slumbering decrees of God. Every time you speak to God, your voice resounds beyond the limits of time, the decrees of God speak to your prayer, and cry, "All hail! brother, all hail! thou too, art a decree!"

God will, God must, answer the prayers of His Church. Methinks I can see in vision in the clouds, God's register, His file on which He puts the prayers of His Church. One after another they have been deposited; He has cast none of them away, and consumed none of them in the fire; but He has put them on His file, and smiled as the heap accumulated; and when it shall reach a certain mark which He has set and appointed in His good pleasure, and the last number of the prayers shall be completed, and the blood of Christ shall have bedewed the whole, then will the Eternal speak, and it shall be done; He shall command, and it shall stand fast. "Let there be light," saith He, and there shall be light at once; "Let the kingdom come," and the kingdom shall come; he that letteth shall be put out of the way; he that hindereth shall be cast down and trodden as the mire of the streets. Up, Church of God, in all the glory of thy prayer, put on thy vestments and begin to plead through Jesus Christ thy Great High Priest; enter thou within the vail to-day, for God heareth thee, and He will surely answer thee.—From a Sermon by Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

NOT long ago a young Christian man was contending with us that it was perfectly lawful for a Christian to go occasionally to the theatre, especially to see and hear some one of the best actors, as Irving or Booth. He claimed that he did it, and felt no harm to himself for so doing. He was a clerk on a small salary. It cost him not less than $1 every time he went; this he did not think was a great extravagance, as he did not go often—say not more than once a week, or may be not more than once a month. A few weeks ago a plan for systematic weekly free-will offerings for benevolent objects was inaugurated in the church of which he was a member, and he put his name down for a few cents per week, saying he would like to give more, but that he was on a very meagre salary and could not afford to do more. This, of course, is only one way of looking at that matter; but it is a suggestive point of view, and we commend it to the thoughtful consideration of all Christian young men who are on small salaries and cannot afford to give more than a few cents per week to send the Gospel to the people in the regions beyond.—Words and Weapons.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Home Readings.

LESSON 6, FIRST QUARTER.

M. The Golden Image.....Dan. 3: 1-12.
T. The Fiery Furnace .....Dan. 3: 13-30.
W. Safe in the Fire... .....Isa. 43: 1-13.
T. Loss and Gain.....Matt. 16: 21-28.
F. The Fiery Trial.....1 Pet. 4: 12-19.
S. Before Governors and Kings.....Matt. 10: 16-33.
S. Daniel's Deliverer.....Dan. 6: 10-24.

—From the Westminster Question Book.

International Sunday-School Lesson.

BY REV. JOHN C. VAN DEVENTER.

Feb. 7th.—"The Fiery Furnace."—Dan. 3: 16-28.

Golden Text.—"Our God whom we serve is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace."—DAN. 3: 17.

CENTRAL TRUTH.—"The righteous is delivered out of trouble."—PROV. 11: 8.

INTRODUCTION.

SOON after Daniel had been made one of the counsellors of the king, or possibly during his term of preparation for that office, the king had a remarkable dream, which impressed him very much, but which he was unable to recall. He commanded his wise men to tell him the dream as well as the interpretation, under penalty of destruction for themselves and their families. In this extremity Daniel sought help from God through the prayers of his friends, and, in answer to their prayers was granted a vision in which the dream and its significance were made known. The king expressed his gratification by promoting Daniel and his companions to high offices in the government of the empire. The erection of the image in the plain of Dura was probably intended as a memorial of the foreign conquests of the king, and may have coincided with the destruction of Jerusalem. The image was to be dedicated as an object of worship by great pomp and the enforced obeisance of all nations, the people thus declaring the gods of Babylon to be supreme over the conquered peoples. All who should refuse the required homage were threatened with being burned alive.

The king's commands met with ready compliance, and if it had not been for the jealousy of the Chaldeans, whom these Jews had supplanted in the king's favor, their contumacy might have been unnoticed. However, word was brought to the king that these three men had refused to bow the knee at the appointed time. The king was enraged at this act of defiance, especially on the part of those whom he had so highly honored. He offered them a second opportunity to prove themselves loyal subjects.

THE LESSON.

I. THE FAITHFUL FEW.—VS. 16-18.

V. 16.—"Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed nego." These are heathen names, but they cannot hide hearts loyal to Jehovah. The king could give them the appearance of Chaldees, but he could not turn their hearts. Their faithfulness while lads had grown with their growth. "Answered and said to the king." They were not content to maintain a respectful silence, but would publish their faith in the God of their fathers. "We are not careful to answer thee in this matter." "We have no need to answer." (Rev.) They felt that their conduct needed neither justification nor apology. They would not accept the offer of a second opportunity to obey, since their hearts were fixed.

V. 17.—"If it be so." Some suppose the condition referred to to be the possibility of the king carrying out his threat, but it is evident that the parallel lies between this verse and the succeeding. These men were not considering the king's action at all. They were entirely taken up with their relations to Jehovah. The clause may be paraphrased, "If it should be his will." "Our God whom we serve is able to deliver us." These heroes of faith had no positive assurance that they would be saved from the physical penalties threatened, but they knew that they were in God's hands and not in those of a wicked and foolish king.

V. 18.—"But if not." These were true heroes. They waited not for the assurance that it would be safe for them to defy the king. Obedience to God at any cost was their motto. "Be it known unto thee, O king, that we will not serve thy gods." In order to appreciate the action of these men, we must remember that they stood almost alone in this proud eminence of faithfulness. The sentiment even of their own countrymen was probably against them, but God was on their side and they were more regal on this occasion than great Nebuchadnezzar himself.

II. THE FURIOUS KING.—VS 19-23.

V. 19.—"Then was Nebuchadnezzar full of fury." These Oriental monarchs were perfect despots and accustomed to have their commands obeyed without question, while here were these upstart Jews defying the king's authority to his face. So furious was he that he commanded the furnace to be filled with a raging fire as if to intensify the sufferings of the victims of his wrath.

V. 20.—"He commanded the most mighty men of his army." He evidently expected resistance from these men, and so gave them into the hands of his most valiant soldiers. He could not understand the strength of passive submission following upon such positive refusal.

V. 21.—"These men were bound in their coats," etc. Their clothing is thus specified to indicate the fact that they were hurried to the place of punishment without opportunity to see their friends or to make any preparations for the ordeal. The fact that they had all their clothing upon them also emphasizes the wonderful escape. "Were cast into the midst of the burning fiery furnace." This furnace was probably open at the top, as well as at the side, and the victims of the king's wrath were probably thrown down from above into the fierce flames, which were leaping up to receive them.

V. 22.—"The flame of the fire slew those men." The strong men of the army were overcome by the intense heat which leaped out upon them, so that the urgency of the king wrought evil and loss to himself. The fact that no one could even approach the fiery furnace without meeting death, prepares us for the wonder that follows.

III. THE FAITHFUL DELIVERER.—VS. 24-28.

V. 24.—"Then Nebuchadnezzar the king was astonished." It would seem that the king had watched the entire proceeding in order to secure the carrying out of his commands, and to take a cruel pleasure in the destruction of his enemies. As he looked into the furnace through the side door, expecting to see the immediate destruction of the rebels, he saw a sight that made him start to his feet in alarm. He can scarcely believe his own eyes, and appeals to his counsellors in order to reassure himself: "Did we not cast three men bound into the midst of the fire?"

V. 25.—"Lo, I see four men loose." The chains of iron upon the limbs of these men had been as flax in flame, which had no power to hurt the servants of God. "Walking in the midst of the fire." Apparently as much at home in those fierce flames as they had been in their official palaces as the king's favorites. But the greatest marvel was the presence of the fourth person whose form was "like the Son of God." Our version puts into the mouth of the king an expression which anticipates the progress of revelation. His words are more accurately rendered by the Revision: "The aspect of the fourth is like a son of the gods." It was no doubt the redeemer of His people who was present with them, but certainly Nebuchadnezzar could not recognize Him as the Son of Jehovah.

V. 26.—"Then Nebuchadnezzar came near." He was satisfied that it was useless to contend further with men who enjoyed such manifestations of Divine favor. He called them "servants of the most high God," in recognition of the superiority of their Deity over those whom he worshipped, yet did not give up his own idolatrous belief and practice. At the command of the king the three men came forth out of the furnace.

V. 27.—An eager and curious crowd of high officials gathered around to behold this wonder. They appear to have examined these strange men thoroughly and to have found no trace of even contact with fire, so completely had they been enfolded in God's protecting arms.

V. 28.—"Blessed be the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego." The king was so far moved by this occurrence that he was willing to recognize Jehovah as a national Deity, and to tolerate His worship along side of that of the gods of the land. Further than this he was not ready to go.

LESSONS FOR TO-DAY.

1. Parley with evil is unnecessary as well as dangerous.

2. It is better to obey God at any cost, than to try to purchase peace by disobedience.

3. God is the only One to whom we owe unquestioning obedience.

4. The world hates those who rebuke its sins by their virtues.

5. The hatred of the world destroys itself.

6. The furnace of temptation is more to be feared than that of suffering.

7. The presence of the Son of God is the safety and comfort of His servants.

8. "Their rock is not as our rock; even our enemies themselves being judges."

A New Signal Service.

A CYCLONE in the nursery
Sent Noah's ark a-flying;
It made the dolls turn pale with fear,
And almost fall to crying,
It rent the house of jointed blocks
From turret to foundation,
And pulled poor Rover's tail until
He howled in desperation.

The cyclone in the corner stood,
(Her other name was Florence),
Her face was overcast with clouds,
The tears rained down in torrents;
And looking in the door just then,
Her teasing brother Truro
Inquired with feigned anxiety,
"Is this the weather bureau?"

"A weather bureau? What is that?"
She asked, and stopped to wonder.
"It tells about the storms," he said,
"Of wind, and rain, and thunder.
Hurrah! I'll get a flag, and make
This room a signal station;
And you shall show me every day
The weather indication."

"What's that?" inquired the puzzled child;
Again the tears had started.
"Hold on a minute, you shall see,"
Said Tru, and off he started.
He waved a banner in his hand
A minute or two after;
It might have been enchanted, for
It turned her tears to laughter.

"This means no storms to-day," he said;
"Why, Flo, how did you know it?
Now every time you smile like this,
The flag shall fly to show it;
I'll hang it by the picture here—
This one of the Madonna;
'Twill tell you're trying to be good,
And trying upon honor.

"Though out of doors 'tis cold and damp,
From wind and rain together,
Sweet looks will change the dreariest day
To bright and pleasant weather.
But if you are a naughty girl,
And fly into a passion,
The flag shall disappear at once
In a very hasty fashion."

A great improvement this has wrought
In temper and in manner,
For in the nursery still I see
A pretty blue silk banner.
And this I know, that earnestly
A little maid is trying
To be a good, sweet child, and keep
Her signal-flag a-flying. —Golden Days.

A Bleak Home.

ON the map of Iceland may be seen a speck of an island called Grimsey? It is the most northern and consequently the coldest, of the Iceland group. Eighty-eight people, no more, live on it. They have tried to keep a few cows, but the winters are too hard for them. Two horses and a few sheep, with very coarse fleeces, are the only animals of the kind on the island.

A minister whose name is Peter Goodmansen, lives in the remote place. He is a poet and an astronomer, and is employed to take observations for the Meteorological Institute, at Copenhagen. Once or twice a year some of the Islanders visit the mainland; but the stormy seas, covered with icebergs, make the passage always dangerous.

On one side of the island, which is a high precipice, countless birds build their nests, and the collecting of eggs is one chief means of living for the little settlement. Men are let down over the face of the rock by ropes. They wear suits thickly wadded with feathers, to save themselves from being hurt on the sharp rocks. Each man carries a pole to help himself with, and ladle for scooping up nests he cannot reach with his hands. There is in his frock a great pocket, in which he can put one hundred and fifty eggs. There he works with the sea roaring beneath him.—Selected.

Practice Makes Perfect.

WE were sitting at a table in the largest restaurant in the city of Chicago. A lady near us said to the waiter:

"I do not see how in the world you ever remember what each one has ordered when you have so many to wait upon at once."

"It is a mystery," laughed the waiter, "but practice makes perfect."

"Ah!" I thought, "you have hit upon the secret."

We admire the skilful musical performer, we look almost with envy upon a perfect picture or choice piece of statuary, we read with wondering admiration the song of the poet, we listen entranced to the finished orator, but seldom does the thought come home to us that all this is the result of days and nights of patient practice and tiresome labor.

Arago, the French astronomer, tells, in his autobiography, how in his youth he one day became puzzled and discouraged over his mathematics, and almost resolved to give up the study. He held his paper-bound text-book in his hand. Impelled by an indefinable curiosity, he damped the cover of the book, and carefully unrolled the leaf to see what was on the other side. It turned out to be a brief letter from D'Alembert to a young man like himself, disheartened by the difficulties of mathematical study, who had written to him for counsel. This was the letter:

"Go on, sir, go on. The difficulties you meet will resolve themselves as you advance. Proceed, and light will dawn and shine with increasing clearness upon your path."

Arago followed the simple suggestion, "Go on, sir, go on," and became the first astronomical mathematician of his age.—Christian Advocate.

"Sown in Our Weakness."

"THAT picture is immortal," said a gentleman to Bonaparte, showing the result of the genius of a great master. "Immortal! how much longer will it last?" "Four or five hundred years," was the reply. Bonaparte's answer, "A fine immortality!" showed what he thought of eternal life that was bounded by five hundred years. A clergyman told us lately of a poor invalid, almost entirely paralyzed, who is in very truth, though by the world unseen, doing immortal work. He can use his lips, and he holds a brush in his mouth, and thus paints texts from the Word of Life that go abroad with their message of healing, winged by the yearning love of the artist who must do something for God. When the fruit sown in weakness shall be garnered in power, the Lord who is very pitiful will assuredly reveal blessings from these feeble efforts, to abide for all eternity. "I wish I could do more," we say sometimes, half fretfully, forgetting that if all other power be denied, we can at least tender to God a patient heart. Yet it is wonderful what power for service He mercifully leaves even with the least among us. We have in our mind the room of a private house which may be said to be truly consecrated to the Lord, and where strong men, perhaps above joining regular "classes" for Bible instruction, throng regularly to be told by a weak woman of the way of eternal life. The Master has need even of the feeblest. A respectable man who was gradually sinking into drunkenness went one afternoon to carry his little crippled daughter home from school, the weather being wet. He turned in to his accustomed place at the public house bar, and was about to settle himself there with a glass, when he felt a tear fall down on his strong hand, and looking at the child, he saw her face quivering all over, while "Father—don't!" seemed all her frightened lips could say. He put the glass down, and set out once more to carry the little cripple home. "I can't drink any more," he told his wife. That tear and that childish cry were used of God to strengthen him to resist the craving, and the helpless one of the household saved her father.—The Quiver for January.

GOD gives us tongues on purpose that they should be used. As He made birds to sing, and stars to shine, and rivers to flow, so He has made men and women to converse with one another, to His glory. It may be desirable that some should speak less, but it is still more desirable that they should speak better.—Spurgeon.

The Horsford Almanac and Cook Book mailed free on application to the Rumford Chemical Works, Providence, R. I.

Rheumatism

We doubt if there is, or can be, a specific remedy for rheumatism; but thousands who have suffered its pains have been greatly benefited by Hood's Sarsaparilla. If you have failed to find relief, try this great remedy.

"I was afflicted with rheumatism twenty years. Previous to 1883 I found no relief, but grew worse, and at one time was almost helpless. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me more good than all the other medicine I ever had." H. T. BALCOM, Shirley Village, Mass.

"I had rheumatism three years, and got no relief till I took Hood's Sarsaparilla. It has done great things for me. I recommend it to others." LEWIS BURBANK, Biddeford, Me.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by three peculiarities: 1st, the combination of remedial agents; 2d, the proportion; 3d, the process of securing the active medicinal qualities. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown. Send for book containing additional evidence.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over." J. P. THOMPSON, Register of Deeds, Lowell, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla beats all others, and is worth its weight in gold." I. BARRINGTON, 130 Bank Street, New York City.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Made only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

7% NET Security 3 to 6 times loan. INTEREST semi-annual and paid at your home. 29th year of residence, and 10th of business. No investor ever had to pay taxes, costs of foreclosure, wait for interest, or take land. BEST of References all around you. Write if you have money to loan.

D. S. B. JOHNSTON & SON,
Negotiators of Mortgage Loans.
MENTION THIS PAPER St. Paul, Minn.

BABY'S BIRTHDAY.

A Beautiful Imported Birthday Card sent to any baby whose mother will send us the names of two or more other babies, and their parents' addresses. Also a handsome Diamond Dye Sample Card to the mother and much valuable information. Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt.

TO HAVE HEALTH THE LIVER MUST BE IN ORDER.

DR. SANFORD'S LIVER INVIGORATOR

Is a Reliable Remedy for Liver Complaints and Ills caused by a deranged or torpid condition of the Liver, as Dyspepsia, Constipation, Biliousness, Jaundice, Headache, Malaria, Rheumatism, etc. It regulates the bowels, purifies the blood, strengthens the system, assists digestion.
AN INVALUABLE FAMILY MEDICINE.
Thousands of testimonials prove its merit.
ANY DRUGGIST WILL TELL YOU ITS REPUTATION.

FINANCIAL.

HARVEY FISK & SONS,
28 Nassau Street, New York,
DEALERS IN
UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT
AND
OTHER DESIRABLE SECURITIES
FOR INVESTORS.
ALL STOCKS & BONDS
Listed on the New-York Stock Exchange,
Bought and Sold on Commission for Cash.

Deposit accounts received and interest allowed on monthly balances subject to draft at sight.

Coupons, registered interest, and dividends collected, and placed to credit, for our customers, without charge.

7 PER CENT. INTEREST FIRST MORTGAGE FARM LOANS.

Personal acquaintance with lands and values. Over 2,000 loans made. NO CUSTOMER has ever LOST A DOLLAR of principal or interest on any loans made here. Interest collected and sent to you, free of cost, each year. These loans are very safe, and pay nearly U.S. BONDS, I am three times as much as known and recommended by leading business men and clergymen, East and West—men for whom I have been making these investments for TEN YEARS PAST.

☞ REFERENCES. ☜

REV. WM. L. GAGE, D.D., Hartford, Ct.
M. E. GATES, PH.D., LL.D., President Rutgers College, New Brunswick, N. J.
DR. WM. J MILNE, President Geneseo Normal School, Geneseo, N. Y
HON. E. M. TOPLIFF, Manchester, N. H.
REV. JOHN W. RAY, Lake City, Minn
DR. JNO. K. BUCKLYN, Mystic Bridge, Ct.
Importers' and Traders' National Bank, New York.
First National Bank, St. Paul, Minn.
The Congregationalist, Boston, N. Y. Observer, and hundreds of others in all parts of the United States.

All are pleased with my Investments. Circular, references, letters giving experience and testimony of old customers, and a New Map of Dakota sent free on application. Mention this paper. Address

E. P. GATES,
Pres. Merchant's Bank,
Grand Forks, Dakota.

6% 7% 8%

The American Investment Company, of Emmetsburg, Iowa, incorporated, with a paid-up capital of $500,000, with branches at Huron and Mitchell, Dakota offer First Mortgage Farm Loans in Iowa, Minn. Dakota, and Neb., both Principal and Interest Guaranteed. Also 6 per cent Debenture Bonds (obligations of the Company), running 10 years, secured by Mortgage loans deposited with the Mercantile Trust Co., N. Y. It also issues Demand Certificates of Deposit at 5 per cent. interest. Write for pamphlet and references.
Home Office, Emmetsburg, Iowa.
E. S. Ormsby, Pres., 150 Nassau St., N. Y.

INVEST Through the Sound and Reliable
WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE CO.
F. M. PERKINS, President, LAWRENCE, KAN. L. H. PERKINS, Secretary.
CAPITAL AND SURPLUS, $250,000.
Carefully selected 1st Mortgage Farm Loans payable in N. Y. Unrivalled facilities. Absolute satisfaction. 10 years' experience. No losses. Refer to 3d Nat'l Bank, N.Y. City; Nat'l Bank, Lawrence, Kan.; and Hundreds of Investors. Send for pamphlet, forms and full information. Branch Offices in N.Y City, Albany & Phila. N.Y. Office, 137 B'way, C.C. Hine & Son, Agts.

GEO. MATHER'S SONS, PRINTING INK

Manufacturers. Superior Black and Colored Ink Lithographic and Plate Ink. Varnishes, etc. 60 John st. near New York.
The Intelligencer is printed with our ink.

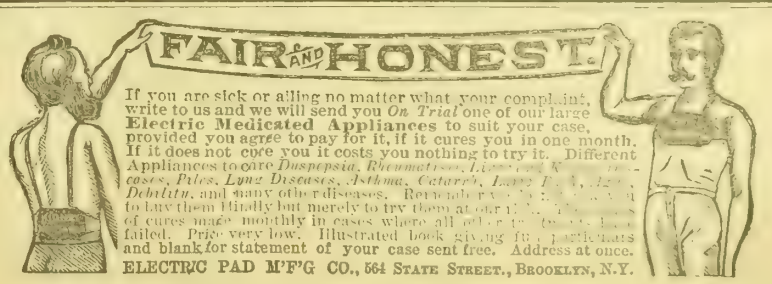
JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS
SOLD BY ALL DEALERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD
GOLD MEDAL PARIS EXPOSITION—1878.

CARDS 60 Fancy Pictures, and 25 elegant Cards in Gilt Edge, Silk Fringe, Hidden Name, &c., 1 Songster, 1 $50 Prize Puzzle, and 8 parlor games, all for 10cts. 6 packs and 3 others, 10cts.
IVORY CO., Clintonville, Conn.

ON 30 DAYS' TRIAL.

THIS NEW
ELASTIC TRUSS
Has a Pad different from all others, is self-adjusting, and adapts itself to all positions of the body while the ball in the cup presses back the intestines just as a person does with the finger. With it the most obstinate cases of Hernia can be held securely day and night, and a perfect cure certain. It is easy, durable and cheap. Send for illustrated circulars free. EGGLESTON TRUSS CO., Chicago, Ill.

FAIR AND HONEST.



If you are sick or ailing no matter what your complaint, write to us and we will send you On Trial one of our large Electric Medicated Appliances to suit your case, provided you agree to pay for it, if it cures you in one month. If it does not cure you it costs you nothing to try it. Different Appliances to cure Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney cases, Piles, Lung Diseases, Asthma, Catarrh, Loss of Vitality, Debility, and many other diseases. Remember we do not ask you to buy them blindly but merely to try them at our risk. Thousands of cures made monthly in cases where all other remedies have failed. Price very low. Illustrated book giving full particulars and blank for statement of your case sent free. Address at once.
ELECTRIC PAD M'F'G CO., 564 STATE STREET., BROOKLYN, N.Y.

You have no doubt found it difficult to find a satisfactory soap. This is because so many contain free, fatty matter or caustic alkali, giving them a greasy, acrid or irritating character. No such experience can occur with the Ivory Soap, its purity ($99\frac{44}{100}\%$ pure) vouches for that.

Free of charge. A full size cake of Ivory Soap will be sent to any one who can not get it of their grocer, if six two-cent stamps, to pay postage, are sent to Procter & Gamble, Cincinnati. Please mention this paper.

OFFICE OF THE

Atlantic Mutual Insurance Company,

NEW YORK, January 23d, 1886.

The Trustees, in Conformity to the Charter of the Company, submit the following Statement of its affairs on the 31st of December, 1885.

Premiums on Marine Risks from 1st January, 1885, to 31st December, 1885	$3,856,618 66
Premiums on Policies not marked off 1st January, 1885	1,339,525 10
Total Marine Premiums	$5,196,143 76
Premiums marked Off from 1st January, 1885, to 31st December, 1885	$3,770,094 30
Losses paid during the same period	$1,915,020 67
Returns of Premiums and Expenses	$776,712 42

The Company has the following Assets, viz.:

United States and State of New York Stock, City, Bank and other Stocks	$9,024,685 00
Loans secured by Stocks, and otherwise	1,438 600 00
Real Estate and claims due the Company, estimated at	530,000 00
Premium Notes and Bills Receivable	1,508,143 58
Cash in Bank	22?,897 88
Amount	$12.740.326 46

Six per cent. interest on the outstanding certificates of profits will be paid to the holders thereof, or their legal representatives, on and after Tuesday, the Second of February next.

The outstanding certificates of the issue of 1881 will be redeemed and paid to the holders thereof, or their legal representatives, on and after Tuesday, the Second of February next, from which date all interest thereon will cease. The certificates to be produced at the time of payment, and cancelled.

A dividend of Forty per cent. is declared on the net earned premiums of the Company for the year ending 31st December, 1885, for which certificates will be issued on and after Tuesday, the Fourth of May next.

By order of the Board, J. H. CHAPMAN, Secretary.

TRUSTEES:

J. D. Jones, Charles Dennis, W. H. H. Moore, James Low, A. A. Raven, Wm. Sturgis, Benjamin H. Field, Josiah O. Low, Thomas B. Coddington, William Degroot, Horace Gray, William E. Dodge, William H. Macy, C. A. Hand, John D. Hewlett, William H. Webb, Charles P. Burdett, Edmund W. Corlies, Adolph Lemoyne, Robert B. Minturn, Charles H. Marshall, Frederick H. Cossitt, William Bryce, John Elliott, James G. De Forest, Charles D. Leverich, John L. Riker, N. Denton Smith, George Bliss, Henry E. Hawley, William D. Morgan, Isaac Bell, Edward Floyd-Jones, Anson W. Hard, Thomas Maitland.

JOHN D. JONES, President.
CHARLES DENNIS, Vice-President.
W. H. H. MOORE, 2d Vice-Pres't.
A. A. RAVEN, 3d Vice-Pres't.

BENJ. F. TRUMPY,
Real Estate Office,
336 Broome Street,
ONE DOOR EAST OF BOWERY.
Management of Estates, Renting and Sale of Property, and Collecting of Rents.
AGENT FOR
German American Insurance Co.
Westchester Insurance Co.
Hamburg Bremen Insurance Co.
Mutual Life Insurance Co.

THE SECURITY
MUTUAL BENEFIT SOCIETY,
No. 233 Broadway, New York.

ONLY TWELVE ASSESSMENTS
Have been levied from 1881 to 1886, averaging three a year, and making the cost for assessments to a man of 40 years, but $4.40 a year for each $1000 of insurance.
Send for Circulars. Agents Wanted!
☞ Remunerative employment offered energetic and reliable men.

A MILLION
BOOKS
RARE, CURIOUS, CURRENT. IN STOCK.
ALMOST GIVEN AWAY.
Libraries Supplied Cheaper than at any Book Store in the World.
LIBRARIES AND BOOKS BOUGHT.
MAMMOTH CATALOGUE FREE.
LEGGAT BROTHERS,
81 CHAMBERS STREET,
3d door West of City Hall Park. NEW YORK.

KNABE
PIANOFORTES.
UNEQUALLED IN
Tone, Touch, Workmanship and Durability.
WILLIAM KNABE & CO.,
Nos. 204 and 206 West Baltimore Street, Baltimore. No. 112 Fifth Avenue, N.Y.

CONSUMPTION
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong in my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., N.Y.

J. B. WATKINS LAND MORTGAGE CO.
Capital, $750,000. Surplus, $100,000.
FARM MORTGAGES. 7% INTEREST GUARANTEED
PAYABLE BY HALF-YEARLY GUARANTEED COUPONS AT NATIONAL BANK OF COMMERCE IN NEW YORK.
10,994 Mortgages negotiated, aggregating - - $7,223,800
Amount of Interest and Principal paid on day of maturity, 4,118,272
Six per cent. Real Estate Mortgage Bonds, principal and interest FULLY GUARANTEED. Security SEVEN fold. For sale at our New York Office.
☞ SEND FOR PAMPHLET FORMS AND TESTIMONIALS. ☜
Address J. B. WATKINS L. M. CO., Lawrence, Kansas.
Or HENRY DICKINSON, New York Manager, 243 Broadway.

EQUITABLE MORTGAGE COMPANY.
CAPITAL, $100,000. (Paid up.)
Aggregate capital and surplus of our associated corporations, $325,000.
7% WESTERN FARM MORTGAGES 7%
In Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, and Nebraska.
PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST
GUARANTEED.
Send for further information. REFERENCES: Send for further information.
First National Bank, N. Y.; B. E. Tifft, 921 Chestnut St. Phila.; Hon. Redfield Proctor, Rutland, Vt.; J. W. White, Nashua, N. H.; Kenaall Bros., Reading, Pa.; Col. Lee Chamberlain, Albany, N. Y.; Rev. S. W. Boardman, Stanhope, N. J.; H. H. Fitch, 23 Court St., Boston, Mass.; Hon. S. S. Lacey, Marshall, Mich.; Gen. R. B. Crawford, Norwalk, Ct.
NEW YORK, 135, 137 B'way. OFFICES. PHILADELPHIA, Pa., 112 S. 4th St.
BOSTON, Mass. 23 Court St. KANSAS CITY, Mo., 9th & Walnut Sts.

HALF A MILLION GARDENS
ARE ANNUALLY SUPPLIED WITH
SEEDS Peter Henderson's PLANTS
EVERYTHING FOR THE GARDEN
Our Seed Warehouses, the largest in New York, are fitted up with every appliance for the prompt and careful filling of orders.
Our Green-house Establishment at Jersey City is the most extensive in America. Annual Sales, 2½ Million Plants.
Our Catalogue for 1886, of 140 pages, containing colored plates, descriptions and illustrations of the NEWEST, BEST and RAREST SEEDS and PLANTS, will be mailed on receipt of 6 cts. (in stamps) to cover postage.
PETER HENDERSON & CO. 35 & 37 Cortlandt St., NEW YORK.

BURPEE'S SEEDS,
FARM ANNUAL FOR 1886
Will be sent FREE to all who write for it. It is a Handsome Book of 128 Pages, with hundreds of new illustrations, two Colored Plates, and tells all about the Best Garden, Farm and Flower Seeds, Bulbs, Plants, Thoroughbred Stock and Fancy Poultry. It is the only complete catalogue of the kind published, and describes RARE NOVELTIES in VEGETABLES and FLOWERS, of real value, which can not be obtained elsewhere. Send address on a postal to
W. ATLEE BURPEE & CO., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Sold by all Newsdealers. THREE VALUABLE PERIODICALS. Price, 10 Cents Each.

Johnston's Journal, An Illustrated Magazine for the People. Estab'd 1874. Issued every other week. 36 pages. $2 a year.

Industrial America, An Illustrated Popular Record of Progress in the Arts and Sciences. 16 pages. Every other week. $2 a year.

The Electrical World. An Illustrated Review of Current Progress in Electricity and its Practical Applications. 20 pages. Weekly. $3 a year.

Any dealer will take your order or subscription; or address, W. J. JOHNSTON, Publisher, 9 Murray St., New York.

PATENTS Strictly first-class work; reasonable fees; complicated, difficult cases a specialty. Consultation or advice by mail Free. Johnston's Patent Agency, 9 Murray St., New York.

Arnold, Constable & Co
COTTON DRESS FABRICS.
Have now opened Spring Selections in "Anderson's" celebrated Zephyr Ginghams, plaids, stripes, checks, etc. Satteens, Cheviots, French Percales, Embroidered Ginghams. Also, a new fabric, "Ondine," in plain and fancy colors.
Broadway & 19th st.
NEW YORK.

R. H. MACY & CO.,
14TH STREET, SIXTH AVE., AND 13TH STREET NEW YORK.
GRAND CENTRAL FANCY AND DRY GOODS ESTABLISHMENT.
Special Sale of Ladies' and Children's
MUSLIN UNDERWEAR,
all of our own manufacture and design. Our prices are the lowest in the country.
Rare bargains in
LINENS
and Housekeeping Goods, our own direct importation.
Unapproachable bargains in
BLACK AND COLORED
Silks and Dress Goods.
Our prices below all competition.
Tremendous mark-down in
SUITS AND CLOAKS.
Our Entire Stock at Lower Prices than ever before known.
Special Care Given to Mail Orders.
R. H. MACY & CO.

SILKS AND VELVETS.
JAMES M'CREERY & CO.
Commence on Monday, Jan. 4 their ANNUAL SALE of SILKS and VELVETS.
HEAVY REDUCTIONS have been made in all Sections of the Vast Stocks which they exhibit.
An early inspection is invited.
Broadway and Eleventh Street New York.
Sole Agents for the
CLIFTON SILK MILLS

WANTED A Lady or Gentleman of Good Address in every county to sell our Goods. Salary $75 per Month and Expenses. Canvassing Outfit and Particulars Free. STANDARD SILVER-WARE CO., Boston, Mass.

LE PAGE'S
LIQUID GLUE

UNEQUALLED FOR CEMENTING WOOD, GLASS, CHINA, PAPER, LEATHER, &c. Awarded GOLD MEDAL, LONDON, 1883. Used by Mason & Hamlin Organ and Piano Co., Pullman Palace Car Co., &c. Sold only by the RUSSIA CEMENT CO., GLOUCESTER, MASS. SOLD EVERYWHERE. ☞ Sample Tin Can by Mail, 25c.

The Christian Intelligencer.

Een-dracht maakt macht.

VOL. LVII.—No. 5. WHOLE No. 2897. NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 3 1886. $2.65 A YEAR IN ADVANCE. No. 48 CHURCH STREET.

EDITORS: Rev. JOHN M. FERRIS, D.D. Rev. N. H. VAN ARSDALE.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR: MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

WE are inclined to reprint the whole of Mr. Gladstone's rejoinder to Professor Huxley. Shall we do it? It would occupy a large part of the third page for about three weeks. It is one of the best and most clear statements ever made of the agreement between science and the first chapter of Genesis. We would be thankful for an opinion on reprinting.

ETHICS.—A book has been published in England and reprinted in Philadelphia, which aims to show that George Eliot was "the chief illustrator of the true ethics of Christianity, the most earnest expositor of the true doctrine of the cross that we should live to something higher than the love of happiness," etc. If this be so, one wonders that one of the chief acts of her life was in the face of the clearest and most express prohibitions of our Lord. It does not appear to us that the doctrine of "renunciation," so much lauded now-a-days, comes with much force from the lips of one who, rather than renounce or forego a marriage connexion, broke the laws of the land she lived in and shocked the moral sense of the whole Christian world.

A GREAT DEBATE between Mr. Gladstone on one side and Dr. Réville, Professor Huxley and Professor Max Muller on the other, has attracted general attention in Great Britain and is read by an increasing circle in this country. Dr. Réville began the controversy by assailing opinions advanced by Mr. Gladstone some time ago. The ex-Premier replied in an article entitled "The Dawn of Creation and of Worship," published in the Nineteenth Century. In the December number Professor Huxley, in an article which must have disappointed his admirers, asserted and endeavored to prove that the account of creation in Genesis and the conclusions of science are antagonistic and cannot be reconciled by any fair interpretation of the Hebrew. Mr. Gladstone had insisted upon the substantial agreement between the Mosaic account and the results of scientific research, and had maintained that it proved inspiration. Professor Muller had prepared a paper on Solar Myths for the same periodical, and improved the opportunity to add an attack upon Mr. Gladstone's rejection of the Solar Myth as accounting for the dawn of worship. Mr. Gladstone replies in the January number. He has never written anything more vigorous or conclusive in his long career. He has sometimes been diffuse, but here is direct and terse. Prof. Huxley in his argument declared the authorities quoted by Mr. Gladstone, Cuvier, Sir John Herschel, and Whewell, to be great and venerable names but antiquated and of no authority upon a question of cosmogony. Mr. Gladstone replies by quoting from the Phillips–Etheridge Manual of Geology, published last year—a standard authority—and also by quoting from a work by Professor Prestwich, which is now in the printer's hands, both giving an order of creation varying from the Mosaic record only on one doubtful point, namely, the appearance of vegetable life. It is rather surprising that in regard to this one point Mr. Gladstone does not insist that the creation of food for animals must have preceded the creation of animals. A part of Professor Huxley's statement of the order in which geology asserts life to have appeared will be received with amazement. Between the invertebrate water-population of the very ancient Cambrian rocks and the vertebrate water population of the Upper Silurian, nearly next in age to the Cambrian, he inserts "Flying Insects." And on what does anybody suppose this insertion is founded? On the discovery, as he admits in a note, of a solitary insect wing, two months ago, in the Middle Silurian. This discovery of one lone wing he declares is evidence of "the certainty that they (insects) existed" in the Middle Silurian. Mr. Gladstone thoroughly refutes Professor Huxley and shows the remarkable agreement between the first chapter of Genesis and the discoveries of science. He infers the inspiration of that chapter. In these conclusions the most eminent American geologists are with him. That Mr. Gladstone's wonderful memory is not impaired by his more than three score and ten years is seen in the fact that in his rejoinder he quotes from the correspondence of the Duchess of York, from Buckland, Lucretius, Ovid, the Vestiges of Creation, Bishop Brown, Dante, Cowper, La Bruyére, and alludes to Coleridge's Confessions, Mr. Crawford's Zoroaster, and Butler's Analogy.

THE SITUATION in the British Parliament seems to be this. Mr. Jesse Collings, a Radical, moved an amendment to the answer to the Queen's speech, expressing regret that she had not proposed measures to promote allotments of land to farm laborers. The Liberals, led by Mr. Gladstone, supported the motion, the Tories opposed it. The vote was 329 for the motion, 250 against it. It consisted of 256 Liberals and 73 Home Rulers in the majority, and 232 Tories and 18 from the Whig wing of the Liberals in the minority. These 18 were led by Lord Hartington. The Home Rulers excluded, the Liberals had a majority of 6 over the combined Tories and disaffected Liberals. But there were 76 Liberals not voting. How they will act on the Irish question is unknown. The fact that they did not sustain their party in this division indicates indecision. The vote cannot be regarded as a test vote. It defeated the Tories and did nothing more. Whether Mr. Gladstone will have the support of these 76 gentlemen for his Irish bill is uncertain.

Outside of Parliament certain events are signficant. The Prince of Wales had no part in the royal procession through London to open Parliament. But almost immediately after he accepted an invitation to meet Mr. Gladstone at a country residence of the Duke of Westminster. It is claimed that the Prince is a Liberal, and that he is more popular than the Queen. Indeed the lack of enthusiasm for the Queen on the day of the procession was so plain that the London papers plead the very disagreeable weather as the reason for it.

COMMUNISM.—In the New Princeton Review the Rev. Dr. Parkhurst has a very clever article on the Christian Conception of Property, in which he says some strange things. One of these is the assertion that the early Church at Jerusalem was distinctly communistic. "The principle was asserted, and by a majority of its members applied." Neither said any of them that aught of the things he possessed was his own; but they had all things common. They erred, however, in not only vetoing proprietary rights but obliterating proprietary distinctions. Hence came in the end impoverishment, and consequently Paul's continual collections "for the poor saints at Jerusalem."

We do not believe one word of this. No principle of communism was laid down, and no statute to that effect enacted. The whole proceeding at Jerusalem was a spontaneous outburst of Christian fellowship, freely sacrificing individual interests to the common welfare. All was voluntary from first to last, as Peter's address to Ananias clearly shows, "Whiles it remained, was it not thine own? and after it was sold, was it not in thine own power?" Nor is there any evidence that this state of things lasted long enough to produce the poverty which Paul labored so hard to relieve. The bitter opposition of the Jews and Jewish authorities to those who became believers in Christ, is quite enough to account for the chronic poverty of the Christians at Jerusalem. And the collections were called for, not only to relieve a real need, but also to prove a bond of fellowship and union between Jewish and Gentile believers (Gal. 2: 10).

The New Theology.

THIS is the somewhat pretentious title given to a set of doctrinal views set forth with considerable earnestness in various quarters. The full outcome of the tendency can be seen in a book issued within a year or two by the Rev. Mr. Heard, of Edinburgh, entitled "Old and New Theology." This work, which is outspoken in the extreme, lays the axe to the root of the evangelical system as that system has been preached and believed for a century or more. A less developed outline of the scheme is contained in a recent volume from the press of Houghton, Mifflin & Co., composed mainly of articles that have appeared in the Andover Review. It bears the name of "Progressive Orthodoxy," but might better be called Regressive Divinity, for its chief characteristic is a backing down from the faith once delivered to the saints. It is an attempt to adjust Christian dogma to the Zeitgeist, or to state it according to "the present stage of Christian knowledge."

It begins with the Incarnation, which we are assured would have taken place had man never fallen—an assertion that may or may not be true, but certainly cannot be proved from Scripture. The development of our Lord's humanity is claimed as a "characteristic and most important advance" of the new system. Yet the only novelty in the discussion is a peculiar emphasis laid on the Son of Man as the head of the race, whereas the Scripture represents Him as the head of His redeemed people. The much talk of the universality of Christ's humanity is evidently intended to prepare the way for the future assertion that He is to be made known to men universally here or hereafter. The Atonement is taken up next. The extraordinary confusion of thought shown in the treatment of it is best expressed by a single quotation. "It would not be just for God to condemn men hopelessly when they have not known Him as He really is, when they have not known Him in Jesus Christ." Thus all grace and mercy is wiped out of the Gospel, and it is made a necessity of justice! This is new theology with a vengeance.

In the chapter on Eschatology it is inferred as a corollary from the fact that Jesus Christ is the Head of humanity, that therefore "all the members of the human family are to know God in Christ." If so, what right have these writers to deny the claim of Universalists that on the same principle all men are to be saved by Christ? It is a curious theology that is based upon illogical inferences from unscriptural assertions. In treating of the Holy Spirit it is assumed that under the Christian dispensation that is attained which was not possible before. We should like to see a higher type of consecration and spirituality than that of him who said to God, "Whom have I in heaven but thee, and there is none upon earth I desire besides thee."

The essay entitled "The Christian" is designed to show that only he who knows the historical Christ is acceptable to God, whereas it seems more reasonable to say that wherever the fruits of the Spirit are seen there the evidence of the appropriation of Christ's work is undeniable. In the article on Christianity and Missions, praise is given to a quotation which says it is impossible to believe that men "can be eternally lost for not having believed truths never offered for their acceptance." We have never seen or heard of anyone who held such a view. Orthodoxy holds that men are punished for their sins, and for them only. The section on the Scriptures is a clumsy attempt to deny inspiration and impeach the infallibility of the written word. The final chapter affirms what the whole argument has been constructed to establish, "that no one can be lost without having had knowledge of Christ" (p. 250). Hence there must be a probation after death for all and singular of the heathen of all ages who have never heard the Gospel during life. The men who deliberately assume and defend this position cannot stand there. They must go farther. Their conclusion is not based on Scripture, which alone can decide (and has decided) the question, but upon postulates laid down as to the necessary character of God and upon peculiar manipulations of fundamental truths. When men begin in that way they are sure to go on. Development does not stop half way. Meanwhile it is enough to say that one single text of Scripture scatters all their ingenious hypotheses and inferences to the winds. Is God unrighteous who visiteth with wrath? God forbid: for then how shall God judge the world? Or, as the Master of the Temple paraphrases it, "Conscience echoes the language of revelation which declares the coming judgment; and that judgment presupposes that sin can be justly punished and will be."

"Old Colony" Papers.

MY NEW ENVIRONMENT.

IN these papers, the writer always proceeded upon the idea that he and his readers are personally interested in each other. I am sure as to the former. It is one of the pleasantest incidents of an otherwise obscure and rather uneventful life not only to discover, as he goes about among the churches, how many unseen friends he has made, but to find out a little about their personality and their surroundings. And the respectful curiosity to see and shake hands with "Old Colony" has been a compliment worth far more than any amount of flattering criticism would be. He was quite amused to be told by a neighbor at Claverack, who was hurrying a friend past the house to the depot, of her thrusting her head out of the carriage and asking to be shown "that weather-vane"! That weather-vane, by the way, was struck by lightning last summer and the bold rider, if not unhorsed, was despoiled of his glittering livery, and blackened and battered as any jockey who had been rolled in the mud. However, he probably saved the stable and perhaps the house, and henceforth will figure, like the Boy who Stood upon the Burning Deck, as "a creature of heroic mould" if not a martyr.

So I make no apology for telling my friends something about my new environment. How I happened to come to Princeton is a matter which could not very well be explained, even in a corner of THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER. Suffice it to say, that it did not "happen" at all but was "ordered," in even a more exact sense than that in which all "the bounds of our habitation" are "appointed." Both in leaving "Rolokoke" and in passing by Poughkeepsie, New Brunswick and other places which had been in his mind, the movement could hardly be called his own for reasons which even the frankness of an "Old Colony" may not disclose. But being here, he is more and more certified, as in all his life of "committing his way unto the Lord," that He has directed his steps.

Imagine me sitting now in the recess of a vast bay-window, screened and overshadowed by a broad and towering fir tree, before which spreads out the green and park-like campus of the Theological Seminary. The house which I have been so fortunate as to secure is at one corner of these pleasant and stately grounds, and the whole range of side windows commands a view of them. Across the street are the extensive gardens and grounds of residences, which front upon a street beyond. The trees and hedges, except of course the numerous evergreens, are bare now and permit glimpses of houses and seminary buildings; but on still summer nights I have sat on my piazza, upon which I step out of the study, and easily imagined myself to be occupying "a lodge in some vast wilderness." A tulip tree, with trunk as straight and round as the "mast of some tall admiral," spreads its darkly green and glossy leaves and its quaint and painted blossom-cups over me like a benignant sentinel. Near it is a broad maple, whose blood-red foliage is the autumnal pride of Princeton. My two shaggy and giant firs shield me from impertinent eyes by day, and soothe me by their surge-like sound by night. A broad leaved horse-chestnut hangs out its chandelier of blossoms every summer, and rains down its rich-brown bullets upon the discouraged grass in the autumn. Clumps of lilacs and syringas, box, and currant bushes, are fragrant of old Hackensack memories. The elms, alas! are fast disappearing before the insidious borer at the root, but fortunately there are so many other noble trees of various kinds as to make the thinning out rather an improvement. No jealous fence intrudes itself between me and the campus to destroy the illusion—I may say, the substantial fact—that these fine old grounds are a part of my own premises.

The house is a quaint and cozy old-fashioned one, with rambling halls and unexpected rooms, such as are only found in houses which have been built by successive additions through a series of years, the nucleus or architectural protoplasm being almost undiscoverable except by a chemical analysis. For nearly thirty years it has been a "professor's house," being fitted up for Dr. James W. Alexander when his health failed, and occupied by his family though he never lived to enjoy it himself. Since that time it has been the home of Professors C. W. Hodge, Patton and Paxton, and of Dr. Roberts the Librarian of the Seminary, so that its very beams ought by this time to be seasoned with sound theology and learning as well as sanctity. This ample Library in which I write, on a level with the grassy lawn, with the sunshine pouring in all day and with its open fireplace and hearth, and its walls inclosed on all sides with book-shelves, is more to me than any extemporized study could be, or even than the finest new Library ever designed by a Hunt or a Potter.

As I look out on this grey winter day, through the latticed spaces and the gothic arches of the leafless trees, I can discern the group of seminary buildings quite distinctly,—the long grey-stone three-storied structure, built after the academic pattern which we see everywhere in our older institutions; the little white Greek Chapel; the massive and ornate Stuart Hall, illustrating the advance of architectural ideas, if not of theology; and the old and new Library buildings, somewhat painfully reminding us by the comparison of their exteriors that utility must sometimes be secured at the cost of beauty; but, above all, the plain but ample brick dwellings at each end of the campus, which will always be known as the "Alexander" and the "Hodge" houses, from their original and long occupancy by those great men who gave Princeton Seminary its prestige. It is an interesting and unique fact that Archibald Alexander was succeeded by his famous son, Addison, in the old home which is my next door neighbor, and that Dr. A. A. Hodge occupies his own childhood's home, as the successor to his father's professorship of theology. The study-rooms of these mansions remain quite unaltered, with the exception of a few modern conveniences; and it is not a little inspiring and suggestive, as one drops in for a pleasant chat with the present inmates, to sit in the same chair in which the "Institutes of Theology" were written, or to cast one's eyes about the same plain book-shelves from which Archibald Alexander drew the supplies of his full mind and clear and fervid speech. There is in "Old Sem." (as the main building is familiarly and affectionately called by the students) a mammoth desk or table, which still shows the deep-furrowed traces of his restless thumb nail with which he ploughed his teachings into the wood, as well as into the (sometimes scarcely less wooden) heads of his pupils.

All this brings back my old student days at New Brunswick, before Herzog Hall was built or its hill of Jebus transformed into our theological Jerusalem, and when we used to meet Drs. Van Vranken, Ludlow and Campbell in the old brown stone College building. That was not so long ago, but both these strongholds of sound learning and doctrine have greatly lengthened their cords and strengthened their stakes since those days, without yielding one iota of the faith once delivered to the saints. I am sure I ought to be very good and true, and grow both in grace and knowledge, having been so favored alike at the beginning and at the latter end of my earthly pupilage. I have the fellowship of men who are as genial and child-like as they are profound in learning. I have the freest access to the noble Library, which stands as one of the monuments to the princely memory of James Lenox. On Sunday mornings I can step out of my window and cross the lawn to the Chapel, where I am sure to hear great themes presented by masters in Israel. In the quiet afternoons I love to steal into the "oratory," and listen to the familiar but delightful "conferences" which have been famous during all the history of this seminary. It is refreshing to come in contact with the young and ardent natures of these students, some of them sons of old friends, and to feel that when we who are in the front ranks have fallen in our turn, the banner of truth will still find stalwart hands to bear it on to its final victory.

Such is the pleasant home which the dear Lord has given me after my much wandering. It is the fashion to give names to our houses; and I have been disposed, in compliment to its previous inmates, as well as to my entire surroundings, to call this one "Westminster Cottage." But, as a witness of my fidelity to a still more excellent way, and of my intention to "hold the fort" against the insidious influences of my environment, I think I must name it

HEIDELBERG CASTLE.

F. N. ZABRISKIE.

PRINCETON, N. J., January, 1886.

Buried Alive.

THE late Dr. S. I. Prime once said that he had made it a rule for many years, on reading of any case of premature interment, to write to the postmaster or some other official of the place where the case was reported to have occurred, and enquire into the truth of the story. He added that in every case he found that the story was false. Recently a very painful incident of this kind was said in the public papers to have taken place at Woodstock, in Canada. A friend of ours, remembering Dr. Prime's remark, wrote to Woodstock and received in reply a copy of the Woodstock Sentinel-Review containing this paragraph:

Mr. Collins positively denies the truth of the story about his daughter's alleged burial alive. A denial of this rumor was published by us last week. The undertaker who was present at the funeral declares that there is not a shadow of foundation for the painful story started here and now going the rounds of the press.

One is disposed to wonder what pleasure anybody can find in circulating such gratuitous and malignant lies. They do no good to anyone, and often inflict severe pain upon the friends of the reported buried alive as well as upon many others who have recently followed a corpse to the tomb and are unable to resist a fearful apprehension that a sad mistake may have been made. It seems to us that reputable newspapers who have been imposed upon in this heartless way should set on foot inquiries to detect and expose the unscrupulous liars who thus sport with the living and the dead. If one offender were put in the pillory of public indignation, it might have a wholesome effect upon others.

TWO PAMPHLETS, recently published, deserve to be read by the citizens of this city and State especially, and by many of other towns and States. One is entitled, "The Museums in the Park: Shall They be Opened on Sunday?" the other is "Document XX. of The Evangelical Alliance for the United States," and is "Concerning so-called 'Freedom of Worship' Bills and other Assaults upon Civil and Religious Liberty." The first contains the address of Morris K. Jesup, Esq., President, on behalf of the Museum of Natural History, before the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of this city, in relation to a proposed Sunday opening of the museum. It furnishes a great deal of information in regard to the effect of opening places of amusement and such institutions as museums on the Sabbath, and contains also the opinions on Sabbath observance avowed by the Earl of Beaconsfield, Mr. Gladstone, Mr. Mundella, M.P., Louis Blanc and other eminent men. This pamphlet we suppose can be obtained at or through either of the Museums in the Park.

The other is a thorough exposure of the designs of Ultramontane Romanists upon the Charitable Institutions, the Public Schools, and upon the civil and religious liberty of our national and State organizations. The position taken is fully justified by facts, and the assaults opposed ought to be understood by all citizens. This pamphlet can be obtained we suppose at the office of the Evangelical Alliance, 32 Bible House, Astor Place.

A Dinner and a Kiss.

"I HAVE brought your dinner, father,"
The blacksmith's daughter said,
As she took from her arms a kettle,
And lifted its shining lid.
"There's not any pie or pudding,
So I will give you this ——;"
And upon his toil-worn forehead
She left a childish kiss.

The blacksmith tore off his apron,
And dined in happy mood,
Wondering much at the savor
Hid in his humble food;
While all about him were visions
Full of prophetic bliss,
But he never thought of the magic
In his little daughter's kiss.

While she with her kettle swinging,
Merrily trudged away,
Stopped at the sight of a squirrel,
Catching some wild bird's lay;
And I thought how many a shadow
Of life and fate we would miss,
If always our frugal dinners
Were seasoned with a kiss.

—Pittsburg Commercial.

The Virtues of Our Dutch Ancestors.

THE Holland Society, which consists of 200 gentlemen who are direct descendants of the original Dutch settlers on Manhattan Island, assembled for its first annual dinner in the Hotel Brunswick last month. The dining room was decorated with a remarkable and interesting collection of venerable family heirlooms, the like of which has probably never before been exhibited in this city. Judge Van Vorst presided. After the banquet Judge Van Wyck, Chauncey M. Depew, Robert B. Roosevelt, and William C. DeWitt responded to toasts. Rev. Dr. Henry J. Van Dyke, Jr., responded to "The Virtues of Our Dutch Ancestors," after this manner:

"Virtue is the only thing that lives long in this world; and virtue itself cannot live unless it carries ballast enough to keep it on a level keel, and self restraint enough to avoid those furies of righteousness which transform it into vice.

"In the possession of those virtues which are most agreeable to live with, the virtues which wash best, and wear longest, our Dutch ancestors are unexcelled, unrivalled. How else shall we account for their history? 'Nature,' says one of their own poets, 'has done nothing for Holland, and so the Hollanders had to do everything for themselves.' Their country is the mere fag end of Europe, an alluvium of French rivers, as Napoleon called it, an original collection of sand-banks and mud flats, less than half as large as New Jersey, fluctuating in size with the ebbing and flowing of the sea. Their most celebrated mountain is no higher than Trinity steeple, perhaps not quite so high. Yet the Dutch have written their name and their principles large on the page of universal history; have swept the seas with their fleets and planted vast colonies in every part of the habitable globe; have enlightened Europe with their universities, and founded the system of free schools; have kept alive the sacred flame of religious liberty, when every other civilized nation was puffing at it to blow it out. They have enriched literature with the name of Erasmus, the most illustrious man of his age, and science with the name of Leuwenhoek, the first of biologists, the discoverer of the capillary circulation of the blood; and law with the name of Grotius, the greatest of jurists; and the art of war with the names of William of Orange, and that old trump van Tromp, unconquerable and irresistible by land and sea. They have discovered, or at least perfected, the art of printing, and adorned the art of painting with the productions of Cuyp and Rysdael, Paul Potter and Rembrandt. They have solved the problems of commerce, and settled the laws of trade. And finally, within the last year it has been discovered that a Dutchman wrote a good part of "Paradise Lost," and that "Yankee Doodle" is an original Dutch song. Verily these be great deeds for a little people, and they have only been accomplished by the solid strength of the Dutch virtues.

"1. The first of these is courage. Dutch courage has been often laughed at. But Philip II. did not laugh at it. He swore. And Louis XIV. did not laugh. He wept and fled. Courage runs in the blood of the descendants of those ancient Frisians, who for centuries defied the power of imperial Rome to crush their indomitable spirit. They don't say much, but they fight like the fiend. They have no lust of conquest, but whoever has tried to conquer them has come back with wet feet and a sore head. For ages they have lived on a war footing with their great enemy the sea, shut up within their hollow land as in a fortress at whose gates the billows are forever bellowing in vain, looking forth from their narrow river-gates upon the cruel and treacherous hosts of the ocean, as the Spartans looked from the Pass of Thermopylæ upon the Persian phalanxes, and defying them with calm and patient heroism. This long, persistent, successful struggle with the most relentless of foes developed and confirmed a spirit of quiet and unconquerable bravery. So that when Spain, in the insatiable greed of her sullen pride, stretched out her dark wings to cover Europe with the shadow of her tyranny and the shame of her Inquisition, Holland alone,—a mere fly speck in her vast dominions, a mere mud-puddle at the extremity of the continent,—little Holland alone dared to resist her, in a desperate eighty-years' fight for liberty, the like of which the world has never seen before or since. Alva, Requesens, Don John of Austria, Alexander Farnese, all the great captains of oppression, march against her in vain. She resists, she conquers, she is free.

"2. The second of their virtues is conservatism. This may be briefly defined as the wisdom to know when you've got a good thing and the grit to hold on to it. Its physical counterpart is a talent for sitting down. And who that remembers Irving's description of the ship and the wife of the captain of the 'Goede Vrow'—a hundred feet long, a hundred feet wide, and copper bottomed—can doubt that sitting down is an exercise for which the Dutch are naturally adapted. They came to this island and saw that it was good and sat down upon it and waited, until now their trading post is the second commercial capital of the world, and their farms are worth a million dollars an acre. All things come to him who knows how to wait, provided he has something good to wait on. It is a grand thing to be able to make your mind sit down. A restless curiosity is the bane of progress. An itch for novelty is the curse of theology. It is better to be true than it is to be original. A little genuine old fashioned Christianity would do us more good than a thousand new isms. The world needs not so much a crop of daring and original seekers after truth as it needs plenty of men who will hold fast to the truths already known and the principles already established, and do their duty honestly and quietly in the sphere of life where God has placed them. And for this, in religion, in politics, and in social morality, our Dutch ancestors were ever famous. When the Dutchman gets religion, you know where to find him.

"3. One more virtue belongs peculiarly to our ancestors, and that is liberality. This does not mean indifference, which is the lack of convictions; nor toleration, which is a mere condescension to weakness. Liberality means a broad and healthy spirit, in which the love of truth mingles with the love of freedom, and the fear of the Lord coexists with charity toward men. 'Remember,' said Charles Sumner, 'that with the highest morality is the highest liberty.' I shall not dwell upon this virtue of the love of liberty, because I see it has been committed to more eloquent lips. I only desire to say that I believe intolerance is no mark of depth of conviction, but merely a symptom of spiritual dyspepsia. When you see a man ready to persecute in flesh or spirit those who do not believe as he does, you may be sure that his own creed has soured on his stomach. Our ancestors were not much afflicted in that way. And so it came to pass that when all the nations of Europe were divided into hostile camps, Holland was the one sanctuary of a free conscience. And when the New Englanders were smoking and hanging witches, the Dutchman smoked his pipe in peace and hung his hams in the chimney. And when the Constitutions of the thirteen original States were framed, the only one in which absolute religious liberty and equality were clearly, distinctly, and forever proclaimed and established, was that of the State of New York."

Future Retribution.

"THE DOCTRINE OF ENDLESS PUNISHMENT." By William G. T. Shedd, D.D. This is a valuable and timely volume. The truth it asserts and defends has been assailed of recent years with unusual virulence and in places where it was not expected. It is well, therefore, to have a fresh, compact and vigorous statement of its grounds. This has been given by Prof Shedd, who, after a short sketch of the history of the doctrine, sets forth first the Biblical, and then the rational argument in its favor. The argument from Scripture appeals both to the Old Testament and the New. In the latter case it is conclusive and unassailable, but in the former is less convincing. Dr. Shedd assigns two senses to Sheol, holding that in one class of passages it means hell, and in the other by metonymy, the grave in an abstract and general sense. We think that nearly all modern critical authorities agree in considering it to mean "the place of departed spirits," and that it gets any more determinate character as to joy or sorrow only from the context in any given case. The same is true of Hades. There is no space here to go into the argument, but we doubt much whether the acute and learned Professor will succeed in reversing the general judgment of scholars on this point. But, be that as it may, the book shows that beyond doubt the Word of God does teach that the punishment of the wicked is endless.

The Rational Argument was first published in the North American Review for February, 1885, and it made the heathen rage as nothing else had done for many years. We heard one cultivated man denounce it as blasphemy of the worst kind. Yet it has never been refuted. Some points may be open to exception, as, for example, the famous argument upon which Pres. Edwards insists, that sin being an infinite evil deserves an infinite, i. e., eternal punishment, —which, we think, is expressly or quietly dropped by most writers on the orthodox side. But the main point, to wit, that punishment in its very nature is neither calamity nor chastisement, but retribution, and therefore must be endless wherever no satisfaction is made, is established upon impregnable foundations. It is rooted in reason, confirmed by conscience and demanded by the moral sense in the view of all great crimes. That men often deny it is not strange. As Isaac Taylor said half a century ago, the quarrel of the world with God comes to its issue on this question. Anything else may be allowed; but this shuts every man up to the faith once delivered to the saints. There is no escape. If punishment be certain and endless, the Gospel is the only possible hope. But this impenitent men for various reasons are unwilling to accept. Hence their bitter and venomous hatred of the Scripture doctrine of Retribution, and the opprobrious terms in which it is denounced. Prof. Shedd deserves the thanks of the whole Christian community for his masterly defence of fundamental truth. (Chas. Scribner's Sons.)

Our Church.

We are thankful for items of Church News compactly stated; or for marked copies or clippings from local exchanges, which we would not otherwise see. To insure publication in next number, they must reach us by noon on Monday. A condensation of items is unavoidable

Special Religious Services.

ON the 7th of February such services will be commenced in accordance with the resolution of the Classis of New York, in the Prospect Hill Reformed Church, and it is hoped that much good will be accomplished through them. The Rev. Dr. Coe will preach the opening sermon on Sabbath evening, to be followed on every night of the following week (except Saturday) by the Rev. Wm. W. Clark. During the second week the Rev. Dr. T. C. Easton will have charge of the meetings. The singing, led by the Gospel choir, will form a feature of the services.

The church monthly paper has been widely distributed, as well as other printed invitations; placards will be posted in Elevated R.R. stations and store windows; every means has been taken to make the neighborhood acquainted with the character of the meetings and we are hopeful of blessing. The public and the friends of the Reformed Church are invited to be present.

The Services in the Collegiate Church.

THE special services, conducted by the Rev. Dr. Pentecost in the Forty eighth Street Collegiate Church, were last week largely attended in spite of the exceptionally bad weather. The afternoon meetings drew together perhaps the most numerous audiences and the deep interest of all who were present was very evident. Two of the "Bible Readings" were devoted to the exposition of the Twenty-third Psalm and its practical application to the Christian life. The third and fourth were occupied with a rapid and animated review of the various books of the Bible, designed to point out the particular spiritual motive or dominant idea in each. On Friday afternoon the power and willingness of Christ to raise dead souls to life and the necessity of faith in Him on the part of those who desire the conversion of others, were illustrated from the narrative of the raising of Lazarus.

The subjects of the evening addresses were: The Love of God in making us His Children (1 John 3: 1–3); God our Light; The Divine Ideal of Man exhibited in Jesus; The Unity of the Sanctifier and the Sanctified (Heb. 2: 11); and Christ our Hope. The fundamental truths of Christianity could hardly be presented with greater clearness and force than in these fervid and eminently Scriptural discourses. In the after-meetings several persons indicated by rising their decision to accept Christ as their Saviour, and all who were present seemed to realize the nearness and to feel the power of the Holy Spirit. The blessing so long sought has certainly come to this ancient church, as well as to many representatives of other churches who have attended these meetings. They are continued daily during the present week.

Revivals.

....ROCKY HILL, N. J.—The Holy Spirit has dealt very graciously with the people of the Reformed Church under the pastoral care of the Rev. J. E. Crane. A great revival is now going on and over forty have come over on the Lord's side. A goodly number of these are Sunday-school scholars and the heads of families, and include persons from ten to eighty years of age.

The meetings commenced during the Week of Prayer, and it was soon evident that the Spirit was in the midst, and that to bless, although no special interest was felt until the second week, when His workings were especially made manifest.

This is the only great revival this church has had since 1876, and its effects have shown themselves greatly.

The young people are now organizing prayer-meetings, and it is hoped that the good work will continue for a long time. The pastor has been especially faithful both in prayer and personal labor, making calls among his people, persuading those who were not Christians, and strengthening those who were; in fact, has labored incessantly for the good cause, and now feels abundantly blest in the rich harvest of souls. S.

....POMPTON PLAINS, N. J.—A deep religious awakening began in this church with the Week of Prayer. The week following three meetings were held in the lecture room, when the Holy Spirit was so manifestly and powerfully present, and such a profound interest was developed, that meetings were continued every night the third week, and are still in progress. The pastor, the Rev. H. W. Teller, who assumed the charge about a year ago, conducts all the meetings, usually preaching a sermon, which is followed by prayer and conference. About fifty persons have so far expressed a deep concern about their souls' salvation, of whom thirty-five have professed conversion. It is believed that a thorough work of grace is being wrought in the hearts of all the anxious, and that they will soon find Christ and rejoice in the Christian's hope. The pastor had a choir organized of fifteen young people to lead the singing at the extra meetings, eight of whom are now among the converts. The work began among the young men. The entire church membership is revived, there being a remarkably uniform depth of religious feeling and experience.

....BETHLEHEM, N. Y.—A quiet work of grace has been going on among the people of the First Reformed Church. At the last communion nine were received into the church on confession of faith, all of them being young adult people.

During the past two weeks special services have been held by the pastor, Rev. J. P. Davis, at Cedar Hill, which is within the bounds of the congregation. The Spirit's presence has been manifested in the hopeful conversion of fourteen young people, all of whom are Sunday-school scholars. Deep earnestness prevails and the work is still going on in spite of the inclement weather. P.

....COBLESKILL, N. Y.—At a special meeting of the Classis of Schoharie at Cobleskill, N. Y., on Tuesday, Jan. 26th, 1886, a Reformed church with twenty-one members was organized in that growing village. Rev. J. G. Fagg, who has been laboring there with so much success, has consented to remain, and probably will be installed pastor of this church, and also of that at Lawyersville. S. C.

....THE CLASSIS OF RARITAN at a special meeting held Jan. 26th, 1886, dissolved the pastoral relation between Rev. Garret Wyckoff, Jr., and the Reformed Church of Clifton Station, (Annandale,) to take effect Jan. 31st; and he was dismissed, at his own request, to the Classis of Montgomery.

Also, it made arrangements for holding a Foreign and Domestic Missionary Convention within its bounds at an early day, in order to interest pastors, consistories and people more thoroughly in both departments of church work. S. C.

....THE REV. J. H. WYCKOFF, a missionary of the Reformed Church in India, spent the 3d Sunday in January in Charleston, S. C., as the guest of his old college chum, the Rev. W. H. Lawrence, pastor of Centenary Methodist Episcopal Church. This church has 2,000 members, and has, therefore, the largest membership of any church of that denomination. Mr. Wyckoff preached there in the afternoon to the gratification of a large audience. He preached also in the morning at the French Huguenot Church, where the Rev. Dr. C. C. Vedder, once pastor of the Reformed Church of Schenectady, N. Y., now ministers. Through the courtesy of the News and Courier, of Charleston, one of the leading dailies of the South, Mr. Wyckoff succeeded in creating considerable interest in that part of the country in the mission work of the Reformed Church in India. L.

....PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The Second Church, although now without a pastor, is evidently in a prosperous condition. According to their last annual report, fifty members had been added to the church, all on confession except four, making an active membership of 427. The church contributed for congregational purposes $7 200, and for religious and benevolent purposes $1,800, a total of $9,000. The Board of Foreign Missions received from them $300; Domestic Missions $106; Publication $63; Education $63; Widows' Fund $24; Church Building Fund $50; and Disabled Ministers' Fund $5. The Sabbath-school collected from all sources $854; the infant school $38 23; and their mission school $163 from its own members. The Dorcas Society collected $113 50 for their good work. A box of clothing, valued at $160, was sent to a missionary in Michigan by the ladies, and through their foreign missionary society $139 was sent to the Woman's Board. The Young People's Missionary Society gathered $200. The Sewing School collected $147. This society has 22 teachers and 150 little girls in sewing classes. The Sabbath schools are well equipped, and enroll 866 members. The main school was visited a few Sabbaths ago by Dr. Jacob West, Secretary of the Board of Domestic Missions, and after an address from him, without any appeal, the classes of the school announced a voluntary offering, and in a few minutes the sum of $36.50 was placed in the Secretary's hands to buy shingles for and stop cracks in the churches of our brethren in the West. The spirit manifested in this little offering was one of earnest love and zeal.

....SPRING LAKE, ILL.—The Rev. P. J. Leenhouts, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Green Valley, Ill., writes that he visited Spring Lake last summer and found the building of the Reformed Church looking "very desolate and in need of repairs. The pastor and members took in the situation, raised the money and went to work. Their efforts were a success. The interior of the church has been papered, painted, and a new pulpit has been added, affording a very pleasing appearance. The outside we understand will also receive the necessary repairs.

"Some six weeks ago we invited the Reformed Bishop of Spring Lake, Rev. Frank A. Force, to visit us. He came and remained two weeks. At the end of that time we closed our revival meetings in the Green Valley Presbyterian Church, and our elder proposed a vote of thanks to the Reformed pastor 'for the able and instructive sermons which had been delivered during the days of his sojourn among us.'"

....A SHELTERLESS FLOCK.—Rev. W. G. Baas, the active missionary of the Classis of Geneva, entreats that the congregation at Palmyra and that at Ontario, N. Y., be put upon the list of flocks in want of shelter. About 60 families of Hollanders live in the neighborhood of Palmyra, some of whom have been gained for the Reformed Church, but the majority are still godless. The men are farm hands and have little money, and have never been trained to give. The services are held in the chapel of the Presbyterian church on Sabbath afternoons; occasionally they interfere with the arrangements of the church and are necessarily interrupted. The congregation is steadily advancing, however, toward the position of an independent church. Help to the extent of about $1 500 is needed to put up a church building, and such a place of meeting would greatly promote the prosperity of the enterprise. The want of a parsonage is also very seriously felt.

....MILWAUKEE, WIS.—The church a week ago presented a handsome parlor suit of furniture to the pastor, Rev. J. Broek.

....JAMAICA, L. I.—The installation of Rev. F. Hartig as pastor of the St. Paul's German Evangelical Church, took place on Wednesday evening, Jan. 27th. Rev. A. I. Martine, President of Classis, presided and read the form; Scripture was read and prayer offered by Rev. A. Wanderer, of Foster's Meadows. The sermon was preached by Rev. H. C. Gruhnert, of Orange, N. J., text, Rom. 10: 17, and Rev. C. D. F. Steinfuhrer, of Astoria, delivered the charges. COM.

....THE DAY OF PRAYER FOR COLLEGES was observed in Rutgers College, New Brunswick, by suitable and impressive services. The Rev. William M. Taylor, D.D., of the Broadway Tabernacle, N. Y., preached in Kirkpatrick Chapel at 10 45 A M. His subject was: "The Narrow Path;" his sermon was very interesting and instructive, and especially adapted to students, or to such as stand on the threshold of life. Drs. W. H. Campbell, John De Witt, T. C. Easton, M. H. Hutton and Revs. Handley, Taylor and Applegarth participated in the services. A large congregation was in attendance.

In the afternoon at 3 o'clock there was a prayer and consecration meeting of the students and faculties of the Seminary, the College and the Grammar School; and in the evening a union prayer-meeting at the Second Reformed Church.

Gleanings from our Exchanges.

....The Rev. A. W. McGibbon, pastor of the church at Shokan, N. Y., has accepted a call from the Presbyterian Church of Wappinger's Falls, and will preach his last sermon to his present charge on the second Sabbath of February.

....The meetings in the chapel of the church at Peapack, N. J., still continue. An unusual interest is manifest Forty six have expressed a desire to lead a Christian life and many more are seriously considering the question.

....The Rev. F. M. Kipp, of Harlingen, N. J., has received from his people a donation of over $100.

....Rev J. P. Searle, pastor of the First Church of Somerville, N J., announced to his congregation on Sunday, Jan 24th, that the preceding Tuesday had been the fifth anniversary of his installation over the church. He also made a brief statement of the statistics of the five years, from whence we have obtained the following: The additions to the membership of the church have been 174, of which 76 were on confession. The losses have been 94; 41 by death. The net gains have been 80. One hundred and one funeral services have been conducted and in 40 others the pastor has been called upon to assist; 30 couples were married; 44 children and 18 adults were baptized. The pastor preached 438 times and made 282 miscellaneous addresses. The congregation raised for benevolent purposes $4,400, and for congregational purposes $17,500.

....AMOY, CHINA.—Dr. Talmage writes Dec. 24th: "We arrived at Amoy (from Australia) on the 14th of November. Since our return we have been able to work pretty hard without apparent detriment to health. Mr. and Mrs. Pitcher are zealously at work on this Amoy language and are making good progress. Mr. Rapalje, to the great joy of us all (native Christians as well as foreign) arrived at Amoy day before yesterday. Two weeks ago, (Dec. 9th), we were delighted with a visit of a few hours of Mr. and Mrs. Elbert B. Monroe, of Southport, Conn. I think he still retains his connection with the 29th Street Church, New York."

Prayer for Colleges.

THE services at the New York University upon the Day of Prayer were of an impressive character. The preacher, Rev. Dr. Ashbel Green Vermilye, is a graduate of nearly forty and six years standing. His sermon was evidently especially prepared for this hour, and commanded the deep attention of the students. Very few of the undergraduates, now numbering over 100, were absent. They represented many regions—Southern Russia, Western Asia, the remotest points in Europe, Eastern Massachusetts, California, New Orleans in the United States. Rev. Drs. Edward Hopper and Henry M. Baird, with Vice-Chancellor MacCracken, conducted the devotional exercises. New hymn books have been recently introduced and excellent singing followed, led by a large choir. The College Christian Association held an hour of prayer. It is in a living, earnest condition.

One Hundred and Two Years of Life.

MRS. ANNA MARIA, widow of Nathaniel Ray Greene, son of General Nathaniel Greene, of Revolutionary fame, died at Greendale, the residence of her son, Dr Nathaniel Greene, on Sunday at the age of one hundred and two years, two months and nine days. Mrs. Greene is a native of Newport. Her father was Ethan Clark, of a family prominent in early Newport history, and her mother was a daughter of Hon. Samuel Ward, Colonial Governor of Rhode Island from 1638 to 1676. Mrs. Greene passed her youth in the house where she was born, now occupied by Mrs. William Ennis, on Pelham street. Portions of her married life were spent in East Greenwich and Georgia, and about forty years ago the Greenes returned to Newport, and settled in Middletown, about five miles from the city, where since the death of her husband, about 1858, Mrs. Greene lived to the day of her death.

Mrs. Greene, until within a few days of her death, retained her mental faculties, and although feeble with age, her mind was clear and bright, and until within a very few years she plied her needle in making little gifts for her numerous friends. She took great delight in literature, read diligently, and, being possessed of a wonderful memory, had always a vast store of historical knowledge, which made a visit to her a pleasure indeed.

The 100th anniversary of her birth was observed two years ago last November, in a quiet manner by her friends, and on that occasion, although in a rather feeble state, she received her callers with great cordiality and welcomed them with many a cheering word. Until within a few years she had been in the habit of riding to Newport, but of late her enfeebled health would not allow this, and she remained at home. Mrs. Greene was always a Christian woman, and during her residence in East Greenwich was a member of the Presbyterian Church, and since she lived in Middletown she was a member of the United Congregational Church in this city, where her funeral will take place on Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock. Her death removes a connecting link between the days of the colonists and the present. The period of her existence covers vast changes in every sphere of life. The contrast between 100 years ago and today is too great to contemplate. The country at the time of Mrs. Greene's birth, and that of to day, is the same only in name.—Newport Daily News, a January number, exact date not given.

Irish Presbyterians and Home Rule.

THE Presbytery of Belfast on January 8th embodied their opinions in the following language, adopted unanimously:

"1. They declare their undiminished and undivided loyalty to the person and throne of her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria. 2. They declare their strong and deliberate conviction that the Legislative Union between Great Britain and Ireland is necessary to the best interests of Ireland and essential to the integrity of the Empire, and that any legislation tending to dissever, or even to modify, that Union would be fraught with danger to the lives and liberties, and social and political rights, of a large number of her Majesty's loyal subjects residing in various districts in Ireland. 3. They declare their belief that any legislation in the direction of Home Rule would be at any time impolitic, and that in the present state of Ireland, when the Repeal of the Union between Great Britain and Ireland is demanded—and when, as means to that end, moral and legal obligations are repudiated—a widespread system of intimidation has been organized and human life has been recklessly sacrificed—it would be disastrous and criminal, and would only tend to place additional power in the hands of those who are not the true friends of Ireland, whilst they are the avowed enemies of British rule. 4. They declare their strong sympathy with many Protestants and Roman Catholics who are scattered over the disturbed districts in Ireland and who are suffering severely in many ways from the reign of terror which prevails 5. They declare that, whilst as Presbyterians they are the advocates of civil and religious liberty, and recognize the claim of the Roman Catholics of Ireland to equal rights and privileges as British subjects, they will oppose, by every means in their power, demands of the Roman Catholic hierarchy for such representation and control in the matter of education as would be tantamount to political and religious ascendancy in this country, and would inflict serious injustice and hardship upon other denominations as well as their own. 6. In the present serious and sad condition of Ireland they exhort the congregations under their jurisdiction to unite in earnest prayer that God would so guide the Government, the Parliament, and the people, that the principles of truth and righteousness may regulate the action of the Legislature and of the community; that brotherly love may take the place of political alienation; and that the blessings of peace and prosperity may be secured for our beloved land. 7. They desire that this declaration shall be read to the congregations under the care of the Presbytery; that copies of it shall be sent to the members of the present and late Government, and to the members of Parliament; and that it be given to the public through the press."

The following is a part of the paper unanimously adopted by the Presbytery of Dublin at a special meeting last month:

"2. We believe that any action on the part of our Legislature aiming at the separation of Ireland from Great Britain or tending in the direction of such separation would be fraught with irreparable injury to Ireland itself, and be a source of the gravest peril to the Empire.

"3. In common with multitudes of our countrymen of all classes and creeds, we view with sorrow and detestation the open and concealed violation of moral principle, and the consequently lawless intimidation, outrage, and crime which have brought such shame on our country, and dishonor on the name of religion in connection with the recent agitation.

"4. That, while not attributing to the great bulk of our countrymen the design of stirring up religious strife in the community, we are, at the same time, profoundly convinced that what is called 'Irish independence" could not be obtained without calling for the strongest religious antagonism.

"5. Fully recognizing as we do the fact that recent legislation, while removing many undoubted grievances and wrongs, has conferred important and exceptional benefits on large numbers of the Irish people, and that the leading parties in the State are desirous of dealing fairly and generously with all Irish questions, there is, in our view, nothing to justify or even explain the present demand for separate government."

The minute, adopted last month by the Presbytery of Limavady, is in part as follows:

"That the same sense of justice and fair play which led us to advocate equal rights and privileges for our Roman Catholic fellow-countrymen now leads us to resist determinedly everything like supremacy on their part, whether in matters educational, ecclesiastical, or civil; that if there be any grievances or disabilities of a social, ecclesiastical, or political character remaining with them or with us, we are fully persuaded that the constitutional action through the British Parliament which has already won for Ireland the Magna Charta of her liberties will prove thoroughly adequate to sweep off the last vestige of injustice and oppression; that an independent Irish Parliament would not only be useless but impracticable, as two sovereigns might as well attempt to sit on the same throne as two independent Parliaments to make laws within the same realm; that such a Parliament would be unjust and tyrannical, for the Protestant minority, amounting to almost a third of the population, and possessing three fourths of Ireland's wealth and intelligence, would be virtually unrepresented and powerless to resist even the heaviest taxation and the grossest oppression; that an Irish Legislature, made up chiefly of Roman Catholic members of no statesmanship, humble social position, and little toleration, could never hope to win or retain the confidence of the Protestants of the country, and could never expect their tyrannical behests to be obeyed; that the natural and necessary result of an independent Irish Parliament must be the utter and complete separation of Great Britain and Ireland, or a measure tantamount to the dismemberment of the Empire and the absolute ruin of our own unfortunate island; and that the persistent and overbearing policy of the so-called Nationalist party must eventuate in a civil war, bitter and bloody, which could only be terminated by the reconquering of Ireland, and her treatment in future as a subdued province."

The General Outlook.

....Mr. D. L. Moody opened in Chicago on Jan. 16th, a very interesting series of meetings, extending through eight days At every session in the afternoon for women, and the evening for men, the Chicago Avenue Church, the one established through his efforts and usually spoken of as "Moody's Church," was packed with people. The Interior, commenting on the meetings while they were in progress, said: "Daily his audiences are mainly composed of working women and men—the great middle class, who constitute the very bone and sinew of our population. His message is the old Gospel of God's love in sending His Son to be the Saviour of lost souls. Time and experience have increased his power over his hearers. He gives old truths a fresh setting, and his simple, familiar illustrations seem to have gathered new force and beauty. He hits sinners very hard, but he shows the love of Christ for them to be very tender and His grace to be all-abounding to the chiefest of them. The people hear him gladly and with profit. Said a lady, 'He gave me a good many things to remember.' His sermon on Wednesday afternoon on 'Assurance,' and Thursday on 'Come,' addressed to women, and that on Wednesday evening to men, on 'The Law of God,' were sermons of great power, and made a deep impression on hundreds of the great multitude assembled to hear him. The inquiry meetings which followed showed that many hearts had been pierced by the arrows of truth. We cannot speak of results. The good seed has been sown broadcast, and much of it. Its fruits will appear in due time. The meetings conducted by him closed on the evening of the 24th. Mr. Moody left our city on Monday last for Knoxville, Tenn., where Mr. Sankey will join him, and together they will labor in southern cities during the winter."

News of the Week.

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 27.—Lord Salisbury, Premier of England, was defeated on the Colling's amendment to the Queen's address, in regard to land tenure; the vote was 329 to 250. It is now thought that Mr. Gladstone will be called upon to form a new Cabinet very soon, as the Government will resign....Greece has replied to the second note from the Powers and refuses to disarm; her fleet have sailed away from Athens to keep from being blockaded by the English. ... Very damaging charges are being made against the American Consul at Samoa.... Rebels in Spain attempted to destroy the railway crossing on the mountains in the Province of Jaen....There was a severe loss by fire in Philadelphia. A part of the St. Cloud Hotel and half a business block were burned; the loss is over $500,000.... In the U. S. Senate eulogies were made on Mr. Hendricks....The split in the Ohio Senate continues. Each party meets separately and claims to be the Senate....Damaging floods in California and snow-slides with loss of life in Colorado are reported. ....There are further facts brought to light of the Harlem bridge job ...A member of Parliament is sued for attempting to wreck a railroad. ..An earthquake was felt slightly along the Hudson River valley....The State Senate has resolved to investigate the Broadway railroad franchise—$2,500,000 to be accounted for. Who got it?

THURSDAY, 28.—Lord Salisbury formally resigns. The entire press is opposed to the idea of the appointment in the new Cabinet of Lord Granville to be Foreign Secretary. ....A train of cars was attacked in Italy by brigands and one passenger killed and three wounded ...M. Girod Renaud, of New York, ascended in a balloon at Brest yesterday; the balloon was driven out to sea and disappeared....Two thousand striking employés in iron works at Decazeville, France, seized their manager and threw him out of a window and trampled him to death ... Coal miners are refusing to yield in Pennsylvania....A shower of dust from a clear sky occurred at Austin, Texas, yesterday. It began in the afternoon and continued through half of the night. The dust effected the lungs and throat, causing hoarseness in some instances....A family was found frozen to death in a wagon near Montgomery City, Mo....General Shaler's trial ended....An elephant race took place yesterday on the public square in Cleveland, O. His trainer ran by his side, applying the prod when necessary, until the blood was flowing freely from his wounds. The trainer was arrested for cruelty to animals.... The Grant Monument Committee report $114,229.75.

FRIDAY, 29.—Lord Salisbury dined with the Queen and is said to have advised her to summon the Marquis of Hartington to form a Cabinet, but in all probability Mr. Gladstone will be the one who will be called.... Great want is experienced in New Brunswick, Can., because of the failure of the fishing firms of Robins & Co. and LeBoutillier Bros.; starvation seems to be facing many ...Prince Bismarck made a speech in the German Reichstag, explaining the reason for the expulsion of the Poles....Two families, consisting of nine persons, were found frozen to death on the plains....The conflict in the Ohio Senate continues....A bill was introduced in the legislature at Albany to repeal the Harlem bridge bill....The invitation of the Baltimore & Ohio R. R. to the New Jersey legislature to visit the site of the Arthur Kill bridge was declined ...The Produce Exchange declared against silver coinage ...The jury in General Alexander Shaler's case failed to agree....Efforts are being made to compromise the trouble in the coke regions of Pennsylvania. ..Senator Sherman introduced a bill to stop the coinage of silver dollars, but to buy silver as at present, make it into bars and issue certificates of not less than $10, for the bullion value of the bars

SATURDAY, 30.—The Queen has summoned Mr. Gladstone to Osborn, to form a new Cabinet....The discussion in the German Reichstag over the Poles continues. They deny any attempt to eliminate German influence, but confess a desire to establish a Polish Government.

(Continued on page twelve.)

Our Contributors.

"To Stand."

BY GEORGE S. DWIGHT.

GRANT me a patient courage, Lord!
Sore wounded and with broken sword,
Beset on every hand;
A lonely and forsaken man,
Far at the doubtful battle's van
To stand!

Weary, athirst and well nigh spent,
O! for a speedy succor sent
From out Thy royal band!
It is so hard, in wreck and rout,
'Mid dying faith and living doubt,
To stand!

Yet o'er the conflict's din and heat,
Thy golden trumpet soundeth sweet:
"Yield not, my son, but stand!"
It is not mine to say Thee, "Nay;"
Mine but to hearken, to obey—
To stand!

Then if I perish, let me die
Fronting my foes right valiantly;
Thy colors in my hand!
Since death is but the joyful word
That calleth me before my Lord
To stand!

The Heretic Priest; A Tale of Reformation Days in the Netherlands.

(Translated from the Dutch of E. Gerdes, for the Christian Intelligencer, by Rev. Daniel Van Pelt.)

CHAPTER V.—A NIGHT OF PERIL.

FLORIS was greatly astonished that the few simple words he had spoken should have had such an influence upon this stranger. He did not know that this same man, although in the service of the monastery, the very stronghold of Romish superstition—so strange are the ways of the Lord—had given a reception to the seeds of truth in his heart. The new life had begun within him, and was waiting but for favorable opportunities for further expansion.

A few powerful strokes of the oars brought the boat out into the stream, and when they had reached the centre of the river the boatman lifted the oars out of the water and gave his exclusive attention to observing the youth. The moon appearing through a rift in the clouds afforded him a chance of looking Floris full in the face. It seemed to him that he had seen this face before. He reflected a moment where he could have met this young peddler, and soon came to a satisfactory conclusion. He laid his hand upon Floris' shoulder, and quietly remarked:

"If I am not mistaken, you are the pupil of the parish priest. I have frequently seen you assisting him at the altar. In spite of your disguise I recog nize you, and I think also that I can guess what are your intentions. Tell me frankly and sincerely before God, have you not come to accept the new faith, and is it not this which taught you to speak the words you just now addressed to me?"

This question brought Floris into no small perplexity. To confess the truth might place his life in danger. He did not know the man who put the ques tion; it might have been intended to condemn him by his own mouth. While he was still hesitating, the man continued:

"I see that you do not trust me. But I will tell you something that will set your mind at rest. I rowed Philip Cruize across this river this afternoon, and he was more outspoken than you are."

"Philip Cruize! my uncle? Did you see him? And what did he say to you?"

"In few but telling words he unfolded to me the great truths of salvation, which before were hid to me, but are now clear as the day; and what he told me satisfied a longing my heart had long felt, and which the old Church never fulfilled."

Floris was now indeed completely reassured. After a few moments joyful conversation about their mutual and new-found hopes, he said:

"And did my uncle tell you what his plans were?"

"He hardly knew himself. He had some idea, if he could get out of this province, of going to Flanders and thence cross the borders into France and join the Huguenot army. But what is that? Do I not hear voices on the other side of the river?"

The boatman placed the oars in the water, and they both listened sharply. Ere-long they saw the light of a torch, and several men moving about on the opposite shore. They observed them entering a boat and pushing over towards the side of the river which Floris and his new friend had just left. The latter slowly and noiselessly rowed towards the party, yet keeping at a safe distance. As the boats ap proached each other the oarsman's experienced eye could plainly make out that it was a detachment of Spanish soldiers, their shining helmets reflecting the fitful light of the torch. Both he and Floris also soon recognized the loud harsh voice of Father Josephus. This made them the more careful to avoid an encounter with the other boat, which was less difficult as the rain now came down in ever increasing showers, so that soon they could scarcely see a boat's length ahead of them. Distant thunder, too, began to be heard, and its rapid approaches indicated that a severe storm was about to burst over this very spot.

Suddenly our friends were startled by loud cries proceeding from the other boat.

"What can they be shouting at?" inquired Floris, in surprise.

"I do not know," replied his companion. "They must be in danger. I have noticed, too, that for some time they have made no advance, but remain on the same spot."

At this instant a blinding flash of lightning broke from the black clouds overhead, followed by an almost instantaneous clap of thunder. Our friends sent up a silent prayer to God for preservation in the fearful storm that was now fairly upon them. Its increasing fury seemed to have made the other party desperate, for their boat was now seen to move and they were distinctly heard to cry for help.

And indeed they were in great straits. Father Josephus, with an officer of the Inquisition and a band of soldiers guarding a prisoner, had all ventured into a boat which was not meant to hold half their number. It was not till too late that they discovered the mistake into which the monk's undue haste and the soldiers' inexperience had led them.

"Captain," shouted the Inquisitor above the roar of the elements, "come on my side of the boat, for I am afraid your weight causes it to lean too much on that side."

"Oh, oh, oh!" cried Father Josephus. "What will become of me? Holy St. Luke deliver me! I shall walk barefoot to Brussels and devote six tapers to the cathedral, if I escape. Be quiet, soldiers—don't you see how the boat rocks? Another such a movement and we shall upset. Row, row hard, that we may get to the other side before sinking. And our prisoner, the peddler, is he securely bound?"

"No, worthy Father," replied the captain, "we could not keep him bound. We could not carry him into the boat, and thus we had to loose the cords. But he is well guarded, and—"

The boat here gave a sudden plunge to one side. One of the soldiers slipped; another who sought to stop his fall, fell against the torchbearer, and before the latter could catch hold of something to steady himself he fell overboard, torch in hand—and they were left in complete darkness.

"Help, help," cried the torch-bearer, who evidently could not swim. Two of his comrades, thinking only of saving him, bent over the side of the boat. The current, however, had already swept him beyond their reach; by their sudden movement a large amount of water was shipped, several of the soldiers could not prevent themselves from rolling over to the same side and the boat would certainly have been upset if the Inquisitor and captain had not sprang to the opposite side and thus restored the equilibrium.

At this instant another blinding flash of lightning, accompanied by a simultaneous and much louder thunderclap, showed that the worst of the storm was upon them.

"The prisoner, the peddler!" cried the Inquisitor; "he is trying to escape, hold him, hold him!"

But it was too late. The peddler's quick eye had seen by the last lightning-flash another boat at no great distance, and unobserved by the soldiers, who had enough to do to think of their own safety, he had thrown himself overboard, and was swimming away with all his might. Philip Cruize (for the reader has doubtlessly recognized him to be the peddler) was an expert swimmer, and never came the accomplishment in better stead.

The boat that contained Floris and his companion was several yards away, but the boatman did not dare approach any nearer, lest the other party should discover him. Floris, who had heard the outcry raised at the escape of the peddler, and who but too well conjectured who he was, seized a long stout rope that lay in the bottom of the boat and held himself in readiness to throw it towards the swimmer as soon as he could discover where he was. It was not long before a movement could be detected in the water. Floris threw the rope in that direct on. Philip Cruize, who could not see the exact position of the boat, felt the rope strike his body; rightly supposing it was thrown by a friendly hand he took hold of it and was soon drawn by the boatman into the boat.

"To whom do I owe this kindness," he began to say.

"Hush, uncle," whispered Floris. "Don't you know me? I am Floris Berthem."

Philip Cruize with difficulty suppressed a cry of surprise and joy.

"Help! help!" loudly sounded the cry from the other boat. "We perish, we are upsetting, we are sinking!"

Another flash of lightning revealed the terrible fate of Philip Cruize's persecutors. In their effort to secure the escaping prisoner, several soldiers at the same time had pressed to the side of the boat, forgetting the extreme peril into which a similar movement had brought them just before. This time the catastrophe could not be averted; a volume of water dashed into the boat, and it began to sink rapidly. Frightful cries of drowning men filled the air, and sounded above the fury of the storm. Gladly would our friends have rowed to the scene of disaster and afforded what help they could, but they knew this would have been but to add their own death to the number. They lingered near the spot, however, to assist any stragglers that might succeed in keeping up long enough to reach them.

While watching with this benevolent purpose, a heavy object struck the bow of the boat. Swift hands plunged into the water and seized the gown of a monk. It was no other than Father Josephus. The wide folds of his monk's attire had buoyed him up for a time, but it was now getting fast soaked through and would have all the more certainly dragged him to the bottom, if help had not been at hand. He had already become unconscious.

"Hold him by the feet," called the boatman to Philip Cruize, "and I'll take hold of the hood."

With much difficulty, and only by the exertion of their utmost strength, did they succeed in drawing him into the boat.

"Is he alive?" asked Floris.

"I cannot tell," replied his uncle, examining his heart.

"Lay him out straight in the bottom of the boat, and rub his chest with your hand. I will make haste to reach the shore."

So saying he seized his oars and his powerful strokes soon brought them to the further side of the river.

(To be continued.)

Good English.

BY JOHN ALONZO FISHER.

IT would be a happy augury for the future of the English language if all journalists would emulate William Cullen Bryant, the lamented editor of the New York Evening Post, in jealousy for the purity of our native tongue. Among the forms of speech that he rigidly excluded from his journal were the following:

Balance for remainder; banquet for dinner or supper; casket for coffin; claimed for asserted; couple for two; deceased for died; devouring element for fire; endorse for approve; graduate for is graduated; gents for gentlemen; lady for wife; last for latest; lengthy for long; leniency for lenity; loan or loaned for lend or lent; located for situated; Mrs. President A., Mrs. General B., Mrs. Dr. C., and all similar titles, which belong like their hats and coats, to the husbands and not to the wives; pants for pantaloons or trousers; parties for persons; poetess for poet; portion for part; posted for informed; quite for very (as in "quite large"); Rev. and Hon. for the Rev. and the Hon.; standpoint for point of view; state for say; and talent for talents or ability.

Mr. Bryant's index of prohibited words include a few that many good critics would omit, as, for example, "reliable." This word, for which Mr. Bryant substituted "trustworthy," is elaborately and ably defended in a separate volume by Mr. Fitzedward Hall, a British scholar of American birth. Mr. Hall cites many words of good repute whose formation is analagous to that of "reliable." This answers the objection that the only form of a derivative adjective justified by analogy is an intolerable one, viz., rely-on-able. Another injured word is "taboo," which the example of Burke and other good writers has made respectable. But, in the main, the judgments of the great journalist will stand the tests of criticism.

Balance, claimed, party, state as a verb, endorse, posted, and in that line, are commercial or legal terms that ought to be kept to their proper uses.

Banquet, casket and devouring element are examples of the high-sounding terms that the average newspaper reporter seems to think necessary for the adequate expression of his thoughts.

As to graduate and the preferable expression, is graduated, (i. e., is graded,) criticism and the general usage are at variance. It cannot be called a gross blunder to say that Scholasticus will graduate next year, nor should it be looked upon as an affectation to say that he will be graduated.

Gents and pants are universal barbarisms. The hopes of the purist languish when he sees the course of the perambulating bill-poster marked by these dreadful vocables. Yes, vocables; they are not words. One might as well say that lades wear gaits, as to say that gents wear pants. Ladies wear gaiters. Gentlemen wear pantaloons or trousers. Just here let us frown upon the absurd affectation that is substituting salesladies for salesgirls and saleswomen. The next affectation will be salesgentlemen. There are no nobler titles than man, woman and wife.

Quite means wholly, entirely. It should not be used as a synonym for very.

Reverend and Honorable are adjectives that should be preceded by the definite article, as are the analogous adjectives in the following sentence: The good pupils were commended by the kind teacher for their attentions to the unfortunate janitor. Now read the preceding sentence without the definite articles, and you will see the error involved in a reference to [the] Rev. Mr. Smith. Many persons, even writers for the press, are unconsciously guilty of discourtesy to clergymen by addressing them as Reverend, but without the definite article, without initials, and even without the conventional "Mr." They write, for example, of "Rev. Brown" and "Rev. Hall" instead of "the Rev. J. D. Brown" and "the Rev. Mr. Hall."

The mongrel word, standpoint, is nearly if not quite justified by usage; but in this, as in all doubtful cases, it is better to err on the side of purism. Wherever it is possible to do so, substitute an unobjectionable synonym. In other words, plow around the stumps.

Be critical, but be not hypercritical. Small knowledge breeds verbal conceits and affectations. It makes one tolerant of bad English to learn that of all the words and phrases condemned by the critics, there is probably not one that has not received the sanction of usage at the hands of some careful and scholarly author. Herein there is real solace for conversationists and for public speakers that are painfully conscious of their grammatical and rhetorical faults. Such persons are consoled and benefitted by the perusal of Professor Hodgson's "Errors in the Use of English," a volume of bad English compiled from the works of eminent writers.

Finical talkers make uncomfortable hearers. Over-nice writers, orators, readers and hearers cheat themselves out of much satisfaction, and expose themselves to the ironic thrusts of Cowper:

> "Manner is all in all, whate'er is writ,
> The substitute for genius, sense and wit;"

or the sarcastic ridicule of Pope, who, in his "Essay on Criticism," says:

> "Others for language all their care express,
> And value books, as women men, for dress;
> Their praise is still—'The style is excellent,'
> The sense they humbly take upon content."

JOHNS HOPKINS UNIVERSITY, BALTIMORE.

Dr. Shedd's New Book.

BY GEO. S. BISHOP, D.D.

DR. WM. G. T. SHEDD has again laid the Protestant Church under deep and lasting obligation by his work entitled, "The Doctrine of Endless Punishment," which appears with the new year and in which, beside his earlier article in the North American Review, he incorporates a masterly and exhaustive exegesis of "Hades" and "Sheol."

Dr. Shedd's position is in general that of the Reformers, which finds the root thought of "Sheol" in "retribution" and makes it mean, in fact, the Second Death. Dr. Shedd does not hesitate here to cross swords squarely with the Revisers "who deny that Sheol means 'hell' in the sense of 'the place of torment,' and assert that it 'signifies the abode of departed spirits and corresponds to the Greek,' pagan, 'Hades, or the Under-world. (Preface to the Revised Old Testament.")

Dr. Shedd argues, in opposition to this, that "Sheol is a place to which the wicked are sent, in distinction from the good;" that "the Old Testament knows nothing of a Sheol that is partly an evil, and partly a good. The Biblical Sheol is always an evil and nothing but an evil. When the human body goes down to Sheol in the sense of the 'grave,' this is an evil. And when the human soul goes down to Sheol in the sense of 'hell and retribution,' this is an evil. Both are threatened, as the penalty of sin to the wicked, but never to the righteous." "That Sheol is a fearful punitive evil, lies upon the face of the Old Testament, and any interpretation that essentially modifies this must, therefore, be erroneous." "The proof that Sheol does not signify Hell would, virtually, be the proof that the doctrine of Hell is not contained in the Old Testament; and this would imperil the doctrine of the final judgment." In the New Testament "Hades is represented as the contrary of heaven, and the contrary of heaven is Hell." "The tenet of Christ's local descent into Hades has no support from Scripture."

Dr. Shedd's exegesis is simply but luminously the amplification of Turrettin, prince of Genevan expounders, who says: "Vox 'Sheol' in Scriptura quadrifariam sumitur—1st, Pro sepulchro. 2d, Pro loco damnatorum. 3d, Pro maximis cruciatibus. 4th, Pro extrema humiliatione.—(The word Sheol in Scripture is taken four ways: 1st, For the grave. 2d, For the place of the damned. 3d, For the supremest torments. 4th, For the last and the lowest humiliation.")

All comes to this in effect,—After death are only two places,—Heaven and Hell. If a man is not in the one, he is, and instantly and everlastingly, in the other, and to see this and correlative positions of the Reformers brought again to the front, and with all that grandeur of argument, and force of diction which are so easily at the disposal of the master mind of Dr. Shedd, cannot but rejoice every old-fashioned orthodox man.

The doctrine of Eternal Hell is basal. On it is founded the immortality of all souls, and behind it lies that which roots deepest in God, the attribute of His justice.

Letter from Italy.

NAPLES, Dec. 28th, 1885.

EDITOR OF CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER: Southern Italy has charms for the tourist perhaps greater than any other portion of Europe. Here at Naples we are surrounded by scenery that never fails to captivate and interest the traveller. Situated on the slope of a hill in the shape of a crescent, the city is a succession of terraces looking out upon the Mediterranean, presenting a picture of rare beauty unsurpassed perhaps by any other city in the world. Along the wharfs or lower part of the city the streets are narrow and filthy, where swarms of men of the lowest Italian life are carrying on their traffic of every conceivable description, while on the terraces and elevated suburbs are the villas of the rich and the palaces of the nobility. Seen from the bay, Naples rises before you like a vast amphitheatre, skirting the shores, and the eye with one sweep can compass not only the city and the hills in the background, but also the Island of Ischia on the left, rising out of the sea like a great fort, and the scene of that great earthquake in 1881 when thousands perished, and left Casamicciola a heap of ruins. Near by also the vision compasses Puteoli, where Paul, a prisoner on his way to Rome, tarried seven days at the request of the brethren. On the right, like a sentinel in the sky, towers old Vesuvius, sending forth his black volumes of smoke and lava from his unspent fires. There also, commanding the entrance of the bay, rises rocky Capri, the ever faithful guardian of her queenly city of rich treasure beyond. Looking upon this varied and pleasing panorama, under these beautiful mellow Italian skies, we cannot wonder that it has been the subject of the admiration of thousands who have singled it out as a spot of exceptional beauty, and worthy of the artist's pencil.

At the base of Mount Vesuvius lie the ruins of ancient Pompeii, whose streets and walls have a tale of sadness and interest not soon to be forgotten. Here are the vestiges of once active life, but all now is as silent as a cemetery, and the streets, once the thoroughfares of trade, are now traversed only by sight-seers and their guides; and relics of ancient Pompeiian life interest only the traveller and antiquarian.

In the 79th year of the Christian era a volcanic eruption of Vesuvius buried this wicked and idolatrous city, and for more than seventeen centuries no trace of its existence had been visible. A few years since the government commenced excavations, which have revealed objects of intense interest that cause the traveller to stand in rapt wonder and astonishment. Here are streets; but the chariot wheel has long since ceased its rumble. Here are skeletons and petrified bodies of human beings, revealing by clenched fists and attitude of struggle the agony in which they died; some with the money belt around them in the effort to flee with their treasure; some with rings on their fingers, and jewels in their ears. Here are palaces of noblemen without inmates; shops where every kind of traffic has been carried on, but the tradesman and the trader gone; heathen temples, and altars and idols without worshippers; theatres in which the last tragedy was the scene of death and destruction; halls and tribunals of justice, but judges and jurors have long since gone to the Great Tribunal. Here also are fountains which for centuries have ceased to flow; skeletons of dogs and cats and rabbits and chickens which tell of the past domestic life; bread in the ovens, food in pots, and tables spread, all speaking of a sudden surprise and a fleeing for life when the great fires and floods poured forth from belching Vesuvius and arrested the people in their vice and idolatrous practices. For lust and idolatry and vice, Pompeii must have been renowned, as vestiges on every hand now convince the observer. But the most impressive scene is that at the government barracks. Here were found sixty-three bodies of armed soldiers, illustrating the fidelity with which they stood at their post when danger threatened and others were fleeing. Here also at the very gates of the city is the old boat landing, showing that the shores of the Mediterranean must have washed the very walls of the city, now a quarter of a mile away from the sea.

Altogether Pompeii presents some of the most interesting and affecting scenes we have witnessed in our travels, and reminds one of the fate of Sodom, upon which God poured the fires of destruction, because of its wickedness. Here old Vesuvius, sending forth his ceaseless clouds of smoke, and at night lighting up the heavens with his lurid glare, stands as a constant reminder of his past work of retribution, and while ofttimes awakening terror and consternation in the people of Naples and its environs, does not compel them to heed its warnings and forsake their sins. So multitudes have warnings from God in His wrathful displeasure because of sin, and heed them not, but harden their hearts against His threatenings.

A. M. QUICK.

Two Noble Gifts.

MRS. WILLIAM D. SLOANE, daughter of Mr. William H. Vanderbilt, and her husband, a well-known business man of this city, have engaged to build a Maternity Hospital on the grounds of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, which site was purchased out of the half a million of dollars given about fourteen months ago to the College by Mr. Vanderbilt. The hospital is to accommodate twenty-five patients. It will be the only one of its class in the city. Mr. and Mrs. Sloane promise also to endow it with a sum sufficient to meet all expenses.

The son of the late Mr. H. B. Claflin paid a few days ago $25,000 to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. No such bequest had been legally recorded in Mr. Claflin's will, but in his last illness, not long before his death it is said, the father requested the son to pay the amount to Mr. Bergh for the Society. In these days when the charitable bequests of wills are so often evaded when possible, and so often contested in the courts, it is pleasant to hear of such prompt obedience to a spoken request.

Socialism Declared.

ABOUT a month ago in Chicago, the Congregational Ministers' Union, in order to obtain an idea of Socialism from headquarters, invited Mr. August Spies, editor of the Arbeiter Zeitung, to address their Monday morning meeting. The Advance reported as follows: "He was listened to patiently and questioned closely. He represents the intelligent socialism, and advocates, with a good deal of ability, all the vagaries of his class. Starting with the premises that men are out of employment, that over-production exists in many quarters, and that laboring men work for pittances, and that capital and labor need such an adjustment that friction will cease, he proposes as a remedy for all these evils, property taken from all who have any and held in common. The danger that selfish, able men may again get more than their share out of the common store will be averted, it is thought, by the development of universal unselfishness under the new order of things. Monogamy, in the view of a socialist, is only another form of private property. Marriage will be a voluntary matter, to be entered into or dissolved at the pleasure of parties interested. Free love of an exalted kind will be the rule. Children will be owned by the whole body. There is no God. Right and wrong are meaningless. What is right to day may be wrong to morrow. There is no standard of moral action. Mr. Spies' statements that the church is a failure as a moral force, and that socialism is the preventive of the very ills the church is seeking to cure, were rather startling."

The Reading Room.

Our Book-Shelves.

....“THE PEOPLE'S BIBLE: Discourses upon Holy Scripture.” By Joseph Parker, D.D. Vol. I. The Book of Genesis. Dr. Parker has undertaken a great work at his time of life, but we presume he has a store of material with which to carry it on, and we trust he may be spared to complete it, if the lectures on Genesis furnish a fair specimen of what is to follow. In this volume we find the same keen insight into truth, the same terseness and force of language, and the same striking originality that characterize his “Apostolic Life,” and other writings.

The volume on Genesis consists of two parts. The first comprises a series of essays on Inspiration, the Unknowable God, God as personally realized, and God the only sufficient and satisfying explanation of all things, equally marked by fulness of thought and profound reasoning.

The second part is composed of discourses, preceded by prayers, like those in his volumes on “Apostolic Life,” in which some prominent event is made the centre of the discussion, while the context suggests practical lessons. No extracts from these sermons can give an adequate idea of them. They are thoughtful, suggestive, eloquent, spiritual and practical. They are “Bible Readings” in the highest and best sense, and valuable for the student and for the family, for ministers and the general reader. (Funk & Wagnalls.)

....“PARABLES OF THE LAKE; or, The Seven Stories of Jesus by the Sea of Galilee.” A Sunday Book for Young Readers. By J. R. Macduff, D.D. Illustrated. The illustrations are etchings which very vividly depict the several scenes on which the parables are based. It is a charming little book. These beautiful parables of our Saviour by the Lake are expounded by the author in such a simple and attractive style that children will find them as fascinating as any stories they may have ever read. The great advantage to the child in reading these stories, as compared with other stories of a secular character, is the familiar knowledge which he will thereby gain of some of the most interesting incidents in the life of Jesus. It should be in every Sunday-school library. (Robert Carter & Brothers.)

....“HOW TO BE HAPPY THOUGH MARRIED” is really a charming and sensible book notwithstanding its infelicitous title,—which we like none the better because it is second-hand, being borrowed from Skelton. The author is a delightful essayist. His pages are crowded with apt quotations from a great variety of sources, and with interesting incidents and illustrations. His counsel is eminently practical, level-headed, and wholesome hearted. The whole tone of the book is sweetly evangelical. No husband or wife, whether at the beginning or at the farther end of their wedded life, can fail to be benefited by reading it. It is neatly gotten up, and adapted for a gift-book to young married couples. (Charles Scribner's Sons.)

....“SERMONS BY T. DEWITT TALMAGE.” Second Series. This volume is preceded by an interesting Biographical Sketch, which is somewhat superlative, as when it says that “Mr. Talmage never delivered a sermon yet in Brooklyn which God has not blessed to the salvation of souls.” The author errs, too, in saying that it seemed to Dr. Talmage's parents “a matter of course that he would follow his three brothers into the ministry.” The present writer, their pastor at the time, knows the exact contrary to be the fact. This volume has the same characteristics as those which have gone before and will doubtless be as extensively useful. (Funk & Wagnalls)

....“SUNRISE ON THE SOUL.” By Hugh Smith Carpenter, D.D. A collection of seventy-nine short papers, which are full of seed-thoughts,—brilliant, glowing, earnest, and often original, bearing the stamp of the author's striking individuality. Just the book for one's spare minutes and quiet hours. (Funk & Wagnalls.)

....“STRANGE CASE OF DR. JEKYLL AND MR. HYDE.” By Robert Louis Stevenson. The author's inventive power is so well known since the “New Arabian Nights,” that this new story will only add to his reputation. Without being absolutely ghostly it is calculated to send a cold chill down one's spinal column. It deals with the duality in man, his high spiritual being on one side and his low fleshly, animal nature on the other. Grant the possibility of a temporary separation and the story is told of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. The way it is unfolded is in the author's own powerful style, and his showing the slow growth of animalism has a moral result which makes it in some sense a parable. It might well be pondered by every reader in view of common temptations and secret impulses. (Charles Scribner's Sons.)

....“A LONG SEARCH.” By Mary A. Roe. This is a story of a girl in search of her parents. She starts from the Western plains, lives in New York city for some years, changes to Europe and finally brings up as the stolen daughter of an Irish baronet. The time is in the beginning of the century, and bits of history are interwoven in order to interest the reader. For ourselves we prefer “Japhet in earch of a Father,” or even Hannah More's interminable “Cœlebs in Search of a Wife.” The whole style of “A Long Search” proclaims a tyro in literature who seems to have been aiming at a cheap popularity. We have little doubt that scores of readers will bring her the desired reward, as the book rises a little above the average Sunday-school novel. (Dodd, Mead & Co.)

....“A TOUR AROUND THE WORLD,” by George E. Raum, does not pretend to be anything more than a comprehensive guide book of travel, but it seizes on the points of interest to the ordinary traveller, and packs a great deal of useful information into a small compass, and is an instructive and interesting volume for those who stay at home to take up, and an admirable vade mecum for those who propose to follow the author in his world-tour. An index of every place visited and sight seen, with populations and page reference, adds much to the value of the book. (W. S. Gottsberger.)

....We have received and examined “WAR SONGS, for Anniversaries and Gatherings of Soldiers,” to which is added a selection of “SONGS AND HYMNS FOR MEMORIAL DAY;” “FRESH FLOWERS, A Song Book for the Infant Classes of Sunday-schools,” by Emma Pitt; and “GEMS FOR LITTLE SINGERS for Primary and Kindergarten Schools and the Nursery,” by Elizabeth U. Emerson and Gertrude Swayne, assisted by L. O. Emerson, and are convinced of their superior merit and adaptation to the several classes and occasions for which they are designed, and heartily commend them. “THE PURITAN—THE RACE MARCH GALOP” (sheet) is likewise a gem. (Oliver Ditson & Co.)

....“FIVE MINUTE RECITATIONS,” by Walter K. Forbes, is a varied and excellent selection of prose and verse adapted for public recitation or reading. That no selection requires more than five minutes to recite admirably adapts it for use in schools and colleges. (Lee & Shepard.)

....“MICHAEL'S TREASURES; or, Choice Silver.” By Emma Marshall. A good English story for children of younger years about a boy who picks up a little girl from a wreck and cares for her in his mother's house. (Robert Carter & Brothers.)

Our Library Table.

Periodicals, Serials and Notes.

....The Atlantic for February is a very “readable” number. A fine poem on “The Homestead,” by John G. Whittier, calls on the young to till their fathers' fields and “build the home once more.” There is an interesting sketch of Gen. Ward, the American military adventurer in China, and a pleasant continuance of the old town life of Salem by Eleanor Putnam. In the serial stories the “Country Gentleman” ends somewhat tragically. Mrs. Oliphant has certainly succeeded in making her chief character one of the most odious of human beings. The “Princess Casamassima” and “In the Clouds” grow more interesting in their development. There is a fair “Contributors' Club,” with some capital criticisms to close the number.

...St. Nicholas for February is bright, attractive, various. It abounds in short poems, lively sketches, and nice stories with beautiful illustrations. “Around the Bay of Naples” is “a narrative of travel” worth reading. Mr. Scudder's Life of George Washington goes to school now in the fourth chapter. All boys in America ought to read about the way in which George Washington was reared. St. Nicholas is a good companion and useful friend.

....The Old Testament Student for January comes well filled. It contains Dr. Chambers's paper on Sun Images and the Sun of Righteousness, the conclusion of Dr. Murphy's admirable statement of the Authority of Scripture, Prof. Denio's Examination of the Revised Version of Exodus (most scholarly and thorough), and Prof. Osgood's luminous account of Egypt before 2000 B.C., together with other good matter. A valuable issue.

....The Baptist Review for January maintains the high character it has assumed under its present conductors. The various departments are well cared for, and the Review of Current Literature is equal to that of the Presbyterian Review in quality though not in quantity. Dr. McArthur contributes a very vigorous paper on the Pastor's Leadership of his Church, which some folks will not be able to read without their ears tingling. There is a very interesting symposium on Inspiration, in the course of which Professor Norman Fox is reduced to dust and ashes as he deserves. An article on Christ's Pre-eminence speaks of the Logos before time as “the realization and concretion of the Divine nature”—words that seem to us the quintessence of nonsense. But such meaningless words are not frequent. Our Baptist friends will make a great mistake if they do not give this quarterly a prompt and liberal support.

....Babyhood is not behind other magazines with its New Year greeting. It comes with a more interesting budget than ever of promises and pleasantries, done up in the most tasty fashion. It is always bright and chatty, sensible and helpful. For this reason mothers who read it like it, and all mothers should have it. It fills a niche that was left unoccupied, except incidentally, in home magazines, before its coming, and is therefore hailed as a welcome guest in the many homes to which it has already gained admission. Its projectors should feel proud of the flattering testimonials which they have received through the press of this country from Maine to the Pacific coast, as published on the last page.

....The Expositor for January.—This begins the year very strongly. 'Tis enough to name the contributors, Canon Westcott, Prof. Harnack, Canon Driver, Dr. McLaren, Prof. Delitzsch, Principal Dawson and Prof. Stokes.

....The Lutheran Quarterly opens with a weak rehash of the common pleas for the “two wine theory” of Scripture. Then comes an able argument by Pres. D. J. Hill against the Evolution of Religion, and a refreshing view of Historical Christianity by Prof. Wynn. Under the quaint title “Man or Machine?” Prof. Richards argues very cleverly for a liberal education for laymen and ministers. The Literary Intelligence is fresh and full.

....The Lutheran Church Review contains a good article on Italy and Romanism, and a very interesting account of the Swedish Lutheran Church in America. Prof. Whiteker, under the title “The Form of Sound Words,” contends vigorously for purity of doctrine. One utterance he makes applies in several latitudes: “A great deal is said in these latter days about church union; in many instances, however, the thing aimed at is not unity but absorption.” There is a very appreciative paper on Dr. Schaff, and the notices of books are careful and just.

... In Cassell's Family Magazine for February, “An American” talks about The Typical New Yorker. Prof. Blackie discourses very agreeably on London for Londoners, the Family Doctor pleads in his sensible way for regard for the Ailments One Gets Little Pity For, somebody reviews instructively Prof. Ball's Story of the Heavens, and another somebody under the heading, The Impressions of a Noticing Eye, tells in lively sentences how he reads Characters in Backs. The number is handsomely illustrated and stories and poetry add to the variety and interest of the contents.

....The City of Albany: Two Hundred Years of Progress, a paper by Mr. Frederic G. Mather, in the Magazine of American History for the month, richly illustrated, admirably prepares the way for the celebration of the bi-centennial of our State capital, an event due in July of this year. Gen. Watts de Peyster's biography of Gen. Anthony Wayne will be read with avidity. The probability of the Disintegration of Canada is discussed with intelligence by Dr. Prosper Bender, and Mr. A. W. Clason describes The Charleston Convention of 1788. To the War Papers there are added, The New Mexican Campaign of 1862 by A. A. Hayes and the Army of the Potomac under Hooker by Major W. H. Mills. The Minor Topics, Original Documents, Queries, etc., are full of important and instructive letters, facts, and criticisms.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

Charles Scribner's Sons: Oceana, or England and Her Colon By James Anthony Froude. Illustrated. 8vo. pp. 396. $2 50.

Ivison, Blakeman, Taylor & Co.: Outlines of Universal History Designed as a Text-Book and for Private Reading. By George Par Fisher, D.D., LL.D. 8vo, pp. 674.

A. C. Armstrong & Son: Armstrong's Primer of English History for School and Family Use. With Maps. 18mo pp. 125. 50 cents.

Cassell & Co.: Without Blemish: To-Day's Problem. By Mrs. J. H. Walworth. 12mo, pp. 381. $1.25.

John B. Alden: The Glasse of Time. In the First Age. Divinely Handled. By Thomas Peyton. A reprint of the famous and extremely rare poem which is supposed to have inspired Milton's Paradise Lost. 12mo, pp. 177. 50 cents.

UNBOUND BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

The Third Annual Report of the Executive Committee of the Indian Rights Association. For 1885; also,

The Administration and the Indians. 8vo tract, pp. 4. 1316 Filbert St., Philadelphia.

Rainbow Gold. A Novel. By David Christine Murray. (No. 509, Harper's Franklin Square Library.) 4to, pp. 79. 20 cents.

Stories of Provence, from the French of Alphonse Daudet. (Lettres De Mon Moulin.) By S. L. Lee. (No. 51, Harper's Handy Series.) 16mo, pp. 146. 25 cents.

A Crimson Stain. By Annie Bradshaw. (Cassell's “Rainbow Series” of Original Novels.) 12mo, pp. 192 25 cents; also,

My Ten Years' Imprisonment. By Silvio Pellico Translated from the Italian by Thomas Roscoe. (Cassell's National Library. Edited by Prof. Henry Morley. Vol. I. No. 1.) 18mo, pp. 200. 10 cents.

Circulars of Information of the Bureau of Education. No. 3. 1885. A Review of the Reports of the British Royal Commissioners on Technical Instruction. With Notes. By the late Charles O. Thompson, A.M., Ph.D.

PERIODICALS.

January.—The Baptist Quarterly Review, American Journal of Insanity, The American Antiquarian, The Targum.

February.—Magazine of American History, Our Little Ones and The Nursery, The Art Journal, Lippincott's Monthly Magazine, The Homiletic Review, The New Englander and Yale Review, The Century, The Sunday School World, Wide Awake, The New York Fashion Bazar The Brooklyn Magazine.

March.—The Westminster Teacher.

Astronomical.

VENUS will soon cease to be the glory of the western evening sky. On the 18th she passes between the earth and the sun, and becomes a morning star, to be visible in the East in a few day in increasing brightness. Then will follow in the latter part of next month one of her most interesting appearances—she will be visible at midday.

Mars rises at about half past eight in the evening, Jupiter about an hour later. Both are increasing in apparent size and brightness, and are brilliant a little south of East at half past ten in the evening. We shall pass between the sun and both of them next month.

On the night of the 20th Jupiter and the moon will be separated by only one seventh of a degree.

On the night of the 12th, beginning at about 7.30, the moon occults star after star in Taurus, concluding with an occultation of Aldebaran soon after one o'clock. An opera glass will take it all in handsomely.

Tracts on the Sabbath.

"THE inquirer can find suitable tracts to show the importance of maintaining the sanctity of the Sabbath at 47 and 49 Centre street, New York," is one answer received.

The New York Sabbath Committee, 31 Bible House, New York, publish a tract on Sunday Laws and Sunday Liberty.

A lady, deeply interested in the preservation of the Lord's Day, who has printed some tracts at her own expense, will gladly supply those who send their addresses to this office.

Just Published.

OUTLINES OF

UNIVERSAL HISTORY.

BY GEORGE PARK FISHER, D.D., LL.D., OF YALE COLLEGE.

1 vol. 8vo. 600 pages.

This work, designed as a text-book and for private reading, is a clear and condensed narrative, brought down to the present year, comprising not only a record of political events, but also a sketch of the progress of literature, art, and science, from the beginning of history to the present time.

It contains full lists of books for reading and reference, and is furnished with 32 historical maps—mostly colored, and many of them folded.

The lucid arrangement, together with the use of different sizes of type, has rendered it possible to bring together a great amount of matter within a brief compass, and in a readable form.

Extra cloth binding with leather back.

Price by mail, postage free, $3.00.

Vison, Blakeman, Taylor & Co, Publishers

753 and 755 Broadway, New York.

ANTHEM BOOKS.

Sure to Give Satisfaction.

DIAMOND COLLECTION.—DANKS. 64 pp., Paper, $3.60 per doz.; 35c. each by Mail.

FESTIVAL ANTHEMS.—DANKS. 64 pp., Paper, $3 60 per doz ; 35c. each by Mail.

PALMER'S BOOK OF ANTHEMS. Boards, $9.00 per doz.; $1.00 each by Mail.

TEMPLE ANTHEMS.—LOWRY & DOANE. Boards, $12.00 per doz.; $1.25 each by Mail.

CHORAL ANTHEMS.—DANKS. Boards, $13.50 per doz.; $1.50 each by Mail.

ENGLISH ANTHEMS.—LASAR. Cloth, $21.00 per doz ; $2.25 each by Mail.

☞ A Full Catalogue Sent on Request.

GLOW & MAIN, 76 East Ninth St., N. Y. 81 Randolph St., Chicago.

NOW READY:

Carmina Sanctorum,

A SELECTION OF

HYMNS AND SONGS OF PRAISE, With Tunes.

Edited by Roswell D. Hitchcock, Zachary Eddy, Lewis Ward Mudge.

546 Hymns, 440 Tunes, 23 Chants. Indexes full. 384 pages, square 8vo, cloth, price, $1.25: for examination or introduction, $1.

In press: Handy Edition, Hymns only, 60c.; Pocket Edition, Hymns only, 30c.; Chapel Edition, Hymns and Tunes, 75c.

☞ Clergymen or committees desiring to examine or obtain copies free, subject to return if not adopted. Address

A. S. BARNES & CO., Publishers,

111 & 113 William St., New York. 34 and 36 Madison St., Chicago.

"A Literary Enterprise Unique in the Annals of Publishing."

Cassell's National Library.

Edited by HENRY MORLEY, LL.D., Professor of English Literature at University College, London.

A series of weekly volumes, each containing about 200 pages, small 16mo, clear readable print, on good paper, at the low price of or 52 volumes, postpaid, $5.00, when subscribed for by the year.

Ten Cents per Volume,

The series will represent all periods and forms of thought. The books will be of the records of History, Biography, Religion, and Philosophy; Discovery and Enterprise; Plays, Poems, and Tales; Natural Science and Natural History; Art; Political Economy; with whatever else may be worth lasting remembrance.

NOW READY.

My Ten Years' Imprisonment.

By SILVIO PELLICO.

Translated from the Italian, by THOMAS ROSCOE.

IN PRESS.

Childe Harold. By LORD BYRON.
The Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin.
The Complete Angler. By ISAAC WALTON.
The School for Scandal and the Rivals. By RICHARD BRINSLEY SHERIDAN.

BY AUTHOR OF "THE BAR SINISTER."

WITHOUT BLEMISH.

TO-DAY'S PROBLEM.

By Mrs. J. H. WALWORTH.

1 vol., 12mo, extra cloth. Price, $1.25.

"The author in this volume deals with a vital subject. While her book has a moral purpose, it is not a dry dissertation, but is full of dramatic action and thrilling incident."

Will be issued in monthly volumes,

Cassell's "Rainbow" Series of New and Original Novels.

By popular American and Foreign authors In large 12mo volumes of about 192 pages each. Beautifully printed and bound in Illuminated Paper Covers.

Price, per volume, 25 Cents.

NOW READY.

A CRIMSON STAIN.

By ANNIE BRADSHAW.

Other Volumes in preparation.

Complete Catalogue sent free by mail to any address on application.

Cassell & Company, Limited,

739 and 741 Broadway, N. Y.

JUST ISSUED

BY THE

Presbyterian Board of Publication.

Half-Hours with the Lessons of 1886.

Forty-eight short sermons on the lessons of 1886 by twenty-four prominent Pastors and Preachers.

Specially prepared to aid Superintendents and Teachers.

12mo. Price, in cloth binding, $1.25. Paper binding, 85c.

Westminster Question Book for 1886.

A manual for teachers and older scholars, containing the Text of the Lesson, Helps for Scholars, Questions, Lesson Plan, Golden Text, Home Studies and Catechism.

Price, 15 cents, net.

My Soul, Thou Hast Much Goods.

BY HELEN R. EDSON.

24mo. Fancy Paper Cover. Price, 25 cents

Golden Promises.

SELECTED FROM GOD'S WORD.

BY REV. SAMUEL FULTON.

24mo. Fancy Paper Cover. Price, 25 cents.

Address orders to

JOHN A. BLACK, Business Sup't,

1334 CHESTNUT ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Or, Ward & Drummond, 116 Nassau St., New York, N. Y.

Miss Frances E. Willard says:

JOSIAH ALLEN'S WIFE'S

New Story, "Sweet Cicely; or, Josiah Allen as a Politician," comes from the very depths of her heart. Humor, quaintness, keen insight, originality are here, beside a depth of pathos, and power of striking hard blows with a velvet-gloved hand—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette. "There is the ever-present thorn of startling truth sticking in the side that aches with laughter." Copiously illustrated. $'.

FUNK & WAGNALLS, 10-12 DEY ST., N. Y.

Our readers will confer a favor upon the publishers of this paper and, perhaps, find it to their own advantage if, when answering an advertisement found in these columns, mention is made that it was seen in THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER.

HEADQUARTERS FLAG, ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

THE richly illustrated Midwinter (Feb'y) Number of THE CENTURY MAGAZINE contains, among its special features, an article by GENERAL GRANT, "Preparing for the Wilderness Campaign,"—the most striking of all the papers contributed by General Grant to THE CENTURY War Series—a remarkable description of this remarkable campaign.

THE NEW NOVEL

BY

W. D. HOWELLS,

"The Minister's Charge," begins in this number, as well as the novelette, "A Borrowed Month," by Frank R. Stockton. All dealers sell it; price, 35 cts.

THE CENTURY CO. N. Y.

NEW MUSIC BOOKS.

Temperance Song Herald. By J. C. Macy.

For Temperance Lodges and Meetings. A Choice Collection of New Temperance Songs and Glees, with some Old Favorites, and a few Rousing War Songs with Temperance Words. Anybody can "join in the chorus." Price 35 cts. or $3.60 per dozen.

Choice Vocal Duets. Just Published.

A first class set of duets, by such masters as Rubenstein, Nicolai, Campana, Tours, Abt, and others. 26 Duets on 144 large pages Abts' "Like the Lark," and Rubenstein's "Angel" are good specimens. Price $1.

The Apograph ($1 00) is an excellent collection of Octavo Choruses, Sacred and Secular Selected by CARL ZERRAHN, for the use of Musical Conventions, etc.

American Song and Chorus Collection. 50 cts.
American Ballad Collection. 50 cts.
American Dance Music Collection. For Piano. 50c.
American Piano Music Collection. 50 cts.

Four large, handsome, and every way desirable collections of good music at low prices. Mailed for 65 cts. each.

Kindergarten Chimes. $1.50 Cloth; $1 Boards. Has received marked commendation from the lovers of the Kindergarten and is a beautiful and valuable book for teachers and children.

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston.

Chas. H. Ditson & Co., 867 Broadway, N. Y.

EDUCATIONAL.

UNIVERSITY of the City of New York.

JOHN HALL, D.D., LL.D., Chancellor.

1. DEPARTMENT OF ARTS, Tuition Free.
2. DEPARTMENT OF SCIENCE, Tuition Free.
3. SCHOOL OF CIVIL ENGINEERING, Tuition $100.
4. DEPARTMENT OF LAW.
5. DEPARTMENT OF MEDICINE.

 Catalogues, with full particulars of all Courses, may be had upon application to the Registrar.

BEST TEACHERS AMERICAN and FOREIGN, promptly provided for Families, Schools, Colleges Skilled Teachers supplied with Positions. Circulars of Good Schools free to Parents. School Property rented and sold. School and Kindergarten Material, etc.

J. W. SCHERMERHORN & CO.,

AMERICAN SCHOOL INSTITUTE, 7 East 14th St., N. Y

FOR ONE MONTH.

GREAT BARGAINS IN THEOLOGICAL, SUNDAY-SCHOOL AND MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS. FAMILY AND TEACHERS' BIBLES A SPECIALTY.

Come and see at

N. TIBBALS & SONS,

124 Nassau St, New York City.

CHOIR LEADERS

Are aware of the fact that the greatest musical need of the choir is good, new Scripture and Hymn Anthems for opening, closing, and occasional use. This need the "MUSICAL VISITOR" proposes to supply every month. It will have in each number enough to last a choir until the next issue. In addition to this, there will be a number of fine Organ Voluntaries, while in the reading department will be found the usual assortment of Sketches, Stories, Essays, and articles of special interest to choir and chorus members.

Choice Anthems and Choir Pieces

Subscription, $1.50 a year.

In Clubs of 5 or more, $1.00 each.

A sample copy of January "Visitor" containing 3 Anthems and 2 Voluntaries, will be mailed to any address for ten cents. Address

THE JOHN CHURCH CO.,

CINCINNATI, O.

ATLANTIC

Mutual Insurance Co.

NEW YORK OFFICE, 51 WALL STREET

ORGANIZED 1842.

Insures against Marine and Inland Navigation Risks.

And will issue Policies making Loss payable in England.

Assets for the Security of its Policies are more than TEN MILLION DOLLARS.

The profits of the Company revert to the assured and are divided annually, upon the Premiums terminated during the year, Certificates for which are issued, bearing interest in accordance with its Charter.

J. D. JONES, President.
CHARLES DENNIS, Vice President
W. H. H. MOORE, 2d Vice Pres't.
A. A. RAVEN 3d Vice Pres't.

J. H. CHAPMAN, Secretary.

CONTINENTAL Insurance Co.

Continental Buildings
100 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

Cor. COURT and MONTAGUE STS., BROOKLYN
106 BROADWAY, BROOKLYN, E.D.

Insures against loss by Fire at reasonable rates.

Reserve for re-insurance	$2,265,427 88
of which for Inland Marine, $55,959 52
Reserve ample for all other claims	553,171 26
Capital paid in cash	1,000,000 00
Net surplus	1,358,879 85
Total Cash Assets, Jan. 1, 1886.	$5,177,478 99

This Company conducts its business under the restrictions of the New York Safety Fund Law. The two Safety Funds together equal $1,200,000.

H. H. LAMPORT, President.

CYRUS PECK, Secretary.

HOME INSURANCE COMPANY

OF NEW YORK.

OFFICE, No. 119 BROADWAY.

Sixty-fifth Semi-Annual Statement, Showing the Condition of the Company on the first day of January, 1886.

CASH CAPITAL	$3,000,000 00
Reserve Premium Fund	3,711,637 00
Reserve for Unpaid Losses and Claims	378,483 98
Net Surplus	1,227,995 10
Cash Assets	$7,618,116 08

SUMMARY OF ASSETS

Cash in Banks	$245,795 99
Bonds and Mortgages, being first lien on Real Estate	897,550 00
United States Stocks (market value)	2,879,390 00
Bank and Railroad Stocks and Bonds (market value)	1,522,550 00
State and City Bonds (market value)	222,000 00
Loans on Stocks, payable on demand	122,850 00
Interest due on 1st January, 1886	97,056 62
Premiums uncollected and in hands of Agents	358,290 30
Real Estate	1,272,633 77
Total	$7,618,116 08

CHAS. J. MARTIN, President.
D. A. HEALD, Vice-President.
J. H. WASHBURN, V. P. & Sec'y.
T. B. GREENE, W. L. BIGELOW, E. G. SNOW, JR., } Ass't Sec's.

OUR New Catalogue of Books for family, Sunday-school, ministers, students, or teachers' Library will be sent free to any address on receipt of a postal request. Address PHILLIPS & HUNT, Publishers, 805 Broadway, New York.

THE ASSOCIATED CHARITIES OF THE

1342 Churches of London

after investigating the value of

MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD

have adopted it as the one thing most needed in restoring the sick to health, and it is given by their visiting committees.

Many of the Churches of Boston, Cleveland and other cities, have done the same for several years.

Clergymen use it to relieve Exhaustion, Dyspepsia and Constipation.

Any Clergyman wishing to try it, we will deliver to any Boston express samples free.

☞ IN GENERAL USE of all Governments, Hospitals and Physicians that have tried it, and in 52 of the leading Hospitals of London.

Murdock Liquid Food Co., Boston.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.

EPPS'S COCOA.

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood, and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins by Grocers, labelled thus:

JAS. EPPS & CO., Homœopathic Chemists, London, England.

LADIES WANTED, to work for us at their own homes. $7 to $10 per week can be easily made; no canvassing; fascinating and steady employment. Particulars and sample of the work sent for stamp. Address HOME MF'G CO., P. O. Box 1916, Boston, Mass.

The Home.

AUNT MARJORIE'S CORNER.

Our Little Boys.

THE very allusion to these bright creatures in our homes stirs within the mother's heart some of her happiest emotions. Bolder in his demands, more pronounced in all his actions than the more gentle sister, our frolicsome boy receives the lion's share of love even while taxing patience to its utmost. This would appear anomalous did we not receive back from him, at least as much as we give. The value he puts upon mother's opinion, the desire for mother's sympathy show the hold we have on our miniature men as they come in to us, fresh from boyish scrapes, to take shelter under the maternal wing. Many the secret confided to mother because anticipated severity from father puts him beyond the pale of confidence.

But mother love luxuriating among its treasures cannot wholly make the boy. It may be a temptation with some of us to imagine that he surely will become what we desire him to be; that he happens to be ours is no guarantee for his future unless the implanting of sound principles in him accompany this tenderness of affection. Principle from babyhood itself wrought into the warp and woof of his being, its strength to be tested constantly from the squabble over the blocks in the nursery to competition with his fellows in the class-room. The waifs and strays alluded to recently would never have been such, if with a required watchfulness over them a faithful instruction in God's Word had been the habit of the conscientious mother. These old Bible stories, how they interest our little children, and how often do we allow them to be supplanted by other narratives of questionable value as factors in the formation of character. The memorizing of Scripture is almost a lost art with many of us in the training up of our families, and as for the catechism, that is far too abstruse and dry to impose on our little boys and girls. So as they pass out of the precincts of nursery life to mingle promiscuously with others of their age and sex, there is not that safeguard thrown around them which a conscience enlightened by such teachings can secure.

Should we be faithful in these things, consistency would lead us to retain the companionship and confidences of our boys, certainly would lessen the chances for relaxed vigilance at a period when needed most. It is possible that our carelessness has had an earlier birth than at the time when, almost unconsciously, we have allowed these boys to slip away from us to be initiated into the mischief or immorality of chance companions. Who can afford to risk these dear manly fellows to any strange influence without something to carry with them for guidance or monition? The congeniality that now exists between us and these kilt clad romps in our homes will best be maintained by sharing with them, as they are able to take in, our choicest treasures. Mother's Bible will be appreciated in proportion as it is known; mother's hymns will grow dear, not only from association, but also as an expression of individual feeling. No danger of making him too old-fashioned, there is enough in the air around to counteract that. Possibly the best part of any of us is the old-fashioned part that is left. The austerity of the Puritan does not lessen our admiration for his staunch adherence to principle, and while tastes may differ as to his demeanor, we might all with profit imitate his noble example in the training of these children of the covenant by acquainting them early with the precepts of Divine truth.

IRENE.

The Rechabites of To-day.

WHILE conferring with one of my associate mission band officers this week, one of the teachings of a recent Sunday's lesson received a forcible illustration. Annette had been absent from the last business meeting, and my call was to inform her of the several items which we had discussed, and also to hear her views concerning one or two of the matters under contemplation.

"You know, Lou," said Annette, "I'm not as strong for foreign missions as you are, but when a meeting is organized for that purpose, I do not believe in mixing in the social part." Changing her tone slightly, she continued, "What's the matter with Christians now-a-days? I don't profess to be one; if I did I should want to give up what many of my young friends retain when they come out and acknowledge themselves on the Lord's side. But it is not for me to judge, only we are taught every Sunday we must be either all Christ's, or—the world's. It is one of the things that keeps me back. Some few do live up to what they profess; there's Ethel now, a more changed girl I never knew. When she became a Christian and joined the church, she gave up dancing, the theatre and everything else worldly, and that's what I would do too; but there are few so honest and consistent as she is."

No comment is necessary; and certainly it was intended the thought should be impressed upon my mind at least, for only a day or two since our superintendent said he did wish something could be done with our young people in order that we might know the Christians from the others. A lamentable state of affairs, and yet it is largely so the world over. We want all the advantages the church affords—and I use the words reverently—none of its disadvantages. How few are willing to "leave all and follow," to be "the chosen peculiar people," "in the world and not of it," as the descendants of Rechab were.

We are counting the cost from the wrong standpoint; with so much in view cannot we obey the injunction, "Come ye out from among them and be ye separate"? Perhaps the dear Master knew just how faltering our steps would tend, now to the right and now to the left, when in His loving tenderness He prayed for all believers, coupling with it the petition, "I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou shouldest keep them from the evil;" and I very much fear we are not doing all in our power to bring the answer to that prayer. Who of us will adopt Paul's motto: "Whose I am, and whom I serve"?

VERA.

A Leaf from the Journal of an Unhappy Woman.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 18TH.—Left home this afternoon at two o'clock, did not have a pleasant ride on the cars; a woman on as usual with a crying baby; it is a mystery to me that people will take babies on the cars to make it unpleasant for other people; the mother of this one looked tired, she ought to have been. The air was so close in the cars that I put up the window, when what should a man behind me do, but ask me to put it down, said it made him cough; it is surprising to me how some people can be so inconsiderate of the comfort of others. I fanned myself all the rest of the way, and I hope he noticed how I was overcome with the heat.

Reached Omstead at six o'clock, went to the house of my old schoolmate, Almira Sprig, whom I had not seen for twenty years. Almira did not know me till I told her who I was; it just spoiled the whole of my visit to think how much she used to seem to think of me, and that she should have forgotten me so. I am sure I have not changed so much, and I should have known her anywhere!

Thursday, I left Almira's after breakfast and reached Springville about ten o'clock. I had written to my niece, Susan Grey, that I was coming to visit her and would be there on Friday, but when I got off the train there was not a soul to meet me, and I had to hand up my baggage and bargain with an impudent hackman myself. When we stopped at John Grey's house, Susan came running out and acted as though she was dreadfully surprised to see me; said they never dreamed of seeing me in the morning, as they supposed of course that I would leave home in the morning and get there on the afternoon train, was so sorry it had happened so, and wanted to know if I had any trouble.

It didn't look as though they were very anxious to see me, for they didn't know what time of day I might come, and it would not have hurt John or Susan either to have gone to the train. I did not care if they knew I thought so, but all I said was that if "I had any trouble no one else did, but that I shouldn't make trouble for anybody very much longer at most." Susan's face turned red. I shouldn't wonder if she remembered all I had done for her, and the times she had visited at my house for me to wait on her; if she didn't I did. However, she seemed to be very glad to see me, but I don't know whether it is anything more than put on, or not.

Friday.—Susan and John were stirring this morning at half past five, though they might have known that after my journey I would want to sleep, but nobody ever thinks of my comfort. When I went down I found the family breakfast had been over half an hour. Susan said John had to be at the store very early, as it was the busy season, but she thought she would not call me; I told her I could just as well have come down before for I hadn't slept any since they got up.

Susan said she was very sorry they had disturbed me, as they tried to be still, but I didn't think they tried very hard, and I did think John might have put off going to the store one morning on my account, but I only said that I hoped it wouldn't give me a sick headache; it was very apt to when I was waked up so early. To think of the times I have gone around on my tiptoes when Susan was a baby so that she could sleep in the morning, but that is all the reward one gets in this world for doing for others.

This afternoon I went up to my room to lay down, then I thought Susan could talk to her baby all the time instead of half of it, and pretty soon I heard the door bell ring, and people come in; two ladies, for I opened my door and peeped over the baluster to see, but Susan never invited me to the parlor to meet them. When I went down I said, "Been having callers?" (She never mentioned the matter till I spoke of it, and I waited quite a little while to see if she would.) She said, "Yes, but as they were ladies she knew very slightly, and I had lain down for a nap, she thought she would not call me down."

I understood it at once. I am only from the country and haven't town manners, and she doesn't want people to see me; I presume doesn't want them to know that she has any such a relative. Well, I didn't say anything, but I was pretty quiet the rest of that afternoon. I can keep myself in the background if that is what they want of me, and I don't need many hints to do it either.

Saturday.—Susan told me that she had a letter from her sister Anna last week, but when I asked to see it, it could not be found. Susan pretended to look for it, but I don't think she tried very hard, and I believe she did not want me to see the letter. Now there could be no reason why she should hide it from me, unless Anna had written something about me. I wonder what it could have been? Very likely that she was afraid I would come and visit her, but she need not worry, I never go where I am not wanted if I know it. Who would have believed such ingratitude possible when I have always treated Anna like my own child!

Sunday.—I have not been at church to day, and Sunday without a church service to one who enjoys it as I do is a long, dull day, especially if one's thoughts are as unhappy as mine have been these last hours. This morning it rained a little, and Susan said to me, "Aunt Elmina, your rheumatism troubles you so, will you dare to go out in the rain?"

Of course I had been intending to go, and should not have thought of minding the rain, but I could see what she meant; she was ashamed of me because I was plainly dressed and wanted an excuse to have me stay at home. I staid, to be sure I did! I would not for the world mortify my relatives, who perhaps would not be able to wear such good clothes if they had done as much for other people as some I know. In the evening, when I could go and come in the dark, and there would not be so many at church they thought it had cleared up enough for me to go, but if I didn't look well enough to go one time or day, I didn't at any other.

Monday evening.—My trunk is packed, and in a few short hours I shall leave this house, probably never to enter it again; and when Susan hears that I am laid in the cold grave, I hope that her conscience will not accuse her for the manner in which she has treated me. I would not have believed it if I had not heard her and John talking with my own ears. Little did they think as they sat on the porch, that the window of my room was open, and I sitting beside it was listening to every word. Easy to write it down, for I can never forget it. Susan had been putting the baby to bed, and when she came out John asked, "What's the matter with Aunt Elmina?"

"I'm sure I don't know," said Susan.

Now this afternoon she said she must go into the next neighbor's on an errand, and she went off and was gone an hour by the clock, for I took notice, and I don't know how much longer she would have stayed if the baby hadn't waked up and cried. I am sensitive, I was hurt, and I may have showed it, for I don't think it was treating me, a visitor in her house, with much respect. Though Susan was always selfish, I did wonder she could have said she did! know.

"I'm sure," went on John, "we have done everything we could to make her visit pleasant," (he had taken me out riding two or three times, but I don't think he has hurt himself,) "but she acts as though she were offended about something, and makes every one around her uncomfortable half the time." (I will be a long time John Grey before I shall make you uncomfortable again.)

"O, well," said Susan, "you musn't mind Aunt Elmina's ways. I wish she had a happier disption, but then she has some excellent qualities." A happier disposition! To think that I should live to hear such words from my own niece.

"That may all be," I heard John answer, "she may have all the virtues, but I must say she is decidedly peculiar."

So that is what they think me, peculiar and disagreeable! Well, I won't be so to them much longer, and they pretended to be glad to see me. Truly such unkindness is sharper than a serpent's tooth. I'm sure I don't know what I have ever done that I should have so much trouble, especially as it is my way to always think of others instead of myself.

ELA THOMAS.

CHILDREN'S PORTFOLIO.

The "Baby" Sewing Society.

BY LIZZIE CRANE.

PUT aside your pins and needles,
Busy maidens, one and all;
See! a little guest is coming
Through the doorway from the hall.

All wrapped up in dainty blanket,
Bright black eyes just peeping out,
Wondering what so many ladies
Find to talk so much about.

With the flush of baby slumbers
Lingering still on cheek and brow,
What wise things the baby'd tell us
If she could but say them now.

Are the rosy lips quite silent?
Nay, they speak of many things,
Of the innocence of childhood,
And of all the love it brings.

Speak they from the baby kingdom
Of a kingdom brighter far—
One whose radiance exceedeth
Fairest light of sun or star?

Yet to enter at its portal
Each a helpless child must be,
Since none else behold "the Father,"
Only such His glory see.

Precious lesson thou would'st teach us,
Little one with helpless grace,
Echoing the Master's teaching
To those who would behold His face.

How Hattie Became "So Happy.'

A TRUE STORY.

IT was during the Week of Prayer at an afternoon meeting that Hattie attended with her aunt. The service was rather long for a child, and much of it beyond her comprehension. The good minister paused. In looking about the audience he saw a few children. His heart yearning over the sweet upturned faces, he forgot his thirdly and spoke directly to them.

"And dear little ones, Jesus loves you! To the youngest He says 'Come unto me.' He will forgive—He has forgiven you all, and received you in His loving arms—all who are willing to accept His love."

As the good man ceased a sweet prelude from the organ filled the church, while soft voices sang:

"I was a wayward child,
I did not love the fold,
I did not love my Father's voice,
I would not be controlled."

"Auntie, did he mean me?"

"Yes, my child."

Tears glistened in her eyes, while her heart beat with joy. She was Jesus' child. She was saved today.

"Good news," she cried, as she flew into the house. "Oh, where is my mamma?"

From room to room she went. From bed-room to library, kitchen to dining-room. At last mamma was found in the parlor.

"Oh, mamma, dear mamma," cried Hattie, as she threw her arms about her mother's neck, "I am so happy, happy, happy!"

"What has made my little daughter so happy?"

"Oh, Jesus loves me. He has accepted me. He has saved me. I am Jesus' little girl now. I am so happy. I want to tell everybody."

"But, my child, everybody will not believe you."

"Why, mamma, how can they help it? They must. I am going right off to tell old Tim."

Away she went across the street. Her short golden curls forming an aureola about her head, like that we see sometimes in old pictures of the saints. In her haste she rang the bell two or three times, and danced up and down upon the steps, her feet keeping time with the joyous beatings of her heart.

"Good afternoon, Miss Hattie, sure it is I that am glad to see your bright face," said Mrs. Morley, as Hattie ran in.

"Oh, I am so happy! Where's Tim?"

"Right in the shop, miss."

Opening the door, the little girl saw Tim at his bench; a piece of leather in his lap, a hammer in his hand.

"Oh, Tim, I'm so happy, so happy, so happy!"

"You are always cheery and bright, miss, but what has made you so happy to-day?"

"Because Jesus loves me; He has accepted me; He has saved me. I am Jesus' little girl now. I told my mamma I was so happy I wanted to tell everybody, so they could be glad too. She said they wouldn't believe me. But you will, won't you, Tim?"

The hammer fell from the hand of the old man. He bowed his head, while tears trickled through his hard and toil-worn fingers.

"Poor Tim, why should you be sad? Jesus will make you glad." Falling upon her knees the little girl prayed: "Dear Jesus, please forgive Tim and make him happy, too." The hard and stony heart, the heart that had resisted the Saviour's love for three score years and ten, relented.

The joy of the little one was reflected in the face of the old man.

He felt that even he was forgiven; even he was accepted at last.

"And a little child shall lead them." J. S. K.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.

The Bee-Eater.

THE busy bees of Europe have an enemy of which we must tell you. It is an active bird called the bee-eater.

There are several species of this little bird inhabiting most parts of the Old World, and all distinguished by brilliant plumage. They are somewhat migratory in their habits, in winter seeking the warmer parts of the globe, and in summer the temperate regions in search of food, which they take on the wing like the swallow. Their food consists almost entirely of bees, wasps, gnats, etc. They will watch for them singly or in small parties perched on some prominent branch of a tree, from which they can see all around them, then lightly skim the air to seize their prey, returning generally to the same branch.

Ths European bee-eater in its varied coloring and shape is not unlike the kingfisher, with which it is nearly allied. It annually visits the countries bordering on the Mediterranean, appearing in flocks of twenty or thirty, skimming over the vineyards and olive plantations in pursuit of insects, especially of bees and wasps. And it is remarkable that these birds are never stung by them. As they seize the insect they at once crush it with their strong beak. Under the name of merops, of which family it is, Aristotle mentions it as very destructive to bees. It often watches near their hives and also at the mouths of wasps' nests.

One species is a native of the warmest parts of Europe, particularly among the islands of the Grecian Archipelago and of many parts of both Asia and Africa; but in the north of Europe it is rarely seen. Next to the koller and kingfisher, it is considered a beautiful bird. Its varied plumage is of a golden brown and pale yellow, more or less shaded with an admixture of red and bluish green, with sea-green beneath. From the corners of the bill on each side of the head a black streak passes across the eyes, curving downward and nearly meeting the tips of the crescent across the throat, separating the yellow of that part from the sea-green of the under parts. The tail, of a sea-green color, is about three inches long, the two middle feathers projecting in a pointed form some distance from the rest. The legs are short and of a reddish color.

The bee-wolf, or African bee-eater, is of still more brilliant plumage. Its back is of a deep-red color, verging to rose color underneath. The head, throat and portions of the tail are of bluish green; while the same black spot runs from the corners of the head to the ears. The tips of some of the longest feathers are also velvety black. It is about thirteen inches in length, and is an inhabitant of Eastern Africa.

The flesh of the bee-eater is sufficiently esteemed to be sold in the markets of both Italy and Egypt. The boys of Candia, or Megalo-Kastro, one of the most populous cities of Crete, catch the bird in this manner: They bend a pin into a hook, and tying it by the head to a long thread, they thrust it through a locust, just as boys bait hooks with a fly, holding the other end of the strong, light thread in their hand. The locust, so fastened, continues its flight, which the merops perceiving, pursues and catches, at the same time swallowing pin and all, when it is easily captured.

They rear their young in horizontal holes in the sandy banks of rivers. The entrance is usually small, extending to the depth of three or four feet into a cavity in which the parents can easily turn round. The eggs are white, from five to seven, and are laid on the ground or on moss or other soft material. When the young are partly fledged, but not yet able to fly, they creep to the mouth of their hole, where they seem to enjoy the happy summer light and genial sunshine. But on the least alarm they hasten into their inner chamber, where they lie concealed until all is again quiet.

In the banks of the Don and Volga the excavations made by the flocks of bee-eaters are so numerous that the bank in many places resembles a honey-comb. Livingston describes the banks of the Leeba in South Africa as perforated in a similar manner. At morning and evening they frequently congregate in considerable numbers. Their flight is graceful and sustained, and their cry is loud, consisting, though, of pleasant whistling notes, mostly heard during the morning and evening.

Here we have another little creature formed by Divine wisdom to do its special work in lessening the vast number of insects which might, in those warm countries, become troublesome.—N. Y. Observer.

Faith Illustrated.

THE patter of little feet on my office floor, and a glad voice exclaiming, "Papa, I'se come to 'scort you home!" made known to me the presence of my little six-years old darling, who often came at that hour "to take me home," as she said. Soon we were going hand in hand on the homeward way.

"Now, papa, let's play I was a poor little blind girl, and you must let me hold your hand tight, and you lead me along and tell me where to step, and how to go."

So the merry blue eyes were shut tight, and we began. "Now step up, now down," and so on till we were safely arrived, and the darling was nestled in my arms, saying, gleefully, "Wasn't it nice, papa? I never peeped once!"

"But," said mamma, "didn't you feel afraid you'd fall, dear?"

With a look of trusting love came the answer:

"Oh, no, mamma, I had a tight hold on papa's hand, and I knew he would take me safely over the hard places."—Exchange.

Little Heads Together.

BIBLICAL ACROSTIC.

1. A governor of Judæa appointed by Nebuchadnezzar.
2. A city of Asia Minor.
3. A town of Zebulon and Issachar.
4. A town near which Samson was buried.
5. A celebrated gold region.
6. The place where St. Paul first landed in Europe.

Primals form the name of a judge who refused a crown.

CROSSWORD ENIGMA.

In Celt, but not in Goth;
In chrysalis, not in moth;
In yearning, not in love;
In pigeons, not in dove;
In highest, not in high;
In laying, not in lie;
In clearer, not in fair;
In ambush and in snare.
The whole, by eyes observant found,
Lying in winter on the ground.

SQUARE WORD.

1. A quadruped. 2. A famous Jewish priest. 3. A collection of soldiers. 4. Streams of light.

Answers to Puzzles of January 13th.

Zigzag.—

J O H N
L O V E
H A H A
M O O N
T A P E
L E N D
R E N D
O G R E
S O O N
G A O L
F E E T
E S P Y
E D G E

Misplaced Words.—

Whole ages have fled, and their works decayed,
And nations scattered been;
But the stout old ivy shall never fade
From its hale and hearty green.
The brave old plant in its lonely days
Shall fatten upon the past;
For the stateliest building man can raise
Is the ivy's food at last. CHARLES DICKENS.

Square Word.—

H O S T
O H I O
S I G N
T O N E

Correct Answers from Rappie Bowne.

Our readers, young and old, are invited to contribute to this department. Address Cousin Lois, office of THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER.

REV. DR C. L. GOODELL, pastor of the Pilgrim Congregational Church of St. Louis, died suddenly on Monday last. Five years ago he was struck on the head with a slungshot, while on the street on his way home in the evening. His death has resulted from that blow. As a writer and preacher he was one of the first Christian ministers in the country. He was exceedingly attractive as a man, by his genial manner, his humor, his terse sayings, and his abounding sympathy toward all classes of men. He was born at Calais, Vermont, on March 16th, 1830. He came of an old New England and ministerial family.

Injurious to the Public Health.

I have this day made a chemical examination of samples of baking powder purchased by me in the open market and marked Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder, and Royal Baking Powder.

These powders contain:

Cleveland's.
Cream of Tartar
Bicarbonate of Soda
Flour

Royal.
Cream of Tartar
Bicarbonate of Soda
Carbonate of Ammonia
Tartaric Acid
Starch

The relative amount of pure Carbonic Acid Gas produced by 10 grams of each of these powders is as follows:

Cleveland's, 658 cubic centimeters.
Royal, 577 cubic centimeters.

In view of these facts I regard Cleveland's as superior to the Royal because:

I. CLEVELAND'S contains only pure and unobjectionable materials, while the ROYAL contains Ammonia, a drug derived from disgusting sources, powerful in its action upon the system. The adulteration of baking powder with Ammonia is in my opinion an injury to the public health. It deserves the severest condemnation, and should be brought to the attention of physicians and boards of health throughout the country.

II. The quantity of pure Carbonic Acid Gas yielded by CLEVELAND'S is greater than that produced under like conditions by the ROYAL.

CLEVELAND'S BAKING POWDER being pure and free from Ammonia, Lime, Alum, Terra Alba, or any adulteration whatever, and having great leavening power, I do not hesitate to recommend as worthy of public confidence for producing light, digestible, and wholesome bread.

BOSTON, MASS., Aug. 14, 1884.

JAMES F. BABCOCK,

State Assayer and Analytical and Consulting Chemist; late Professor of Chemistry in Boston University and Massachusetts College of Pharmacy.

Financial.

TUESDAY, Feb. 2d.

THE imports of merchandise at this port last week were valued at $7,933,751, and the exports at $5,452,601. The gold export was $150,000 to Antwerp. Sterling exchange sold yesterday for $4 87 for 60 day bills and $4.89 for demand. Some exchange was bought last week to send money to Europe. The value of exchange is not entirely due to the state of trade.

The banks last week reduced loans $763 000, gained in specie $1,928,400, lost in legal tenders $855,600, and gained $122,000 in deposits. Circulation was reduced $90,800. The surplus of reserve was increased to $36,156,425. A year ago the surplus was $53,870,975. The banks hold now within a million and a half of as much specie as they held a year ago, and about 6 1-4 millions less of legal tenders. The majority of loans on call yesterday were made at 1 1-2 per cent.

The Stock Market, despite constant rumors and raids, was steady and strong during the week. Speculatives, of course, are subject to many ups and downs, and are sensitive to rumors. First rate investment bonds are scarce. In Brooklyn the 7 per cent Park bonds are not brought out by bids of 150. They run for a lifetime almost.

The foreign grain markets were reported yesterday rather dull, but with prices unchanged. The quotations in this country were: Wheat here 90, in Chicago 80 1-8; corn here 40 5-8, in Chicago 36 1-8; oats here 37 5-8, in Chicago 28 3-4. The provision market is more firm than at the beginning of the year and prices are higher. Pork here yesterday was quoted at $10.38 to $10 75, and lard at $6.45. Cotton has slowly declined, the closing quotations yesterday being: February, 9.05-06; March, 9.12-16; April, 9.22-26; May, 9.33-37. The supply of hay and straw has increased, that of long rye straw decidedly, and the price has declined to 95 cents and $1.

There is an increase of confidence among business men. The iron mills in operation are well supplied with orders. Mercantile affairs generally have improved. Existing disagreements in the coal trade and between the railways it is believed will be adjusted before long.

The public debt was reduced last month about 8 millions of dollars by the accumulation of cash. The Treasurer paid yesterday about 6 millions of the 10 millions of called bonds. He has called 10 millions more, payable March 1st.

News of the Week.

(Continued from page five.)

The deadlock in the Ohio Senate continues; all efforts to compromise are so far in vain. ....A railroad accident occurred near Toledo, Ohio, in which four men were killed....A heavy loss by fire is reported from St. Paul, Minn ...There is alleged inhuman treatment of children in an orphan asylum at Atlanta, Ga....General Shaler will probably have a new trial in February. ....The Harlem River Bridge contract was delivered without change....Works are being closed in Pittsburg because of the coke troubles.

MONDAY, FEB 1.—The Queen's Private Secretary called upon Mr. Gladstone.... Peace now prevails between France and Madagascar....It is rumored that the King of Greece intends to abdicate....Six houses collapsed in England, killing six persons. ....Lord Hartington is not expected to join in Mr. Gladstone's Cabinet ...A collective note from the Powers in regard to the Balkans has been sent....The Pan-Electric Telephone scandal is causing a great deal of uneasiness in Washington....The Ohio Senate Committee has been chosen to investigate the election frauds....Two women were beaten to death with a hammer in Cleveland....A slight fire occurred in a Government office in Washington....The reason has been given why the claim of the United States against Chili has not been paid....The steamships "Servia" and "Noordland" collided. No lives lost.... More burglaries have been committed along the Hudson River, N. Y....A truckman was fatally stabbed by his brother-in-law in New York....The Irish National League is engaged in raising large sums of money to help Parnell....A snow slide took place in Colorado, which demolished four cabins and buried twenty men under seventeen feet of snow. Four were killed and three will probably die....Mrs. Thomas Francis Bayard, wife of the Secretary of State, died yesterday morning ...A skilful surgical operation was performed at St. Vincent Hospital.

TUESDAY, 2.—Mr. Gladstone visited the Queen, received her command to form a Ministry, kissed her hands, and returned to London yesterday. In the Cabinet reported by rumor, Earl Granville is President of Council and Earl Spencer Foreign Secretary. ....Madagascar by treaty allows Frenchmen to live in the country free from native laws and subject to those of France only. ....Mrs. Bayard's body was conveyed to Wilmington yesterday. The President and Cabinet accompanied it to depot in Washington....Railroad freight house at Grand Haven, Mich , burned down last night.... The Ritzingers' private bank at Indianapolis, Ind., has failed. Depositors mainly of poorer classes ...The Mutual Life asks Chicago University to pay $275,000 past due....Burglar said to have been shot at Tarrytown on Sunday night....Grand change of officials in Brooklyn yesterday ....Two fast Cunarders taken from New York and put on Boston line, are expected to run from Boston to Queenstown in six days or less.

THE MUTUAL BENEFIT LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY of this city reported on December 31st, 1884, assets amounting to $103,876,178.51. It now reports on December 31st, 1885, assets to the extent of $108,908,967 51, an increase of over five millions of dollars in twelve months This is certainly a rapid accumulation of means to meet obligations as they may become due. And this increase is over and above the payment of over $14,000,000 during the year, to holders of policies. The business of the Company has become very great. It receives during twelve months by premiums on policies not far from fifteen millions of dollars, and from rents and interest on invested funds nearly five and a half millions. About 121,000 policy holders and annuitants have confided their interests and hopes to its care. This great business comes from a moderate beginning, and is the result of many years of sagacious and energetic management. These facts speak for themselves.

How to Cure Catarrh.

CATARRH is very frequently mistaken for CONSUMPTION, the symptoms in each being much alike, especially in the earlier stages. No one who recognizes in his own system, or who has friends or relatives with any of the symptoms so accurately described, should fail to send a statement of the case to Mr. Childs. There may be hope even in very desperate cases.

The discovery of his cure for Catarrh and diseases of the Throat and Lungs, has attracted great attention. Leading men everywhere publicly state that Childs' treatment has cured them or their families of Catarrh or Throat or Lung difficulties—among them clergymen, physicians, lawyers, merchants, bankers and business men. All who have personally investigated the facts, are satisfied that Mr. Childs has discovered a certain, positive and permanent cure for these diseases, that when properly used never fails even in the most desperate cases. Catarrh is generally many years in gaining a foothold in the system, and attacks so many parts of the body that it cannot be cured by any one remedy or by a single application. It requires remedies that will meet the disease wherever it is located, and fight it inch by inch until a complete victory has been obtained. Rev. T. P. Childs has treated and cured thousands at their own homes, never having seen them. In a thoroughly honorable and characteristic manner he publishes the names and addresses of some he has cured, that any who desire may inquire of the patients themselves what Childs' treatment has done for them.

None need feel any hesitancy in placing his case in Mr. Childs' hands for treatment. We would call especial attention to the advertisement, and request a careful perusal of the facts as set forth.

Many who do not receive our paper would doubtless be very thankful, should our readers call the attention of such to the advertisement of Mr. Childs. Catarrh and Consumption are the twin enemies of the race, and any means of relief is a heaven sent blessing. Childs' treatment may be relied on as an effective and certain cure for Nasal Catarrh, Bronchitis and all diseases of the Throat and Lungs, and you may recommend it to your friends with every confidence.

Notice to Subscribers.

The little yellow label on your wrapper informs you to what time your subscription is paid. Kindly consult same, and if in arrears remit the amount due.

INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA, nervous prostration, and all forms of general debility relieved by taking Mensman's Peptonized Beef Tonic, the only preparation of beef containing its entire nutritious properties. It is not a mere stimulant like the extracts of beef, but contains blood-making, force-generating, and life-sustaining properties; is invaluable in all enfeebled conditions, whether the result of exhaustion nervous prostration, over work, or acute disease; particularly when resulting from pulmonary complaints. Caswell, Hazard & Co., Proprietors, New York.
Sold by druggists.

Publisher's Department.

THOUSANDS ARE BORN with a tendency to consumption. Such persons, if they value life, must not permit a Cough or Cold to become a fixture in the lungs and chest. The best known remedy for either is Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar. 25c., 50c. and $1.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap heals and beautifies, 25c.
German Corn Remover kills Corns, Bunions, 25c
Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye—Black & Brown, 50c.
Pike's Toothache Drops cure in 1 Minute, 25c.

Catarrh is a very prevalent and exceedingly disagreeable disease; liable, if neglected, to develop into serious consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla, acting through the blood, reaches every part of the system, effecting a radical and permanent cure of catarrh. 100 doses $1.

Relief is immediate, and a sure cure. Piso's Remedy for Catarrh. 50 cents.

MARRIAGES.

HIRST—FRYER.—At Schenectady, N. Y., Jan. 27, by the Rev. Wm. Elliot Griffis, Mr. Charles J. Hirst, of Guilderland Centre, N. Y., to Miss Hattie J. Fryer, of Rotterdam.

JACKSON—HOTALING.—Jan. 27, at the home of the bride's parents, by Rev. B. C. Lippincott, Jefferson Jackson, of Kingston, N. Y., to Sarah J., daughter of Wm. H. Hotaling, of Port Ewen, N. Y.

KINGMAN—KITTLE.—On Jan. 27, 1886, by Rev. Wm. Veenschoten, at the home of the bride's parents, Multzeskill, N. Y., Mr. William H. Kingman, of Woodworth, Wis., to Miss Lene Kittle.

NEYER—ABART.—In Ghent, at the residence of the bride's parents, Wednesday, Jan. 27, 1886, by Rev. J. B. Drury, D.D., George Neyer, of Stottsville, and Pena Abart, eldest daughter of Lois Abart, of Ghent.

DEATHS.

Obituary notices five cents per line (nine word to the line.) For subscribers we will insert fifteen lines free; all lines in excess of that number will be charged same as non-subscribers.

BEST.—At Stuyvesant Landing, on Friday, Jan. 15, Henry Allen, son of Henry A. and Mary Best, aged 1 year and 7 months.

"Jesus called a little child unto him."
"They are going, ever going,
Leaving many a lonely spot;
But 'tis Jesus who has called them,
'Suffer and forbid them not.'" COM.

Notices and Acknowledgments

BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.—A regular meeting of the Board of Foreign Missions, R. C. A., will be held at Synod's Rooms on Wednesday, February 10th, at 3 o'clock P.M. Missionary agents of the different Classes are invited to attend.

HENRY N. COBB, Cor. Sec.

ROYAL
BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans.
ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall-st., N. Y.

JAMES PYLE'S
PEARLINE
The Great Invention,
For EASY WASHING,
IN HARD OR SOFT, HOT OR COLD WATER.
Without Harm to FABRIC or HANDS,
and particularly adapted to Warm Climates.
No family, rich or poor, should be without it.
Sold by all Grocers, but beware of vile imitations. PEARLINE is manufactured only by
JAMES PYLE, NEW YORK.

CATARRH

Thousands are Dying

in early life with consumption, who can look back a few years—perhaps only months—when it was Catarrh. Neglected when a cure is possible, very soon it will transform the features of health and youth into the dark, pallid appearance; while the hacking cough, the excess of blood gushing from the lungs, or night sweats, all significantly proclaim it is too late; and thus a neglected Catarrh ends in the consumptive's grave.

Nasal Catarrh.

Sometimes the disease only affects the membranes lining the nasal passages, and they may be easily reached and cured by simple means. But when it is located in the "frontal sinus," or in the "posterior snares," or if it has entered the "Eustachian tubes," as all well-read physicians will readily attest, nothing can be relied on to effect a permanent cure but the inhalation of properly medicated vapor. In the same manner that we breathe a common air we can inhale and breathe a medicated air; and it is perfectly simple, any one can see, thus to treat a disease of the throat, bronchial tubes and lungs. How much better this method by which remedies are conveyed directly to the seat of the disease, than to resort to the uncertain and too frequently mischievous action of medicines taken into the stomach.

Bronchitis, or Inflammation of the Bronchial Tubes.

This disease is so closely connected with CATARRH that it may be truly described as a branch of that disease, only modified and changed by the nature and organization of the parts affected, CATARRH being confined to the interior of the Nose, while BRONCHITIS affects the small pipes entering into the lungs, known as the Bronchial Tubes. Where this disease obtains its worst character, tumors grow up like mushrooms, creating inflammatory adhesions and discharge of offensive matter from the throat, extending through the Eustachian Tube to the ear, which becomes affected. The absorption of the tuberculous matter is very dangerous and frequently results in PULMONARY CONSUMPTION and Death.

The Cold Air Inhaling Balm.

This part of my treatment I regard as very important, especially in warding off colds (which is half the battle), and in relieving the head and lungs, while under their effects. The balm is composed of several kinds of gums, balsams, firs and essential oils which are separately used by the best physicians in treating throat, bronchial and lung diseases. These I have combined, and concentrated their virtues, which, by the inhaling process, are drawn through the various passages of the head and respiratory organs, reaching and healing every irritated spot. If used when a cold first makes its appearance—which usually begins by irritation of the mucous lining of the nose, and a sneeze, which is nature's emphatic warning—it will invariably check it; and by producing a quicker circulation, and by throwing the blood to the surface, the bad effects of a cold are warded off. It is pleasant to use and almost instant in its effects.

My Experience.

Nineteen Years of terrible headache, disgusting nasal discharges, dryness of the throat, acute bronchitis, coughing, soreness of the lungs, raising bloody mucous, and even night sweats, incapacitating me from my professional duties, and bringing me to the verge of the grave—all were caused by, and the results of, nasal catarrh After spending hundreds of dollars and obtaining no relief, I compounded my Catarrh Specific and Cold Air Inhaling Balm and wrought upon myself a wonderful cure. Now I can speak for hours with no difficulty and can breathe freely in any atmosphere. At the calls of numerous friends I have given my cure to the public, and have now thousands of patients in all parts of the country, and thousands of happy fellow-beings whose sufferings I have relieved. My cure is certain, thorough and perfect, and is endorsed by every physician who has examined it. If I can relieve my fellow-beings as I have been relieved of this loathsome disease, which makes the possessor at once disgusting to himself and others, I shall be satisfied and feel that I have done my little toward removing the ills of mankind.

THE FOLLOWING FROM OTHER PUBLISHERS HAS GIVEN US EVERY CONFIDENCE IN RECOMMENDING MR. CHILDS TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS:

"The publishers and editors of the Journal and Messenger, Cincinnati, have known Rev. T. P. Childs for many years, and feel every confidence in any statements he may make. Our subscribers can feel every confidence in giving their cases into his hands for treatment." "While not supposing that all cases of Catarrh will be cured by the prescription advertised, the publishers of the Illustrated Christian Weekly, of New York, after diligent inquiry, have reason to believe that it has, in many cases, proved effectual." "The publishers of the Congregationalist, of Boston, with multitudes of other people, are somewhat suspicious of patent medicines as a rule, and when we received the advertisement of Mr. Childs, we at first declined its insertion; but on making inquiry, we received such satisfactory replies, and one especially from a well known Congregational pastor not far from Rev. Mr. Childs, the proprietor of the medicine, that we withdrew our objections." "The publishers of the St. Louis Christian Advocate, after careful investigation, are satisfied that Rev. T. P. Childs' treatment for the head, throat and lungs is all that it is represented to be."

Do Not Trifle With Disease.

We have the only known certain and reliable method for the cure of Nasal Catarrh, Throat and Lung disease; it is regarded by the best of judges as being the most complete treatment ever devised. Indeed, there does not appear to be anything lacking in its perfect adaptation to these diseases in all their loathsome, painful and dangerous developments. Each case is examined into carefully and critically and the whole treatment compounded to meet the wants of each individual. To this fact alone much of our success is due, and we think no case is incurable when our questions are properly answered. Fifteen years of constant practice with thousands of patients all over the country have enabled us to bring the application of our Remedies to the highest point of perfection. Do not trifle then with some cheap so called "Cure" which at best can afford but temporary relief, (while the roots of the vile disease are left to strike deeper and deeper,) but be in earnest and be thorough or do nothing! You have been years in contracting the disease; you cannot be rid of it in a day, or with one application of any medicine.

The Experience of Others.

On account of so many patients having been swindled by unprincipled quacks and pretenders who flood the country with their advertisements, we deem it only fair that every one that wishes should have the opportunity to ascertain whether we are able to accomplish all that we claim; and for this purpose we add a few of the many hundreds of unsolicited certificates that have been sent to us by grateful patients; almost any of whom will doubtless respond to any inquiry by letter, if accompanied by a stamp to pay postage. Having been cured themselves they will doubtless be willing to let the afflicted know where they may find certain relief.

We have hundreds of certificates from all classes—physicians, clergymen, lawyers, judges, merchants, bankers, and business men; but many dislike the notoriety of having their names in print, or, disliking the task of answering letters of inquiry, have requested us not to publish their names; and this injunction is always most sacredly respected. Correspondence of all kinds is strictly confidential.

HE KNOWS IT CURES.

The following is a copy of a letter written by REV. R. E. MELVIN, of Camden, Miss., to the Texas Baptist Herald, Austin, Texas, and published in that paper, dated Feb. 19, 1885.

From Bro. Melvin, CAMDEN, MISS., Jan 31, 1885.

I was right well pleased to see in last Herald an editorial notice making favorable mention of Bro. Childs' Catarrh Specific. Others besides him are advertising to cure catarrh; of the merits of the treatment offered by any of them, I say nothing because I know nothing; but I know that Bro. Childs CURES it, because he cured me. In January, 1879, I was brought so low that I no more expected ever to see the leaves on the trees again, than to see the sun shine at midnight; and Eld. M. T. Martin, now of Texas, remembers the fact well. For my present marvelous health I am, under the blessing of God, indebted alone to the remedy offered by Rev. T. P. Childs, of Troy, Ohio, and I hold it a religious duty I owe the afflicted, to speak of it on all proper occasions.

As to the remedies offered by anybody else, I say nothing; they may be all that is claimed for them, but I repeat: Dr. Childs cured me.

R. E. MELVIN.

We add the following extracts from a recent letter from him to us:

"As to my own case, I am sound as a dollar and my head is as clear as a bell. I am in every sense of the word a stouter man than when I commenced the treatment in 1879. I am now in my 74th year. For the last five years of vigorous, active work in the gospel ministry I am, under God, indebted solely to you. Last summer in Texas, in a period of fifty-seven consecutive days, I spent fifty-four in actual preaching and five of those days I preached twice"

MR. V. O. TUCKER, of Croppers, Ky., writes under date of Sept. 8, 1885:—"When I commenced to use your treatment I could not walk two hundred yards without great fatigue. Your treatment has cured me, and I am now as stout as any man. I would recommend your treatment to all afflicted with catarrh, as I know it will cure."

MRS. A. GUILLORY, Ville Plate, St. Landy Parish, La.
W. L. WILSON Troy, Pike County, Alabama.
ROBERT Y. DANIEL, Union Springs, Bullock co., Ala.
Rev. A. N. JACKSON, Union Springs, Bullock co., Ala
MRS. T. G. GARRETT, Greenville, Ala
O. P. WISE, Magnolia, Columbia co, Ark.
Rev. J. B. FISH, Weavervile, Trinity co., Cal.
K. SHELTON, Davisville, Yolo co., Cal.
Mrs. R. E. HARLEY, 912 F St., N. E. Washington, D.C.
Z. A. CRAMPTON, Archer, Alachua co., Fla.
E. H. WRIGHT, M.D., Kings Ferry, Nassau co., Fla.
Mrs. E. C. THOMAS, Hollowville, Pike co, Ga.
S. H. BRONAX, Walnut Grove, Walnut co, Ga.
T. N. HOWARD, Eatonton, Putnam co, Ga.
I. C. GLISSON, Mobleys Pond, Scriven co, Ga.
M. D. WOODRUFF, Macon co., Ill.
M. ALSHULER, Mattoon, Coles co., Ill.
T. B. ROSE, Mattoon, Coles co., Ill.
J. P. ROBERTS, Room 3, 87 Mich. ave., Chicago, Ill.
JOHN BULLOCK, La Cross, Hancock co., Ill.
A. L. SHEPLER Georgetown, Vermillion co., Ill.
DAVID WINELAND, Girard, Macoupin co., Ill.
J. J. RHODES, Whitewater, Wayne co., Ind.
J. C. WILMOT, Oxford, Benton co, Ind.
B. S. DUNKIN, Carroll, Carroll co., Ind.
W. Z. JENKINS, Pennville, Jay co., Ind.
Mrs. JOAN SULLIVAN, 155 Dorman street, Indianapolis, Ind.
Mrs. A. H. BATLENTINE, Vinita, Cherokee co., Ind. Territory.
BENJ. B. BOAM, Clinton, Clinton co., Iowa
CALVIN TEAGARDEN, Griffinsville, Appanoose co., Iowa.
J. Z. BARNETT, Farmington, Van Buren co., Iowa
B. T. WELCH, Washington, Iowa.
H. C. FRENCH, Red Oak, Montgomery co., Iowa.
JAMES WHITE, Canola, Elk co, Kans.
Mrs. C. MILLER, Merriam, Johnson co., Kans.
Mrs. L. P. JAMES, Crab Orchard, Lincoln co., Ky.
F. PARKS, Wild Cat, Whitley co., Ky.
Z. Z. LEE, Grangeville, St. Helena Par., La.

MR. G. K. SMITH, of the H. C. Staver Implement Co., Chicago, Ill., writes:—"I heartily congratulate you on the success of your treatment. It does a sick man good to know that there is a 'balm in Gilead.'"

MR. J. MANLY, of Adrian, Mo., writes:—"There is a vast difference in my condition to-day from what it was this time last year; thanks to your remedy."

MR. F. R. WALLACE, President of the Merchants & Planters National Bank, Union, S. C., writes under date of June 24, 1885:—"I never knew a medicine to answer its purpose better than your Cold Air Inhaling Balm."

[NOTE—The Cold Air Inhaling Balm is a portion of our treatment for Bronchial Catarrh, but is very useful to any one, as it will almost immediately break up a fresh cold in the head, and thus prevent seated catarrh.]

MR. P. H. STECKMAN, of Brandon, Iowa, under date of April 7, 1885, writes:—"I have recommended your treatment to quite a number, and they say they will give it a trial. You can refer any one to me, for I am satisfied with your treatment and will be glad to recommend it to any one suffering with catarrh."

MR. C. F. SOUDERS, of Mount Carroll, Ill., writes March 14, 1885:—"Your medicines for catarrh, if used according to directions, with perseverance, are a certain cure for that disgusting disease. I can cheerfully testify to the above."

MR. O. N. YOUNG, of Chico, Cal., writes under date of June 14, 1885:—"After having received your medicines, and finding them effectual in producing a cure in my case, I recommended them, and allowed other parties to have the use of them. In one case it cured an old man, and in the other a married woman."

REV. F. B. CUNZ, of Floraville, Ill., writes:—"It seems almost marvelous how rapidly my wife has gained; no more difficulty in breathing; very little coughing; and her case was one of very long standing. I shall recommend your wonderful treatment whenever I find an opportunity."

J. F. WHITE, East Machias, Washington co., Maine.
THOMAS B. HAND, 193 East Fayette street, Baltimore, Md.
Mrs. H. C. MURRAY, 507 Linden ave., Baltimore, Md.
Rev. G. W. HYDE, Annapolis, Md.
Rev. G. BREKMAN, 11 Shelby st., Worcester, Mass.
J. H. BULLARD, Springfield, Mass.
CHAS. E. BAKER, 59 Tremont st., Boston, Mass.
HARRY TRUESDELL, Rockdale Mills, Berkshire co., Mass.
ALONZO BENNETT, Jackson, Jackson co., Mich.
D. F. BRUITT, Niles, Berrian co., Mich.
SISTER CLARA, O. S. B., St. Cloud, Minn.
Rev. J. L. PETTIGREW, Raymond, Miss.
W. H. ATLEDGE, Paulding, Jasper co., Miss.
J. F. JONES, Baldwin, Lee co., Miss.
L. B. CANEY, Auxvasse, Calloway co., Mo.
W. P. HARMON, California, Mo.
J. BARKER, Lovelock, Humboldt co., Nevada.
J. A. PRATT, Goffs Falls, Hillsboro co, N. H.
J. J. DUCKWORTH, Pattenburgh, N. J.
WM. H. KAIN, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.
C. E. DANFORTH, 19 Nassau st., New York City.
W. G. LANG, Marlboro, Pitt co., N. C.
ABNER GRAHAM, Charlotte, Mecklenburg co., N. C.
D. J. JONES, Tokio, Ohio.
GEO. H. FOOTE, 75 St. Clair st. Cleveland, O.
Mrs. E. P. HOOKER, Defiance, O.
W. F. FAAS, Minerva, Stark co., Ohio.
C. W. CHASE, Columbus, Ohio.
S. B. EAKIN, SR., Eugene, Lane co., Oregon.
J. K. SIGFRIED, Pottsville, Pa.
Rev. H. HILBISH, Hanover, York co, Pa.
J. A. BALTOZER, Morgarza, Washington co., Pa.
T. A. WILBER, 143 Meeting st., Charleston, S. C.
Rev. G. W. DALBY, Shelbyville, Tenn.
W. S. SANDELL, Willis, Montgomery co., Tex.
Mrs. A. D. FOREHAND, Centreville, Tex.
C. S. GATES, 9 Virginia st., Richmond Va.
J. W. SANDERS, Five Mile, Mason co., W. Va.
D. D. DEMARIUS, Grand Rapids, Wood co., Wis.
Rev. E. L. HARRIS, Darien, Wis.
Rev. G. W. MITCHELL, Athens, Ga.

Home Treatment Childs' Treatment for Catarrh, and all diseases of the Head, Throat and Lungs, can be taken at home with perfect ease and safety, by the patient. We especially desire to treat those who have tried other remedies without success. A full statement of method of home treatment and cost will be sent on application.

Address REV. T. P. CHILDS, Troy, Ohio.

☞ Mention the Christian Intelligencer.

The Church.

Deacon Sayre's Bequest.

"AND so the deacon has gone at last," said Miss Elizabeth Allen, as she met the Sunday-school superintendent on the street.

"Yes, he has gone," was the reply, "and a sore loss it is to our little church."

Deacon Sayre was a peculiar man, but a man of wonderful gentleness and deep spirituality. The little church of which he was a member had been kept from disbanding in dark days of financial embarassment, by drafts upon the Deacon's purse, for he was wealthy.

There were several restless spirits in the little church, and each had a scheme of some kind on hand most of the time, so there was clashing and discord. Strangers were repelled instead of attracted, for the atmosphere was sombre and unsocial. All this grieved good Deacon Sayre, and he thought and prayed and labored over the small success of his beloved church.

But at last Deacon Sayre died. Soon after his death, the trustees of the church received a notice from the Judge of Probate to be present at the proving of his will. The deacon, though a quiet man while living, had a will of his own. When he died, he left a document behind him, that showed a strong desire to carry out after death, the purposes that were dearest to him in life. A single clause in his will, is all that need be quoted here:

I further give, devise and bequeath to the trustees of the church, in the village of C——, of which I have been for twenty years an unworthy member, the sum of $30,000, to be expended in the erection of a house of worship upon the site where the old one now stands. I expressly enjoin upon my devisees, a strict compliance with the following condition in the erection of said building:

There shall be an Annex opening out of the vestibule of the church. Said Annex shall contain one large, handsome room, which I hereby direct to be fitted up and furnished as a parlor. I direct that all its appointments be attractive and homelike. I also direct that it be kept open, warmed and lighted at all the regular services of the church on Sunday. I do not direct, but suggest, that the care of said Annex be in the hands of a committee of ladies, rather than in the hands of the sexton, experience having shown that ladies have an uncompromising hostility to dirt, dust and spiders' webs. I further direct, and I expressly condition the enjoyment of my said bequest upon a strict compliance with the following, viz: That the pastor whenever he holds a service in the church, shall publicly invite all strangers present, to meet him, immediately after service in the Annex. I do this, hoping that no stranger can ever be present without making the acquaintance of the pastor, if he is disposed to meet him half way.

Further details as to the use of said Annex, I leave to the common sense of the pastors and people who may worship in the new church building when I am no longer on earth; beseeching the Lord to send a long line of ministers whose hearts are in easy communication with their right hands, and who will make it a part of their religion to speak to strangers.

I entered the Freshman class in college the fall after Deacon Sayre died. Before I had quite completed the course and received the coveted sheepskin, my father's family removed from C. Then came three years in Europe. Then a bride filled a home with sunshine, and the years flew by with fearful swiftness. Could it be possible? Yes, fifteen years were gone, and a beautiful afternoon in June found me stopping with my wife at the hotel in C. I had changed. I left C. a beardless boy. Now I was a man with a family. The hotel was a new one. Sunday morning came. At my plate I found an envelope directed to myself. Everybody whose name is registered on the books of the hotel finds an envelope directed to himself at his plate on Sunday morning. I opened mine and found in it a card, stating the hour of divine service at the —— church, and an invitation to attend.

"By all means, let us go," said Kate. "I have some curiosity to see if anyone will recognize you."

A visit to my native village was a treat that I had long promised to Kate. I was as eager for it as the prisoner of Chillon was > to ascend to his barred window

> And to bend upon the mountain high,
> The quiet of a loving eye.

I was struck with the rich musical tone of the bell that called us to come and worship. The old bell used to utter a very feeble call. The new church was a perfect beauty. Here and there, in the congregation, there were faces that I could recognize. Judge A. dozed as naturally as ever. His three pretty daughters were no longer with him in the pew. Brother B. stepped forward just after the text was given out, as gracefully as ever, to lower a window. The singing was excellent. The old-time box that "piped and whistled in its sound," had given place to a good pipe-organ, and most of the congregation joined in the service of song.

Just before the benediction, the pastor announced that all strangers present would confer a favor by stepping for a moment into the Annex where he would be most happy to meet them. We had hardly stepped into the aisle on our way out before a woman with a bright, cheery face, with welcome dimpled into each cheek, extended her hand, and introduced herself as a member of the Ladies' Committe of Welcome to Strangers.

"I am going to take you into our Annex," said she, "and I want the pleasure of introducing you to our pastor."

Of course we followed her. The Annex was a room that the woman of the period would at once pronounce "just lovely." It was neatly carpeted, and was furnished with sofas, easy-chairs, mirrors and all the other appliances that good taste could suggest. The centre-table bore several vases of flowers. Pretty soon five other ladies came in, each bringing some one whom she had captured in the aisles.

What a hearty welcome the pastor had for each new-comer! When I gave my name he said, "I wonder if you are the son of Mr. —— a former member of this church," and when I answered that I was, he seemed delighted. Then the word went around that a man bearing a name remembered by many still in the church, was in the Annex, and soon the little room was full.

"Do you remember Deacon Sayre?" said one. I did remember him, and his mild suggestion to me to let a favorite dog remain at home in future, one Sunday, when the services were interrupted by a voluntary not set to music.

"Well," said another, "the dearest purpose of his life found expression in this church, and especially in this pleasant room." Never before had I been in such a pleasant atmosphere within the walls of a church. But what is that burst of music?

"Oh," said the pastor, "they are singing the opening hymn in the Sunday-school; come out now and see what a grand Sunday-school we have."

I went out, and the other strangers, now seeming like old friends, went out too.

I dropped in again in the evening. I could not help it. There was another brief meeting in the Annex, for there are strangers present at every service.

"I wish you could come back and be one of us," said one of the members of the committee, to my wife and myself. "Our church has learned several lessons. Our Thursday evening meetings are real prayer-meetings now. Do stay over till at least Wednesday morning, and attend our Tuesday evening social. It is in honor of Deacon Sayre's birthday. We never let that anniversary pass without celebrating it."

We stayed over and went to that social. As we left C. the next morning I said to Kate that if ever we became rich and could leave a legacy to a church, we would remember Deacon Sayre's bequest, and let our legacy be for the erection of an Annex, and Kate said Amen.—Robert L. Bangs, in The Advance.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Home Readings.

LESSON 7, FIRST QUARTER.

M. Nebuchadnezzar's Dream.....Dan. 4:1-18.
T. The Dream Interpreted.....Dan. 4:19-27.
W. The Dream Fulfilled.....Dan. 4:28-37.
T. The Impious Feast.....Dan. 5:1-16.
F. The Handwriting on the Wall.....Dan. 5:17-31.
S. Judgment against Babylon.....Jer. 51:47-58.
S. The Fear of the Lord.....Isa. 2:10-22.

—From the Westminster Question Book.

International Sunday-School Lesson.

BY REV. JOHN C. VAN DEVENTER.

Feb. 14th.—"The Handwriting on the Wall."—Dan. 5:1-12; 25-28.

Golden Text.—"Thou art weighed in the balances, and art found wanting."—DAN. 5:27.

CENTRAL TRUTH.—"We must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ."—2 COR. 5:10.

INTRODUCTION.

AFTER the trial of the fiery furnace, nothing is related concerning Daniel and his three friends during a period of about fifty years, excepting the record of Nebuchadnezzar's dream and its fulfilment. (Chap. 4.) It is probable that after the death of Nebuchadnezzar Daniel, although still holding a public position, had lapsed into semi-obscurity. A number of changes in the reigning house had occurred before the events recorded in this lesson. The present king, Nabonidus, was not a descendant of Nebuchadnezzar, but seems to have married into the royal family. About two years before the dramatic close of the history of Babylon, Darius and Cyrus had laid siege to the city. This city was probably one of the best defended cities the world has ever seen. It was surrounded by an immense wall which it was impossible to scale; the river Euphrates passed through the centre of the city, and upon either bank was a strong wall, pierced with gates at the entrances to the streets, so that the city was in reality two walled towns. The immense storehouses were reported to contain food sufficient for a siege of twenty years. Nabonidus had gone out of the city with an army to meet the enemy and prevent their approach to the city. He had suffered a complete defeat, and was now at Borsippa, where he could do nothing for the defence of his capital. Before leaving the city he had associated with himself his eldest son, only a lad, whom he left behind to govern the city during his absence. This dual king-ship accounts for the apparent discrepancy between accounts, some of which mention Nabonidus as king without reference to his son, while others speak of Belshazzar as if he was sole monarch.

THE LESSON.

I. THE FEAST OF THE KING.—VS 1-4.

V. 1.—"Belshazzar the king made a great feast to a thousand of his lords." This was doubtless a festival in honor of some heathen deity. These Babylonian feasts are represented by secular historians as having been most disgraceful orgies, culminating in drunkenness and all manner of license. The king honored his guests by his presence, but was seated at a separate table from them.

V. 2.—"Belshazzar while he tasted wine." This does not imply that he only tasted. He was probably well under its influence, and was about to illustrate the proverb, "When wine is in, wit is out." "Commanded to bring the golden and silver vessels." These articles had been carefully preserved as sacred relics by the predecessors of this mad boy! and do not seem to have been used even for sacred purposes by them. Now they are to be profaned, not only in connection with drink offerings made to idols, but in most disgraceful immoralities.

V. 3.—"And the king and his princes, his wives and his concubines drank in them." These vessels which had so long ornamented the house of Jehovah, and had served at His altar, were now made vessels of sin and of wrath. The presence of women at this feast, so different from the custom of other eastern nations, was in accord with the habits of the Babylonians.

V. 4.—"And praised the gods of gold," etc. They exalted their idols as triumphant over Jehovah, and regarded the degradation of these vessels as proof of His defeat. Surely the triumph of the wicked is brief.

II. THE FINGERS OF GOD.—VS. 5-12.

V. 5.—"In the same hour came forth fingers of a man's hand." It is needless to question whether this is to be regarded as the hand of God or of an unseen angel, in either case the work was that of God. "And wrote over against the candlestick." It is not certain whether this refers to some ordinary candlestick, or to that brought from the temple. It seems more in keeping with the rest of the narrative to suppose that the sacred lamp had been brought with the other vessels to adorn the feast. As the candlestick had stood near the veil of the temple, so now God manifests Himself "over against the candlestick." "The king saw the part of the hand that wrote." We may imagine something of the wonder and awe with which the wicked king watched the ghostly hand tracing the letters of his sentence on the wall.

V. 6.—"Then the king's countenance was changed." He was sobered in an instant. All color fled from his face; he knew that something mysterious was hidden beneath the few words he saw on the wall. "His thoughts troubled him." Conscience was at work. He was questioning himself as to the possibility of the God whom he had just dishonored being greater than his gods of gold. "The joints of his loins were loosed." His entire physical nature was disturbed by this shock.

V. 7.—"The king cried aloud to bring in the astrologers." In this case ignorance was not bliss, for suspense was terrible. He would know the meaning of this message even though it should be the sentence of his doom. He offered a grand reward to whoever would interpret the writing for him. "Shall be the third ruler in the kingdom." This clause shows that Daniel was not ignorant of and did not ignore the fact that Belshazzar only occupied the second place in the kingdom.

V. 8.—"They could not read the writing, nor make known to the king the interpretation thereof." This may simply mean that they could not read the words understandingly, and so could not explain their meaning, or that they had been placed upon the wall in some puzzling order, so that it was impossible for one not instructed of God even to make out the words.

V. 9.—The failure of the wise men to read and interpret the writing only served to intensify the fear of the king, and to throw him into despair. His cries of anguish and calls for help filled the palace.

V. 10.—"Now the queen, by reason of the words of the king." This was evidently the queen mother, who had not been present at the feast, but who had heard the confusion and uproar which arose over the writing. She came to give advice to her son in this emergency.

V. 11.—"There is a man in thy kingdom, in whom is the spirit of the gods" As the daughter of Nebuchadnezzar the queen must have often seen Daniel at her father's court, and could not have failed to be familiar with the leading points of his history, especially his interpretation of the dream which marked the latter part of the king's life.

V. 12.—"Now let Daniel be called." If this matter was only an illusion, no one was better able to dissolve the doubts than the prophet; if, however, it was a message from Jehovah, His servant alone could reveal its meaning.

III. THE FATE OF THE SINFUL.—VS. 25-28.

V. 25.—Before proceeding to the interpretation of the words, Daniel throws more light upon the conscience of the king, and holds up before him the many lessons which the LORD had sent before this one, and which he had wilfully disregarded. "This is the writing that was written, MENE, MENE, TEKEL, UPHARSIN" The fact that these words are not recorded except as part of Daniel's speech indicates that they had not been recognized before.

V. 26.—"MENE; God hath numbered thy kingdom and finished it." The word means "numbered," and being repeated becomes emphatic. The short period of power had been poorly improved and now the time of reckoning was at hand.

V. 27.—"TEKEL; Thou art weighed in the balances, and art found wanting." Personal as well as royal failure is here predicted. His heart and life had not been right in God's sight. Each word was an arrow of the Almighty in the heart of His enemy.

V. 28.—"PERES; Thy kingdom is divided and given to the Medes and Persians." There is really no difference between PERES and UPHARSIN. The latter is the plural form with the conjunction "and" prefixed. While Daniel was speaking the Persian army was entering the city by the river bed, whose waters had been diverted into an artificial channel, and finding the sentries negligent was rapidly taking possession of the doomed city. "In that night was Belshazzar the King of the Chaldeans slain." (V. 30.)

LESSONS FOR TO-DAY.

1. Power brings heavy responsibilities.
2. Pleasure often leads to sin and danger.
3. Irreverence toward God is one of the worst forms of sin.
4. Many devils sleep in the wine cup, to wake in the mind and heart of the drinker.
5. "The eyes of the LORD are in every place."
6. MENE; Thy life is numbered; are you ready for the accounting?
7. TEKEL; Thou art being weighed in God's balances; are you found wanting?
8. PERES; In the dividing at the last day, on which side will you appear?

Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

Beware of Imitations.

Imitations and counterfeits have again appeared. Be sure that the word "HORSFORD'S" is on the wrapper. None are genuine without it.

Beware of Scrofula

Scrofula is probably more general than any other disease. It is insidious in character, and manifests itself in running sores, pustular eruptions, boils, swellings, enlarged joints, abscesses, sore eyes, etc. Hood's Sarsaparilla expels all trace of scrofula from the blood, leaving it pure, enriched, and healthy.

"I was severely afflicted with scrofula, and for over a year had two running sores on my neck. Took five bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and consider myself cured." C. E. LOVEJOY, Lowell, Mass.

C. A. Arnold, Arnold, Me., had scrofulous sores for seven years, spring and fall. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured him.

Salt Rheum

William Spies, Elyria, O., suffered greatly from erysipelas and salt rheum, caused by handling tobacco. At times his hands would crack open and bleed. He tried various preparations without aid; finally took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and now says: "I am entirely well."

"My son had salt rheum on his hands and on the calves of his legs. He took Hood's Sarsaparilla and is entirely cured." J. B. STANTON, Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Made only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

CARDS 60 Fancy Pictures, and 25 elegant Cards in Gilt Edge, Silk Fringe, Hidden Name, &c., 1 Songster, 1 $50 Prize Puzzle, and 8 parlor games, all for 10cts. Game of Authors, 10cts. IVORY CO., Clintonville, Conn.

NEW PERPETUAL FLOWERING FUCHSIA "STORM KING"

This new Double Perpetual-Flowering Weeping Fuchsia, "Storm King," is the grandest plant novelty in many years. It is always in bloom, often as many as 200 buds and blossoms on a plant at once. The branches droop most gracefully, and the blossoms are frequently as large as teacups. The buds for two weeks before they expand are balls of glowing scarlet crimson. When expanded, the enormous double flowers are almost pure white, capped by a calyx of glowing scarlet; and when a plant is loaded with buds and blossoms it presents a sight which for true grandeur and beauty no flower can surpass. They are of the easiest culture and will grow and bloom freely with ordinary care in any window or garden. Price of strong plants which will soon bloom, by mail, post-paid, 50 cts. each, 3 for $1.00, 7 for $2.00, 12 for $3.00. We pack secure from frost and warrant them to arrive in good order. Form Clubs for this grand Fuchsia. See the low price at which they can be secured by the dozen.

Our new Double White Perpetual-Flowering Violet, "Swanley White," is the queen of fragrant flowers. It produces in great number large pure white double blossoms of great beauty and fragrance. A splendid winter bloomer and desirable for pot or open ground culture. Strong plants, which are now budded and blooming, by mail, 30 cts. each, 2 for 60 cts, 12 for $2.00.

Our new Imperial German Pansies have created a sensation and are the floral wonder of the times. Flowers of enormous size, with colors and markings entirely new and of marvelous beauty (see catalogue). They bloom from May to December; always large and profuse through the dry, hot weather of Summer when other sorts fail. Mixed seed of over 50 distinct colors, 25 cts. per paper. We have 40 distinct colors separate, such as pure white, black, yellow, blue, spotted, &c., at 25 cts. per paper.

We also send 12 large flowering bulbs of Double Pearl Tuberoses for $1.00; 5 fine hardy Lilies, including Auratum, 75 cts.; 12 choice mixed Gladiolus, 50 cts.; 4 beautiful Tea Roses—white, red, yellow and pink, 50 cts.; 4 Chrysanthemums or 4 Carnations, 50 cts. See our large, beautiful catalogue, free to all, for other special offers. Any of the above articles will be sent by mail, post-paid, and guaranteed to arrive in good condition. They are exactly as represented, and will more than please those who plant them. Many years of liberal and honest dealings have secured to us our great business, extending to all parts of the world. Orders can be sent at once. The white Pansies are magnificent for cemeteries.

SEEDS, BULBS and PLANTS.—Our large, beautifully illustrated catalogue sent free to all who apply. New and beautiful novelties in Flower and Vegetable Seeds, Gladiolus, Lilies, Amaryllis, Roses, Carnations, Geraniums, Clematis, &c. Preserve this advertisement, as it may not appear again, and remember that our goods have an established reputation and are warranted true. See catalogue which will be sent free to any who purchase or expect to.

Address, JOHN LEWIS CHILDS, Floral, Queens Co., N. Y.

N. B.—Remittance can be made in money orders, Postal Notes, Bills, Drafts, or Stamps. To those who order, or expect to, we will send free, with our elegant catalogue, beautiful colored chromos of Storm King Fuchsia, Swanley White Violet, and German Pansies. Also, for every dollar's worth ordered from this advertisment, the buyer can have free a paper of PURE WHITE or PURE BLACK German Pansy Seed.

7% NET Security 3 to 6 times loan. INTEREST semi-annual and paid at your home. 29th year of residence, and 10th of business. No investor ever had to pay taxes, costs of foreclosure, wait for interest, or take land. BEST of References all around you. Write if you have money to loan.

D. S. B. JOHNSTON & SON,
Negotiators of Mortgage Loans.
MENTION THIS PAPER St. Paul, Minn.

YOU CAN DYE ANYTHING ANY COLOR
With Diamond Dyes, for 10 cts. They never fail. 32 fast colors. They also make inks, color photo's, etc. Send for colored samples and Dye book. Gold, Silver, Copper and Bronze Paints for any use—only 10 cents a pk'ge. Druggists sell or we send post-paid.
WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

Is a Book of 70 pages, with 200 engravings of Orchard and Small Fruits, Nuts, &c. Gives honest descriptions of Golden Queen Raspberry, Lawson Pear, and over 400 other Fruits, instructions for planting, pruning, cultivation and management, with low prices for Trees and Plants. Price 10c. with colored plates; without plates 5c. Price Lists free.

Will be mailed FREE to all applicants, and to customers of last year without ordering it. It contains about 180 pages, 600 illustrations, prices, accurate descriptions and valuable directions for planting all varieties of VEGETABLE and FLOWER SEEDS, BULBS, etc. Invaluable to all, especially to Market Gardeners. Send for it.
D. M. FERRY & CO., Detroit, Michigan.

THE DINGEE & CONARD CO'S
BEAUTIFUL EVER-BLOOMING
ROSES

Our Great Specialty is growing and distributing ROSES. We have all the latest novelties and finest standard sorts, in different sizes and prices to suit all wants. Over 450 choicest varieties to choose from. We send strong Pot Roses safely by mail to all Post Offices, purchaser's choice of varieties, all labeled, 3 TO 12 PLANTS $1. $8 to $15 per Hundred, according to value. Two year Roses by express. Our New Guide, 78 pages, elegantly illustrated, Free. Address THE DINGEE & CONARD CO., Rose Growers, West Grove, Chester Co. Pa.

PILES. Instant relief. Final cure in 10 days, and never returns. No purge, no salve no suppository. Sufferers will learn of a simple remedy Free, by addressing C. J. MASON, 78 Nassau St., N. Y.

CLAREMONT COLONY!
CLAREMONT COLONY!
CLAREMONT COLONY!
CLAREMONT COLONY!
CLAREMONT COLONY!
CLAREMONT COLONY!
CLAREMONT COLONY!

A New House every 16 days in the last 6 years. Our village, only 32 months old, has 5 stores, 2 hotels, 2 churches, school, newspaper, factory, foundry, 4 steamboats, 2 trains and 2 mails daily. Land rapidly advancing. Send, send, send, by all means, send for circulars with 4 maps, 36 Photographic cuts of houses, all about the wonderful growth of our colony, its soil, climate, markets, business opportunities, health, prices, terms, and 96 other distinct subjects. Farms for $200 on monthly instalments to those having employment, without leaving their situation.
Address J. F. MANCHA, Claremont, Surry Co., Va.

GEO. MATHER'S SONS,
PRINTING INK
Manufacturers. Superior Black and Colored Ink Lithographic and Plate Ink. Varnishes, etc. 60 John street New York.
The Intellgencer is printed with our ink.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS
SOLD BY ALL DEALERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD
GOLD MEDAL PARIS EXPOSITION—1878.

POPULAR LECTURES.
SUBJECTS
1.—The Romance of the Revolution.
2.—An Evening with Longfellow
3.—The Tudors
4.—Monologue—National Poems and Events
Address MRS. E. T. BARRETT,
SING SING, N. Y

PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS. 25 CTS.

I CURE FITS!
When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS, a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you.
Address, DR. H. G. ROOT, 183 Pearl St., New York

FINANCIAL.

7 PER CENT. INTEREST FIRST MORTGAGE FARM LOANS.

Personal acquaintance with lands and values. Over 2,000 loans made. NO CUSTOMER has ever LOST A DOLLAR of principal or interest on any loans made here. Interest collected and sent to you, free of cost, each year. These loans are very safe, and pay nearly U.S. BONDS. I am three times as much as known and recommended by leading business men and clergymen, East and West—men for whom I have been making these investments for TEN YEARS PAST.

REFERENCES.
REV. WM. L. GAGE, D.D., Hartford, Ct.
M. E. GATES, PH.D., LL.D., President Rutgers College, New Brunswick, N. J.
DR. WM. J MILNE, President Geneseo Normal School, Geneseo, N. Y
HON. E. M. TOPLIFF, Manchester, N. H.
REV. JOHN W. RAY, Lake City, Minn
DR. JNO. K. BUCKLYN, Mystic Bridge, Ct.
Importers' and Traders' National Bank, New York.
First National Bank, St. Paul, Minn.
The Congregationalist, Boston, N. Y. Observer, and hundreds of others in all parts of the United States.

All are pleased with my Investments. Circular, references, letters giving experience and testimony of old customers, and a New Map of Dakota sent free on application. Mention this paper. Address

E. P. GATES,
Pres. Merchant's Bank,
Grand Forks, Dakota.

6% 7% 8%

The American Investment Company, of Emmetsburg, Iowa, incorporated, with a paid-up capital of $500,000, with branches at Huron and Mitchell, Dakota, offer First Mortgage Farm Loans in Iowa, Minn., Dakota, and Neb., both Principal and Interest Guaranteed. Also 6 per cent. Debenture Bonds (obligations of the Company), running 10 years, secured by Mortgage loans deposited with the Mercantile Trust Co., N. Y. It also issues Demand Certificates of Deposit at 5 per cent. interest. Write for pamphlet and references.
Home Office, Emmetsburg, Iowa.
E. S. Ormsby, Pres., 150 Nassau St., N. Y.

INVEST Through the Sound and Reliable
WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE CO.
F. M. PERKINS, President. LAWRENCE, KAN. L. H. PERKINS, Secretary.
CAPITAL AND SURPLUS, $250,000.
Carefully selected 1st Mortgage Farm Loans payable in N. Y. Unrivalled facilities. Absolute satisfaction. 10 years' experience. No losses. Refer to 3d Nat'l Bank, N.Y. City; Nat'l Bank, Lawrence, Kan.; and Hundreds of Investors. Send for pamphlet, forms and full information. Branch Offices in N.Y. City, Albany & Phila. N.Y. Office, 137 B'way, C.C. Hine & Son, Agts.

Kneeling Bench for use in Church or at Home. Arranged to hold Books.

-CHURCH FURNISHINGS.-
STAINED GLASS MEMORIAL WINDOWS.
MEMORIAL TABLETS OF BRASS, BRONZE, &C.
COMMUNION SERVICES OF SILVER.
S. S. BANNERS, EMBROIDERY, DECORATIONS.
CHURCH FURNITURE.
SEND FOR HAND-BOOKS.
J. & R. LAMB, 59 CARMINE ST., NEW YORK.

BELLS.

McShane Bell Foundry
Finest Grade of Bells,
CHIMES AND PEALS for CHURCHES, &c.
Send for Price and Catalogue. Address
H. McSHANE & CO.,
Mention this paper. Baltimore, Md.

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY.
Bells of Pure Copper and Tin for Churches, Schools, Fire Alarms, Farms, etc. FULLY WARRANTED. Catalogue sent Free.
VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

MENEELY & COMPANY
West Troy, N. Y. Bells,
For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others

CINCINNATI BELL FOUNDRY CO
SUCCESSORS IN BELLS TO THE
BLYMYER MANUFACTURING CO
CATALOGUE WITH 500 TESTIMONIALS
CINCINNATI O. BELLS. CHURCH. SCHOOL. FIRE ALARM

CURE FOR THE DEAF
Peck's Patent Improved Cushioned Ear Drums
PERFECTLY RESTORE THE HEARING, and perform the work of the Natural Drum. Always in position, but invisible to others and comfortable to wear. All Conversation and even whispers heard distinctly. We refer to those using them. Send for illustrated book with testimonials, free. Address, F. HISCOX, 853 Broadway, N. Y. Mention this paper.

CONSUMPTION
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong in my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., N.Y.

Positively the most economical soap to use for the toilet is the Ivory Soap. The cakes are so large that you really get twenty cents worth of soap for a dime.

Free of charge. A full size cake of Ivory Soap will be sent to any one who can not get it of their grocer, if six two-cent stamps, to pay postage, are sent to Procter & Gamble, Cincinnati. Please mention this paper.

STATEMENT

OF

The Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York,

RICHARD A. McCURDY, President.

For the year ending December 31st, 1885.

ASSETS $108,908,967.51

Insurance and Annuity Account.

	No.	Amount.		No.	Amount.
Policies and Annuities in force, Jan. 1st, 1885	114,865	$351,815,941 07	Policies and Annuities in force, Jan. 1st, 1886	120,952	$368,981,441 36
Risks Assumed	14,334	46,507,139 16	Risks Terminated	8,247	29,341,638 87
	129,199	$398,323,080 23		129,199	$398,323,080 23

Revenue Account.

Dr.		Cr.
To Balance from last account	$97,009,913 08	By paid to Policy-Holders:
" Premiums	14,768,901 93	Endowments & Purchased Insurances,	$5,270,116 34
" Interest and Rents	5,446,052 35	Dividends and Annuities	3,211,900 00
		Deceased Lives	5,920,033 56
			$14,402,049 90
		" Other Disbursements:
		Commissions and Commutations	$1,228,679 84
		Taxes	266,656 50
		Expenses	991,954 14
			2,487,290 48
		" Premium on Stocks and Bonds Purchased	469,882 87
		" Balance to new account	99,865,644 11
	$117,224,867 36		$117,224,867 36

Balance Sheet.

Dr.		Cr.
To Reserve for policies in force or terminated	$103,846,253 00	By Bonds Secured by Mortgages on Real Estate	$49,228,930 16
" Premiums received in advance	50,080 73	" United States and other Bonds	39,366,104 00
" Surplus at four per cent	5,012,633 78	" Loans on Collaterals	3,856,500 00
		" Real Estate	10,992,720 45
		" Cash in Banks and Trust Companies at interest	2,619,643 21
		" Interest accrued	1,217,329 85
		" Premiums deferred and in transit	1,438,189 55
		" Sundries	189,550 29
	$108,908,967 51		$108,908,967 51

I have carefully examined the foregoing statement and find the same to be correct.

A. N. WATERHOUSE, Auditor.

From the Surplus above stated a Dividend will be apportioned as usual.

NEW YORK, January 20, 1886.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES.

SAMUEL E. SPROULLS, LUCIUS ROBINSON, SAMUEL D. BABCOCK, GEORGE S. COE, JOHN E. DEVELIN, SEYMOUR L. HUSTED, RICHARD A. McCURDY, JAMES C. HOLDEN, HERMANN C. VON POST, GEORGE C. RICHARDSON, ALEXANDER H. RICE, F. RATCHFORD STARR, FREDERICK H. COSSITT, LEWIS MAY, OLIVER HARRIMAN, HENRY W. SMITH, JOHN H. SHERWOOD, ROBERT OLYPHANT, GEORGE F. BAKER, JOS. THOMPSON, DUDLEY OLCOTT, FREDERIC CROMWELL, JULIEN T. DAVIES, ROBERT SEWELL, S. VAN RENSSELAER CRUGER, CHARLES R. HENDERSON, GEORGE BLISS, RUFUS W. PECKHAM, WM. P. DIXON, J. HOBART HERRICK, ROBERT A. GRANNISS, NICHOLAS C. MILLER, HENRY H. ROGERS, JNO. W. AUCHINCLOSS.

For BABIES

A soft warm wrapper tufted and trimmed with either red or blue worsted, pretty, inexpensive and very useful for night or morning wear or after a bath. Price, $.25; by mail 1 c. extra.

Is it worth while to make up anything for Infants' Wear when you can purchase every article required at the saving time, labor and expense? We pay special attention to the manufacture of these goods, and our unequalled facilities enable us to produce them WELL MADE IN EVERY PARTICULAR at remarkably Low Prices.

LILIPUTIAN BAZAAR,

We Invite Attention to our Outfit No. 5, consisting of 32 pieces, and Baby Basket furnished with toilet articles, which is especially good value. Also a large assortment from $20 to $ 50.

For $24,

Our stock comprises the best class of goods for BOYS' and GIRLS' wear, including everything from Hats to Shoes at the lowest prices.

Illustrated Catalogue furnished on Application.

BEST & CO.,

60 and 62 W. 23d St., New York.

A MILLION BOOKS

RARE, CURIOUS, CURRENT. IN STOCK.

ALMOST GIVEN AWAY.

Libraries Supplied Cheaper than at any Book Store in the World.

LIBRARIES AND BOOKS BOUGHT.

MAMMOTH CATALOGUE FREE.

LEGGAT BROTHERS,

81 CHAMBERS STREET,

3d door West of City Hall Park. NEW YORK.

LE PAGE'S LIQUID GLUE

Is used by thousands of first class Manufacturers and Mechanics on their best work. Received GOLD MEDAL, London, '83. Pronounced strongest glue known. Send card of dealer who does not keep it, with five 2c stamps for SAMPLE CAN

Russia Cement Co., Gloucester, Mass. FREE

TESTED TO OVER 1600 LBS. TO SQ. INCH

Agents Make $5 a Day Selling Perfect FAMILY SCALES

Entirely new in principle. Weigh one ounce to 25 pounds. What every family needs and will buy. Rapid sales surprise old agents. FORSHEE & McMAKIN, CINCINNATI, O.

M'COMBER'S PATENT BOOTS AND SHOES.

Everybody can now enjoy my Patent Boots and Shoes. I am now manufacturing my Patent Boots and Shoes on a large scale with new and improved machinery, and selling at greatly reduced prices so as to place them within the reach of all. I will send to all applicants price-lists, full instructions for self-measurement for men, women and children, and return the shoes as quickly as they can be made. They will fit beautifully, will never warp, distort, or injure the tenderest foot, and will restore bad and distorted feet to symmetry and comfort. I make no shoddy goods, and my highest class boots and shoes are unsurpassed either in material or workmanship, and my lowest class goods are superior in every respect to all others at the same price. Those who desire perfect boots and shoes should send for my free illustrated pamphlets, JOEL M'COMBER, Inventor and Manufacturer, of M'COMBER'S PATENT BOOTS AND SHOES, AND M'COMBER'S PATENT LASTS, 52 East 10th Street, New York.

To preserve the leather of all kinds, for ladies' or gentlemen's boots and shoes, and to make them soft and beautiful, use my Seal Polish Blacking. Mention the INTELLIGENCER

FAIR AND SQUARE DEALING.

Believing that if a man has dealt squarely with his fellowmen his patrons are his best advertisers, I invite all to make inquiry of the character of my seeds among over a million of Farmers, Gardeners and Planters who have used them during the past thirty years. Raising a large portion of the seed sold, (few seedsmen raise the seed they sell) I was the first seedsman in the United States to warrant (as per catalogue) their purity and freshness. My new Vegetable and Flower Seed Catalogue for 1886 will be sent FREE to all who write for it. Among an immense variety, my friends will find in it (and in none other) a new drumhead Cabbage, just about as early as Henderson's, but nearly twice as large! James J. H. Gregory, Marblehead, Mass.

THE SECURITY MUTUAL BENEFIT SOCIETY,

No. 233 Broadway, New York.

ONLY TWELVE ASSESSMENTS

Have been levied from 1881 to 1886, averaging three a year, and making the cost for assessments to a man of 40 years, but $4.40 a year for each $1000 of insurance.

Send for Circulars. Agents Wanted!

Remunerative employment offered energetic and reliable men.

GOOD NEWS TO LADIES.

Greatest inducement ever offered. Now's your time to get up orders for our celebrated Teas and Coffees and secure a beautiful Gold Band or Moss Rose China Tea Set, or Handsome Decorated Gold Band Moss Rose Dinner Set, or Gold Band Moss Decorated Toilet Set. For full particulars address

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO., P. O. Box 289. 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York

WANTED LADIES AND GENTLEMEN who wish to make $3 to $4 a day easily at their own homes. Work sent by mail. No canvassing. Address with stamp, Crown Mfg. Co., 294 Vine St., Cin'ti, O.

BENJ. F. TRUMPY,

Real Estate Office,

336 Broome Street,

ONE DOOR EAST OF BOWERY.

Management of Estates, Renting and Sale of Property, and Collecting of Rents.

AGENT FOR

German American Insurance Co.
Westchester Insurance Co.
Hamburg Bremen Insurance Co.
Mutual Life Insurance Co.

VIRGINIA LAND AGENCY.

Cheap Farms. Splendid Climate. Short Mild Winters. Good Markets. Descriptive Land List Free. GRIFFIN & JERVIS, Petersburg, Va.

DON'T put all your eggs in one basket, but remember that the EQUITABLE MORTGAGE CO. guarantees its 7 per cent Farm Mortgages, principal and interest. Office, 135 and 137 Broadway, New York.

WANTED An active Man or Woman in every county to sell our goods. Salary $75 per Month and Expenses. Canvassing Outfit and Particulars FREE. STANDARD SILVER-WARE CO., Boston, Mass.

Arnold, Constable & Co

HOUSEKEEPING GOODS.

Are prepared to exhibit their Spring Importation of Household Linens of every description, Suitable for Table and Bed use. Also "Richardson's" 4-4 "Queen Charlotte" Linens, Antique Grass Bleach and free from Chemicals, together with a fine stock of Foreign and Domestic White Goods, etc.

Broadway & 19th st.

NEW YORK.

R. H. MACY & CO.,

14TH STREET, SIXTH AVE., AND 13TH STREET NEW YORK.

GRAND CENTRAL FANCY AND DRY GOODS ESTABLISHMENT.

Special Sale of Ladies' and Children's

MUSLIN UNDERWEAR,

all of our own manufacture and design. Our prices are the lowest in the country.

Rare bargains in

LINENS

and Housekeeping Goods, our own direct importation.

Unapproachable bargains in

BLACK AND COLORED Silks and Dress Goods.

Our prices below all competition.

Tremendous mark-down in

SUITS AND CLOAKS.

Our Entire Stock at Lower Prices than ever before known.

Special Care Given to Mail Orders.

R. H. MACY & CO.

BLACK SILKS.

JAMES M'CREERY & CO.

will offer during this month over 5,000 pieces of the MOST RELIABLE BLACK SILKS manufactured at SPECIAL PRICES.

As our contracts for all our spring importations were placed before the recent heavy advance on SILK, we are enabled to offer our entire stock of Silks, Velvets, and Plushes at even lower prices than they are now costing to make.

Broadway and 11th St., N. Y.

KNABE PIANOFORTES.

UNEQUALLED IN

Tone, Touch, Workmanship and Durability.

WILLIAM KNABE & CO.,

Nos. 204 and 206 West Baltimore Street, Baltimore. No. 112 Fifth Avenue, N. Y.

The Christian Intelligencer.

Een-dracht maakt macht.

VOL. LVII.—No. 6. WHOLE No. 2898. NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1886. $2.65 A YEAR IN ADVANCE. No. 48 CHURCH STREET.

EDITORS: Rev. JOHN M. FERRIS, D.D. Rev. N. H. VAN ARSDALE.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR: MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

FOUR PAGES, containing Mr. Gladstone's reply to Professor Huxley, will be added to he paper of next week. Professor Huxley's ar- ument will be found in the Popular Science Monthly for this month.

HOLD FAST your confidence to the end, pray without ceasing, is the counsel of the Word f God. Great revivals often come unannounced nd unexpectedly. As the snow on the Jungfrau ccumulates for months before it topples over and ushes down the side of the mountain in an ava- anche which carries even the rocks before it, so orrect knowledge and convictions increase in the inds and hearts and consciences of men until hey can no longer be repressed and break out in mighty, almost national renunciation of worldli- ess and sin and profession of faith in Christ. Much has been done this winter to bring in such period. It is for us to continue steadfastly in rayer and effort.

THE CLAIMS OF WORKINGMEN are re- ceiving proper recognition. The Elevated ailroads have granted the requests of the engi- eers, the surface roads have yielded to the per- ctly reasonable demand from drivers and con- uctors for shorter hours with no reduction of ay. Almost a strike in the first case, an actual ne in the latter, were necessary to bring about ne change; but the result was reached with re- arkable rapidity. These drivers and conductors e a worthy body of men. There are many really telligent men among them. They have been ardly treated. Their life has been one of con- ant exposure, toilsome and burdensome. The anagement of the surface roads has been an em- ent example of selfishness. The profits have en very large, the treatment of employés with- t sympathy. There has not been an equitable vision of profits. It is to the credit of the rooklyn City Railroad Company that it agreed out a week ago, without a strike, to a reduction hours of work with no reduction of pay.

On the other side of the ocean Mr. Arch, a rep- sentative of the peasantry, has been elected to arliament, after a severe contest with birth, title d wealth, wielded by the aristocracy, landlords d clergy. An event which five hundred gentle- en of the National Liberal Club commemorated London by a dinner to Mr. Arch. A telegram Monday announced also that Mr. Henry Broad- rst, a workingman, has been selected as a mem- r of the new Gladstone Cabinet and made Under cretary for the Home Department.

We rejoice in these events. We hope to see rkingmen represented in the government of our ates and of the United States. The Interior epartment could be divided with propriety and representative mechanic be appointed Secretary the new department. The faults of working- n have been due to a large extent to the treat- nt they have received, and the measures they ve adopted often have been those of men re- ced to desperation. The body of them are just patriotic and have the good of the community heart as much as other classes of citizens. We ve only reprobation for such barbarisms as the e of dynamite and boycotting and all kindred actices, but we are in hearty sympathy with rkingmen when they claim a right to a voice in asures which concern their welfare and to a re equitable share in profits earned by their rk and faithfulness.

But thoughtful men will regard with consider- able anxiety the formation of such a secret organ- ization as the Knights of Labor, which assumes the offices of prosecuting Attorney, Judge and Jury, and allows no appeal from its decisions. The declaration, "We ask only what is right," is true enough in many instances, but we wish the pro- cess of getting to the asking had been an open and manly one. There can be no objection to a meet- ing which shall enjoy the freedom of privacy, but the result of the meeting and the facts which led to it ought not to be concealed. Railway presi- dents and managers and other capitalists hold private meetings for the sake of entire freedom in discussion, but the facts considered and the con- clusions accepted are always made public. Work- ingmen should give publicity to their case, and not adopt European customs in a free country such as we live in.

FREEDOM OF WORSHIP.—A pamphlet subscribed to by gentlemen belonging to the Roman Church has been published and circulated. The subscribers are entitled to respect as intelli- gent citizens. They discuss the "Merits, Princi- ples and Practicability" of the so called Freedom of Worship bill. Much that they say will not be accepted by those who hold American ideas. The religious liberty they advocate is not the religious liberty Americans have established. We expected to find a serious and definite criticism of the reli- gious instruction given in the House of Refuge; but the charge against it is that it "is less than a skeleton," which "to accept and conform to" a Romanist "would deem blasphemy," and this not because of what it contains but because of what it does not contain. The fatal deficiency is, it does not include the Mass, Penance, (which includes the Confessional, although the pamphlet does not say so,) and the Holy Communion. These rites, as administered by the Papal Church, are not sec- tarian. Sectarianism is defined in the pamphlet as follows: "A sect consists of persons who are cut off, often by their own acts, from the Catholic Church, and the visible Catholic Church is com- posed of those who are organically connected with the Bishop of Rome, the successor of Peter, and, in religious matters, are subject to him. The Catholic Church, alone, is 'non-sectarian.'" That definition is the keynote of the strain which runs through the pamphlet. It concedes the main point at issue. The religious instruction in the public reformatories, in the House of Refuge es- pecially, is sectarian because it is not Papistical. The State is to establish Papistical instruction in order that its public institutions may cease to be sectarian. Such a doctrine is in direct antagonism to the American idea of religious liberty. The peculiarities of the Roman Church are to be intro- duced for two additional reasons. First, Protestant sectarians are only one-fourth of the body calling itself Christian. Second, the introduction of Papistical rites works well where it has been intro- duced in institutions receiving support from the State. The evident answer to the first reason is that the Protestant Christians of the City and State of New York and of the United States constitute a majority of the population. The answer to the second reason is that in some in- stances of which we have knowledge the introduc- tion of Papistical rites does not work well, is a source of constant annoyance to Protestants, does not promote the improvement of the inmates, does not harmonize with the management except as Romanists are introduced into the management, or except as the management passes into the hands of active partisans seeking the votes of Romanists. And often the introduction of Romanism results in substituting Romanists or politicians in sym- pathy with Romanists for Protestants in the man- agement. Such substitution invariably results in the deterioration of the institution in every re- spect.

The Wants of Our Missions.

ON the scale on which our Foreign Missions are now conducted $82,000 a year are necessary for their support. The Board has urged the rea- sons for an annual outlay of $100,000, and the General Synod has recommended to the Church an endeavor to obtain that amount; but the Board has actually appropriated only $82,000 a year. During the present fiscal year $35,021 have been received, leaving $46,979 to be collected between February 1st and May 1st in order to meet the ac- tual outlay of the year. But on the first of last May the treasury was in debt $9,000. If that encumbrance also is to be removed, during the re- maining three months of the year $55,979 must be procured.

On every field the work of the Missions is ad- vancing. Stations already occupied are steadily becoming stronger, and requests to furnish preachers and teachers for other towns and villages are constantly received. Our missionaries are anxious because they cannot assume this extension of their field. They feel, as every one in their position would, that they are restrained from gath- ering the legitimate fruit of their work. They feel also, that the effect of this limitation is to restrain the spirit of the churches already gath- ered, to discourage them in their attempts to ex- tend the knowledge of the truth, for they know, what is evident to everyone on the ground, that a Christian interest awakened in a town or village must be assisted during the years of its beginning.

This Reformed Church can have if it will a growing church under each of its Missions in Asia. It would perhaps grow without help from us, but it would be slowly and feebly. A vigorous growth, an enlargement carried on with spirit and courage and hope, can be secured through generous help from us. The amount granted to each new station or out-station is small—only about $200 a year where both a preacher and school teacher are employed—but when twenty outlying villages ask for such a provision the aggregate rises to thou- sands of dollars. And it is wise to take up just as much as we can of this new work. Assuming it, occupying the fresh opportunities, enlarges the area of territory calling Jesus Lord and Saviour, powerfully affects public opinion, proves that we are resolved to go on to conquer the land for the true God, and augments the zeal and courage of the believers and adherents already gathered in.

To maintain this work as it now is, without taking up anything new, calls for about $47,000 during the remaining months of the present finan- cial year, which closes on April 30th, and if all debt is to be removed calls for $56,000.

The Board of Domestic Missions asked, for the support of missionaries during the year and for the Church Building Fund, which aids in building parsonages as well as churches, the sum of $60,000 Every dollar of that amount it can use effectively. But it has appropriated for the year for the sup- port of missionaries $24,000, and for church buildings and parsonages what it could reason- ably hope to procure. It has received to Feb- ruary 1st $25,926.30. It needs $6,000 for its missionaries and $10,000 for the Building Fund, during the coming three months.

But for many reasons it ought to have at least $4 000 more for church buildings and parsonages. That makes the need of the remaining months of the fiscal year $20,000. If this be added to the amount already received the total is $45,926 50 for the year, instead of the $60,000 asked for and recommended by the General Synod. Therefore, here again prudence has been exercised and the actual outlay has been kept below the desires and hopes of the Board. But the actual outlay is thus far still less, for we have added in the $4,000 more, which are much needed but have not been promised. The actual engagements of the Board for buildings, to be fulfilled if the receipts will allow it, foot up $10,000. The engagements and outlay, then, are in reality $41 926 50, instead of the $60,000 solicited. But the full $46,000 ought to be the result of the year.

It is not necessary to repeat what has recently been clearly set forth in these columns. The readers of this journal have been told what an opportunity is now before the Church in the Northwest,—an opportunity more inviting than anything presented to this generation. It is wise to enter upon it with energy, with resolution, with liberality, and with prayer.

The Church can give by the 30th of April the $76,000 needed by its missionary work, but the sum will not be given without earnest effort. If every member of the Church will engage heartily in the effort it will achieve success.

"Old Colony" Papers.

A FAMOUS BATTLE FIELD.

MY "moving tent" is at present pitched upon a famous battle ground,—a battle two miles in extent, and including three distinct fights on one day.

On the night of Christmas, one hundred and nine years ago, the little barefoot, ill-clad army of Washington crossed the Delaware through the floating ice and a storm of hail and snow to Trenton, surprising and capturing the Hessian troops who were stationed there. This successful manœuvre was a thunderclap to the British, and a bugle blast to the revolutionary party. It was the most critical moment of the war. The American troops had been unsuccessful in every encounter, and had been compelled to retreat from Long Island all the way to Pennsylvania, and were in a beggarly condition, without tents or adequate equipment, and undisciplined. The result was a growing disposition to submit, and a widespread disaffection in Congress and among the officers. On the other hand Lords Howe and Cornwallis considered the fate of the Rebellion as virtually settled, and the latter was about to return to England. But this brilliant blow induced the New England regiments, whose term of enlistment had just expired, to remain for six weeks longer. And it brought Cornwallis back in haste to Trenton, with an overwhelming force.

He arrived there before sunset, and if he had attacked Washington that evening the Revolution would probably have been stamped out. But as the Delaware river cut off the retreat of the Americans, he preferred to rest till the next morning, against the advice of some of his own officers who knew "the old fox" better than he did. Only a little creek lay between the armies, whose pickets were within hail of each other. The watch fires blazed brightly all night in the American camp, and the usual sounds were heard in that quarter. But when the British commander awoke next morning, he found that his bird had escaped out of his net, and the thunder of distant firing in the direction of Princeton disclosed the line of retreat. This was the morning of the third of January, 1777.

A fight was taking place between a force of three British regiments, which had been passing the night at Princeton and were on the way to join Cornwallis, and a detachment under General Mercer, whom Washington had despatched to destroy a bridge across Stony Brook, about a mile and a half from Princeton and seven or eight miles from Trenton. A portion of the former, the 17th Regiment, had already crossed the Bridge when the Americans appeared. As soon as they discovered each other this regiment re-crossed, and there was an effort on both sides to gain the vantage-ground of a neighboring hill, where was a farm-house, and orchard and worm fence. Mercer's men reached it first, and the two parties began to fire on each other at a distance of only forty paces. The British soon resorted to their favorite weapon, the bayonet, and the Americans were routed and fled in confusion. Mercer, whose horse was disabled, endeavored on foot to rally them, but was knocked down by a clubbed musket and stabbed with several bayonet wounds, refusing to surrender.

Washington, who had been proceeding on to Princeton by another road, now appeared upon the scene. But the men whom he had hurried forward in advance were wavering before the enemy's artillery, and the critical moment of this most critical day had arrived. This "cold hearted" man (as Mr. McMaster is pleased to call him) galloped between the lines, exposed to the fire of both sides, waving his hat and calling on his men to follow him. He was actually lost to view for a moment in the smoke. A shudder ran through the line of his troops. One of his aids covered his face with his hat, in order not to see his commander fall. His presence and action inspired his troops, and the enemy were routed before their gallant charge. Other reinforcements of Americans coming up, the British Commander ordered a retreat, leaving his artillery behind. The pursuit was termed by Washington "a fine fox chase." Soon, however, he drew his force together and proceeded on to Princeton village. Here, within a stone's throw of where I am sitting, he encountered the 55th Regiment and defeated them after a brief but severe fight, whereupon they fled toward New Brunswick. A number of them threw themselves into Nassau Hall, and were besieged there and taken prisoners. The mark of a ball is still to be seen in the old stone walls, and a bullet is said to have passed through the head of a portrait of George II. in the college chapel (now the Geological Museum). The frame now holds the portrait of Washington by Rembrandt Peale.

It was impossible to remain. Cornwallis was close benind them, though delayed by the partial destruction of the Bridge at Stony Brook by a party which Washington had sent for that purpose, and also from the firing of a cannon from a temporary breastwork a few hundred yards from where I write. On reaching New Brunswick, the British Commander found that the "old fox" had escaped him again and was well on his way, by Rocky Hill and Somerset Court House, to his winter quarters at Morristown. The British lost in this day of battles about 400 in killed, wounded and prisoners. The Americans lost only thirty, but among them were no less than seven officers,—a larger number than in any battle of the Revolution. Of these, Gen. Mercer was felt to be a peculiar loss. He was a physician of culture and social standing, had seen service in the French and Indian wars, a devoted patriot, and one upon whom many hopes were built.

This battle was the pivotal point in the whole contest. It revived the hopes of the Colonies, and established Washington in an impregnable position of influence and authority in conducting the war. The compliment of Frederick the Great in sending his sword to Washington, "from the oldest general in the world to the greatest," is well known. The British realized that the "fox" had become a lion.

One afternoon last autumn I rode over this eventful battle ground, beginning at Stony Brook. This is a broad but shallow stream at that season, picturesquely winding through level meadows and beneath forest trees. The old whitewashed stone walls of Worth's Mill, where both armies crossed that day, are still standing, and also the abutments of the Bridge. It is a romantic spot in itself, but doubly inspiring as one almost sees the red-coats pouring across it on that frosty morning, with the sunlight flashing upon their arms and discovering them to the patriots. I do not think that I ever had so vivid an impression of Washington as was there conjured up to my imagination,—his stately form riding over that rude bridge, and flaming suddenly into godlike aspect in the crisis of battle. Some persons pretend to show the oak under which Gen. Mercer was struck down, but the genuine one has been unfortunately destroyed by vandal hands. Nor are there any trees of the orchard or worm fence, nor yet of the spot where the dead were buried.

The "Clarke house," into which Mercer was carried and where he lay, nursed by a couple of Quaker ladies and tended by the famous Dr. Benjamin Rush, is still standing and in good condition. By the kindness of the occupants, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hale, the former a respected Elder of the First Presbyterian Church, we were permitted to examine the premises. The interior is panelled in the old style, with immense chimneys and fireplaces, and a commodious antique cupboard which our hostess exhibited with considerable pride. A door is shown, in which is the deep indentation of a bullet which had previously glanced against a wall, the hole in whose plaster is religiously preserved through the modern papering. A money offer has been made for the door, but one would need to be a pecuniary Samson to carry off that gate from this Gaza, while in its present hands. The special shrine of the patriotic sight seer is "the Mercer room," as it is called, where the dying commander was carried, bleeding at every vein. The blood stains upon the floor are still very distinct, and when dampened come out vividly.

This room is quite a little museum,* having a collection of bayonets and balls, flints and other relics of the battle, some of which have only recently been unearthed. The rude blacksmith-made weapons of the patriots are peculiarly impressive. Beside them are some Indian arrow-heads dug out of the same soil. They seemed very ancient to our minds, as we realized that probably they were old when these relics of that long ago Revolutionary battle were bright and new. It was saddening to be reminded that war has been alike the occupation of the savage and civilized since the Fall of man, and that it is to-day the business of millions of men on a vaster and more destructive scale than ever.

F. N. ZABRISKIE.

PRINCETON, N. J., Feb. 1, 1886.

The Merits of the Revised Version.

1. IN the Expositor for 1885, two eminent scholars, the Rev. Messrs. Jennings and Lowe issued a series of articles on the book, in which they find much fault with the Revisers for not doing more than they did, but they enumerate some hundreds of "incontrovertible" emendations and say that "the mercies for which we express our gratitude are not small." They even suggest that the bishops should issue to the clergy "a paper of references to the texts which have been undeniably set right in the Revised Bible."

2. In the Old Testament Student for January 1886, Prof. Denio, of Bangor, Me., makes a critical study of the first ten chapters of Exodus noting every change, however small. He by no means approves of everything, yet says distinctly that the Revision is "in these chapters a very great gain," and they are "a fair sample of the whole book of Exodus."

3. In the Homiletic Review for February, 1886 Prof. B. B. Warfield, of Allegheny Seminary, well known as one of the ablest of American scholars, declares that the Revised Version is deformed by many faults that could have been avoided, yet says that it appears to him "to be almost incomparably better than the Authorized

* A register of the names of visitors has been kept here for a number of years, the first name recorded therein being that of a grandson of General Mercer, having the same name.

Version;" and again, "it is the most perfect of versions."

The foregoing is the judgment of experts. Is it not worthy of respect and confidence?

"LAND AND LAW."—The first edition of the address delivered by President Gates of Rutgers College before the Social Science Association last summer, is exhausted, and the Board of Indian Commissioners has ordered a second. It is a clear and sensible statement of the present condition of the tribes of Indians, of their legal status, or rather their want of a legal status, of the lands they hold and what they do with them, of the injurious influence of the system of issuing rations and blankets and various articles, of the legislation needed, of the importance of allotting lands in severalty, of the true work of schools, and of all the essential points of the situation now to be considered. The pamphlet embodies the results of the conscientious treatment of the Indian problem during the past fifteen years. Every one desiring to understand this important matter should read this address.

INCONSISTENT.—To blame Mr. Blaine for attempting to secure an alliance of American States; to condemn the last administration for sending a representative to the Congo Conference, and at the same time to allow Irishmen in this country to interfere openly, actively and effectively in the government of Great Britain. Are we living in New Ireland or in the United States? Mr. Parnell has written, when acknowledging contributions from this country, that his schemes could not have succeeded without the financial support received from America.

A DIFFERENCE.—One of the city dailies, speaking of the joint province of the pulpit and the press, says that "Both are at war with ignorance, which is the cause of crime, and with superstition, which is the cause of cruelty." If the editor would scan his own columns he would learn of a great deal of crime that is not due to ignorance. Did not Fish and Ward and the rest of the convicts or fugitives who preyed on other people's funds, know that they were doing wrong? So was the horrid cruelty of the Reign of Terror in France, or the persecution of the Christians by Marcus Aurelius, due to superstition? Surely not. A man may be very well informed and reject all beliefs not founded on evidence, and yet be a criminal of deep dye. But if he be a true Christian, he cannot be a knave or a defaulter. The press at its best is not the equal of the pulpit, nor does it seek the same ends.

Suggestive.

GENESIS AND SCIENCE.—I do not suppose it would be feasible, even for Professor Huxley, taking the nebular hypothesis and geological discovery for his guides, to give, in the compass of the first twenty-seven verses of Genesis, an account of the cosmogony, and of the succession of life in the stratification of the earth, which would combine scientific precision of statement with the majesty, the simplicity, the intelligibility, and the impressiveness of the record before us. Let me modestly call it, for argument's sake, an approximation to the present presumptions and conclusions of science. Let me assume that the statement in the text as to plants, and the statement of verses 24, 25 as to reptiles, cannot in all points be sustained; and yet still there remain great unshaken facts to be weighed. First, the fact that such a record should have been made at all. Secondly, the fact that, instead of dwelling in generalities, it has placed itself under the severe conditions of a chronological order, reaching from the first nisus of chaotic matter to the consummated production of a fair and goodly, a furnished and a peopled world. Thirdly, the fact that its cosmogony seems, in the light of the nineteenth century, to draw more and more of countenance from the best natural philosophy; and fourthly, that it has described the successive origins of the five great categories of present life, with which human experience was and is conversant, in that order which geological authority confirms. How came these things to be? How came they to be, not among Accadians, or Assyrians, or Egyptians, who monopolized the stores of human knowledge when this wonderful tradition was born; but among the obscure records of a people who, dwelling in Palestine for twelve hundred years from their sojourn in the valley of the Nile, hardly had force to stamp even so much as their name upon the history of the world at large, and only then began to be admitted to the general communion of mankind when their Scriptures assumed the dress which a Gentile tongue was needed to supply? It is more rational, I contend, to say that these astonishing anticipations were a God given supply, than to suppose that a race, who fell uniformly and entirely short of the great intellectual development of antiquity, should here not only have equalled and outstripped it, but have entirely transcended, in kind even more than in degree, all known exercise of human faculties.

Whether this was knowledge conveyed to the mind of the Mosaic author, I do not presume to determine. There has been, in the belief of Christians, a profound providential purpose, little or variously visible to us, which presided, from Genesis to the Apocalypse, over the formation of the marvellous compound, which we term the Holy Scriptures. This we wonderingly embrace without being much perplexed by the questions which are raised on them; for instance, by the question, In what exact relation the books of the Apocrypha, sometimes termed deutero-canonical, stand to the books of the Hebrew Canon. Difficulties of detail, such as may (or ultimately may not) be found to exist in the Proem to Genesis, have much the same relation to the evidence of revealed knowledge in this record, as the spots in the sun to his all unfolding and suffusing light. But as to the Mosaic writer himself, all I presume to accept is the fact that he put upon undying record, in this portion of his work, a series of particulars which, interpreted in the growing light of modern knowledge, require from us, on the whole, as reasonable men, the admission that we do not see how he could have written them, and that in all likelihood he did not write them, without aid from the guidance of a more than human power. It is in this guidance, and not necessarily or uniformly in the consciousness of the writer, that, according to my poor conception, the idea of Revelation mainly lies.—Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, M P., in The Nineteenth Century.

EVERY DAY WORK.

Great deeds are trumpeted; loud bells are rung,
And men turn round to see
The high peaks echo to the peans sung
O'er some great victory.
And yet great deeds are few. The mightiest men
Find opportunities but now and then.

Shall one sit idle through long days of peace,
Waiting for walls to scale?
Or lie in port until some "Golden Fleece"
Lures him to face the gale?
There's work enough; why idly, then, delay?
His work counts most who labors every day.

A torrent sweeps adown the mountain's brow,
With foam and flash and roar.
Anon its strength is spent, where is it now?
Its one short day is o'er.
But the clear stream that through the meadow flows
All the long summer on its mission goes.

Better the steady flow; the torrent's dash
Soon leaves its rent track dry.
The light we love is not a lightning flash
From out a midnight sky,
But the sweet sunshine, whose unfailing ray,
From its calm throne of blue, lights every day.

The sweetest lives are those to duty wed,
Whose deeds, both great and small,
Are close-knit strands of one unbroken thread,
Where love ennobles all.
The world may sound no trumpets, ring no bells,
The Book of Life the shining record tells. —Selected.

THE COLORED SEXTON.—The sexton of a Baptist church in a large Western city was a good colored brother, who rarely took part in the social religious meetings of the society; but when he did, all present held their breath, for it was well known that some one was to be "hit on the head," and great amusement was in store for the others. On this particular occasion the subject of the prayer meeting was "Christian Humility." Mr. Bascom, one of the wealthiest church members, while leaning on his gold-headed cane and toying with his elegant watch chain, concluded his remarks, with great affectation of humility, by saying: "If I ever should be so favored as to reach heaven at all, it seems to me that a place in the most remote section, the most obscure corner, of that blissful region will be infinitely more than I deserve. And when the call comes to me to 'go up higher,' it seems to me I shall feel like putting my hand upon my mouth and my mouth in the dust, and crying out, 'Unclean! unclean!'"

When he was seated, the colored brother rose in the rear of the room, and slowly advancing, faced the audience, and thus addressed them: "Brudders an' sisters, when I hears de angel Gabri'l blow de trumpet a-callin' me home, it 'pears to me I'll be so powerful glad I'll just call out, 'Hol' on dar, Gabri'l; I hears de trumpet, an' I's comin' mighty quick!' An' it 'pears to me I'll be so bu-tin full ob joy I'll just go shoutin', skippin', leapin' right up to de front ob de throne as fast as I kin git dar. An' dar I'll stan' wid de white robes on, a-wavin' de palm branches, an' a-shoutin' 'Glory! glory! glory! glory to de Lamb dat was slain!' For what do de Scriptures say? 'Who are dese in white robes?' 'Dey what came up through great tribulations.' Down here de black skin an' de great tribulations; up dar de white robe an' de joy for ebermore. Now, my brudders an' sisters, what do de Scriptures say agin? Dey say 'what though dey be black as ink' (or something to dat effec'), 'dey shall be whiter dan snow.' An' it 'pears I'll be so powerful happy up dar dat I'd like to shake han's wid all my brudders an' sisters, widout distinction ob age, color, or previous condition ob servitude—good many on 'em I hain't shook no han' wid here—but 'pears to me I'll be so occoopied a-wavin', an' a praisin', an' a shoutin' hallelujah! hallelujah! hallelujah! close up on de right side ob de Lamb, dat I won't hab no time to go peekin' roun' de dark corners ob heaven to find Brudder Bascom."—Lynn Burdette, in Editor's Drawer, Harper's Magazine for February.

LOCAL OPTION.—In States where there is at present no hope of enacting Prohibition by statute, or even of securing the submission of a Constitutional Amendment to the people, Local Option may be advocated with considerable hope, and energetically pushed.

Under its discussion the evils of intemperance, the direct influence of the saloon, the desires of the people, and the thoroughly democratic character of the principle, can be urged. Petitions can be signed in temperance communities and sent in, and powerful influences brought to bear on representatives. While, in counties and towns where it is certain that it could not prevail if brought to the test, legislators opposed to Prohibition in all forms would naturally, in some cases—perhaps a sufficient number to hold the balance of power—be supine, or be willing to vote for such a law, defending themselves against their whiskey loving constituents by saying that it could not affect them.

Such has been the operation of such propositions in several of the States were Local Option laws have been passed by Legislatures that on the whole were decidedly opposed to Prohibition. Many similar votes have been cast in the House of Commons by men who avowed that they did not believe in Prohibition, but did believe that municipalities should have the right to express their wishes on such subjects at the polls.

It is known to every observer that a large number of legislators follow the leaders of the party like sheep. Only here and there a man has the courage to vote on principle apart from party leadership and has also, even on subsidiary questions, the sense to make it effective. More perhaps have the courage than have the necessary judgment to accomplish a good end without sacrificing their personal influence with the party to which they belong.

Political leaders, though despotic in the treatment of their own rank and file, and bold toward their opponents, are often cowardly on questions on which the party has taken no ground—questions whose extent they cannot measure. It is a very great advantage when a principle is of such a nature that no political leader dares openly to avow himself opposed to it, or is compelled to favor it.

Such, more nearly than most questions, is Local Option.

As compared with Prohibition by statute, or Constitutional Amendment, it has weaknesses and embarrassments, but it is greatly superior to any form of License, and it is a long stride toward something more effectual.

Wherever it exists and has been thoroughly worked it has done wonders. In Maryland, in many towns in Massachusetts and Connecticut, in Georgia, it has done such great things that on the testimony, against the fiercest opposition, it prevailed in Atlanta. In Canada it is working a great reconstruction.

The haters of the liquor traffic in New Jersey are uniting without distinction of party, religion, or sect in urging upon the Legislature the passage of such a law.

Our Church.

We are thankful for items of Church News compactly stated; or for marked copies or clippings from local exchanges, which we would not otherwise see. To insure publication in next number, they must reach us by noon on Monday. A condensation of items is unavoidable

Special Services.

IN consequence of the interest manifested the special services in the Collegiate Church, on 5th avenue and 48th street, are continued during the present week, Saturday excepted. Bible Reading in the afternoon at 4 o'clock, preaching service in the evening at 8 o'clock, conducted by Rev. Dr. Pentecost, the singing led by Mr. and Mrs. Stebbins.

Theological Seminary, New Brunswick, N.J.

THE proposed course of addresses before the Society of Inquiry was opened by Prof. Demarest on Jan. 20th, with a paper on The Missionary Spirit in this Institution and the Men who have Entered the Foreign Field. The address was listened to with the greatest attention, and was calculated to arouse the spirit of missions more than anything which has been delivered before the Society for a long time.

Rev. Lyman Abbot, D.D., Editor of the Christian Union, addressed the Society Feb. 3d on The Labor Problem. The theological faculty, the professors and students of the College and the pastors of the city and vicinity had been invited and were present. The speaker indicted the labor system as essentially Pagan. Our government is for the people, our churches are for the people; but the system under which the people labor is not for the people but the people for the system. Our government and Church are democratic, our labor system aristocratic.

With much pleasure and profit the audience listened to a concisely stated, clearly analyzed, forcible and logical address on one of the great social, moral and religious questions of the day; one which presses itself upon the attention, not only of those who have the civil and social welfare of this country at heart, but also upon those who are laboring for the progress and perfecting of God's kingdom in the earth.

After the address he tersely and pointedly answered numerous questions put to him by different individuals in the audience.

The following speakers, with the exception of Dr. Robinson and Dr. Taylor, whom we hope will be with us, will deliver addresses on the dates specified at 7 o'clock P. M. The professors and students of Rutgers and the pastors of New Brunswick and vicinity are invited to attend.

ADDRESSES.—Rev. A. F. Schauffler, Feb. 10th, "Methods in City Mission Work"; Rev. John Hall, D.D., Feb. 15th, "Ministers' Relation to Missions"; Prof. Woodbridge, Feb. 17th, (subject not yet given); Rev. A. S. Hunt, D.D., Feb. 24th, "American Bible Society"; Anthony Comstock, March 10th, "Providences in His Work"; Prof. DeWitt, March 15th, "Revised Bible: What to Be Done with It?" Prof. Meyer, Rutgers College, March 17th, (subject to be announced); Rev. Wm. C. Wilkinson, D.D., March 24th, "Amusements"; Rev. Wm. Ormiston, D.D., March 29th, "Ecclesiastical Boards and Committees"; Prof. Mabon, March 31st, (subject to be announced); Rev. Theo. Cuyler, D.D., April 7th, "Contributions to the Press"; Rev. Chas. Robinson, D.D., April 12th, "Music in Church Service"; Prof. Lansing, April 17th, "Jehovah"; Rev. Arthur T. Pierson, D.D., April 22d, "Evangelistic Services"; Rev. Wm. M. Taylor, D.D., April 26th, "Pastor in the Study." B.

....WALDEN, N. Y.—The pastor of this church writes: "We, too, are rejoicing in the harvesting of souls. At our communion last Sabbath over thirty were received on confession of faith, and about the same number were added to the Methodist church. These are mainly the larger scholars of our Sabbath-schools. What encouragement to Sabbath school teachers to sow the seed, trusting in the promise, 'In due season ye shall reap if ye faint not.'"

....SCHENECTADY, N. Y.—Our correspondent, in reporting the dedication of Hope Chapel, speaks of the centre window over the door as "the gift of the founder of the enterprise, Miss Frances C. Paige." The congregation wish this misunderstanding corrected, for such it must have been. The people of the mission gave the window and placed the name of Miss Paige upon it as an expression of their esteem for her as the founder of the work and of their desire that what she had done for them should be held in remembrance. They, the people, belong to the laboring class, and gave for this object out of their comparatively small earnings, and wish that it shall be known that the window testifies to their gratitude to and regard for one to whom they feel themselves greatly indebted.

....GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—The Fifth Reformed Church was organized in this city January 28th. During the week following, the enterprising congregation put up, in a fine location, a temporary house of worship, mostly by volunteer labor. The first services were held in two halls, Sunday, January 31st. Dirk Scholten, a theological student, preached. The supplies for some time will be obtained from the "Western Theological Seminary." P. M.

....MILWAUKEE, WIS.—The Reformed Church has reason for gratitude. The attendance on the means of grace is encouraging, and the relation between minister and people is pleasant and harmonious. Shortly after New Years the good people of this church made their pastor, Rev. J. Broek, quite a surprise. A committee of ladies had unexpectedly found a way of collecting money, and buying a very neat parlor suit and a handsome chandelier. These suitable presents were presented by said committee, on behalf of the congregation, to Rev. and Mrs. J. Broek. A proper occasion was sought and found by the pastor and his wife to express their grateful acknowledgment. Though this church does not enjoy any marked revival, which is ardently desired, yet in one thing it is not deficient, namely, the grace of liberality. Besides supporting two native preachers in India, it has lately sent on to our Church Boards the sum of $144.06. Surely such figures for a church of a hundred families are good indications. J.

....WESTERN ITEMS.—Rev. A. Wormser has declined the call of the Holland Church, N. Y. city.... The young people of the churches of Wanpun and Alto, Wis., have presented a watch and chain to Rev. J. F. Zwemer and a gold brooch to his wife in gratitude for his determination to remain with them and to decline the position offered to him in the Northwestern Classical Academy....The Church of Roseland, Ill, reports a contribution of $316.50 to the Board of Foreign Missions....The Sabbath-school of the Second Church of Grand Rapids, Mich., at its yearly festival, held a fortnight ago, opened the Mission Boxes of the classes and found $223 accumulated for Foreign Missions.

....ALBANY, N. Y.—The First Church, under the pastoral charge of the Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman, has unquestionably entered upon a period of spiritual progress and healthful material prosperity. The pew rentals have advanced in value, and the services are largely attended. One of the most substantial evidences of the success of Mr. Chapman's ministry is found in the cordial support given to and the deep interest taken in the prayer-meetings. The prayer-meeting room was recently remodelled, renovated and refurnished at an expense of $1,500. Mr. Chapman is very popular, both as a preacher and pastor. He possesses winning social qualities, and is an impassioned, forcible and impressive preacher. He is an untiring worker, and his efforts are meeting with encouraging success. At the last communion eighteen persons were added to the membership of the church. As an expression of their esteem and appreciation his parishioners gave him one thousand dollars as a New Year's present. The church has been presented with a beautiful marble baptismal font by Miss Mary L. Egberts. During January the three Reformed churches united in evangelistic work and held meetings nightly by weekly alternation in the churches. F.

....RHINEBECK, N. Y.—The Rev. James B. Campbell was installed pastor of the church on Tuesday afternoon, Feb. 2d. The occasion was one of marked interest. The day was beautiful and the congregation large. The pastors of the Lutheran and Methodist churches of the village took part in the services.

Dr. J. Elmendorf presided and gave the charge to the pastor. Dr. A. P. Van Gieson preached a very appropriate and able sermon from Gal. 6: 14.

Rev. C. H. Polhemus, of Hopewell, gave a fresh, forcible and timely charge to the people. So Brother Campbell is again in the denomination of his love. May his ministry prove, as it has in his other charges, a rich blessing to the important church which has called him to its pastorate. E.

....WEST LEYDEN, N. Y.—The Rev. Mr. Frech was duly installed pastor over this and its associate church, Point Rock, on January 27th. Rev. Henry Unglaub presided and preached an appropriate discourse from the text, "Blessed be the Lord who daily loadeth us with benefits, even the God of our salvation." The charge was delivered by the Rev. John Reiner, who also addressed the people. The prospects of these churches are encouraging, and the new pastor was most kindly received. H.

....PEEKSKILL, N. Y.—From a printed letter, addressed by the pastor, Rev. Henry De Vries, to the consistory of this church, in which he reviews the work of the past year, it appears that the church is in a prosperous condition. He speaks of unanimity, steady increase in numbers, a healthy and hopeful tone of church life, and of the prayer-meetings, Sunday-school, teachers' meetings, and missionary societies, as faithfully sustained. There has been added to the communion thirty six on confession and six by certificate.

....NEW PALTZ, N. Y.—As every one conversant with the relations existing between the church and the citizens of New Paltz and the Rev. Ame Vennema would expect, the congregation and community exceedingly regret his acceptance of the call of the Second Church of Kalamazoo, Mich. They and many others acquiesce in his decision because he takes up an unusually important enterprise, namely, the upbuilding of a congregation of young Hollanders, which has resolved that its services shall be conducted in English. The course of this organization will be watched with special interest, and if it succeeds it is not unlikely that it may prove the first of a series of such churches. Among those who desire a prosperous future for our Church in the West there is a strong desire that this English-using church at Kalamazoo may succeed. Mr. Vennema has been selected as one especially qualified in the opinion of those who know him, for this undertaking, and he is accompanied with the sympathy and hearty interest of the church and the town to which he has ministered and a large number not so intimately associated with him.

In uniting with Mr. Vennema in his request to be transferred to Michigan, the Consistory of New Paltz expressed the feeling of the Church and community in the following minute:

"Resolved, That we unite with him in such application, but with feelings of sorrow at the prospect of soon parting with a beloved pastor, whose great desire during his pastorate has been to do us good as a church, whose services have been most acceptable and satisfactory both to the consistory and the congregation at large, whose preaching and labors we cannot but believe have resulted in much good, not only in strengthening believers and adding to our numbers, but in making impressions upon the unconverted that will in God's own good time mature and bring forth fruit. And while we feel that we shall very much miss his counsels and advice in the pulpit, the social circle, at the bedside of the sick, and at funeral gatherings, yet we submit to what seem to be the leadings of Providence.

"That the life and health of himself and his may be precious in the sight of Almighty God, and that the labors of his chosen profession may be most signally blessed, wherever bestowed, is the prayer of the consistory."

The Classis of Kingston met in the Reformed Church of New Paltz, February 2d, and dismissed its pastor, Rev. A. Vennema, to the Classis of Grand River. The hearty regret and sense of personal loss expressed by the members of Classis at Brother Vennema's request for a dissolution of the pastoral relation then existing, indicate the high regard in which he is held by his associates. His kindness in manner and earnest Christian spirit have endeared him to all of us. S. C.

One word more. The congregation of young families at Kalamazoo, spirited and generous as it is and though aided as it will be by the First Church, needs help from the East to the amount of about $2,500, that it may secure a convenient and decent house of worship. Such a building will be an important factor in the success of the enterprise. No multiplication of words is necessary. Everybody understands the value of such accommodations for such a work. It is very desirable that the amount be given here in sixty days at the extreme, and if possible in thirty days.

Gleanings from our Exchanges.

....An effort is being made by the First Church of Somerville, N. J., to remove a debt of $6,000. The subscriptions already secured aggregate $3,000, to which the Ladies' Mite Society have added $500.

....It is announced that the Triennial Catalogue of Rutgers College is ready for publication. It is to contain a short biography of every graduate, is to be given to the printers this week, and will be ready for distribution a few weeks later. Its issue is said to be largely due to the persistent labors of Librarian Upson, who overcame a host of difficulties in securing the needed data.

....A purse, liberally filled, was recently given to the Rev. R. P. Milliken by the people of his charge at Dashville Falls, N. Y. Nearly fifty have been added to this church during the period of Mr. Milliken's pastorate of less than two years.

....The Rev. W. H. Vroom, of High Falls, N. Y., is holding revival meetings at Alligerville.

The Monday Lecture.

MR. JOSEPH COOK was greeted at Tremont Temple, Monday noon, February 1st, by a large and responsive audience at the first lecture of the course for this year. The platform seats were filled with clergymen for the most part, the floor was about half filled with those holding tickets, and the balconies were nearly full. After prayer by Mr. Cook, the audience joined heartily in "Rock of Ages." Before entering upon the prelude, the lecturer referred to the death of his father, which occurred since his last Monday lecture, paying a warm tribute to "the man to whom he owed more than to any other."

PRELUDE.

The prelude was on the Religious Promises and Perils of the Hour. Mr. Cook said: Do not mistake the weathervane for the compass, nor your environment for the world. The arctic voyager cannot resist the impression that the ice fields extend to the equator. My mood is on the whole one of exultant hope. Unsound opinions are being undermined, ospecially by those who are trying to put them into practice, and sound views are growing from the results of their work. This is important not alone for ourselves, for the buzzing of the bee of heresy in America is heard in the Orient. Settling the faith for America has much to do with settling it for the world. Our faith must therefore have its roots in the past. Let us be thankful that Lotze's philosophy is coming to the front, and that agnosticism is declining. We are passing through a spent wave of skepticism. Lotze was never carried off his feet by evolution. I indorse as much of the doctrine as he did, but no more. Spencerianism is being superceded. One or two in this country, formerly classed as Spencerians, are coming upon theistic ground. One of them seems to have discovered a Supreme Being, and is to be congratulated. The tone of Cambridge is changing to one of devout theism. Concord philosophy has been conquered. Martineau and Lotze are fit leaders for those who would find the truth. Rationalism is declining in Germany and evangelical sentiment is growing. Let us be thankful for missions like those held by Mr. Aitken and Mr. Moody. There is an increase of unity among evangelical people. The twentieth century is likely to dawn upon a world approaching regeneration.

Among the perils of the hour Mr. Cook referred especially to the influence of the two doctrines, conditional immortality and probation after death, which he said are contradictory, but which we are urged to accept on the authority of the Christian consciousness. The greatest danger arises from trying to push into churches and pulpits men who are practically Universalists. The speaker expressed his conviction that there will be two organizations, and that it is unsafe to ordain men as foreign missionaries who hold erroneous views. In closing he referred to the fact that the new theology is nowhere producing revivals, and urged the need of the central doctrines of grace.

After prayer by Rev. Mr. Sims, a missionary from the Congo, Mr. Cook, with much emotion, announced the news, which had just arrived, of the death of Dr. C. L. Goodell of St. Louis, and called upon Dr. J. L. Withrow to offer special prayer in view of the sad event.

During the interlude Mr. Cook gave a list of best books on revivals and current theological discussion, and indorsed Mr. Gladstone's view of an Irish Parliament, which, however, he would not have run by Irish men educated politically in American cities.

THE LECTURE.

The lecture was on the subject of Saving Faith, from the standpoints of axiomatic science, the spiritual or intuitional philosophy, and the Scriptures, with the general aim to show that regeneration may occur without a knowledge of the historic Christ. Faith was defined as an act of the whole being, a changing of eyes with God, an affectionate trust in Him as a person. First, a long series of axioms was given, leading up to a benevolent First Cause to which affectionate reverence is due, and in whom alone spiritual rest can be found. A similar series of intuitions was then given, leading to the same result. These results were then compared with the teachings of Scripture, and declared to be in sufficient harmony with them to justify the hope that if one, without the knowledge of the historic Christ, should yield affectionately to the highest light in reason and conscience, he might be regenerated and saved. Such a doctrine is not for us, but for cases like Socrates. If any such are saved, it is through Christ and by the Atonement.—Condensed from report of The Congregationalist.

American Bible Society.

THE Board of Managers met at the Bible House, on Thursday, February 4th, 1886. The Hon. Enoch L. Fancher, LL.D., President, in the chair. The religious exercises were conducted by the Rev. Howard Crosby, D.D.

Among the letters from foreign lands presented for the consideration of the Board were communications from Mr. Sharp, tendering the congratulations of the British and Foreign Bible Society on the accession of Judge Fancher to the office of President, and from Dr. Wright, of the same society, proposing coöperation in the production of a new version of the Bible in Spanish; from Rev. William H. Gulick, of San Sebastian, showing the very great difficulty of securing any assistance in Spain in producing such a version; from Mr. Watt, of Berlin, concerning requests received at the British agency there from correspondents in the United States desirous of obtaining the Scriptures at less than cost for sale in this country; from Dr. Blodget, of Peking, communicating his views respecting the need of a version of the Bible in easy Wen-li; from Mr. Prince, of St. Petersburg, indicating a general plan for the assignment of colporteurs in Russia and Siberia in 1886; from Mr. Hamilton, with the report of work in Mexico in 1885, and estimates for the coming year; and from Mr. Milne, on his arrival at Laguyara in January.

Grants of books were made for distribution in the United States and in foreign lands to the value of about $3,126.

The total receipts for the month of January were $59,795.72. During the same period 64 237 volumes of the Scriptures were issued from the Bible House.

The General Outlook.

...On the first Sabbath in Jan. sixty-six persons were received into the membership of the First Congregational Church of New Britain, Conn. Of these fifty-five united on confession of faith, of whom thirty-two were males and nineteen heads of families. Thirty were baptized. Seventy new members were received into the South Congregational Church the same day.

....Lord Napier, of Magdala, states that of 18,000 cases of crime in the army of India which he had caused to be investigated not one had been committed by a total abstainer.

....The Rev. Lord Charles Thynne, an Anglican clergyman, a gentleman over seventy years of age, has joined the Church of Rome, and Lord Robert Montague, who entered into that communion some years ago, has returned to the Church of England.

....Numbers of Jews in London, though unbaptized, are believers in Christ. Though afraid openly to confess Him, it is not from fear of being put out of the synagogue, or called apostates, but mostly from fear of losing employment.

....There are now 7 Protestant churches in Rome and it is reported that the Pope is both anxious and indignant at the fact. But that is very foolish in the holy father, for those seven churches are there to stay, and, in addition, there are many more to follow.

....At Russellville, Ky., there is in progress a sweeping revival in the Methodist church, under the ministry of Dr. H. C. Morrison. The city has never been so greatly moved. Stores are closed for morning services, and a number of conversions are reported nightly.

....In Ireland, Presbyterianism embraces nearly one-half of the Protestant population. The orthodox Presbyterian Church has 553 congregations, and 101,452 communicants.

....The Methodist Woman's Missionary Society in India, having collected nearly $35,000 for the purpose, have started a newspaper designed especially for the Zenana ladies. It is issued fortnightly from their press at Lucknow in the Urdi and Hindi languages, and it is proposed to start a similar paper in Calcutta in the Bengali language.

....Erromanga is the only island in the New Hebrides where missionaries were murdered. Twelve years ago it contained only twelve church members, now not a heathen is to be found on the island.

....The gambling hell at Monte Carlo, the existence of which has long been a blot upon the civilization of Europe, is about to be made the subject of diplomatic action on the part of an International Commission. The report of the Commission states that between the years 1877 and 1885 one thousand eight hundred and twenty people—more than the whole population of the "kingdom" of Monaco—have committed suicide consequent upon losses at the gambling tables of Monte Carlo.

...J. E. Thomas writes: "I lately paid a visit to Alghero, an ancient seaport on the western coast of Sardinia. The people took willingly a great number of Scripture portions, and several asked for the whole Bible. By request I drew up a petition, which forty men signed, praying the committee of one of the evangelical churches of Italy to send them an evangelist. Amongst the signatures were those of two intelligent young men, who offer themselves to us as students for the Christian ministry. Not a very long time ago, when the population numbered only 5,000, Alghero contained seven monasteries, all occupied by friars; now, with a population of 12,000, those dwellings of the idle and dissolute are altogether abandoned; many of them, as I have seen, roofless and in utter ruin."

....The efforts of the missionaries and chiefs in Basutoland to put down drunkenness seem to be followed by good results. M. Dieterlen, one of the French missionaries, writing on Sept. 29th, says, "Lessouto is at the present time in a promising condition, seeing that drunkenness is blamed and fought against by the majority of the chiefs. Mopeli, a younger brother of Moshesh, has been going through the country preaching a thorough crusade against intoxicating drinks. The people are delighted to find it is impossible to procure eau-de-vie. Last Sunday we had large meetings, and the heathen seemed most grateful for the efforts made to save them from the enemy that threatened their destruction. Weak ones will always succumb, but to all appearances the Gospel has one obstacle the less to overcome."—Journal des Missions Evangéliques.

....The latest movement in ecclesiastical matters in Scotland is described as an effort to reconstruct the Establishment on Free Church principles. A Scotch member of Parliament proposes to introduce a bill into Parliament to remove all obstacles to the return of the Free Church to the Establishment. The Free Church leaders, it is said, have held a conference on the whole subject, at which, it is said, that a proposition was considered to the following effect—"that the three Presbyterian Churches of Scotland—Established, Free and United—might resolve to unite on the Articles of Agreement already framed in connection with former negotiations for union; that, after so resolving, they might ask the Legislature to Disestablish the Church in Scotland; and that, with regard to the endowments, which are not immense, these might be left in the hands of the United Disestablished Church—first, to meet vested interests, and next, as vacancies occurred, to be employed in each parish to supplement the stipends of all the Presbyterian ministers." The proposition was discussed and left on the table to hear what the leaders of the United Presbyterian Church may have to say.—The Presbyterian.

....Huang Sih Chuen, his Imperial Chinese Majesty's new Consul at New York, sat on the pulpit platform of the Spring Street Presbyterian Church on a recent Sunday evening. The occasion was the fifth anniversary of the Chinese Sunday-school connected with that church. The Consul wore his silken robes, skull cap and white satin shoes, and made a short address in Chinese to the thirty Chinese scholars present, which was translated by his interpreter.

....A very deep religious interest pervades Peddie Institute, Hightstown, N. J. The Day of Prayer was remarkable for the display of the Spirit's power. Many profess conversion, and many are inquiring the way of salvation.

News of the Week.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 3.—Serious complications have arisen between the United States of Columbia and Italy. Diplomatic relations have been suspended, and England may also be involved....Mr. John Morley starts for Ireland to assume the duties of Chief Secretary at once....A fight between two noblemen took place in Paris....Mr. Gladstone's daughter was married yesterday to clergyman ...United States Senate voted to recommit the Electoral Count bill....The House listened to eulogies on Vice-President Hendricks....Mrs. Bayard was buried beside her daughter at Wilmington, Del....A resolution was introduced in the Assembly at Albany to investigate the Harlem Bridge job....The New Jersey Assembly adopted the Senate resolution in opposition to the Arthur Kill Bridge....Ellen Graham, a nurse of the late Mrs. Roebling, has sued the estate for $50,000 ...The Brooklyn Bridge bill, regarding Chatham street extension, was signed by Governor Hill....Police Captain Murphy and two detectives have been accused of bribery by Harry Hill. ..The members of the Ohio Senate are coming to an understanding....Another attempt has been made to rob a house in Tarrytown. ....John D. Philbrick died yesterday in Boston....Bogus butter is being attacked on all sides by dealers, who wish to drive it out of the market.

THURSDAY, 4.—Mr. Gladstone's Cabinet officially announced. Nearly all the members serving under Mr. Gladstone before. ...The agreement between France and Germany regarding the west coast of Africa has been submitted to the Reichstag. ..It reported that the aeronauts, M. Girod an Renaud, who ascended in a balloon the latter part of January from Brest and were supposed to have perished at sea, were rescued....A serious strike is in progress in the four cotton mills at St. Quentin....Senator Logan before the Senate advocated the Dakota bill....A terrific explosion of a dynamite house near the new aqueduct at Fordham. One man killed ...A bed of kaolin has been discovered in Lawrence County, Ind., ranging in depth from six to twelve feet, and it proves to be of the best quality. It is thought that the yield will be 20,000 tons to the acre and the supply inexhaustible ...The Austrian cutter "Donau" was run down by a tug in the North river near Twenty-fifth street. Five Austrians lost their lives ...The Kohuts, who caused the death of Mrs. Fialka by setting fire to the tenement-house in which she lived, were sentenced to prison for life....Heavy snowstorm from Kansas to New York, and as far south as Galveston. Fifteen inches at Washington, D.C., twenty inches at Nashville, Tenn., accompanied with low temperature. Trains blocked in every direction.

FRIDAY, 5.—Mr. Gladstone has issued an address to the electors of Midlothian in which the policy of Government is outlined. The three questions which he said the Government must answer are those of social reform, land reform, and self-government in Ireland....The Chamber of Deputies in Paris agreed that the crown jewels should be sold to provide a fund for aged workmen. The jewels are valued at $40,000,000....There is great satisfaction at the appointment of Lord Rosebery, Secretary of Foreign Affairs in the British Cabinet.... The French Canadians have made an attack on Sir John A. MacDonald....The Count de Saint Vaillier, a noted French Senator, died at Paris....There were debates in the Senate of the United States on the Dakota bill and the proposition to create an Assistant Secretary of the Navy....Car conductors and drivers on several lines of cars in New York struck yesterday. The strike lasted only a few hours, and the demands of the workingmen for less hours of work a day were granted....Deputy wardens in the Riverside Penitentiary, Penn., were attacked with a knife by a convict and one of them will probably die....Great suffering is being experienced among the strikers in the coke region, Penn....A well-known New Haven lawyer has been suspended from the bar for one year for retaining the money of a client. ....Severe cold over a large part of the country. At Central Park 4 degrees below zero, in Northern New York between 30 and 40 degrees below.

(Continued on page twelve.)

Our Contributors.

Humility.

BY A. F. JUDD.

LOW at Thy feet—who died my soul to save,
And triumphed over death, and from the grave
Rose up again for me on that third morn;
Who, for my sake, endurest the world's scorn—
I bend in adoration humbly sweet
Low at Thy feet.

Nothing of worth I bring to offer Thee,
For Thou hast offered all on Calvary.
Take Thou my heart and make it worthier
Cherish my faith and make it lowlier;
Jesu, these things do I with tears entreat,
Low at Thy feet.

The Heretic Priest; A Tale of Reformation Days in the Netherlands.

(Translated from the Dutch of E. Gerdes, for the Christian Intelligencer, by Rev. Daniel Van Pelt.)

CHAPTER VI.—TEACHER AND PUPIL MEET AGAIN.

"HALLO!" cried out a voice. "Hallo! who are you? Where are you going?"

"I am the ferryman of the monastery," answered the latter, who had stepped ashore with Floris, while Philip Cruize remained with the unconscious Father Josephus in the boat.

The still invisible person from whom the voice proceeded indulged in some scarce articulate grumbling, which rather indicated disgust with the world generally. Our friends were naturally curious to find out who and what he was. The storm had by this time abated, and thinner clouds allowed the light of the moon to dispel some of the former inky darkness. Going a step or two further they observed the source of the grumbling. To all appearance it was a peasant or field-laborer who had lost his way in the dark.

"Who are you, friend?' asked the boatman in his turn. "You owe us an answer in return for mine."

"I live near the village of Boutersem and occupy a farm there. A couple of hours ago I was compelled by an officer of the Inquisition to convey him and a party of soldiers with a prisoner to the river. I saw the boat put off, but they must have had trouble in getting across, for I thought I heard cries of distress."

"Yes," said the oarsman, "the boat upset with all on board—"

"What!" exclaimed the peasant; "poor fellow, I hope he did not get drowned, bound hand and foot as he was."

"Who do you mean," inquired Floris.

"Why, the prisoner. I don't care if that wretched monk, or the Inquisitor, or the soldiers, got a ducking. It would do them good and cool off their wrath a little. But my heart bled for that poor prisoner; they treated him worse than a dog, and he so calm and patient all the while."

"I am glad I can tell you that he is safe," said the boatman. "They had to loose him to get him into the boat, and during the confusion he escaped. He came with us in the boat."

"I am rejoiced to hear it. How furious that monk will be when he finds out he lost his prey. Do you know whether he got drowned? I should hardly be sorry, for it was he, I understood, who betrayed the innocent man."

"Yes," was the reply. "He was very nearly drowned, however; he, too, is in the boat yonder. From the way you talk you seem to be in sympathy with the cause of the Reformed and disposed to aid it?"

"Yes, and I'll tell you what to do. Yonder is my wagon. Call the escaped prisoner, and do you all ride along with me to Boutersem. You are welcome to my house, and I will do all I can to aid your flight. Come, don't delay; we can reach my house long before morning."

"No, no, I can't go with you," said the boatman; "I must return at once to my house and avoid all appearance of knowing anything about his escape."

"And we can't leave the monk to perish," said Floris; "though he is our enemy we must return good for evil in this, his extremity."

"Well, I had hardly counted on him," said the peasant. "But what you say is true; this is what the new faith teaches, and we must practice it. Come, then, we'll lay him down upon the straw and make him comfortable."

Floris and his companion returned to the boat. They told Philip of their encounter and the plan proposed by the peasant. They carried the unconscious monk to the wagon and placed a good thickness of straw under him. Floris and his uncle sat together upon the box containing the sacred images. Cordial were the farewell words that passed between them and the devoted boatman. The sky was now nearly clear of clouds, the moon shone brightly and the horses needed little urging on their homeward way.

Philip Cruize, who learned from his nephew the circumstances of his conversion, related to him what had happened to him since his visit to the priest. He had gone as far as the vicinity of Louvain, when he was seized by the spies of the Inquisition. A few hours after his arrest, Father Josephus came to him with an Inquisitor and tried by every possible device to make him confess that he had been at the house of the priest Justus. When it was found that he would not implicate his friend, it was resolved to carry him as prisoner to Weersbeek and confront the priest with him, and thus force the latter to admit the interview. This design, too, had been frustrated by the wonderful Providence of God.

Father Josephus was meantime not neglected by them. In so far as the jolting of the wagon would permit it they busied themselves rubbing the man's chest with their warm hands; this, aided by the violent motion of the wagon, had the desired effect. Ere long the exhausted monk began to show decided signs of life, and drew one or two deep breaths.

At length the peasant stopped his horses before a small farmhouse, far removed from any other habitation. He informed our friends that this was his home.

"It seems that my family have not yet gone to bed," he remarked, for a light was visible in one of the rooms. "I am glad of that, for then you will soon be made comfortable."

He gave a peculiar call which was soon answered from within; two or three boys and a farm hand made their appearance soon after, who greeted the peasant and speedily unhitched and unharnessed the horses and put them and the wagon under cover.

"Is all well, Adrian?" inquired the peasant of the boy nearest to him.

"Yes, father. But an hour or more ago we were much frightened by a knock at the door. No one dared open it; but our man, Govert, went out armed with an axe, and found a man who asked if he might come in and rest himself."

"And who is this man? Where is he now, Govert?" asked his master.

"I don't know who he is," was the reply. "He is a queer one, though. As soon as he heard you call he left the room and went outdoors, thinking, I suppose, there was danger."

Meantime the peasant's wife had come into the barn, and after greeting the new comers she invited Floris and his uncle to enter the house. Govert and the peasant took off the poor monk's drenched clothing and dressed him in some of their own, and then made up a rude couch for him in the family room near the hearth. Philip Cruize also was provided with a change of clothing, and some much needed refreshments soon removed all unpleasant effects of the night's adventures.

Scarce had they sat down to partake of the cheer set before them, when the man whom Govert had described as "queer" entered the room.

The stranger presented, indeed, a remarkable appearance. He was a tall, thin man; the top of his head was completely bald, due either to nature or the priestly tonsure. His clothing was partly clerical and partly secular. His eyes could by no means be called gentle of expression, and there were grim curves about the mouth, as if his lips were often accustomed to curl into smiles of scorn or contempt.

"May we ask, sir, who you are?' inquired Philip Cruize, politely.

"Well, sir," the man replied, much as if he were defying an assailant, "some call me a renegade Carmelite monk; others call me a heretic; I call myself Petrus Dathenus."

"Petrus Dathenus!" exclaimed Philip, greatly surprised. "I am rejoiced to meet you. You are perfectly safe among these friends. This is my nephew, the son of the Berthems."

"Indeed?" replied Dathenus, patting Floris good naturedly on the shoulder. "And do you accompany us to the house of your parents?"

"Yes, Mr. Dathenus, I am happy to say I mean to be there to share in all that is to take place there."

"Does this youth know anything of our plans?" asked Dathenus of Cruize, in a whisper.

"He knows that there is to be a conference at his father's in behalf of the Reformed faith," was the answer. "But nothing further than that. Only Stricker and Herman Van der Wonde know the rest."

"Our meeting is appointed for to-morrow evening, is it not?"

"Yes," replied Philip.

After this whispered conversation Petrus Dathenus and Philip Cruize became silent and remained plunged into deep thought, while the others did not wish to disturb their reflections by conversation.

The man to whom the reader has just been introduced was a prominent figure in the stirring events of this period in the history of the Dutch Provinces and the Reformed Church. His zeal for the Reformation was boundless, and his courage in preaching its doctrines and advancing its interests was unsurpassed. But the very violence of temperament which made him so bold and aggressive in a good cause, made him also bitterly intolerant of those who differed from him in religion. He could not allow a right to exist even to those Romanists who were in full sympathy with the struggle against Spain and the Inquisition. When the Prince of Orange—although himself then fully in accord with the doctrines of the Reformation.—advocated and secured freedom of worship to Romanists and Reformed alike, by the Pacification of Ghent, Dathenus did not scruple to denounce him fiercely, declaring that the Prince cared neither for God nor for religion. It is to be deplored that a man of such acknowledged gifts and fearless courage was not more actuated by the spirit of gentleness and Christian charity.*

Petrus Dathenus himself first broke the silence by relating with much zest how, by arousing the people in West Flanders, he had by force obtained the privilege of preaching in the open air. Also, that not long ago he had preached to a gathering of two thousand people, when a certain magistrate, having attempted to break up the assembly, was set upon by the multitude and nearly killed. These accounts greatly interested the peasant, who expressed a desire that Petrus Dathenus would hold a preaching service the very next day in this neighborhood, agreeing to scour the country, by the aid of Adrian and Govert, and collect a large audience. Dathenus at once gave his consent, knowing how entirely the people in these regions were kept in darkness and superstition by the influence of the monks and priests.

While Dathenus and the peasant were eagerly discussing their project, a deep sigh was heard, as of some one awaking out of a profound sleep. Philip and Floris hastened to the couch to see what they could do to assist the suffering monk. Father Josephus was indeed a sorry spectacle. Over some rude underclothing furnished by the peasant, they had drawn the boatman's old coat which had covered Floris, but was now perfectly dry. Around this again was closely wrapped his uncle's brown patched cloak. He seemed now to be regaining consciousness. From time to time he cast a glance about him, and his eyes rested upon the inmates of the room, but seemed to recognize no one; not even Floris, who stood by the head of his couch. His words, too, were incoherent.

"Captain! the prisoner!—St. Luke—No, no, Brigitta. The youth is a sly one—Oh! Holy Mary! The wicked bishop of—"

But now sounds of a more alarming nature broke in upon the stillness. Heavy blows were struck upon the front door, as if soldiers were beating the butt end of their muskets against it.

Adrian and Govert, who had gone to the stable, ran into the room, dismay depicted on their countenances.

"What is it?" cried the peasant, manifesting no alarm whatever.

"As soon as we heard the blows upon the door we looked through a chink in the wall and saw three or four soldiers, with two other men."

"Mr. Dathenus, do you and Philip Cruize go to the stable loft and hide beneath the hay," said the peasant, quietly. "I shall go outside and inquire what is wanted."

He then opened a small closet in a corner of the room, and taking two pistols from it he placed them in two inside pockets. The blows upon the door were now repeated and a rough voice cried out:

"Open the door! I demand it in the name of Lady Margaret, the Governess."

"I am coming, I am coming, my friends!" replied

* This man has a great interest for us of the Reformed (Dutch) Church. He translated the Heidelberg Catechism into Dutch, almost immediately after its publication in the Palatinate (1563). A translation by him into Dutch rhyme of Marot's French versification of the Psalms of David was for two centuries the standard and authorized version in use at all public worship in Holland. And from the fact that his name stands first on the list of names subscribed to the Proceedings of perhaps the first General Synod of the Reformed Church ever held—namely, that of Wessel, in 1563—it is thought that he was President of that body.—Translator.

the peasant. "Don't be in such unreasonable haste!"

And drawing the bolts he opened the door. Three soldiers, led by an officer, entered the room. Two others held a prisoner whose hands were bound together upon his back.

Floris looked up, and observing the pale face of the prisoner, he uttered a cry of consternation.

The prisoner turned his mournful eyes upon the youth at the same moment, and from his lips, too, there sounded an outcry of painful surprise:

"Floris!"

"Mr. Justus!"

(To be continued.)

Boston Letter.

February 3d, 1886.

WHAT an interesting peep I took one night into a room in the Congregational House as the dark was coming on! It was a simply furnished room, a prominent object being a big table with its burden of documents. Within the walls of that unpretentious room, what power has been generated for Christian worship! A big driving wheel, though unseen, is in that room, and especially is it realized when a band of earnest mission workers may here gather for prayer and conference. This is the headquarters of the City Missionary Society, whose props are every Congregationalist, far and near, that the big-framed, big voiced missionary in-chief, Rev. Daniel Waldron, can coax into giving, and he can coax "a heap," which can be taken literally. The force at work is mostly female, and in all twenty-five have been employed the past year. Each missionary has a district for visitation and work; brightening the homes of the poor, giving away garments to the shivering, taking delicacies to the sick, helping the unemployed to work, holding meetings for prayer, guiding in every possible way to the Cross. How often I have seen the old city missionary hurrying through the rain, or facing a defiant winter blast, following the Good Shepherd of souls who is ever out in the storm and hunting for His lost ones. For every work, charitable and missionary, the past year's receipts roll up to the noble amount of $41,048 25. This stream of beneficence is poured out again through such channels as the support of mission services and household visitation, a cheery Thanksgiving for about a thousand families, rides to country or seashore for many poor, tired, sick ones. At Christmas there was a shower of cards, letters and leaflets by this Society upon the inmates of twenty six institutions besides many homes. There were over twenty-eight thousand flakes in this white winter-fall. At Easter there was another big card fall. In connection with the Society's work, a canvass was recently made at the South End. Of 955 Protestant families, 343 reported themselves as non church attendants. On the other hand, only 67 Protestant children of the age for Sunday-school were found outside of it. If the meshes of the church net don't hold the big fish, it is plain that the Sunday-school catches up almost all the little ones.

It is an interesting inquiry in a city, what are the church centres attracting the great audiences. Here is one in this city,—Tremont Temple, which is the headquarters of the Union Temple Church, Baptist, whose Sunday services attract to its vast audience-room hearers from all parts of the city, and it is a big Gospel net catching up many strangers. Rev. Emory J. Haynes is the pastor. Each Sunday there is distributed in the Temple an edition of 4,000 copies of one of Mr. Haynes' sermons, the last page giving the hymns to be used that day in the Temple services Late pastors of this church have been Drs. Fulton, Lorimer and Ellis.

Two of the members of this church have, since the opening of the year, been honored with a very notable, commemorative celebration. It was a marriage anniversary. Birds singing, a platform embowered with flags and evergreens, and a venerable couple sitting beneath the emerald, patriotic arch to receive the congratulations of a very long file of friends as they crossed the platform, were features of the golden wedding of the noted evangelist, Dr. A. B. Earle, and his wife, in the Meionaon connected with Tremont Temple. The evangelist is in the 56th year of his ministry. At the close of the 55th he had preached 20,850 sermons and held 15 500 prayer-meetings, visiting for his work all of the States excepting Colorado and Florida, and holding services in three of the British provinces. An estimated harvest of those meetings is the union of 160,000 people with different churches, and that at least two hundred have entered the ministry. I have known Dr. Earle for years, and the work speaks for the worker. It has been a marked feature of his labors that he has strongly preferred union services.

The winter is witnessing the usual denominational activity. The Week of Prayer had its customary observance and I heard of churches that have been encouraged to hold special services since. The Episcopalians have discussed the subject of "missions," lately illustrated in your city, and Lent may be accompanied by a similar movement here. The Episcopal Church in this diocese is now holding meetings in behalf of the missions of the diocese. At a late large meeting in the ritualistic Church of the Advent, Boston, while altar candles were burning and surpliced choristers were singing, it was an interesting sight to see one speaker, Phillips Brooks, the big, broad church rector of Trinity, marching up the aisle in a column of surpliced choirs and clergymen, headed by the ritualistic crucifer. It was a significant comment on the fact that candles and colored stoles and choirs in surplices have lost their prominence in the Episcopal Church as signs of ecclesiastical principles, and have become only matters of personal taste.

The Methodists have made a wonderful advance in New England since foundation days. I can remember easily when the "Methodist preacher" in a town was a character in whom an earnest piety might be expected, but scholarship and culture were more likely to be found in some other denomination. As an exponent of the advance that has been made, we have Boston University with its various halls on Beacon Hill and Bromfield street. The Methodists are pushing forward enthusiastically, and the New England Methodist Historical Society is ambitious to measure the push. It held its annual meeting in Wesleyan Hall recently. It reports a permanent fund of eight thousand dollars and has over two thousand volumes in its library. Whether it be the history of a denomination or a congregation, save it. The occasional use of a pair of scissors run through the local or national press, a little exercise with pen and ink, will secure to the next generation facts of great interest occurring in this. In a library, private or public, the department of history is of great moment.

Just now, we in New England are making up our minds about Gen. Grant's book. It is not necessary to say that it is interesting. The opening pages make you think of a kind, patient grandfather who sits down by your side, and in a pleasant, very frank way turns his life inside out for your entertainment and instruction. The book was written by a wonderful man certainly; whether it will be ranked as a wonderful book, the readers of another generation will determine. There is Tennyson. His late poems are bright, of course, but I wish they were simpler. His war-piece will be a favorite with all declaimers. What new furious battle charges will be now made across the bloodless platforms of academies and high schools! A noted literary man went to his rest the first month of the year, Henry Hudson, of Cambridge, that skilled critic of Shakespeare. Dean Gray, of the Episcopal Theological School, who has a happy faculty as an interpreter of men's motives and achievements, referred to Hudson as one who showed the ethical grandeur of Shakespeare.

In the sphere of law movements, there is nothing special to report. Boston still rejoices in the fact that under a Police Commissioner appointed by the State, it witnesses better government. Ah, yes, there is something special to chronicle—a Grand Army Post that has had a fair without resorting to a lottery! The number of this wonderful post is ten, its location Worcester. and its profits without a lottery, over four thousand dollars. I would like to propound this inquiry to the Grand Army men of Massachusetts: why it is that the men who so splendidly upheld the laws in their service under the old flag, now so often club to break the anti-lottery law down? It does not look well to see brave old law defenders changing to law-breakers.

NEPONSET.

Put on the Brakes.

"GOD told me what to do." So said the engineer, who, by his prompt action, prevented a terrible railroad disaster near Matawan, N. J., a few weeks since.

These were the circumstances. The train was crossing a bridge, a car became derailed, some passenger pulled the bell rope; the engineer looking back saw the danger and at once put on a full head of steam, thus saving his train. The bell rope was pulled to put on the brakes; but the engineer put on steam instead, and safety was the result.

Is there not a lesson here for the Church? The train is on the bridge. The car of benevolence is derailed; for the cry comes from mission fields "more men;" the cry comes from our Boards "more money;" but the passengers sit in the comfortable seats, and when the rumbling, jarring appeal comes from the pulpit or through our papers, they jump up and pull the rope to put on brakes.

In individual churches the car of personal effort is derailed. The pastor preaches, prays and exhorts, but the response of the passengers is, "put on the brakes." Brakes are good, exceedingly good, in their place. When a train is going down a heavy grade, brakes are a necessity. When a farmer is going down the mountain side with a heavily loaded wagon he needs brakes. But the track over which the Gospel train is moving has no down grade. The road the Church is to travel leads up, not down the mountain side. Suppose Abraham had put on the brake of human love, would he have reached the top of Mt. Moriah and learned that grand lesson, "The Lord will provide?" Suppose Moses had put on the brake, neglect of duty, would he have reached the top of Mt. Horeb and received from the midst of the burning bush the commission to deliver his people from the rod of the oppressor?

Suppose Christ had put on the brake of self ease, would He have reached the top of Mt. Calvary and erected there the blood stained Cross, toward which true disciples ever look with joyful hope? Oh, that the people of God would take off the brakes of selfishness; for then would there be a perceptible motion of the train up the grade!

Steam was the motive power that saved the train. The engineer, acting under inspiration, threw the lever forward and opened wide the throttle, and the work was accomplished.

The Holy Spirit is poured out. He is the motive power. He is ready to fill and move every heart that will open the valve. When this shall have been done, benevolence, personal effort, yea, each car in the whole train will be safely carried across the bridge.

The engineer could put on the steam to move his whole train. In Christ's work the individual must work the lever. The Secretaries of our Boards may plead their cause. Ministers may point out duty and warn of danger, but the people must take off the brakes and open the throttle valve. How shall they do this? The opening words of this article answer: "GOD TOLD ME WHAT TO DO."

D. W. S

Secret Believers versus Hypocrites.

BY REV. WILBUR F. CRAFTS.

CHRIST'S condemnation of secret believers is hardly less severe than that of false professors. He recognized two kinds of hypocrisy. One who "wears the livery of heaven to serve the devil in," is in His view not more surely a hypocrite than one who through wicked timidity or false shame wears the livery of the devil while secretly leading a life of prayer.

Christ teaches that we are bound not only to be what we seem, but also to seem what we are; that we are to possess what we profess, but also that we are to profess what we possess. If we belong to the cause of Christ we are commanded to show it by donning the uniform and raising our colors, lest our influence be counted for the enemy.

What Jesus said of those who failed to be what they seemed:

Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye tithe mint and anise and cummin, and have left undone the weightier matters of the law, judgement, and mercy, and faith: but these ye ought to have done, and not to have left the other undone. Ye blind guides, which strain out the gnat, and swallow the camel.

Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye cleanse the outside of the cup and of the platter, but within they are full from extortion and excess. Thou blind Pharisee, cleanse first the inside of the cup and of the platter, that the outside thereof may become clean also.

Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye are like unto whited sepulchres, which outwardly appear beautiful, but inwardly are full of dead men's bones, and of all uncleanness.—Matt. 23: 23-27.

What Jesus said of those who were afraid to seem what they were:

Nevertheless even of the rulers many believed on him; but because of the Pharisees they did not confess it, lest they should be put out of the synagogue: for they loved the glory of men more than the glory of God.—John 12: 42, 43.

For whosoever shall be ashamed of me and of my words, of him shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he cometh in his own glory, and the glory of the Father, and of the holy angels.—Luke 9: 26.

The Reading Room.

Our Book-Shelves.

....“THE STORY OF THE HEAVENS.” By Robert Stawell Ball, LL.D. Prof. Ball is the Royal Astronomer of Ireland, Professor of Astronomy in the University of Dublin, and a Fellow of the Royal Astronomical Society. By various communications to scientific periodicals he has proved his ability to write to the satisfaction of those who demand the most rigid scientific treatment of scientific subjects. His competency to deal with the most profound astronomical themes is established. In this portly volume he addresses the large body of intelligent readers and endeavors to describe to them the wonders of the heavens. For such an attempt he has had considerable preparation, for in Great Britain he is admired as a popular lecturer.

But the general interest in astronomy has prompted the publication of a large number of popular astronomies. Almost everybody is impressed with the appearance of the heavenly bodies and wishes to know something about them. In one way and another the majority of men have heard of the revelations of the telescope and of the discoveries of observers and the wonderful results of mathematical reckonings, and wish definite knowledge of these things. There has been a large market for books which would describe to men in words they could understand what had been ascertained in regard to other worlds. There has been, then, an invitation and incitement to write upon these great themes that could not fail to induce many observers to tell what they had seen and what conclusions they had reached. Why, then, should there be another popular astronomy, when the public has been so often satisfactorily served? The reason is found in the fact that always there has been left a number of facts not easily explained and a number of processes still to be made intelligible to the mass of intelligent and inquisitive men. Professor Ball's chief motive in making a new popular astronomy, as we suppose, has been to carry explanation farther than his predecessors. In this he has succeeded.

The great facts of the story of the heavens must constitute a large part of every astronomy, but they can be presented in many ways. Professor Ball recounts them with enthusiasm and unconcealed admiration. It is evident on every page that the pursuit of astronomical studies has been with him as much a matter of the heart as of the head, and it is also evident that he wishes so far as possible to lead others into the enjoyment which has been so grateful to himself. Therefore he goes farther in the elucidation of phenomena, of processes, of conclusions than other writers have. These are the peculiarities of this book —the enthusiasm, the glowing words with which the story is told, and the extension of explanation beyond the usual boundaries.

The royal astronomer has succeeded, not where many have failed, but where the majority have not made the attempt to convey to unscientific readers the reasons on which conclusions have been built and the nature of phenomena noticed by nearly everybody and of those made known by the telescope. The minor planet method of computing the distance of the sun is so described that every intelligent reader will apprehend its main and essential parts. How observations of the eclipses of Jupiter's satellites led to Roemer's discovery of the velocity of light is made plain. Why the rings of Saturn cannot be solid or liquid, but must be composed of a stream of minute bodies moving around the orb is brought within the understanding of everyone having but a moderate knowledge of mechanical laws. The discussion of the constitution of nebulae and comets, of the movements of comets, of the method of computing the distances of the stars, of the source of the sun's heat, of the tides past and present, and of many other topics is more extended than has been customary in works of this character, and is clear and instructive. The more abstruse departments of the science, always or almost always stated, but seldom explained, have rarely been brought to an equal extent within the grasp of intelligent men who have but a trifling knowledge of technical terms.

The volume will be read with great interest by those who desire to know what the suns and planets, the nebulae, comets and meteors are, how they are bound together, what the telescope and spectroscope reveal in regard to them, and what are the laws which regulate their movements and their influence. It is very handsomely illustrated. The larger engravings are of superior accuracy and beauty. (Cassell & Co.)

....“MY TEN YEARS' IMPRISONMENT.” By Silvio Pellico. (Cassell's National Library, Vol. I.) No lover of good reading can henceforth complain that books are too dear. In this handy and well printed volume we have the old and famous story of Silvio Pellico, imprisoned as an Italian patriot by the tyrannical government of Austria. It is the first of a series of volumes which the firm of Cassell and Company have begun to issue, one book being sent out each week. The series is edited by Prof. Henry Morley of London, and will give the very best of reading. Biography, Religion, Natural History, Plays, Poems, Political Economy, will be represented in the selections, so that a reader will have all the variety he could wish. And the price of each volume is to be but ten cents, while a year's subscription to the series will be but five dollars. Unless publishers give away their books we do not see how prices could go much lower.

We are extremely pleased with the size and printing of this first volume. It is easy to slip into the pocket, and the series will doubtless commend itself to travellers. The print is not difficult to read, though it has to be somewhat small, as there are two hundred pages in the book. We certainly congratulate the reading public on the manner in which they are treated.

....“THE HOMILETIC REVIEW.” Edited by I. K. Funk, D.D. Vol. X. From July to December, 1885. It will prove a great convenience to clergymen to have the consecutive numbers of this magazine in bound form. The numbers for the half year make a handsome octavo of 558 pages, filled with able and interesting symposiums on subjects that are at the front in public thought, sermons in full by some of the ablest preachers of the day, sermonic sketches that are suggestive, and short, thoughtful discussions on many practical religious themes. The contents are calculated to interest and edify Christian laymen as well as clergymen, and the book will prove as valuable and elegant an addition to a lay library as to a clerical. (Funk & Wagnalls.)

....“JUST IN TIME; or, Howard Clarion's Rescue.” By Mrs. G. S. Reaney. This is a well-told story. It is the oft repeated tale of woe that so often follows, sooner or later, a rush into marriage with undue consideration. The various acts of a complete drama are all here, illustrating a too common experience in real life, and exemplifying the old adage, “Marry in haste and repent at leisure.” The husband's selfishness, worthlessness, dissipation and vice, do not quench the love of a forsaken, heart-broken wife, to whom, after long separation, he returns with shattered health to be cared for in death. The book is a beacon of warning that should be scrupulously heeded. (American Tract Society.)

Our Library Table.

Periodicals, Serials and Notes.

....The Century for February is a well filled and attractive number. In it begins a new serial to be continued through the year, entitled, “The Minister's Charge,” by W. D. Howells. The Dance in Place Congo is the first paper in a series on “Creole Songs and Dances,” contributed by George W. Cable. It also contains an interesting sketch of the life and work of the famous French sculptor, Antoine Louis Barye, with a portrait and several engravings. The war articles embrace “Preparing for the Wilderness Campaign,” by General Grant; “Our March Against Pope,” by General James Longstreet, and “Anecdotes of McClellan's Bravery,” with a frontispiece portrait. Additional chapters are given of Mrs. Foote's engaging serial, and “The Bostonians” is finished in this number. The short stories, essays, poems, and Open Letters possess the usual high degree of merit. This midwinter number sustains in every respect the excellent repute won by this magazine.

....Lippincott's Magazine for February is a delightful mêlange of stories, essays, sketches and poems. Mr. Dorman B. Eaton gives Gail Hamilton a good and unsparing setting down for her shallow smartness on civil service reform in the January number. “Backwoods Preraphaelites” is a graphic and amusing sketch of a peculiar phase of American life “J. S. of Dale” and Grant Allen contribute two very different short stories, but both excellent of their kind,—the latter being a detective story. “Taken by Siege” maintains the promise of the first instalment, as a peculiarly fresh and realistic American novel. A tender shadow rests upon this number from the recent death of Mr. J. B. Lippincott, the founder of the magazine and of the publishing house of that name.

....The Pulpit Treasury for February gives four sermons in full: “The Christian's Complete Life,” by Rev. G. M. Mathews, of the United Brethren Church, Dayton, Ohio, whose portrait forms the frontispiece; “The Body of Christ,” by Wm. P. Breed, D.D., of Philadelphia, Pa.; “The Saviour's Appeal to His Own,” by Rev. W. Hay Aitken, London, his farewell sermon in St. George's Episcopal Church of this city; and “Obedience Begetting Faith,” by J. S. Van Dyke, D.D., of Cranberry, N. J. These sermons are all thoughtful, thorough and stimulating, and with the other carefully filled departments make up an interesting and instructive number.

....The Homiletic Review for February opens with able discussions on living questions, such as: “What Should be the Attitude of the American Clergy toward the Revised Version of the Scriptures?” and “How may the Ministry Increase its Efficiency and Usefulness?” Dr. Ormiston tells how he lost his health and how he found it. Dr. Arthur T. Pierson contributes another suggestive budget of “Seed Thoughts for Sermons.” The Sermonic, and other sections are occupied as usual with choice and appropriate matter.

....The Homiletic Magazine (whose American publisher is now E. B. Treat, 772 Broadway) begins the year with a very good number. Its chief articles are the able contribution of the Wesleyan G. W. Oliver to the discussion, Is Salvation Possible after Death? and a most eloquent discourse on Immortality by Bersier, facile princeps among the Protestant preachers of France.

... The Reformed Quarterly Review opens with an able article by the Editor on National Christianity and Church Union and several other excellent papers. One on the Constitution of the U. S., speaking of the power of the Supreme Court to pronounce a law valid or invalid, says, “The same is the case in England,” which is not true at all. Unlike our Congress, Parliament there is “omnipotent.” The Notices of New Books are not numerous but careful and thorough.

....Prof. Huxley's paper, projected into the Gladstone-Réville debate, is republished in the February Popular Science Monthly. It is one of the most infirm arguments Prof. Huxley has constructed, but should be read to learn how trifling and irrelevant are the objections an accomplished man of science, who is also a bitter sceptic, can bring against the Scriptural account of creation. The number has two portraits and biographical sketches in relation to the late Dr. W. B. Carpenter and our eminent engineer, James B. Eads. It is unnecessary to say that the following articles deserve attention: The Improvement of East River and Hell Gate, illustrated, by General John Newton; Recent Experiments in State Taxation, by H. J. Ten Eyck; Bishop's Ring Around the Sun, illustrated, by W. M. Davis; The Influence of Inventions upon Civilization, by C. Smith; The Musket as a Social Force, by John McElroy; Discrimination in Railway Rates, No. I, by Gerrit L. Lansing; Instinct as a Guide to Health, by Dr. Felix Oswald, and The Increasing Curse of European Militancy, by Alfred Russel Wallace.

....Lifeboats and Lifeboat-Men, an illustrated first paper in the English Illustrated Magazine of the month, is a very interesting account of an important service. A description of Ulm by Helen Zimmern and the second part of the story of A Month in Sicily, by H. D. Traill, both illustrated, tell facts worth knowing and in pleasing words. Mr. Grant Allen begins a story, Harry's Inheritance, with a promise of good things to come. Curious customs, history and some science are mingled in a treatise On the Cultivation of Tea and on Tea Customs in Japan, by F. A. Junker von Langegg. The supply of Headings, Tailpieces and Initials, selected from the work of artists and engravers of the last three centuries, seems inexhaustible and the specimens in this number will reward the student.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

A. S. Barnes & Co.: Carmina Sanctorum: A Selection of Hymns and Songs of Praise with Tunes. Edited by Roswell Dwight Hitchcock, Zachary Eddy, Lewis Ward Mudge. Square 8vo, pp. 447.

G. P. Putnam's Sons: Mechanics and Faith: A Study of Spiritual Truth in Nature. By Charles Talbot Porter. 12mo, pp. 295. $1.50.

Thomas Y. Crowell & Co.: The House at Crague; or, Her Own Way. By Mary B. Sleight. 12mo, pp. 352. $1.25.

Presbyterian Board of Publication: Uncle Seth's Will. By Mrs. Nathaniel Conklin. (Jennie M. Drinkwater.) 12mo, pp. 408. $1.25.

Harper & Brothers: A History of Modern Europe. From the Capture of Constantinople by the Turks to the Treaty of Berlin, 1878. By Richard Lodge, M.A. (The Students' Modern Europe.) 12mo, pp. 771; also, Upland and Meadow. A Poaetquissingo Chronicle. By Charles C. Abbott, M.D., author of “Primitive Industry,” etc. 12mo, pp. 397.

UNBOUND BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

Præterita: Outlines of Scenes and Thoughts in My Past Life. By John Ruskin, LL.D. Chap. 4. Under New Tutorships; Chap. 5. Parnassus and Plynlimmon; Chap. 6. Schaffhausen and Milan; Chap. 7. Papa and Mamma. 8vo, pp. 109 to 245. John Wiley & Sons.

Evolution and Religion. By Henry Ward Beecher. Part II. 12mo, pp. 440. $1. Fords, Howard & Hulbert.

'Twixt Love and Duty. A Novel. By Tighe Hopkins. (No. 52, Harper's Handy Series.) 16mo, pp. 232. 25 cents; also,

A Plea for the Constitution of the U. S. of America, Wounded in the House of its Guardians. By George Bancroft. (No. 53, same.) 16mo, pp. 95. 25 cents; also,

A Girton Girl. A Novel. By Mrs. Annie Edwardes. (No. 510, Harper's Franklin Square Library.) 4to, pp. 73. 20 cents.

Childe Harold's Pilgrimage. By Lord Byron. (Cassell's National Library. Edited by Prof. Henry Morley. Vol. 1. No. 2.) 16mo, pp. 192. 10 cents. Cassell & Co.

The Atlantic and Pacific Ship-Railway Across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, in Mexico, Considered Commercially, Politically and Constructively. By Elmer L. Corthell, Chief Engineer. Illustrated. 8vo, pp. 80

PERIODICALS.

December.—The Monthly Interpreter.

January.—The English Pulpit of To-Day.

February.—The Pansy, The Musical Herald, Outing, The Book Buyer, The Sidereal Messenger, Words and Weapons, The Musical Visitor, The English Illustrated Magazine, The American Garden, The Library Magazine.

January-February.—Christian Thought.

Just Published.

OUTLINES
OF
UNIVERSAL HISTORY.

BY GEORGE PARK FISHER, D.D., LL.D.,
OF YALE COLLEGE.

1 vol. 8vo. 600 pages.

This work, designed as a text-book and for private reading, is a clear and condensed narrative, brought down to the present year, comprising not only a record of political events, but also a sketch of the progress of literature, art, and science, from the beginning of history to the present time.

It contains full lists of books for reading and reference, and is furnished with 32 historical maps—mostly colored, and many of them folded.

The lucid arrangement, together with the use of different sizes of type, has rendered it possible to bring together a great amount of matter within a brief compass, and in a readable form.

Extra cloth binding with leather back.
Price by mail, postage free, $3.00.

Ivison, Blakeman, Taylor & Co, Publishers
713 and 755 Broadway, New York.

JUST ISSUED
BY THE
Presbyterian Board of Publication.

Half-Hours with the Lessons of 1886.

Forty-eight short sermons on the lessons of 1886 by twenty-four prominent Pastors and Preachers.

Specially prepared to aid Superintendents and Teachers.

12mo. Price, in cloth binding, $1.25. Paper binding, 85c.

Westminster Question Book for 1886.

A manual for teachers and older scholars, containing the Text of the Lesson, Helps for Scholars, Questions, Lesson Plan, Golden Text, Home Studies and Catechism.

Price, 15 cents, net.

My Soul, Thou Hast Much Goods.

BY HELEN R. EDSON.
24mo. Fancy Paper Cover. Price, 25 cents

Golden Promises.

SELECTED FROM GOD'S WORD.
BY REV. SAMUEL FULTON.
24mo. Fancy Paper Cover. Price, 25 cents.

Address orders to
JOHN A. BLACK, Business Sup't,
1334 CHESTNUT ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.,
Or, Ward & Drummond, 116 Nassau St., New York, N. Y.

SCHOOL SONG BOOKS.

For High Schools, Seminaries, &c.

Song Greeting.
(60 cts. or $6 per doz.) By L. O. Emerson. A really admirable collection of good songs.

High School Book of Song.
(75 cts. or $8 per doz.) By F. Leslie. Fine collection of the best Part-Songs, Duets, &c.

Song Reader. Book 2.
(60 cts. or $ per doz.) By Emerson and Brown. Practical note reader, with good music.

Public School Hymnal.
(40 cts. or $3.60 per doz By Irving Emerson. Large collection of well chosen hymns and tunes.

Welcome Chorus, by W. S. Tilden.

High School Choir, by Emerson & Tilden.

Laurel Wreath, by W. O. Perkins, are three very successful High School Song Books. Price, each, $1 or $9 per doz.

For Common Schools.

American School Music Readers, Book 1 (35 cts.), Book 2 (50 cts.), Book 3 (50 cts.), by Emerson & Tilden, are increasingly popular in graded schools.

Song Bells, by L. O. Emerson, and

Golden Robin, by W. O. Perkins, are two very popular general collections of genial school songs. Price of each, 50 cts. or $4 80 per doz.

Any book mailed for retail price.

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston.
Chas. H. Ditson & Co., 867 Broadway, N. Y.

CHOIR LEADERS

Are aware of the fact that the greatest musical need of the choir is good, new Scripture and Hymn Anthems for opening, closing, and occasional use. This need the "MUSICAL VISITOR" proposes to supply every month. It will have in each number enough to last a choir until the next issue. In addition to this, there will be a number of fine Organ Voluntaries, while in the reading department will be found the usual assortment of Sketches, Stories, Essays, and articles of special interest to choir and chorus members.

Choice Anthems and Choir Pieces

Subscription, $1.50 a year.
In Clubs of 5 or more, $1.00 each.

A sample copy of January "Visitor" containing 3 Anthems and 2 Voluntaries, will be mailed to any address for ten cents. Address

THE JOHN CHURCH CO.,
CINCINNATI, O.

THE IVORY SOAP

SOUVENIR FOR 1886

IS THE ETCHING Referred to in another column under the head of "Etchers and Etching." The only lettering on it is the impression of Mr. Monks' signature and the small fac-simile of a cake of IVORY Soap in faint outline as shown here.

We will send the etching by mail for fifty-four cents, to cover expense of packing and postage.

Postal or Express Money Orders only will be received in payment. Don't send postage stamps.

PROCTER & GAMBLE,
CINCINNATI, O.

☞ Write your name and full address as plainly as possible.

NOW READY:
Carmina Sanctorum,
A SELECTION OF
HYMNS AND SONGS OF PRAISE,
With Tunes.

Edited by Roswell D. Hitchcock, Zachary Eddy, Lewis Ward Mudge.
746 Hymns, 400 Tunes, 23 Chants. Indexes full. 400 pages, square 8vo, cloth, price, $1.25: for examination or introduction, $1.

In press: Handy Edition, Hymns only, 60c; Pocket Edition, Hymns only, 30c; Chapel Edition, Hymns and Tunes, 75c.

☞ Clergymen or committees desiring to examine may obtain copies free, subject to return if not adopted. Address

A. S. BARNES & CO, Publishers,
111 & 113 William St., New York.
24 and 26 Madison St., Chicago.

TO BE PUBLISHED THIS WEEK
BY MORRIS COSTER,
1166 Broadway, New York,
NO. 6 OF THE
THIRD VOLUME
OF THE
New Amsterdam Gazette,

which will contain full speeches and proceedings at the occasion of the first dinner of the Holland Society of New York, January 8th, by Judges Van Vorst, Van Wyck, Rev. Van Dyke, Jr., Hon. R. Roosevelt, and Hon. Chauncey Depew, etc.

Subscriptions for the third volume at $1.50 per year, on superfine paper, is also taken at the office of THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER.

ANTHEM BOOKS.

Sure to Give Satisfaction.

DIAMOND COLLECTION.—DANKS.
64 pp., Paper, $3.60 per doz.; 35c. each by Mail.
FESTIVAL ANTHEMS.—DANKS.
64 pp., Paper, $3 60 per doz; 35c. each by Mail.
ALMER'S BOOK OF ANTHEMS.
Boards, $9.00 per doz.; $1.00 each by Mail.
EMPLE ANTHEMS.—LOWRY & DOANE.
Boards, $12.00 per doz.; $1.25 each by Mail.
CHORAL ANTHEMS.—DANKS.
Boards, $13.50 per doz.; $1.50 each by Mail.
ENGLISH ANTHEMS.—LASAR.
Cloth, $24.00 per doz; $2.25 each by Mail.
☞ A Full Catalogue Sent on Request.

BIGLOW & MAIN, 76 East Ninth St., N. Y.
81 Randolph St., Chicago.

OUR New Catalogue of Books for family, Sunday-school, ministers, students, or teachers' Library will be sent free to any address on receipt of a postal request. Address PHILLIPS & HUNT, Publishers, 805 Broadway, New York.

POPULAR LECTURES.

SUBJECTS

1.—The Romance of the Revolution.
2.—An Evening with Longfellow
3.—The Tudors
4.—Monologue—National Poems and Events

Address MRS. E. T. BARRETT,
SING SING, N. Y

THE LINE SELECTED BY THE U. S. GOV'T TO CARRY THE FAST MAIL.

Burlington Route
C.B.& Q.R.R.

It is the only line with its own track from
CHICAGO TO DENVER,
Either by way of Omaha, Pacific Junc., St. Joseph, Atchison or Kansas City.
It connects in Union Depots with through trains from NEW YORK, PHILADELPHIA, BOSTON and all Eastern points. It is the principal line to
SAN FRANCISCO, PORTLAND & CITY OF MEXICO

It traverses all of the six great States of ILLINOIS, IOWA, MISSOURI, NEBRASKA, KANSAS, COLORADO with branch lines to all their important cities and towns.

From CHICAGO, PEORIA or ST. LOUIS, it runs every day in the year from one to three elegantly equipped through trains over its own tracks between
Chicago and Denver,
Chicago and Omaha,
Chicago and Council Bluffs,
Chicago and St. Joseph,
Chicago and Atchison,
Chicago and Kansas City,
Chicago and Topeka,
Chicago and Cedar Rapids,
Chicago and Sioux City,
Peoria and Council Bluffs,
Peoria and Kansas City,
St. Louis and Omaha,
St. Louis and St. Paul,
Kansas City and Denver,
Kansas City and St. Paul,
Kansas City and Omaha,
For all points in Northwest, West and Southwest.

Its equipment is complete and first class in every particular, and at all important points interlocking Switches and Signals are used, thus insuring comfort and safety.

For Tickets, Rates, General Information, etc., regarding the Burlington Route, call on any Ticket Agent in the United States or Canada, or address
T. J. POTTER 1ST V.P. & GEN. MGR., CHICAGO.
HENRY B. STONE, ASST. GEN. MGR., CHICAGO.
PERCEVAL LOWELL, GEN. PASS. AGT., CHICAGO.

ATLANTIC
Mutual Insurance Co.
NEW YORK OFFICE, 51 WALL STREET
ORGANIZED 1842.
Insures against Marine and Inland Navigation Risks.
And will issue Policies making Loss payable in England.

Assets for the Security of its Policies are more than TEN MILLION DOLLARS.

The profits of the Company revert to the assured and are divided annually, upon the Premiums terminated during the year, Certificates for which are issued, bearing interest in accordance with its Charter.

J. D. JONES, President.
CHARLES DENNIS, Vice President
W. H. H. MOORE, 2d Vice Pres't.
A. A. RAVEN 3d Vice Pres't.
J. H. CHAPMAN, Secretary.

CONTINENTAL
Insurance Co.
Continental Buildings
100 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.
Cor. COURT and MONTAGUE STS., BROOKLYN
106 BROADWAY, BROOKLYN, E.D.

Insures against loss by Fire at reasonable rates.

Reserve for re-insurance	$2,265,427 68
of which for Inland Marine, $55,969 52
Reserve ample for all other claims	553,171 26
Capital paid in cash	1,000,000 00
Net surplus	1,358,879 85
Total Cash Assets, Jan. 1, 1886.	$5,177,478 99

This Company conducts its business under the restrictions of the New York Safety Fund Law. The two Safety Funds together equal $1,200,000.

H. H. LAMPORT, President.
CYRUS PECK, Secretary.

HOME
INSURANCE COMPANY
OF NEW YORK.
OFFICE, No. 119 BROADWAY.

Sixty-fifth Semi-Annual Statement, Showing the Condition of the Company on the first day of January, 1886.

CASH CAPITAL	$3,000,000 00
Reserve Premium Fund	3,111,637 00
Reserve for Unpaid Losses and Claims	378,483 98
Net Surplus	1,227,995 10
Cash Assets	$7,618,116 08

SUMMARY OF ASSETS

Cash in Banks	$245,795 99
Bonds and Mortgages, being first lien on Real Estate	897,550 00
United States Stocks (market value)	2,879,390 00
Bank and Railroad Stocks and Bonds (market value)	1,522,750 00
State and City Bonds (market value)	222,000 00
Loans on Stocks, payable on demand	122,850 00
Interest due on 1st January, 1886	97,056 02
Premiums uncollected and in hands of Agents	358,290 30
Real Estate	1,272,633 77
Total	$7,618,116 08

CHAS. J. MARTIN, President.
D. A. HEALD, Vice-President.
J. H. WASHBURN, V. P. & Sec'y.
T. B. GREENE,
W. L. BIGELOW, } Ass't Sec'ys.
F. G. SNOW, JR.,

EDUCATIONAL.

UNIVERSITY
of the City of New York.
JOHN HALL, D.D., LL.D., Chancellor.

1. DEPARTMENT OF ARTS, Tuition Free.
2. DEPARTMENT OF SCIENCE, Tuition Free.
3. SCHOOL OF CIVIL ENGINEERING, Tuition $100.
4. DEPARTMENT OF LAW.
5. DEPARTMENT OF MEDICINE.

. Catalogues, with full particulars of all Courses, may be had upon application to the Registrar.

BEST TEACHERS AMERICAN and FOREIGN, promptly provided for Families, Schools, Colleges
Skilled Teachers supplied with Positions.
Circulars of Good Schools free to Parents.
School Property rented and sold.
School and Kindergarten Material, etc.
J. W. SCHERMERHORN & CO.,
AMERICAN SCHOOL INSTITUTE, 7 East 14th St., N. Y

VASSAR COLLEGE, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. FOR THE LIBERAL EDUCATION OF WOMEN, with a complete College Course, Schools of Painting and Music, Astronomical Observatory, Laboratory of Chemistry and Physics, Cabinets of Natural History, a Museum of Art, a Library of 15,000 Volumes, ten Professors, twenty-three Teachers, and thoroughly equipped for its work. Students at present admitted to a preparatory course. Catalogues sent on application.
J. BYLAND KENDRICK, D. D., Acting President.

DEAFNESS its CAUSES and CURE, by one who was deaf twenty-eight years. Treated by most of the noted specialists of the day with no benefit. Cured himself in three months, and since then hundreds of others by same process. A plain, simple and successful home treatment. Address T. S. PAGE, 128 East 26th St., New York City.

GEO. MATHER'S SONS,
PRINTING INK

Manufacturers. Superior Black and Colored Ink Lithographic and Plate Ink. Varnishes, etc. 60 John Street, New York.

The Intelligencer is printed with our ink.

LADIES WANTED, to work for us at their own homes. $7 to $10 per week can be easily made; no canvassing; fascinating and steady employment. Particulars and sample of the work sent for stamp. Address HOME MF'G CO., P. O. Box 1916 Boston, Mass

The Home.

AUNT MARJORIE'S CORNER

Church Manners.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

ONE of the first remarks to be made in the interest of good manners in church concerns punctuality in arriving there. To be a few minutes too early rather than one minute too late is the dictate of reverence for the place and the occasion as well as of common sense. Unfortunately, in many homes Sabbath morning might be labelled scramble-time, so much unseemly hurry and bustle characterize the hurried hour between breakfast and the first bell. Having taken an extra hour in bed, the family have abridged their time in the beginning of the day, and, as there is less margin than usual, so there is more to do. Never a light task, even in the best-regulated households, to induct several children into their Sunday bibs and tuckers, seeing that the hair is braided, the collars fastened, shoes brushed, gloves buttoned, and everything comme il faut, the endeavor approaches madness when Fanny and Frank have both lost their best hats, and Theodore takes the last moment to quarrel with Tom, Teddy treads on the kitten's tail, and the baby in the cradle begins to cry vociferously. Dr. Arnot used to implore his people to spend the hour before coming to church in preparation of the heart, quiet prayer for the Divine blessing, devout reading and meditation. How few there are who find time for this anticipation of the sanctuary, and to the few who have made it their life-long habit how precious the soul-exercise is, and how reluctantly would they give it up!

Be in time at church, friends, if only for deportment's sake. It is not well bred to sweep up a church aisle in rustling silk, nor to tiptoe nervously through the same in creaking boots, distracting the attention of the worshippers, attracting the attention of the vain and foolish to the glory of your attire. Better late than never, undoubtedly, but in the majority of instances you never need be late. The same care taken to reach church in time as to reach the railway train by which you travel, or to keep a business engagement, will enable you to make a reputation for promptness.

A hint as to behavior in the pew may be pardoned, seeing that the most casual glance around the church you attend on next Sabbath morning will prove that the hint is needed. The customary practice of giving the hymn book a careless fling into the rack at the moment of concluding the hymn is distressing to sensitive nerves which dread a fusillade as of musketry as the organ's diminuendo dies away. If all would cultivate a gentle and pacific manner of disposing of the books, the proprieties would be better conserved.

Another thing. Were your minister calling on you socially, though you longed for his visit to conclude that you might resume an interrupted occupation, you would sooner die than by look or tone allow him to suspect your weariness. Yet, good sir, (Madam, your wife, is seldom a transgressor in this regard,) you think nothing of drawing forth your watch in the very midst of the sermon, while in the face of the man who is preaching you take either a furtive peep or a leisurely glance at minute and hour hand, snap the case and put the watch back, and this without the decency to be ashamed. Perhaps the sermon is longer than you like a sermon to be. But consider; if it were a scientific lecture, and in the least brief or lacking in marks of elaboration, you would complain that you had not received your money's worth. And were it a political speech, you would hang breathless on the orator's words and never remember the watch in your pocket, nor the town clock in the square while he proved to your satisfaction precisely what you accepted before he opened his mouth. Is there not room for the fear that you are not deeply interested in the preacher's matter; that the spiritual sense in you needs cultivation; that receptivity and responsiveness are wanting when God's messenger bringing God's message is treated with positive discourtesy in the place dedicated to God's worship! Dear, my friend, if to look at your watch in sermon-time be the sin that doth easily beset you, please oblige old fashioned folk who are prejudiced in favor of politeness and do so no more.

Another point of deprecation, gentle reader, is the prevalent habit of assuming outer wraps and over shoes during the final hymn and under the benediction. That custom merits reproof with the equally astonishing forgetfulness which induces people to fumble frantically in their pockets for change, or to search their purses for the same during the prayer after the sermon. A little forethought would provide the change for the collection and place it in some convenient and accessible pocket, so that the owner might undisturbed join in the petition for a blessing to follow the Word. As for dressing for the street during the closing exercises of the sanctuary preparatory to a hasty rush from the building, it is in excessively bad taste, all of it, including the undignified and unsocial exit.

Speaking only from the plane of correct deportment, not from the higher ground of duty to God, a reform in these little points in church etiquette is very desirable.

It is with great modesty that I dare appeal to the brethren of the consistory as touching times and seasons of their conversation with the pastor. Being only a humble member of the sisterhood, perhaps it behooves me not to address in terms of reluctant appeal these gentlemen who are clothed upon with official dignity. But why do they so often find it necessary to approach the pulpit during church time, gravely ascending the steps and whispering to the minister before sermon or after? What do they say? Why do the same ones always say it? And how does the good man bear it with a meekness surpassing that of Moses, when it must be an annoyance, unless it be, which we doubt, a necessity? For the notices cannot last forever; there must come a blessed moment when there is not another announcement to be made and suitably urged upon the people, although of notices supply always equals demand, and, therefore, the wonder grows what the brethren can have forgotten of which they must remind the pastor, when they ought to be in their pews with mater familias and the little ones.

Never has Doctor of Divinity bidden me say it, but out of much observation and by—pardon me again—divination, I am moved to say to all elders and deacons and good folk generally, let the pastor alone before service. Do not call upon him in the precious half hour before church. He is full of his subject, of the work he has to do, of the responsibility which weighs upon one in charge of souls. Leave him to himself and to communion with God. Should you meet him on his way to church, content yourself with a bow or a smile of recognition. Should you be in the vestibule on his arrival, do not follow him into his study or into the church parlor for any conversation, however genial, for any consultation, however great its apparent importance. He is gathering all his forces, summoning every resource, for the work of the next hour and a half; he longs inexpressibly to be in sympathy with his Master, to present his chosen theme with persuasiveness and power, and, though you may love him as Jonathan loved David, let him alone. But, after the sermon, then is your time. Be not chary of expressing your appreciation, of your thanks, of the hand-clasp, and the God bless you which so hearten and help the faithful pastor.

A Word to the Boys.

BY A BOY'S SISTER.

DEAR AUNT MARJORIE: Last week after reading in the "Corner" "Harry's Leisure," the thought struck me that I could suggest something that might prove of service to some, even though I am not myself a mother!

I wonder how many of those who read the INTELLIGENCER, either children or those of a "larger growth," have ever heard of the National Amateur Press Association, or, as it is called by the initiated, the N. A. P. A.

The Association at present numbers between eight and nine hundred boys and girls, varying in age from twelve to twenty five, the greater part being between fifteen and twenty. There are nearly three hundred amateur papers published, the editing and composing of which, as well as in the majority of cases, the printing, are done entirely by amateurs; for these but a very small subscription price is asked, and in many cases they are sent free to all those connected with the Association.

Amateur papers have been an acknowledged power for good during nearly twenty years; acknowledged by those of high authority as viewed from a literary and educational standpoint; acknowledged and subscribed for by the two Presidents toward whom our hearts have lately been turned with especial affection, Garfield and Grant, and last, though by no means least, by those very boys and girls who have received help and entertainment from them.

A Trio and How They Amuse Themselves.

DEAR AUNT MARJORIE: I will respond to your invitation in the INTELLIGENCER of the 20th of January, hoping I may interest you, if no ot er person. We have three boys, aged thirteen, fifteen and seventeen years. We do not need to provide "resources" for their entertainment. They seem to find entertainment without any trouble. This cold weather is enjoyed in skating, coasting and sleigh-riding when out of school. They have always been very fond of horses since when babies they had their wooden horses harnessed to their wagons. They take their friends and sisters to drive, and also drive for their parents, and on Saturdays one boy is with his father at his office to do banking business or any errand. This is not always the case, but either one is at times useful there. Their father wishes them to become accustomed to business. One boy at a time is better than two, and each one enjoys it.

They have spent time and labor in packing a hill for coasting, which if demanded as a task would be considered cruelty to children. This hill is in sight of the house, and the pond on which they skate also. We live a mile and a half from the city of Newburgh, therefore the boys are kept more by themselves and the family than they might be in the city. They have boy friends come to see them who seem to think it a fine place for fun. The evenings are spent in study and reading, with conversation, or an occasional game. Thursday evening is prayer meeting evening; often on another evening is a lecture or concert, or some entertainment at the Young Men's Christian Association. Not every week are these extras, but they come in to make variety. They help sustain the Y. M. C. A., but are not allowed to spend their evenings there only when there is a special reason. I think the place for boys at night is at home. Last summer they used to swim, take walks in the woods, hunt with one gun occasionally, (as their father thought one less dangerous than more). They would visit some neighbors near, where there were girls near their age; often friends would come to see them, and visitors come to stay at the house the year round, more or less, which I think an advantage to children.

I am thankful for such good boys, but I have not finished saying "stop," "don't," and "behave."

ONE BUSY MOTHER.

Not only does it interest me to hear a mother's plain, practical account of her success in bringing up her sons; it will surely interest and help many mothers. And one sentence in the letter, I shall not say which at present, has furnished a topic for another talk. I leave my readers to fancy the theme suggested.

Girls, Please Listen.

YES, I want to write a chapter to the mothers and the girls, if there are any girls in this restless, hurrying age. There seems to be an increasing disposition among our girls—our young ladies—to indulge in the use of the slang phrases of the day; and it is obvious that some one must arise and put forth strong endeavors to check the spreading evil; it is fast becoming a great plague spot among us.

I would appeal to the mothers, and through them to their daughters.

Should we not check our little ones when they make use of slang expressions, instead of smiling upon them as if it were clever? We should teach them that such conversation is demoralizing; that it will actually do them harm; then, as they advance in years they may dislike and despise it.

Mothers, are there not some among you who advise your daughters as they depart from your side to attend some social gathering, to "make a mash!" or, who upon their return inquire, "Did you make a mash!" What can a mother be thinking of when she makes such an inquiry? I beg of such (for there are those who do this) to pause, to consider what she encourages. You cannot reasonably expect your daughter to become a pure-minded woman if you fail to be an example of such.

The common slang is erroneously thought witty. True wit may be appreciated among sensible people, but slang—never! I would challenge anyone to discover anything ennobling, anything womanly, anything even witty about the use of what is now a-days termed genteel slang; for there are those who despise the coarse expressions which so often fall from the lips of the street-loafer, who appear to glory in such expressions as "going for him," "getting left," etc.

Where shall we find as noble types of womanhood in the future as our past records furnish us, if our girls do not rid themselves of this pernicious habit?

Are we not told that we shall finally be called upon to render an account for every idle word?

Then what about words which are worse than idle, words which corrupt and demoralize, which are the busiest of the busy, so contagious to our young.

To work a reformation we must begin with the mothers. Through them we may reach the daughters, hoping for the sons to follow. Let us marshal ourselves in one grand army, mothers and daughters leading the van; sons and brothers will not be willing to be found very far in the rear.

EMILIE H. DAVIES.

Thank you for this sensible letter. The vulgar slang of the period simply makes a pure-minded woman shudder, turns her faint with disgust. To hear it from the pretty lips of girls who should be like the lilies for sweetness, is to be shocked unspeakably. It is a travesty on refinement, and should be abolished.

CHILDREN'S PORTFOLIO.

Piety at Home.

THE vast region of the Adirondacks has been taken under the care of the State to prevent depredations upon its forests, its lakes, its streams, and its fountains. From that region issue the waters that form Lake Horicon—clear, pure, lucent, as the sky above them. The springs of the Hudson river, too, are under the fronded glories of this great State Reservation, whose streams carry the elixir of health better than Ponce de Leon could find amid the spice groves of the Floridas. Therefore, many seek this great northern park in the summer season for retirement, rest and recreation. There the fiercest heats of midsummer are tempered by the genial shade of forests primeval, cooled by the crystalline lakes that lie too deep for the hot blasts of tortured winds to reach, and fragrant with the breath of all the flowers the Lord's hand has planted there. And so we may say in very truth that all our laws, divine and human, the power of the Church, backed by the power of the State, are enacted and enforced to protect, defend and preserve home, family, domestic life, as the source of virtue and health to communities and to nations, whether republican or imperial.

It is the glory and the distinction of Christianity that it begins with the children in the seclusion of the home, and amid the affections and sympathies of the domestic circle. It has been well said that all the power of Great Britain is pledged to make every man's home within its borders to be his castle. That is, to maintain his personal, civil, and religious rights, whatever they may be. And so when some years ago a little boy—Charlie Ross—had been stolen from his parents, all the police forces of our cities and the constabulary forces of our States were at once under service to find and restore him. For the most precious possessions of parents, rich or poor, are their children.

Our religion, our faith in Christ, the precepts, laws, and instructions of the Bible, and our very ideas of heaven itself, all combine to teach the value of the child "as father of the man," that is to grow into strength, character and influence. The rite of baptism introduces the child into the visible kingdom of God and ensures the blessings of an everlasting covenant or constitution, divine in origin and "well ordered in all things." Thus believing parents with their children form the Church within the house, where the Scriptures are to be learned as in the case of Timothy, and where the virtues and graces of early piety are to be cultivated as the undoubted evidences of a right faith, rooted and grounded in the truth, which is Christ Himself. In his protest against the crime of Mormonism, our President, Grover Cleveland, very eloquently described the Christian home as the training school of the best men and women, who could give efficiency to our laws and due influence to our civilization. Few right-minded people will object to his statement concerning the value of domestic training: We reach, however, young folks mainly, and would if we could persuade them to practice all the duties and cultivate all the charms of Christian character at home. Such an early education in the essential elements of the true science of life will be worth more to them than treasures of gold and silver without the favor of Him whose favor is peace and joy forever. E. S. P.

CLAVERACK, N. Y.

IF a canoe be connected by a cord with a distant ship, one in the canoe may draw himself to the ship, if he cannot draw the ship to himself. So, as has been said, is it with prayer. If it do not bring God to man, it will bring man to God. And this is always well for man.—W. P. Breed.

Mend Your Manners.

POOR boys! How they have to be hectored and nagged at, because they cannot remember and will not heed the injunctions of their superiors.

A lady friend has a young nephew visiting her, who, though an amiable, handsome and good-natured fellow in the main, wears her life out by obliging her to remind him that his hands are in his pockets, or his hat on, when speaking—neither from lack of knowledge or indisposition to do the right thing, but from pure heedlessness.

Weary of repeating, the lady sat down to her typewriter and printed off these few rules he must remember.

I had the privilege of copying them, and thought perhaps some of Cousin Lois' boys would like to know what they are.

MANNERS FOR BOYS.

In the street.—Hat lifted when saying "good-by," or "How do you do?" Also when offering a lady a seat, or acknowledging a favor.

Keep step with anyone you walk with. Always precede a lady upstairs, but ask if you shall precede her in going through a crowd or public place.

At the street door.—Hat off the moment you step into a private hall or office.

Let a lady pass first always, unless she asks you to precede her.

In the parlor.—Stand till every lady in the room, also older people, are seated.

Rise if a lady enters the room after you are seated, and stand till she takes a seat.

Look people straight in the face when they are speaking to you.

Let ladies pass through a door first, standing aside for them.

In the dining-room.—Take your seat after ladies and elders.

Never play with your knife, ring or spoon.

Do not take your napkin up in a bunch in your hand.

Eat as fast or as slow as others, and finish the course when they do.

Do not ask to be excused before the others unless the reason is imperative.

Rise when ladies leave the room, and stand till they are out.

If all go together, the gentlemen stand by the door till ladies pass.

Special rules for the mouth.—Smacking the lips and all noise should be avoided.

If obliged to take anything from the mouth, cover it with your hand or napkin.

Bed-rooms.—Never look toward a bed-room.

Always knock at a bed-room door, or at that of any private room.

These rules are imperative. There are many other little things that add to the grace of a gentleman, but to break any of these is almost unpardonable.

Your most affectionate AUNTIE.

"Did you make up these rules, auntie?" said Jack, with rather an amused expression as he thought how many points they hit.

"Not at all. These are just the common usages of good society that every gentleman observes. You will not find your father failing in one of them."

"O, well he's a man."

"And you? don't you want to be a manly boy? Good manners must grow with your growth. If put on too late the patch will show."

Not visitors only, but mothers, sisters and aunties are the "ladies" to whom these attentions are to be shown.

Jack whistled a little to himself, but we noticed that he put his "Rules" into a big envelope and laid it rather carefully in his drawer. Time will tell whether any impression has been made. A. W. K.

Pass Them On.

CHRISTMAS has gone, but the time for kindly acts and good deeds has not gone. Pass them on. The Master's commands are all days the same.

If all the good deeds of men's lives could be passed on by those who are made happier by them, the world would surely be better. Doubtless every man and woman, every boy and girl, can recall kindnesses shown them that they have not yet passed on. Pass the good deeds on. This is gratitude.

When the Rev. Mark Pearse was about fourteen years old, he went to London, having been in a school in Germany. He stayed in London long enough to spend all his money, excepting enough to pay his fare to his home in Cornwall.

He went by train to Bristol, and there took passage on a vessel. He thought that the passage money included his board, and therefore ordered his meals that day.

At the end of the journey a dapper little steward presented a bill for meals to the lad.

"I have no money," said the surprised boy.

"Then," replied the steward, "you should not have taken your meals at the table. What is your name?"

"Mark Guy Pearse."

The steward closed his book, took the boy by the hand, and said:

"I never thought I should live to see you. My mother was in great distress years ago. My father had died suddenly, and your father was very kind to my mother and me. I promised myself then that if I could ever do so, I would show like kindness to some one your father loved."

The truly grateful steward paid the boy's bill, gave him five shillings, and sent him ashore in a boat rowed by five sailors.

Mark's father was waiting to receive his son.

"Father," said the boy, "it is a good thing to have a good father," and then the story of the steward's kindness was told.

"My lad," said Mr. Pearse, "it is long since I passed the kindness on to him in doing what I did. Now he has passed it on to you. As you grow up, mind that you often pass it on to others."

Years afterwards, when the boy had become a man, he was going by rail on a short journey, when he saw a boy crying bitterly.

On asking the cause of his grief, the boy replied that he had not enough money by four-pence to pay his fare to the town in which he lived.

Mr. Pearse at once bought the boy a ticket, and then related his own experience on the steamer years before.

"And now," he concluded, "I want you to be sure and pass this kindness on to others if you are ever able to do so."

As the train left the station, the smiling boy waved his handkerchief and said:

"I will pass it on, sir; I will pass it on."

Good deeds, kind acts—pass them on. Pass them. The year awaits them—three hundred and sixty five days—full of human needs.—Youth's Companion.

Little Heads Together.

DAME PLAYFAIR'S CLASS.

Dame Playfair greets her class with every hope of pleasant Sunday evenings for all readers of this excellent paper.

Our sentence this week is found in the thirteenth chapter of Romans, and contains the substance of the second table of the law. (Very easy.) It may be found by taking the initials of each of the following:

1. Grandmother of Timothy.
2. An offering of a woman.
3. Waited for the Bridegroom.
4. A sorcerer.
5. Pay of laborers.
6. A holy mountain.
7. "Master."
8. Father of Saul.
9. Mother of Timothy.
10. The city of Saul.
11. Food of John the Baptist.
12. An officer cured by the advice of a little maid.
13. Increased by a miracle to pay a debt.
14. Of which a king's throne was made.
15. Grandfather of Joseph.
16. Lower orders of the Temple servitors.
17. A convert of St Paul, left at Ephesus.
18. A giant king of Bashan
19. A place where Abraham and David both lived.
20. Hagar's child.
21. The pool whither the blind man was sent.
22. Where our Lord raised a dead man.
23. The city of the Great Diana.
24. The chosen people.
25. The land given by Pharoah to Jacob's children.
26. Where Aaron died.
27. The "son of consolation."
28. Slave to Philemon.
29. The great city of the ancient world.

Answers to Puzzles of January 20th.

Enigma.—Well begun is half done.

Beheadings.—1. M-aid. 2. G-'ass. 3. R-oar. 4. S-our 5. N-ice. 6. D-ream. 7. G-lobe. 8. T-rip. 9. S-lip 10. F-ox. 11. N-ail. 12. B-rake

Diamond.—

B
S O D
W A N E D
S A M A R I A
B O N A P A R T E
D E R A N G E
D I R G E
A T E
E

Rappie Bowne is the only one who has sent correct answers this time. Where are the other "Little Heads"? Cousin Lois wonders whether they are taking a nap. If they are, she hopes it will be a short one. Wake up! boys and girls

Ireland.

THE Land League was suppressed some time ago by Mr. Gladstone's government, but the same government, strange to say, allowed the "National League" immediately to succeed it, which is the same thing under another name. It is no wonder that Mr. Gladstone found it necessary to introduce a stringent Coercion Bill and Crimes Act to try and correct the reign of terrorism which prevailed in the principal Romish districts of the land. Lord Salisbury's government, on taking office, resolved to set aside Mr. Gladstone's stringent measures and rule Ireland by kindness; but they passed no law suppressing the National League, which was in full organization all over the Romish districts of the south and west, proclaiming the doctrine of "no rent" and boycotting, and in several instances beating and murdering honest Protestants and others for the crime of paying their rent! Matters have reached a terrible crisis now in the County Kerry and sundry other places.

I think that there is an impression on the minds of many intelligent persons in America that Irish Romanists are in some form oppressed by English rule, and somehow have not fair play, and that all this restlessness and agitation have some reasonable foundation. So far as I know, Romanists have absolutely nothing to complain of now except that there are still some Protestants left in the country who own considerable property, and that they have not "Ireland for the Irish." In former years there were many things in the Land Law, and in relation to education and other matters, of which they had good reason to complain. We hear much in Romish books and newspapers about these grievances, and about penal laws, and so on. But they are prudently silent upon an important period of Irish history, namely, the reign of James II., when Romanism was ascendant in Ireland, and when Protestantism learned by terrible experience what that ascendancy meant, and what penal law meant also. If, when the tables turned, Protestantism returned the compliment, was it any great wonder? It is forgotten, too, that the legislation of the last sixty years or more has been in the direction of the removal of these grievances, real or sentimental, one by one, that have passed away, while there is not, so far as I know, a single grievance of which, if I were a Romanist, I could reasonably complain. But every concession, so far from allaying agitation, has but added fresh fuel to the fire. We were promised national peace if the Episcopal Church were disestablished. Mr. Gladstone brought in his celebrated bill and disestablished the Church, but immediately there sprang up a new agitation on the Land Question, demanding what was called the "Three F's"—fixity of tenure, fair rent, and free right of sale in case of emigration. We were promised perfect tranquility as soon as this measure passed into law. Mr. Gladstone brought in his famous land bill conceding all three points. The rent was reduced by the courts appointed for the purpose from 25 to 30 per cent, about four millions sterling per annum. Immediately a new agitation was set on foot by the Land League to pay no rent, but hold the land, and if evicted the people were publicly told at the Land League meetings, and by some of the men now nominated by Mr. Parnell for Parliament, to shoot the landlord and boycott any tenants put in possession. Many of the landlords, after a reduction of 30 per cent on their former rent, made a further reduction of 15 per cent on account of a bad season. But the National League prohibited the payment of rent except by their authority, naming 30 per cent of a reduction on the judicial rent, often 50, and in many cases raising the cry of "No rent!" In fact, the utter extinction of the landlords has been openly avowed on the platform of the National League by some of Mr. Parnell's present staff on the ground that they were an important part of the English garrison, and they could not have "Ireland for the Irish" till they were rooted out.

Just now the cry is for an Irish Parliament, with a view of getting the control of the taxation, education, finance and the police into their own hands. Mr. Gladstone threw out a hint which was understood to mean that he was favorable to some measure of Home Rule like that demanded. Immediately the price of Bank of Ireland stock fell, and the North of Ireland became excited to a degree unheard of in our time. It is certain that any proposal to separate Ireland from England, if made by Mr. Gladstone, will completely wreck the Liberal party. England is weary of concessions to Irish Romanism, and is now anxious to try a sterner policy. Meantime, the Protestants in the south are suffering terribly from the tyranny of the National League.—Correspondent of the Christian Advocate.

The Fonda Conference.

THE Papers and Addresses relating to Foreign Missions, delivered at the General Conference at Fonda, N. Y., last November, moderately condensed, are this week published by the Board of Foreign Missions in an octavo pamphlet of 32 pages. One page at the beginning of the report is occupied with the instructive colored chart showing the relative proportions of the Religious Faiths of Mankind to-day. It was prepared by the American Board and purchased from it in sheets for insertion in this pamphlet. This valuable presentation of facts and incentives can be obtained from Rev. Dr. Henry N. Cobb, Cor. Sec., Synod's Rooms, 34 Vesey street, New York, by simply asking for it.

Chinese Proverbs.

IF the roots be left the grass will grow again.

You cannot strip two skins off one cow.

A bird can roost on but one branch.

He who swallows quick can chew but little (applied to learning).

The gods cannot help a man who loses opportunity.

Lose a cow to win a cat!

Sabbath Tracts.

THE New York Sabbath Committee, 31 Bible House, Rev. Dr. W. W. Atterbury, Secretary, is publishing a series of four page tracts showing the effects on workingmen of secularizing the Sabbath. An attractive engraving occupies a large part of the first page. Two of the series have been issued, and of these 150,000 have been already carefully distributed among working men in this city, and large packages are going to other places. They are supplied at the cost of printing, namely, $1 75 per 1,000, when delivered without cost to the Committee, or if postpaid at 25 cents per 100. The style is animated, direct and kind. Few persons taking up one of these tracts would lay it down before reading the whole.

Another excellent tract is, "I Don't Work on Sunday," published by the Presbyterian Board, of which Messrs. Ward & Drummond, 116 Nassau street, are the agents in this city.

Financial.

TUESDAY, Feb. 9th.

THERE is little reason to doubt that strong parties are endeavoring and are using their great pecuniary resources and administrative skill to bring about a combination of a number of the trunk lines to maintain fairly paying rates and to control the Eastern interests in anthracite and bituminous coal. The fact has strengthened the coal stocks and the securities of all the lines. The lines mentioned, naming them in order of location, are the Baltimore & Ohio, the Pennsylvania—to obtain control also of Reading by foreclosure of bonds—the Delaware & Lackawanna and New York Central, which would be likely to carry the Erie along with it. And the story is started almost every day that the combination is to extend to the telegraph companies. By sympathy nearly the whole list is higher. There is also a comparative scarcity of good stocks and bonds in the market. Of some of the best mortgage bonds there have been no sales at the Exchange for some weeks, transactions in them having been private. A quite general anticipation of an improvement in trade adds to the firmness of the market. Manufacturers, merchants and shopkeepers do not serve their own interests by patronizing roads which cut rates. The number of families holding railway securities rises into the tens of thousands. If they get no dividends or interest, or a reduced amount, their ability to buy is reduced and trade suffers. This has been one of the chief causes of dulness in trade for eighteen months past.

The imports of merchandise at this port last week were valued at $8,454,469, and exports at $5,745,327. Sterling exchange sold yesterday for $4.87 1-2 for long bills and $4 89 1 2 for demand. Commercial bills were bought at $4 85 3-4.

The Associated Banks increased loans $1,457,900, lost in specie $1,065 500, gained $75,200 in legal tenders and $610,200 in deposits. Circulation was reduced $755,300, partly, no doubt, in consequence of the redemption of U. S. bonds. The rate of money is unchanged, being 1 1-2 to 2 per cent on call, 3 to 5 per cent on best commercial paper.

Quotations for grain yesterday were: Wheat here 90 3-8, in Chicago 78 3-4; corn here 51 5-8, in Chicago 36 1-4; oats here 37 7-8, in Chicago 28 5-8. In provisions pork is higher, mess being $10.50 to $11, and lard a few points lower. The closing quotations for cotton yesterday were: February, 8.98-09; March, 9.07-08; April, 9.16-17; May, 9.27-28. Hay is steady; rye straw in moderate supply and very firm is worth more than hay, No. 1 timothy being 90 to 95 cents and long rye $1 and $1 05.

Ammonia in Baking Powders More Injurious to Health than Alum. Dr. Witthaus, the Celebrated Chemist and Professor, on the Subject.

I have made careful qualitative analyses of Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder and of the Royal Baking Powder, and have also determined the amount of available gas yielded by each. I find that the substances which enter into the composition of the two powders are the same, with one important exception: the Royal contains carbonate of ammonia, whereas Cleveland's Baking Powder does not.

In my opinion a baking powder containing ammonia is much more liable to produce disturbances of digestion than one containing alum, concerning whose deleterious qualities so much has been said; particularly as it has been shown by direct experiment that carbonate of ammonia, if present in a baking powder, is not expelled during baking, but remains in the bread.

I consider Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder as greatly preferable to the Royal Baking Powder, because:

1. It is free from the ammonia which contaminates the Royal;

2. It yields during baking a greater proportion of the only gas, carbonic acid, which should be produced by a baking powder.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 22, 1884.

R. A. WITTHAUS, A.M., M.D.,

Professor of Chemistry and Toxicology, University of Buffalo; Professor of Chemistry and Toxicology, University of Vermont; Professor of Physiological Chemistry, University of the City of New York; City Chemist to the City of Buffalo, N. Y.

News of the Week.

(Continued from page five.)

SATURDAY, 6.—Michael Davitt declares his belief that Mr. Gladstone will be able to solve the Irish question....Italy, it is announced, will accept Spain as an arbitrator in the United States of Columbia affair.... A number of fishermen at Gaspe, Nova Scotia, are in a starving condition....All the Powers excepting Russia have sanctioned the Bulgario-Turkish agreement.... The bill to provide for the admission of South Dakota as a State passed United States Senate....Six workmen were dangerously burned in St. Louis yesterday. The fire was caused by pouring coal oil down the chimney of a cabin....Yesterday was the coldest day of the season. The mercury stood below zero in New York and vicinity. ....Eight families were made homeless by fire at Rutherford, N. J....Governor Foraker has appointed a non-partisan police board in Cincinnati....Two passenger trains on the Iron Mountain Railroad were wrecked in a collision and a number of passengers were killed and wounded....Dr. Farley, the well known elocutionist and surgeon of the 14th Regiment, Brooklyn, N. Y., it is feared has become hopelessly insane....One of the Tarrytown robbers has been caught in Lynn, Mass ...A farmer and his family were burned to death in Iowa....The mercury was 40 deg. below zero yesterday morning at Watertown, N. Y....Members of new British Cabinet issue addresses to their constituents preliminary to a re-election, required by custom. Their proposals in respect to Irish affairs are very indefinite.

MONDAY, 8.—Mr. Salisbury, the late Premier of England, was hooted at by an angry mob in England....Mr. Gladstone received Saturday the seals of office....A combination is reported to exist between Greece and Servia....A number of Whig peeresses have refused to become ladies of the Queen's household on account of their dislike to Mr. Gladstone....A number of new appointments have been made by the new Administration in England, among them that of Mr. Broadhurst as Under Home Secretary of Ireland; he was a workingman, and the appointment causes intense feeling in aristocratic circles ...Heavy forgeries are reported from Newfoundland....Two wrecks in Boston Harbor on account of collisions....Six prisoners whipped in Delaware....Seattle is in the hands of a mob. The Chinese have all been driven out.... The cigar makers of New York city who were locked out have accepted the manufacturers' offer....Sunday concerts have been forbidden in Brooklyn, and several entertainments were stopped by the police last night....William Dorsheimer, the District Attorney for the Southern District of New York, has resigned his office... Rufus E. Dixon, an inventor, committed suicide in New York....The law against the Mormons is being vigorously enforced.

TUESDAY, 9.—Rioters attacked the prison in which Chinamen were confined at Seattle, Wyoming Ter., yesterday noon, when the guard fired on them, killing one and wounding three....Jacob Sharp on the witness stand yesterday in this city, to testify what Broadway surface road has done with $2,500,000. Nothing was obtained from him. .....A freight train became unmanageable in St. Louis, ran into and wrecked several houses. Damage $15,000....The game yesterday in the chess tournament was drawn....The President decides to defend Attorney Garland....The Brooklyn Bridge railroad carried 1,800,000 passengers in January....Great riot in London yesterday, incited by Socialists. Police overpowered, heart of the city around Trafalgar Square in possession of the mob, stores robbed, windows broken in many houses, club houses invaded, pedestrians on the street beaten and robbed, carriages stopped and taken to pieces and spokes of wheels used for clubs, two heavy granite pillars thrown down across Charing Cross and all traffic blocked. After nightfall the mob dispersed. About 200 shops were damaged and 50 pillaged. Number in mob reckoned from 15,000 to 50,000 ...John Morley of the new Cabinet said yesterday at Newcastle that no coercive measures at present would be used in Ireland....M. Rochefort resigned yesterday from the French Chamber of Deputies.... Greece is to cease her preparations for war. ....A French priest in Montreal on Sunday denounced the winter pastimes as tending to immorality....A suit for land in litigation 22 years was decided yesterday in Buffalo. ....Major-General Hancock died shortly before three o'clock this afternoon at Governor's Island. It had not been generally known that Gen. Hancock was sick, and his death was very unexpected. Gen. Hancock was in Washington a week ago, and was obliged to return home without paying his respects to the President, a carbuncle having made its appearance on the General's neck at the base of the brain.

Etchers and Etching.

IT is not unusual among the uninitiated to hear the term etching applied to pretty little vignettes drawn with the pencil or pen. This is incorrect; etching is not an effect, but a process. To produce an etching the artist takes a plate, usually of copper, and coats it with a preparation of wax and other ingredients. Upon this ground he draws his subject with a sharp-pointed instrument in such a manner that each scratch will expose the copper, and in exactly the same manner as if he were making a pen-drawing. He then immerses the plate in dilute nitric acid, to the end that the uncovered portion or scratched lines may be bitten or eaten into by the acid. This is a rude description of the process, but there are many modifications and peculiar methods used by individual artists. The most important of these is what is known as Dry Point, the effect of which is to give a velvety richness, when printed, to certain portions of the work.

The printing of an etching is an operation requiring much artistic skill, as the plates depend largely for their effect upon the manner in which they are inked. It is for this reason that many etchers print their own plates.

The prints are made on drawing paper and vellum paper, but proofs are usually drawn on paper imported from Japan, made principally from the cocoons of the silk-worm.

Etchings, unlike steel engravings, cannot be printed in very great numbers, and have a commercial value of from ten to one hundred dollars, and even more.

While we must admit that we have no names to put into competition with the two or three great reproductive etchers of Europe (that is, those who reproduce well known paintings by means of etching), perhaps in no country in the world has more original, free, creative etching been produced than in the United States. Among the number of men who have done good work in this direction is J. A. S. Monks, the etcher of several well known plates, such as "In an Old Pasture," "The Hill-Side," "The Mountain-Top," etc.; the premium plate for the Magazine of Art, and plates in the published collections named respectively "American Etchers" and "Recent American Etchings."

Mr. Monks' last work is a plate 11 x 13½ inches, made for Messrs. Procter and Gamble, and printed on Japanese paper. The subject is a flock of sheep in an old pasture, with farm buildings in the distance; the time of year, early spring, indicated by the group of lambs in the foreground, and the leafless trees in the distance; the time of day in the gloaming, just before nightfall. There is an air of expectancy about the sheep as though they were awaiting the coming of the shepherd, and felt some anxiety on account of their offspring.

Mr. Monks is well and favorably known for his excellent drawing of sheep. The plate is full of poetry, and the movement and grouping are both alike, excellent.

THE WASHINGTON LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY, while it does not report the large figures of some of its contemporaries, seems to be on a sound basis. Receipts for interest, rents, etc., $453,974.38, paid nearly for the claims by death and matured and discounted endowments, amounting to $583,-76.58. Consequently the larger portion of the premiums on policies was added to assets, raising them from $6,883,847.80 on Dec. 31st, 1884, to $7,804,407,55 on Dec. 31st, 1885. The last annual statement just issued is certainly creditable to the Managers and assuring to the holders of policies.

THE MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY was misnamed here last week "The Mutual Benefit Life," by one of those unaccountable substitutions which occur unconsciously. The Mutual Benefit is a very good company and worthy of the confidence it receives; but it is the MUTUAL LIFE which has attained such noble proportions as those we related and which is adding five millions a year to its assets.

The best Ankle Boot and Collar Pads are made of zinc and leather. Try them.

FOR DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, Depression of Spirits and General Debility, in the various forms; also as a preventive against Fever and Ague, and other Intermittent Fevers, the "Ferro Phosphorated Elixir of Calisaya," made by Caswell, Hazard & Co., New York, and sold by all druggists, is the best tonic; and for patients recovering from Fever or other sickness has no equal.

Publisher's Department.

THOUSANDS ARE BORN with a tendency to consumption. Such persons, if they value life, must not permit a Cough or Cold to become a fixture in the lungs and chest. The best known remedy for either is Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar. 25c., 50c. and $1.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap heals and beautifies, 25c.
German Corn Remover kills Corns, Bunions, 25c
Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye—Black & Brown, 50c.
Pike's Toothache Drops cure in 1 Minute, 25c.

Experience vs. Inexperience.

It is a matter of regret that in introducing Hood's Sarsaparilla, its proprietors are obliged to overcome a certain distrust by some people who have unfortunately bought worthless compounds mixed by persons ignorant of pharmacy. Messrs. C. I. Hood & Co. are reliable pharmacists of long experience and they make no claims for Hood's Sarsaparilla which cannot by substantiated by the strongest proof. And we say to those who lack confidence, read the unsolicited testimonials in favor of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and then prove its merits by actual personal test. We are confident you will not be disappointed, but will find it a medicine of great value, which can be implicitly relied upon. 100 Doses $1.

To poison a well is one of the worst of crimes. It is worse to poison the fountain of life for one's self and for posterity. Often by carelessness, or misfortune, or inheritance this has been done. Ayer's Sarsaparilla goes back of the symptoms, picks up these impure seeds from the blood, the vital stream, and restores appetite, strength and health.

The best cough medicine is Piso's Cure for Consumption. Sold everywhere. 25c.

In hundreds of cases, Hood's Sarsaparilla, by purifying and enriching the blood, has proven a potent remedy for rheumatism. Hence, if you suffer the pains and aches of this disease, it is fair to assume that Hood's Sarsaparilla will cure you. Give it a trial.

Market Report.

Review of the New York Market for Butter, Cheese, etc. Reported by DAVID W. LEWIS & Co., Produce Commission Merchants, 49 Pearl St., New York.
Commission on Butter, Eggs, Poultry, etc., is five per cent; Flour, Grain, etc., 2½ per cent.
Marking-plates furnished when desired.

NEW YORK, February 6, 1886.

BUTTER.—Receipts for the week, 16,362 pks.; exports 3,553 pks.

There is good demand for fancy new milks, Western creamery make; also for selections of choice fall butter, and buyers are looking for clean flavored, crisp, lively State dairies and fine early make creamery butter in firkins, and find but little of it. These kinds of butter are firm in price and quick taken. Winter make State butter is selling at a wide range, say 10a18c., and also any cheesy, sour, poor State dairies at same price. Some such there are that buyers reject whenever shown, and for such it is difficult to name any quotable price. There is considerable common Western stock here unsold, and unsaleable unless at prices down to 5a8c. We note sales of lines of good Delaware and Chenango dairies at 16a19c., fine ones at 20a22c., and few specials, fancy Delawares, at even more money. Fine creamery firkins sold at 20a22c. There were large sales of sound State butter in half firkin tubs at 10a15c., and market closes with better feeling, severe winter weather and higher prices for all good eatable stock. We quote:

Solid silky grain-fed fresh Elgin creamery	35 @36
Fancy fresh grain-fed Eastern creamery	33 @35
Heavy bodied, grainy, high-flavored dairy, fresh	27 @28
A strictly fancy Delaware dairy, entire	23 @24
Fair to good dairies	15 @20
Fine summer firkins	21 @22
Fresh Western imitation creamery	22 @25
Western creameries, good held butter	14 @18
" store-packed butter	7 @10
Winter make, common roll butter	9 @13
Grease	4 @ 5

CHEESE.—Receipts for the week, 14,355 boxes; exports 20,767 boxes.

There has been a lively trade in all kinds of skimmed cheese. Sales for export of large line night's milk skims at 6½a7½c., and Pennsylvania skims were all taken at 2½a3c. Fine full cream cheese sold slowly and buyers had the advantage. Exporters took few fancy white at 9½a9¾c., and some well-kept August make at 8½a9c. We quote:

	FANCY.	FINE.	FAULTY.
Factory, full cream.	9½@10	9 @ 9¼	6 @ 8
Night's milk.
" skimmed.	7 @ 8	4 @ 5	2 @ 3

EGGS.—Receipts for the week, 4,227 bbls., and imports 419 cases.

Prices are up 2a3c. per doz. on light receipts and extreme cold weather. Trade is light, however, and supply ample to go around. We quote:

Fresh laid, per doz	25 @26
Western and Canada, per doz	23 @25
Limed eggs, per doz	17 @19

MARRIAGES.

CASS—LANDON.—At Schenectady, N. Y., Feb. 3, at 12.30 P.M., by the Rev. Wm. Elliot Griffis, Lewis Cass, Esq., of Albany, to Miss Kate Landon, daughter of Hon. Judson S. Landon, Acting President of Union College.

MARSHALL—SMITH.—At Gardiner, Jan. 30, by Rev. P. K. Hageman, Allan Marshall and Emma A. Smith.

OSTERHAUDT—OAKLEY.—At the residence of Mr. Josiah Hasbrouck, near Stone Ridge, N. Y., by Rev. Wm. W. Schomp, John B. Osterhaudt and Carrie Oakley, both of Stone Ridge, N. Y.

DEATHS.

Obituary notices five cents per line (nine word to the line.) For subscribers we will insert fifteen lines free; all lines in excess of that number will be charged same as non-subscribers.

STRONG.—Edwin F. Strong was born in Northampton, Mass., May 9th, 1814, removed to Tyre, Seneca Co., N. Y., about 1836, was married May 9th, 1841, to Mary Stevenson, sister of Hon. Robert L. Stevenson. Mr. Strong was a fine development of the best New England stock. A farmer without a liberal education, he became well informed on all educational, political and religious subjects. His mental qualities were of a fine order. He united gentleness with strength. Music entranced him. Poetry was his delight, and friends valued his occasional efforts in verse. No one who enjoyed his happy tranquil home life, his genial hospitality, communed with his gentle spirit, observed his sturdy integrity and his nice appreciation of nature's beauties and teachings, could ever forget him, or wonder at his influence in the community.

His religious life will be best remembered. Uniting with the Reformed Church of Tyre in 1851, he gave his love, his counsel and his means for her support. His careful judgment in consistory, in Classis, and occasionally in the higher church courts, was always valued. He was a man of prayer. He drank deeply at the fountains of divine truth, and his life was "as seeing him who is invisible." He endured with patience his last illness, and on Nov. 2d, 1885, "he was not, for God took him." His stricken widow and all their children—five sons and five daughters—survive to mourn him. J. H. V. D.

VAN WINKLE.—Mr. Van Winkle died very suddenly Jan. 19, 1886, at his late home, Garfield, N. J., at the age of 69 years, 10 months and 10 days.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans. ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall-st., N. Y.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS
SOLD BY ALL DEALERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD
GOLD MEDAL PARIS EXPOSITION—1878.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.
CATARRH
Also good for Cold in the Head, Headache, Hay Fever, &c. 50 cents.

CARDS 60 Fancy Pictures, and 25 elegant Cards in Gilt Edge, Silk Fringe, Hidden Name, &c., 1 Songster, 1 $50 Prize Puzzle, and 8 parlor games, all for 10cts. Game of Authors, 10cts.
IVORY CO., Clintonville, Conn.

YOUR HAIR

should be your crowning glory. Ayer's Hair Vigor will restore the vitality and color of youth to hair that has become thin and faded; and, where the glands are not decayed or absorbed, will cause a new growth on bald heads.

MAY the youthful color and vigor of the hair be preserved to old age? Read the following, from Mrs. G. Norton, Somerville, Mass.: "I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for the past 30 years; and, although I am upwards of 60, my hair is as abundant and glossy to-day as when I was 25."

BE assured, that a trial of Ayer's Hair Vigor will convince you of its powers. Mrs. M. E. Goff, Leadville, Col., writes: "Two years ago, my hair having almost entirely fallen out, I commenced the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. To-day my hair is 29 inches long, fine, strong, and healthy."

RENEWED and strengthened by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor, the hair regains its youthful color and vitality. Rev. H. P. Williamson, Davidson College, Mecklenburg Co., N. C., writes: "I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for the last ten years. It is an excellent preservative."

BY the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor, Geo. A. Dadman, Waterloo, Mo., had his hair restored to its original healthy condition. He was nearly bald, and very gray. He writes: "Only four bottles of the Vigor were required to restore my hair to its youthful color and quantity."

USING Ayer's Hair Vigor cures diseases of the scalp. F. H. Foster, Princeton, Ind., writes: "I had been troubled for years with a disease of the scalp; my head was covered with dandruff, and the hair dry and harsh. Ayer's Hair Vigor gave me immediate relief, cleansed the scalp, and rendered the hair soft and pliable."

Ayer's Hair Vigor,
PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass., U. S. A.
For sale by all Druggists.

THE ASSOCIATED CHARITIES OF THE
1342 Churches of London
after investigating the value of
MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD
have adopted it as the one thing most needed in restoring the sick to health, and it is given by their visiting committees.

Many of the Churches of Boston, Cleveland and other cities, have done the same for several years.

Clergymen use it to relieve Exhaustion, Dyspepsia and Constipation.

Any Clergyman wishing to try it, we will deliver to any Boston express samples free.

☞ IN GENERAL USE of all Governments, Hospitals and Physicians that have tried it, and in 52 of the leading Hospitals of London.

Murdock Liquid Food Co., Boston.

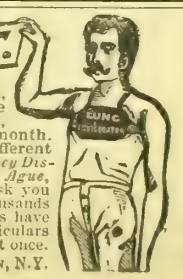
ON 30 DAYS' TRIAL.
THIS NEW
ELASTIC TRUSS

Has a Pad different from all others, is cup shape, with Self-adjusting Ball in center, adapts itself to all positions of the body while the ball in the cup presses back the intestines just as a person does with the finger. With light pressure the Hernia is held securely day and night, and a radical cure certain. It is easy, durable and cheap. Sent by mail. Circulars free. EGGLESTON TRUSS CO., Chicago, Ill.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY
GOOD NEWS TO LADIES.
Greatest inducements ever offered. Now's your time to get up orders for our celebrated Teas and Coffees, and secure a beautiful Gold Band or Moss Rose China Tea Set, or Handsome Decorated Gold Band Moss Rose Dinner Set, or Gold Band Moss Decorated Toilet Set. For full particulars address
THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO.,
P. O. Box 289 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

WANTED An active Man or Woman in every county to sell our goods. Salary $75 per Month and Expenses. Canvassing Outfit and Particulars FREE. STANDARD SILVER-WARE CO., Boston, Mass.

FAIR AND HONEST.



If you are sick or ailing no matter what your complaint, write to us and we will send you On Trial one of our large Electric Medicated Appliances to suit your case, provided you agree to pay for it, if it cures you in one month. If it does not cure you it costs you nothing to try it. Different Appliances to cure Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Diseases, Piles, Lung Diseases, Asthma, Catarrh, Lame Back, Ague, Debility, and many other diseases. Remember we do not ask you to buy them blindly but merely to try them at our risk. Thousands of cures made monthly in cases where all other treatments have failed. Price very low. Illustrated book giving full particulars and blank for statement of your case sent free. Address at once.
ELECTRIC PAD M'F'G CO., 564 STATE STREET., BROOKLYN, N.Y.

The Church.

Where the Two Ways Met.

HE stood at the side of the narrow way,
Where first my eyes beheld Him;
He called me to come; I could not refuse,
Though oft I had repelled Him.

Such pity divine shone forth from His eyes,
He won my poor heart to Him;
His hands they were pierced and His side was riven,
And thus it was I knew Him.

'Twas for me He died, yea, was crucified,
And so I came to love Him;
He laid down His life to show me my sins,
Also the glory above Him.

He saw me an outcast and clad in rags,
Pity I found before Him;
A wonderful Saviour He is to me—
My ransomed soul, adore Him!

I'm glad that He stood where the two ways met,
Waiting that I should find Him;
Since then with light steps have I travelled on,
For there my heart enshrined Him.

For ever I sing, as the way leads on,
And joyfully confess Him;
And when the white robes of heaven I wear,
Eternally I'll bless Him.

—William White, in The Christian Advocate.

A House of Wrecks.

THEY tell us that on a certain dangerous sea shore there is a man who lives in a queer house built entirely of wrecks. The floors are made out of a ship's deck, the kitchen out of an old ship's galley, and the walls are the cabin panels of wrecked packets and steamers! The whole structure is composed of the smashed remnants of better things. Such are the lives and characters of thousands of unconverted souls. Such may yours be, my impenitent friend. One part of your character is made of broken Sabbaths; another part of broken promises to your Saviour that you would repent and serve Him. The whole fabric shows broken commandments of God in every wall. Your heart-house cannot stand inspection, and God will put it to the flames. Move out! This new year is a good time to begin a new structure that will be storm-proof and fire proof, and will be a habitation for Jesus Christ to dwell in with you. Dig deep; lay your foundation on the Rock. The first thing you do to please conscience and Christ, will be the first material put into the new structure. Don't lose an hour; don't stop with wishing or praying to be better; put prayer into practice, and in God's strength begin a new life. Christ is ready to come in to you; are you ready for Him?—Theo. L. Cuyler, D D, in The Evangelist.

Reaching the Masses in Minnesota.

THE long-deferred winter has at last come, with its accustomed rigors, and the projected carnival in St. Paul, with its ice-palace and arctic pastimes can now be realized. Religiously the new year opens hopefully. The attention of the Christian public in the twin cities has been, in conjunction with other civic communities, turned to the question of how to evangelize those unreached by the churches. Ministers for the first time have crossed the chasm, and gone to the church-neglecters, or brought the latter to them. The writer has been permitted to do some timely missionary work in behalf of prison reform, by being invited to address the Knights of Labor on that subject, in both Minneapolis and St. Paul. In each instance this large organization heartily indorsed the plan advocated, of making Minnesota's second prison a reformatory, modeled after the one in Elmira, N. Y. A good deal of gratification was expressed at the appearance among them, to discuss themes vitally important to their interests, of members "of the cloth." Rev. J. L Scudder has won the attention and attendance of the workingmen by a series of sermons on the relations of capital to labor, and of the church to the wage class.

In St. Paul, the Olympic Theatre was occupied the first and second Sabbaths of the year, and the Gospel not only earnestly presented in such a strange place, but the habitués of the latter, and those seldom, if ever, inside of a church, heard it with evident interest and hopeful responses. The proprietor placed his building at the disposal of one of the city pastors, and the meetings have made evident that when the church will go to the people, it can reach them. Just now it's the go of the Gospel that needs to be emphasized.—M. G. Dana, D.D., in The Congregationalist.

Christian Service.

WILLINGNESS to serve is one of the first requirements of those who are Christians. They are to believe, to submit, to be patient, meek, merciful, but they are to stand saying, "Here am I, send me." Unless one have that spirit he will not make much progress, nor will he find his religion a joy to him. Service is demanded, and he knows it, and unless he puts himself in an attitude of hostility by direct refusal, which he is not likely to do if he remain a Christian at all, he must try in some measure to perform it. A willing mind, then, is a necessity for him, if he is to be more than a slave and drudge, and in the end a failure. If the preacher study, preach, do his pastoral work, and whatever else he is professionally called to under the pressure of coercion, his life will be a miserable one and it will be fruitless. It is the love of the service that makes it comfortable and gives it its rewards. And if a Christian, in any position, enters upon his work as driven to it, whether by force of conscience or public opinion, or something else, without the pleasant persuasion of privilege, benevolence or gratitude, he will know nothing of the blessedness of his calling.

It is a part of every Christian's duty to study what are the demands upon him as to present necessity and opportunity. It is true, and it must not be forgotten, that we believe in Christ that we may be saved; that our religion is a religion of salvation, and that when faith is given it is in answer to the cry, uttered in one form or another, "What must I do to be saved?" That refers, of course, to the future, for eternal death is that from which we are to be rescued. But it means more than that; it means that we are to be saved from our sins and from sinning, and from penalties that may be visited on us even here. In order, therefore, to rightly secure salvation in all its influences and ends, it is necessary to devote the life to the training that is offered in doing the work that is presented it. Every man, therefore, should look around him to see what there is for him to do, his first aim, of course, being benevolent, but his other, an equally important one, being the blessing he shall gain for himself. He is seeking salvation, and it is thus he will gain it in its fulness. Every day will bring him his opportunity; it is for him to see it. It is easy, under some public excitement, to take part in a movement, to play the reformer, to join the general hurrah in favor of something good or in opposition to something bad, but these, having their claims, present only a part, and usually a small part, of the responsibility. There are quiet duties waiting us, low doors standing open, and these, which it may take close scrutiny to see, we are not to refuse, but rather to seek and make the most of. And it is surprising how they will increase for us as we learn how to watch for them.—United Presbyterian.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Home Readings.

LESSON 8, FIRST QUARTER.

M. Seventy Years' Captivity ..... Jer. 25: 1-14.
T. Return Foretold..... Jer. 33: 1-14.
W. Cyrus Called by Name..... Isa. 45: 1-25.
T. Daniel's Prayer for Restoration..... Dan. 9: 1-27.
F. The Decree of Cyrus ..... Ezra 1: 1-11.
S. Out of Captivity..... Psa. 126: 1-6.
S. The Second Temple..... Ez a 3: 1-13.

—From the Westminster Question Book.

International Sunday-School Lesson.

BY REV. JOHN G. VAN DEVENTER.

Feb. 21st.—"The Second Temple."—Ezra 1: 1-4; 3: 8-13.

Golden Text.—"They praised the LORD, because the foundation of the house of the LORD was laid."—EZRA 3: 11.

CENTRAL TRUTH.—"The glory of this latter house shall be greater than the former, saith the LORD of hosts: and in this place will I give peace."—HAG. 2: 9.

INTRODUCTION.

THE book of Ezra is the direct continuation of 2 Chron.; the closing words of one coinciding with the opening words of the other. Ezra was a scribe who was associated with Nehemiah in the work of reforming the new community after it had fallen into evil ways. He was not among the first party of returning exiles, but came to Jerusalem after the temple was completed. It is probable that we owe the present form and arrangement of the Old Testament to his work as scribe or editor, as well as author of sacred writings. The seventy years of exile which had now expired are to be reckoned from the first deportation of people from Jerusalem, seven years before the destruction of the city and temple. After the fall of Babylon the Medes and Persians assumed the position of universal sovereignty. At first Cyrus and Darius were associated in the dominion, but later Cyrus ruled alone. The Persians were more in sympathy with the religious views and habits of the Jews than any other heathen nation. Daniel, although now an old man, was still living, and very probably held some post of honor as counsellor to the king.

Our lesson presents two separate passages for study, and omits the narrative of the return which lies between these passages. In order to secure an intelligent consideration of the lesson itself, we will take a brief survey of the intervening portion of the history in its proper place.

THE LESSON.

I. THE KING'S PROCLAMATION.—1: 1-4.

V. 1.—"Now in the first year of Cyrus, King of Persia." This does not mean the first year after the fall of Babylon, but the first of his undivided rule. As soon as he was entirely free to follow out his own wishes in the matter. "That the Word of the Lord by the mouth of Jeremiah might be fulfilled." The prophecies of both Isaiah and Jeremiah had been remarkably full and detailed, specifying the duration of the captivity, the manner of the fall of Babylon, and the name of the king who should give permission to the exiles to return. "The Lord stirred up the spirit of Cyrus, King of Persia." It seems probable that this was done by his becoming acquainted with the prophecies just mentioned. The fulfilment of one portion concerning his success against Babylon, would naturally impress him with the truth and authority of the rest concerning his relation to the return of the exiles. "He made a proclamation....and put it also in writing." The king's purpose was not only proclaimed but recorded as his deliberate and fixed determination.

V. 2.—"The Lord God of heaven" The Persians recognized one supreme being, and Cyrus to some extent acknowledged the God of Israel as identical with him. He could concede this much without forsaking his old religious beliefs and customs. "All the kingdoms of the earth." While this appears to us like a bombastic exaggeration, yet to the mind of Cyrus it was the truth. Very little was known of any nations living outside of the limits of his empire. "He hath charged me to build him a house at Jerusalem." It was well that Cyrus promptly recognized his relation to the plans of the King of kings. Success is always to be found in such co operation between God and man.

V. 3.—"Who is there among you of all his people." The proclamation was in the form of a permission, not of a command. Such an undertaking involved hardship and self denial, and only volunteers could be depended upon to carry it out successfully. If Cyrus had sought to compel all the Jews to return, he would have been compelled to drive them back with an army. The last clause of this verse is a little doubtful in its rendering. If we observe the brackets, which are not found in the original, then we have here an acknowledgment of faith in Jehovah as the true and only God, but this is not supported by other utterances of the king; if we omit the brackets, then we have simply a recognition of His authority over the Jews, and over Cyrus as for the time being king of the Jews. This latter seems to be more in accord with the religious position of the king.

V. 4.—It is somewhat difficult to make the first part of this verse agree with the rest of it, unless we understand by "whosoever remaineth" simply the "remnant" of which the prophets spoke as returning to the land of their fathers. (Ezek 14: 22)

"Let the men of his place help him." This command was not directed exclusively to the Jews who preferred to remain in the East, but included the neighbors of the returning exiles, who were heathen. As Israel spoiled the Egyptians upon the Exodus, so now the LORD gave them recompense in this way for their sufferings in the land of exile.

II. THE EXILES RETURN.

As the LORD had stirred up the king to issue his gracious proclamation, so he prepared the hearts of choice spirits among the heads of the nation to lead this pilgrimage. The number of those who returned was "forty and two thousand three hundred and three score." The second chapter of Ezra gives a detailed account of the composition of this company, and also of the property which they brought back. In addition to the gift of the king and of their neighbors, the leaders of the people gave an example of self denial by a liberal gift for the building of the temple. They did not wait for the temple to be erected before resuming the worship of Jehovah, but erected an altar and began the offering of sacrifices according to the commands of Moses. Neither were they satisfied to remain in this position any longer than they were compelled to, but immediately set about procuring material and workmen for the building of the temple. As in the days of Solomon these were found among the Syrians in the neighborhood of Lebanon.

III THE FOUNDATION LAID.—3: 8-13

V. 8.—"Now in the second year of their coming." Of course their first efforts were directed to securing shelter for themselves and their families, but even while doing this they were providing against the day when the work of rebuilding should actually begin. "Began Zerubbabel, the son of Shealtiel and Jeshua, the son of Jozadak" The former was of the royal line, while the latter was one of the priests, so that the new community was fully organized upon the Mosaic basis from the start. "Appointed the Levites from twenty years old and upward." This was to be a committee of overseers. As God had chosen the Levites for the charge of the sanctuary, this arrangement was directly in the line of His enactments.

V. 9.—"Then stood Jeshua...." This is not the same man as the priest mentioned in the preceding verse although bearing the same name. This verse presents to view the heads of the Levites who acted under the priest and king, and so took charge of the larger body to whom the work of overseeing had been assigned. By sons of Judah we are not to understand the tribe of Judah but Levites descended from a man whose name was Judah or Hodaviah, (Chap. 2: 40.)

V. 10.—"When the builders laid the foundation of the temple." This was not only a religious but a national celebration, for the national and the religious life of the Jews were formally, as well as really, intertwined. The priests in their robes of office, and the sons of Asaph as singers before the LORD formed the centre of a joyous assembly.

V. 11.—"Giving thanks unto the Lord, because he is good, for his mercy endureth forever." We infer from this intimation that they either used the song of thanksgiving which David composed for the occasion when the ark was brought to Jerusalem, or that the 136th Psalm was composed by some later poet expressly for this occasion. "And all the people shouted with a great shout, when they praised the Lord." The rejoicing was not confined to those who served at the altar, but the entire nation was thrilled with a new life as they saw the long deferred desire of their hearts approaching fulfilment.

V. 12.—"But many....who were ancient men....wept with a loud voice." As these men saw the foundations of a new temple laid, their memory ran back to their boyhood and to the temple with which they had then been familiar; they recalled the warnings of the prophets, the sins of the people, the terrors of the siege, the hours of weeping by the rivers of Babylon, and the mercy of God in restoring them to their land; and it is no wonder that their joy was tempered with grief, and that tears were more consonant with their feelings than exultant shouts.

V. 13.—"Could not discern the shout of joy from the noise of the weeping." What a picture of life. Funerals and weddings pass each other in the streets; tears and smiles chase each other over our faces. Sorrow is lightened by joy, and joy is darkened by sorrow, but we know that while weeping may endure for a night joy cometh in the morning. The temple whose foundations were thus laid, was not completed for several years owing to the interruptions of enemies and the lukewarmness of the people.

LESSONS FOR TO-DAY.

1. "The king's heart is in the hand of the LORD."
2. God's promises and His threatenings are alike sure of fulfilment.
3. Power and influence are God's gifts, and are to be used in His service.
4. Those who go forth to the pioneer work of the Church deserve the sympathy and support of those who remain at home.
5. All classes should unite in the service of God's house
6. God is able to turn loss into gain.
7. "Ye are the temple of the living God."

Unseasonable Prayer.

THERE may come a time when the question, "Wherefore criest thou unto me?" need to be asked even of Moses. There is a period when crying should give place to action; when prayer is heard and the Red Sea is divided, it would be shameful disobedience to remain trembling and praying. Therefore Moses must lift his rod and speak to the children of Israel that they go forward. Every fruit of the Spirit comes in its season, and is then most precious; out of season even prayer comes not to perfection. Ask, by all means; but prepare yourself to receive. Seek earnestly, but do not hold back when the hour arrives for you to find. Knock, and knock again; but hasten to enter as soon as the door is open.

When we ought to believe that we have the mercy, why do we continue to cry for it as though we had not obtained it? When increased faith is all that is wanted, why are we seeking the blessing which God places within the reach of our faith? When duty is quite clear, why hesitate to perform it, and make prayer an excuse for our delay? The question should be asked of all who pray, "Wherefore criest thou unto me?"

In a great thaw on one of the American rivers, there was a man on one of the cakes of ice, which was not yet actually separated from the unbroken ice. In his terror, however, he did not see this, but knelt down and began to pray aloud for God to deliver him. The spectators on the shore cried loudly to him, "Man, stop praying, and run for the shore." So I would say to some of you, "Rest not in praying, but believe in Jesus.

On one occasion when Bunyan was endeavoring to pray, the tempter suggested, "that neither the mercy of God, nor yet the blood of Christ, at all concerned him, nor could they help him by reason of his sin; therefore it was in vain to pray." Yet he thought with himself, "I will pray." "But," said the tempter, "your sin is unpardonable." "Well," said he, "I will pray." "It is to no boot," said the adversary. And still he answered, "I will pray." And so he began his prayer, "Lord, Satan tells me that neither Thy mercy nor Christ's blood is sufficient to save my soul. Lord, shall I honor Thee most by believing Thou wilt and can'st? or him by believing Thou neither wilt nor can'st? Lord, I would fain honor Thee by believing Thou can'st and wilt." And while he was thus speaking, "as if someone had clapped him on the back," the Scripture fastened on his mind, "O man, great is thy faith."

"Seek thou thy God alone by prayer,
And thou shalt doubt—perchance despair;
But seek Him also by endeavor,
And thou shalt find Him gracious ever."

—Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

Unprofited Hearers.

FATHER is sick and cannot go to church. Daughter, who has spent three years at a boarding-school and is a communicant and a teacher in the Sabbath-school, enters. "Well, Mary, did you have a good sermon this morning?"

"Yes, splendid, I never heard Dr. X. preach better."

"What was the text?"

"Oh, I don't remember. I never could keep texts in mind, you know."

"What was the subject? Don't you remember it or some of the ideas?"

"No, papa, but I remember a beautiful figure he had about a bird soaring up into the air. Why, I could almost see it and hear its song!"

"Well, what did he illustrate by the flight of the bird?"

"Let me see. It was something about faith, or about going to heaven. I can't just recall now what it was, but the figure was splendid."

And the father is satisfied. Why shouldn't he be? That was the kind of listening to sermons that he taught her by his own example. If he had heard it he could not have made a better report unless there had been something in it about politics, or the news of the day. We are losing the habit of attention and the use of the memory in the house of God.

The story of the Scotch woman and the wool has comforted a great many careless and forgetful hearers of the Word. When criticized for claiming to have enjoyed a sermon, and to have been edified by it, though she could not remember a single idea in it, or even the text, she held up the fleece she had just washed, wrung it dry and said: "Don't you see the water is all gone, and yet the wool is clean. So the sermon is all gone, but in passing through my mind, as I listened, it did me good." We think that hers was an exceptional case. We don't believe in cleansing hearts as she cleansed wool. The Saviour said, "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you." And Paul wrote to the Corinthians, "By which also (the Gospel he preached) ye are saved if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you." He evidently had no faith in the saving power of truth that merely rippled on the ear like water over a rock.—The Interior.

The Little Householder.

"OH, yes, I have all kinds of tenants," said a kind-faced old gentleman; "but the one I like the best is a child not more than ten years of age. A few years ago I got a chance to buy a piece of land over on the West Side, and did so. I noticed that there was an old coop of a house on it, but paid no attention to it. After a while a man came to me and wanted to know if I would rent it to him.

"'What do you want it for?' said I.

"'To live in,' he replied.

"'Well,' I said, 'you can have it. Pay me what you think it is worth to you.'

"The first month he brought $2, and the second month a little boy who said he was the man's son, came with $3. After that I saw the man once in a while, but in the course of time the boy paid the rent regularly, sometimes $2 and sometimes $3. One day I asked the boy what had become of his father.

"'He's dead, sir,' was the reply.

"'Is that so?' said I. 'How long since?'

"'More'n a year,' he answered.

"I took his money, but I made up my mind that I would go over and investigate and the next day I drove over there. The old shed looked quite decent. I knocked at the door and a little girl let me in. I asked for her mother. She said she didn't have any.

"'Where is she?' said I.

"'We don't know, sir. She went away after my father died and we have never seen her since.'

"Just then a little girl about three years old came in, and I learned that these three children had been keeping house together for a year and a half, the boy supporting his two little sisters by blacking boots and selling newspapers, and the oldest girl managing the house and taking care of the baby.

"Well, my daughter called on them, and we keep an eye on them now. I thought I wouldn't disturb them as long as they were getting along. The next time the boy came with the rent I talked with him a little and then said:

"'My boy, keep right on as you have begun, and you will never be sorry. Keep your little sisters together and never leave them. Now look at this'

"I showed him a ledger in which I had entered up all the money he had paid me for rent, and I told him that it was all his with interest. 'You keep right on, and I'll be your banker, and when this amounts to a little more, I'll see that you get a house of your own.' That's the kind of a tenant to have."—Chicago Herald.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

Excellent Results.

Dr J. L. WILLIS, Eliot, Me., says: "Horsford's Acid Phosphate gives most excellent results."

Rheumatism

We doubt if there is, or can be, a specific remedy for rheumatism; but thousands who have suffered its pains have been greatly benefited by Hood's Sarsaparilla. If you have failed to find relief, try this great remedy.

"I was afflicted with rheumatism twenty years. Previous to 1883 I found no relief, but grew worse, and at one time was almost helpless. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me more good than all the other medicine I ever had." H. T. BALCOM, Shirley Village, Mass.

"I had rheumatism three years, and got no relief till I took Hood's Sarsaparilla. It has done great things for me. I recommend it to others." LEWIS BURBANK, Biddeford, Me.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by three peculiarities: 1st, the combination of remedial agents; 2d, the proportion; 3d, the process of securing the active medicinal qualities. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown. Send for book containing additional evidence.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over." J. P. THOMPSON, Register of Deeds, Lowell, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla beats all others, and is worth its weight in gold." I. BARRINGTON, 130 Bank Street, New York City.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Made only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

BABY'S BIRTHDAY.

A Beautiful Imported Birthday Card sent to any baby whose mother will send us the names of two or more other babies, and their parents' addresses. Also a handsome Diamond Dye Sample Card to the mother and much valuable information. Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt.

TO HAVE HEALTH THE LIVER MUST BE IN ORDER.

DR. SANFORD'S LIVER INVIGORATOR

TRADE MARK

Is a Reliable Remedy for Liver Complaints and ills caused by a deranged or torpid condition of the Liver, as Dyspepsia, Constipation, Biliousness, Jaundice, Headache, Malaria, Rheumatism, etc. It regulates the bowels, purifies the blood, strengthens the system, assists digestion.

AN INVALUABLE FAMILY MEDICINE.

Thousands of testimonials prove its merit.

ANY DRUGGIST WILL TELL YOU ITS REPUTATION.

FINANCIAL.

7 PER CENT. INTEREST FIRST MORTGAGE FARM LOANS.

Personal acquaintance with lands and values. Over 2,000 loans made. NO CUSTOMER has ever LOST A DOLLAR of principal or interest on any loans made here. Interest collected and sent to you, free of cost, each year. These loans are very safe, and pay nearly U.S. BONDS, known and recommended by leading business men and clergymen, East and West—men for whom I have been making these investments for TEN YEARS PAST.

REFERENCES.

REV. WM. L. GAGE, D.D., Hartford, Ct.
M. E. GATES, PH.D., LL.D., President Rutgers College, New Brunswick, N. J.
DR. WM. J MILNE, President Geneseo Normal School, Geneseo, N. Y
HON. E. M. TOPLIFF, Manchester, N. H.
REV. JOHN W. RAY, Lake City, Minn
DR. JNO. K. BUCKLYN, Mystic Bridge, Ct.
Importers' and Traders' National Bank, New York.
First National Bank, St. Paul, Minn
The Congregationalist, Boston, N. Y. Observer, and hundreds of others in all parts of the United States.

All are pleased with my Investments. Circular, references, letters giving experience and testimony of old customers, and a New Map of Dakota sent free on application. Mention this paper. Address

E. P. GATES,
Pres. Merchant's Bank,
Grand Forks, Dakota.

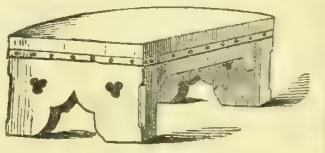
7% NET Security 3 to 6 times loan. INTEREST semi-annual and paid at your home, 20th year of residence, and 10th of business. No investor ever had to pay taxes, costs of foreclosure, wait for interest, or take land. BEST of References all around you. Write if you have money to loan.

D. S. B. JOHNSTON & SON,
Negotiators of Mortgage Loans.
MENTION THIS PAPER St. Paul, Minn

6%, 7%, 8%.

The American Investment Company, of Emmetsburg, Iowa, incorporated, with a paid-up capital of $500,000, with branches at Huron and Mitchell, Dakota offer First Mortgage Farm Loans in Iowa, Minn., Dakota, and Neb., both Principal and Interest Guaranteed. Also 6 per cent Debenture Bonds (obligations of the Company), running 10 years, secured by Mortgage loans deposited with the Mercantile Trust Co., N. Y. It also issues Demand Certificates of Deposit at 5 per cent. Interest. Write for pamphlet and references.
Home Office. Emmetsburg, Iowa.
E. S. Ormsby, Pres., 150 Nassau St., N. Y.

INVEST Through the Sound and Reliable
WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE CO.
F. M. PERKINS, President. LAWRENCE, KAN. L. H. PERKINS, Secretary.
CAPITAL AND SURPLUS, $250,000.
Carefully selected 1st Mortgage Farm Loans payable in N. Y. Unrivalled facilities. Absolute satisfaction. 10 years' experience. No losses. Refer to 3d Nat'l Bank, N. Y. City; Nat'l Bank, Lawrence, Kan.; and Hundreds of Investors. Send for pamphlet, forms and full information. Branch Offices in N. Y. City, Albany & Phila. N. Y. Office, 137 B'way, C. C. Hine & Son, Agts.



Kneeling Bench for use in Church or at Home.
Arranged to hold Books.

-CHURCH FURNISHINGS.-

STAINED GLASS MEMORIAL WINDOWS.
MEMORIAL TABLETS OF BRASS, BRONZE, &C.
COMMUNION SERVICES OF SILVER.
S. S. BANNERS, EMBROIDERY, DECORATIONS.
CHURCH FURNITURE.

SEND FOR HAND-BOOKS.

J. & R. LAMB, 59 CARMINE ST., NEW YORK.

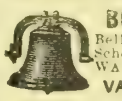
Established 1857.

The GREAT CHURCH LIGHT

FRINK'S Patent Reflectors for Gas or Oil, give the most powerful, softest cheapest & Best light known for Churches, Stores, Show Windows, Banks, Theatres, Depots, etc. New and elegant designs. Send size of room. Get circular and estimate. A Liberal discount to churches and the trade. Don't be deceived by cheap imitations.
I. P. FRINK, 551 Pearl St., N. Y.

BELLS.

McShane Bell Foundry
Finest Grade of Bells,
CHIMES AND PEALS for CHURCHES, &c.
Send for Price and Catalogue. Address
H. McSHANE & CO.,
Mention this paper. Baltimore, Md



BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY.
Bells of Pure Copper and Tin for Churches, Schools, Fire Alarms, Farms, etc. FULLY WARRANTED. Catalogue sent Free.
VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

MENEELY & COMPANY
West Troy, N. Y. Bells,
For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others

PILES. Instant relief. Final cure in 10 days, and never returns. No purge, no salve no suppository. Sufferers will learn of a simple remedy Free, by addressing C. J. MASON, 78 Nassau St., N. Y.

With the fullest confidence the manufacturers of the Ivory Soap recommend it to those not already acquainted with it. They do not claim that it is the only pure soap; but the only pure soap to be had at a moderate price is the Ivory, (99 44/100% pure.)

Free of charge. A full size cake of Ivory Soap will be sent to any one who can not get it of their grocer, if six two-cent stamps, to pay postage, are sent to Procter & Gamble, Cincinnati. Please mention this paper.

BENJ. F. TRUMPY,

Real Estate Office,

336 Broome Street,

ONE DOOR EAST OF BOWERY.

Management of Estates, Renting and Sale of Property, and Collecting of Rents.

AGENT FOR

German American Insurance Co.
Westchester Insurance Co.
Hamburg Bremen Insurance Co.
Mutual Life Insurance Co.

THE

SECURITY

MUTUAL BENEFIT SOCIETY,

No. 233 Broadway, New York.

ONLY TWELVE ASSESSMENTS

Have been levied from 1881 to 1886, averaging three a year, and making the cost for assessments to a man of 40 years, but $4.40 a year for each $1000 of insurance.

Send for Circulars. Agents Wanted!

☞ Remunerative employment offered energetic and reliable men.

SEEDS! SEEDS!

My Annual Priced Catalogue is now ready, and will be mailed free to all applicants. It contains all the leading and most popular sorts of

Vegetables, Farm & Flower Seeds,

Besides all the desirable novelties of last season, and nearly everything else in my line of business.

ALFRED BRIDGEMAN,

37 East 19th Street, New York City.

A MILLION

BOOKS

RARE, CURIOUS, CURRENT. IN STOCK.

ALMOST GIVEN AWAY.

Libraries Supplied Cheaper than at any Book Store in the World.

LIBRARIES AND BOOKS BOUGHT.

MAMMOTH CATALOGUE FREE.

LEGGAT BROTHERS,

81 CHAMBERS STREET,

3d door West of City Hall Park. NEW YORK.

Agents Make $5 a Day Selling Perfect FAMILY SCALES Entirely new in principle. Weigh one ounce to 25 pounds. What every family needs and will buy. Rapid sales surprise old agents. FORSHEE & McMAKIN, CINCINNATI, O.

Twenty-Sixth Annual Statement

—OF THE—

WASHINGTON

LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY.

Cor. Cortlandt and Church Sts., New York.

W. A. Brewer, Jr., President.

Net Assets, December 31, 1884		$6,883,847 80
Receipts During the Year 1885:
For Premiums	$1,392,483 18
For Interest, Rents, &c.	453,974 38
		$1,846,457 56
		$8,730,305 36
DISBURSEMENTS.
Claims by Death	$431,788 98
Matured and Discounted Endowments	151,788 30
Cash Dividends, Return Premiums and Surrendered Policies	406,176 62
Annuities	4,088 03
Total paid Policyholders	$993,441 93
Taxes	$14,781 89
Commuted Commissions	48,133 25
Profit and Loss	25,000 00
Dividends to Stockholders	8,695 75
Expenses: Rent, Commissions, Salaries, Postage, Advertising, Medical Examinations, &c.	245,751 90
		$1,335,759 72
Net Assets December 31, 1885		$7,394,545 64
Policies issued in 1885	2,408
Amount of Insurance in 1885	$5,045,698

ASSETS.
U. S. and N. Y. City Stocks	$659,703 42
Bonds and Mortgages (being first liens on Real Estate)	5,053,503 67
Real Estate	571,621 13
Cash on hand and in Banks and Trust Company	932,404 79
Loans on Collaterals	134,674 94
Agents' Balances	32,632 69
		$7,894,545 64
Add excess of market value of Stocks over cost	152,046 58
Interest accrued	51,754 88
Interest due and unpaid	5,091 40
Deferred and Unpaid Premiums, less 20 per cent.	200,969 05
Gross Assets, Dec. 31, 1885.		$7,804,407 55
LIABILITIES.
Reserve by N. Y. standard, Company's valuation	$6,790,742 00
Claims in course of Adjustment	55,670 99
Matured Endowments not yet called for	215 54
Premiums paid in advance	3,409 12
Unpaid dividends to Stockholders	369 25
Salaries, Rent, &c.	2,041 68
Surplus as regards policyholders	951,958 97
		$7,804,407 55
Total number of policies in force		15,385
Total amount insured		$38,956,324

W. HAXTUN, Vice-President and Secretary.
E. S. FRENCH, Sup't of Agencies. CYRUS MUNN, Ass't Secretary.
I. C. PIERSON, Actuary.
B. W. McCREADY, M.D., Medical Examiner.
FOSTER & THOMSON, Attorneys.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

W. A. Brewer, Jr.,	Gustav Schwab,	Wilson G. Hunt,	George Newbold,
Wm. Haxtun,	Merritt Trimble,	Chas. H. Ludington,	Benjamin Haxtun,
Roland G. Mitchell,	George A. Robbins,	Robert Bowne,	J. P. Giraud Foster,
George N. Lawrence,	James B. Johnston,	Payne Pettebone,	Edwin H. Mead,
Levi P. Morton,	Thomas Hope,	Francis Speir,	Henry F. Hitch,
Effingham Townsend,	John H. Sherwood,	Frederic R. Coudert,	Charles P. Britton,
Abiel A. Low,	James Thomson,	Nath'l L. McCready,	Francis G. Adams,

Benjamin W. McCready, M.D.

J. B. WATKINS LAND MORTGAGE CO.

Capital, $750,000. 7% Surplus, $100,000.

FARM MORTGAGES. INTEREST GUARANTEED

PAYABLE BY HALF-YEARLY GUARANTEED COUPONS AT

NATIONAL BANK OF COMMERCE IN NEW YORK.

10,994 Mortgages negotiated, aggregating - - $7,223,800

Amount of Interest and Principal paid on day of maturity, 4,118,272

Six per cent. Real Estate Mortgage Bonds, principal and interest FULLY GUARANTEED. Security SEVEN fold. For sale at our New York Office.

☞ SEND FOR PAMPHLET FORMS AND TESTIMONIALS. ☜

Address J. B. WATKINS L. M. CO., Lawrence, Kansas,

Or HENRY DICKINSON, New York Manager, 243 Broadway.

EQUITABLE MORTGAGE COMPANY.

CAPITAL, $100,000. (Paid up.)

7% Aggregate capital and surplus of our associated corporations, $325,000. 7%

WESTERN FARM MORTGAGES

In Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, and Nebraska.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST

GUARANTEED.

Send for further information. REFERENCES: Send for further information.

First National Bank, N. Y.; B. E. Tifft, 921 Chestnut St, Phila.; Hon. Redfield Proctor, Rutland, Vt.; J. W. White, Nashua, N. H.; Kendall Bros., Reading, Pa.; Col. Lee Chamberlain, Albany, N. Y.; Rev. S. W. Boardman, Stanhope, N. J.; H. H. Fitch, 23 Court St., Boston, Mass.; Hon. S. S. Lacey, Marshall, Mich.; Gen. R. B. Craufurd, Norwalk, Ct.

NEW YORK, 135, 137 B'way. BOSTON, Mass. 23 Court St. OFFICES. PHILADELPHIA, Pa., 112 S. 4th St. KANSAS CITY, Mo., 9th & Walnut Sts.

HALF A MILLION GARDENS

ARE ANNUALLY SUPPLIED WITH

SEEDS Peter Henderson's PLANTS

EVERYTHING FOR THE GARDEN

Our Seed Warehouses, the largest in New York, are fitted up with every appliance for the prompt and careful filling of orders.

Our Green-house Establishment at Jersey City is the most extensive in America. Annual Sales, 2½ Million Plants.

Our Catalogue for 1886, of 140 pages, containing colored plates, descriptions and illustrations of the NEWEST, BEST and RAREST SEEDS and PLANTS, will be mailed on receipt of 6 cts. (in stamps) to cover postage.

PETER HENDERSON & CO. 35 & 37 Cortlandt St., NEW YORK.

BURPEE'S SEEDS,

FARM ANNUAL FOR 1886

Will be sent FREE to all who write for it. It is a Handsome Book of 128 Pages, with hundreds of new illustrations, two Colored Plates, and tells all about the Best Garden, Farm and Flower Seeds, and Fancy Poultry. It is the only complete catalogue of the kind published, and describes RARE NOVELTIES in VEGETABLES and FLOWERS, of real value, which can not be obtained elsewhere. Send address on a postal to

W. ATLEE BURPEE & CO., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

R. H. MACY & CO.,

14TH STREET, SIXTH AVE., AND 13TH STREET NEW YORK.

GRAND CENTRAL FANCY AND DRY GOODS ESTABLISHMENT.

Special Sale of Ladies' and Children's

MUSLIN UNDERWEAR,

all of our own manufacture and design. Our prices are the lowest in the country.

Rare bargains in

LINENS

and Housekeeping Goods, our own direct importation.

Unapproachable bargains in

BLACK AND COLORED Silks and Dress Goods.

Our prices below all competition.

Tremendous mark-down in

SUITS AND CLOAKS.

Our Entire Stock at Lower Prices than ever before known.

Special Care Given to Mail Orders.

Spring and Summer Catalogue will be ready about April 1. Copies will be mailed on receipt of Ten Cents.

R. H. MACY & CO.

BLACK SILKS.

February, 1886.

WE OFFER FOR SALE DURING THIS MONTH OVER FIVE THOUSAND PIECES OF RELIABLE BLACK SILKS OF BEST QUALITY AT SPECIALLY LOW PRICES.

WE WILL SEND SAMPLES TO ANY LADY READER OF THIS PAPER WHO DESIRES TO PURCHASE, ON RECEIPT OF POSTAL REQUEST. ORDERS BY MAIL ARE AS CAREFULLY FILLED AS IF GIVEN IN PERSON, AND SATISFACTION ASSURED.

ADDRESS

JAMES M'CREERY & CO.,

Broadway and 11th Street, New York.

KNABE PIANOFORTES.

UNEQUALLED IN

Tone, Touch, Workmanship and Durability.

WILLIAM KNABE & CO.,

Nos. 204 and 206 West Baltimore Street, Baltimore. No. 112 Fifth Avenue, N. Y.

LE PAGE'S LIQUID GLUE

UNEQUALLED FOR CEMENTING WOOD, GLASS, CHINA, PAPER, LEATHER, &c. Awarded GOLD MEDAL, LONDON, 1883. Used by Mason & Hamlin Organ and Piano Co., Pullman Palace Car Co., &c. M'f'd only by the RUSSIA CEMENT CO. GLOUCESTER, MASS. SOLD EVERYWHERE. ☞ Sample Tin Can by Mail, 25c.

Is Good Health

A desirable possession for wives and mothers? Then remember that Willcox & Gibbs Automatic Sewing Machine is the only one that can be used without serious risk to health.

Willcox & Gibbs S. M. Co., 658 Broadway, N. Y.

Mason & Hamlin

ORGANS: Highest Honors at all Great World's Exhibitions for eighteen years. One hundred Styles, $22. to $900. For Cash, Easy Payments or Rented. Catalogues free.

PIANOS: New mode of Stringing. Do not require one-quarter as much tuning as Pianos on the prevailing "wrest-pin" system. Remarkable for purity of tone and durability.

ORGAN AND PIANO CO.

164 Tremont St., Boston. 46 E. 14th St. (Union Sq.), N. Y. 149 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

WANTED LADIES AND GENTLEMEN who wish to make $3 to $4 a day easily at their own homes. Work sent by mail. No canvassing. Address with stamp, Crown M'f'g. Co., 294 Vine St., Cin'ti, O.

The Christian Intelligencer.

Een-dracht maakt macht.

VOL. LVII.—No. 7. WHOLE No. 2899. NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1886. $2.65 A YEAR IN ADVANCE No. 48 CHURCH STREET.

EDITORS: Rev. JOHN M. FERRIS, D.D. Rev. N. H. VAN ARSDALE.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR: MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

A SERIES of trials of ministers for moral delinquencies and crimes have engaged public attention for a few months. Christianity is not to be charged with these offences. They are due to the depravity of human nature. The Christian faith of these offenders is doubtful.

THE ARCHBISHOP'S WEIGHTY WORDS.—A good deal has been well said on the subject of Sunday opening of the museums, but we know of no one who has put the matter so clearly in a few words as the Roman Catholic Archbishop Corrigan. He says:

"As I understand it, the movement for opening the museums on Sunday, though advocated in the interest of the working classes, is really the entering wedge of a larger and insidious design, which aims at throwing open also on that day the theatres, drinking saloons and other places of amusement, and so gradually to do away with everything that gives Sunday a sacred character. If this view be correct, as there is good reason to believe it to be, the question becomes a very serious one which deserves most serious consideration. To visit the museums is, in itself, harmless; to destroy the general religious observance of Sunday would be a national calamity."

This reasoning, it will be observed, applies to the Sunday newspaper, the tendency of which is to overthrow and obliterate in the popular mind the difference between Sunday and other days—a result which the Archbishop justly says "would be a national calamity."

THE PROPOSED LIBRARY.—The effort to have a public library established in this city is pushed before the legislature with much earnestness. We hope it will not succeed. The first thing proposed is the erection of a building to cost three-quarters of a million, a sum that would be trebled before the work is finished, and this amount would make a serious addition to the annual taxes, for the limit of borrowing is already reached. Besides, there is no pressing call for such a thing just now. For purposes of consultation, New York has the Astor Library and Columbia College Library (70,000 vols.), both of which are practically free, and the latter open every secular day in the year save one, and until ten o'clock in the evening. For the needs of the people at large is the New York Circulating Library, which could easily, by the expenditure of some additional thousands per year, be made to meet every ordinary want. At all events, if a new library with a suitable building is to be founded, it must be taken out of the hands of trading politicians. But were this effectually done the interest of certain parties in the movement would come to a speedy end. The Aldermen who propose the measure do and have done nothing toward making useful the library at the City Hall—save attaching to it two or three sinecure positions.

NO CHURCH can afford to neglect its missionary work. The Church holds the oracles of God as a trust for all men. It is to convey the invitations of God's mercy to all men everywhere. It is to possess and to be moved by the mind of Christ, who came into the world to seek and to save the lost. God gives His grace to men that they may tell others of the preciousness of that grace. Christians are stewards of the manifold grace of God, and are to be faithful stewards. These truths come to us with power as we think of the record we as a Church have made thus far during the present church year. Leaving out of the reckoning the membership of the churches in Arcot, at Amoy, and in Japan, our branch of the Reformed Church has 81,000 communicants. They have given thus far this year $35,000, including legacies, hardly over $30,000 excluding legacies, for the maintenance of Missions in Asia which God has blessed in a remarkable degree and which present opportunities for usefulness seldom equalled. Such a Church as this has given thus far this year less than 50 cents a member, and $16,000 less than it gave in the same time last year. When we sought for the record and found it such as it is, we comforted ourselves for the moment with the thought that, moved by the noble field opening before it in the Northwest, the Church had increased its gifts to Home Missions; but, when inquiry was made, it was found that the Home treasury had received for both the support of missionaries and the Church Building Fund only a little less than $26,000, about $1,600 less than during the same part of last year, and only a little more than 30 cents a member. What has come over us! Surely we do not intend to allow such a record to remain as it is! To write such facts fills us with shame. No one will regard them as creditable. Only two and a half months of the fiscal year remain. We must be diligent if we would remove this—well, we decline to characterize it; let every man apply to it the term he thinks it deserves. If every member of the Church will prayerfully consider his stewardship before God, the coming sixty days will tell another story. The record, we are certain, is not a fair indication of the disposition of the Church. Some cause unknown to us has wrought this great change.

REPORTS OF REVIVALS occupy more and more space week after week in the religious newspapers, especially in the denominational papers. This is plainly a time of blessing. From almost every locality, where special religious interest is manifested, it is said that the awakening was preceded by a desire on the part of the members of the churches for the power of the Holy Spirit, by a larger attendance and greater earnestness at the prayer meetings, and by increased activity in endeavors to arouse the unconverted. These facts are instructive. Revivals do not often occur in cold, formal, indifferent churches. But there is one imperfection in the work as presented in a large part of the returns. The awakening generally is not reaching the great body of those who have been non-church-goers. The ingathering is from the Sunday-schools and the families of the Church. At least that impression has been received by us from reading many of the reports. Ought not such a fact to incite to a hearty and persistent endeavor to win the ungodly? Should not Christians show their interest in them, their desire that they shall share in the gifts of grace! We must not rest until the blessing extends to the multitude of men who have heretofore turned their backs on the Church. God has mercy for the chief of sinners. God has gracious designs for those men regard as unimpressible. Two or three years ago what seemed more improbable than a genuine revival in the English universities! Yet there has been a true evangelical movement there, resulting in such whole hearted consecration as is not often seen in these ease-loving times. Young men of the highest promise have given themselves and their property without reserve to the work of the Lord. A few years ago was not Sam Jones regarded as a lost man, a hopeless case? yet he is to-day winning souls to Christ as few men have ever done. The churches must not, cannot rest, until the entire community has been reached and moved. For that the Church is where it is, and for that the Church is endowed with the gifts of Divine grace. Every child of God can do something. Those who cannot speak words in season, can "smile them in and smile them out," can take men by the hand and invite them to the meetings, can say to them at the meeting, "I am glad to see you here." That may prove, does often prove, the word in season. Let it be fitly, warmly, heartily spoken.

THE FIRST CHAPTER OF GENESIS is an outline of the succession of creative acts. It does not attempt to enter upon details. It has grandeur and majesty. A noble rhythm reigns in the paragraphs announcing the events of each day. It is a true narrative of the evênts it reveals, but has the characteristics of a poem. The discoveries of science do not invalidate these annals, but sustain them. Professor Dana adopts the conclusions of Professor Guyot, and in his Manual of Geology gives these stages of progress, agreeing with the reasonable theories and the actual discoveries of science: The beginning of activity in matter; The development of the earth; The production of the earth's physical features; The introduction of life under its simplest forms; The display of the systems in the kingdoms of life; The introduction of the highest class of vertebrates,—that of the mammals; The introduction of man. He says also that the record may be divided into "two great eras of three days each,—an Inorganic and an Organic." These he outlines as: "I. The Inorganic Era; 1st Day, Light cosmical. 2d Day, The earth divided from the fluid around it. 3d Day, (1.) Outlining of the land and water, (2.) Creation o vegetation. II. The Organic Era; 4th Day, Light from the sun. 5th Day, Creation of the lower orders of animals. 6th Day, (1.) Creation of Mammals, (2.) Creation of Man." Of this he says, "The record in the Bible is, therefore, profoundly philosophical in the scheme which it presents. It is both true and divine. It is a declaration of authorship, both of Creation and the Bible, on the first page of the sacred volume." His superior as a geologist does not exist among men.

Professor Huxley returns to the attack in the Nineteenth Century for the present month. He descends to such quibbling as this: "'Waste' is too vague a term to be worth consideration. 'Without form,' intelligible enough as a metaphor, if taken literally, is absurd; for a material thing existing in space must have a superficies, and if it has a superficies it has a form. The wildest streaks of marestail clouds in the sky, or the most irregular heavenly nebulae, have surely just as much form as a geometrical tetrahedron; and as for 'void,' how can that be void which is full of matter?" Having observed scores of nebulae, having examined some of them by the hour, we deny the truth of his assertion. The nebulae are without form, are nondescripts. Some, in a telescope of moderate power, seem to be of regular form, but one of higher power reveals streamers, outlying mrsses that defy geometrical description. What is the form of the nebula of Andromeda, as seen by a telescope of fair power, what that of the nebula of Orion? We challenge him to define them in geometrical terms. "Void" is a popular word, understood by men everywhere, and stands for azoic. Does Professor Huxley believe that the nebulae are not azoic? Just such pitiful quibbling can be found on almost every page of his reply to Mr. Gladstone's paper of January.

"Old Colony" Papers.

CHRISTIAN FRATERNITY AND CONSECRATION.

THE Congregationalist recently asked this searching and suggestive question: "Is the world moulding the Church, or the Church lifting the world?" It may help us to an answer, if we look back to some of the qualities displayed by the Church while the drops of her Pentecostal baptism still glittered upon her brow.

We are told that "All they that believed were together." They instinctively drew nearer to one another; and, in so doing, separated themselves from the world. The world is a far country, whose riotous living and spiritual famine are alike perilous. It is more dangerous when it insensibly absorbs the Church's light than when it piles about it the flaming faggots of persecution.

We meet and sing, "Oh for a closer walk with God!" But we need to sing and strive, also, for a closer walk with one another. The social element in the religion of those primitive and pentecostal disciples was not a mere "forsaking not to assemble themselves together" for public worship. It did not confine itself to what is called, by an oft-times unconscious irony, "social" prayer-meetings. It pervaded all the relations of their common life. They went "breaking bread from house to house." This is a different breaking of bread from that where they are said to have "continued steadfast in the Apostles' doctrine and fellowship and in breaking of bread and in prayers." The allusion here is to the eating of daily meals, and to ordinary social visiting. Their whole domestic and social life was made subservient to their religion. For them to eat was Christ.

The disciples residing at Jerusalem threw open their houses and spread their tables, whether sumptuous or frugal, for their fellow disciples. They practised the grace of hospitality to a degree quite incomprehensible in this day of form and reserve. There was no impatience or complaining on the part of those housewives, and no grudging on the part of the host. And around those tables, I warrant, there was no idle or meddling gossip, no loud or foolish talk. They were a happy and even a merry company, "eating their meat with gladness," and "praising God" with joyful psalms, after supper singing a hymn as Jesus had taught them. It was no cross to talk anywhere about their Saviour, and the mention of His name brought no constraint upon the company, but rather aided the genial flow of conversation.

These disciples "were together" also in being of "one accord." Not always thinking alike, but looking at everything in reference to others, and especially to the welfare of the whole. Where two hearts are full of Christian love, and are asking only "Lord, what will Thou have me to do?" they will find themselves in an agreement which the world knows not of, for the thought of the head is mostly determined by the state of the heart.

They were "together" in the sense of standing shoulder to shoulder, each one feeling himself a soldier in the army of the Lord. It was the sublimest sight, except Calvary, which this world had seen. They had already the esprit de corps of veterans. While they stood up for Jesus they stood up for one another, never uniting with the world to pull down the defences of Zion, or to impair the sacred organization to which they belonged. Knowing that there were enemies enough outside, they suffered no alienations or divisions or backbitings to steal into their camp. Theirs was the charity which thinketh no evil, suffereth long, is not easily provoked and, instead of publishing, "hides the multitude of sins." They tried to be such witnesses for Christ that the world might believe in Him, because His disciples were one as He and the Father were one.

The crucial test of their oneness, and the crowning way in which they "were together," was that they "had all things in common." Many from a distance, who stayed to be instructed in the new religion, found their slender means exhausted; and others living nearer at hand were too poor to give up their time for the needful training in religious things; while others still were deprived of subsistence by persecuting relatives or employers. Consequently, the burden of supporting these fell upon the more wealthy and favored disciples. And the response was as general as it was spontaneous. Barnabas, "the son of consolation," made good his beautiful name by setting the example. He sold his real estate and brought the proceeds to the Apostles, telling them to use it for the Lord's poor. And we may well believe that such men as Nicodemus and Joseph of Arimathea were not slow to follow. They had taken lovingly the body of Jesus and given it an honorable and costly burial. Not less tenderly did they minister to these members of Christ's body, of whom He had said: "Forasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." And not the rich alone, but all who by self-denial could save aught from their own little store, brought it to the common stock. So that there was none among them, who lacked.

These noble, childlike souls never stopped to ask whether the needed amount would not be raised without their individual contribution; nor did they ask whether others were doing their part, nor complain that they were called on for more than their share. They cut such miserable questions short by bringing all they had, and bidding the Apostles to use any or all for Christ, and the more the better. O how our hearts glow with the inspiring spectacle of such generous souls! Our very lungs seem to expand, as if we breathed a better air than the stifled atmosphere of most of our formal and unfraternal churches.

To be sure, we do not happen to be situated precisely as these Jerusalem saints were. In our immediate churches there are usually few who need pecuniary help, and in this favored land there are not many who cannot earn their daily bread. But essential duty never changes. Charity never faileth, though the objects of it may change. We have the poor always with us, as our Lord predicted. There are always those who, if not absolutely destitute, would often be relieved and cheered by a delicate and timely aid, widows' hearts that we can cause to sing for joy, orphans whom we may train for usefulness and perhaps rescue from the ignorance and idleness of the streets, sick-beds beside which we may place the little luxuries which all cannot purchase, young men of piety and talent whom we may assist with an education.

Why, the world is full of "them that have need." From a thousand hospitals and asylums and children's aid societies; from homes of the friendless, the fatherless, the fallen, the old, the sick, and the indigent; and from the ten thousand other places where such ought to be established,—the appeal is constant as the seasons. And are not churches almost everywhere poverty-stricken and Sunday-schools cramped, because the people of God do not devise liberal things for the support of their work? And above all, does not the whole world groan in spiritual penury, entire continents and hemispheres starving for the bread of life?

The secret of this conduct of the primitive disciples was, first, Brotherly Love. They "were of one heart and one soul." They were fused, not frozen, "together." And secondly, they had the spirit of Self-Abnegation. "Neither said any of them, that aught of the things which he possessed was his own." He did not even own himself. Of course, then, he could not own any of those worldly goods which an indulgent God had seen fit to entrust for a season to his stewardship, to be laid out for His ends to the best account. This principle they did not content themselves with vacantly admitting, but practised as a matter of course. And when this special need arose, they came promptly forward with the Lord's money for the Lord's use.

Christ was no more the Saviour of these Pentecostal converts than ours, nor was their salvation any more sweet and wonderful. Neither were Christ's poor and Christ's cause any more imperative or importunate in their claims. And yet are many of us resembling them, even in the most remote and shadowy way? Do we not, in fact, disbelieve in the principle on which they acted, and pride ourselves on being too worldly-wise and level-headed for such a philosophy of divine foolishness and self-abnegation? I have sometimes imagined the Master coming into an average church of our day and saying to each one, as He said to the Young Ruler or as these Pentecostal converts felt that He said to them, "Sell all that thou hast and give to the poor." And I have dreaded the response, lest many should go away sorrowful, or lest He should straightway hear such a babel of excuses and objections as would cause Him to turn away sorrowful from them.

But He does propose this test, and applies it every time our attention is called to the temporal or spiritual needs of mankind. Methinks He comes as Heaven's high sheriff to levy on all our possessions and to sell us out, searching for any part of the price which we have dared to keep back. The church changes into a mystic sales-room, and on the auction block of every heart this great transaction is called up. Around each are swarming the various passions of the soul. Dark forms are there to forbid the sale. Greedy impulses are seeking ever and anon to dart in and bear away some treasured object from the sacrifice. But let us keep these intruders off, and wave high the blood-red banner of the sale, while the divine merchantman goes remorselessly on to dispose of all. Let us not be satisfied till we know that everything is gone, not a jewel or a rag remaining which we still call "our own." Let us not be content till we can say: Lord, take it all. 'Tis a paltry gift for my King and my God, but it is all I have except this heart, and that is Thine already. Gold may be the standard of material values, but it is all too poor to represent my love to Him who sold all that He had for me, and, though He was rich as God, for my sake became poorer than man.

"In a service which Thy love appoints
There are no bonds for me,
For a life of self-renouncing love
Is a life of liberty."

F. N. ZABRISKIE

PRINCETON, N. J., Feb. 9, 1886.

Man-Killers.

IN speaking of "Man-Killers," the United States Government as an employer ought not to be overlooked, for beside the horse-car corporations few employers in the country set so bad an example in long hours for labor as the United States Post-Office, which requires its postal employés, in a representative instance in this city of New York, to be in the office at six o'clock in the morning under a penalty, for a moment's delay, of losing a day's wages, and keeps them busily at work in all weathers (with no overcoat allowed in winter) until nine o'clock at night; a plan of work worthy of a Pharaoh. In addition to this, a night's watch is required once a fortnight, and Sunday work once or twice per month. This oppression is the more culpable when the government has a larger revenue than it knows what to do with, and when the surplus might as well as not be used to increase the number of employés and lessen the hours of labor. There is certainly no reason why our rich government should not as an employer strike the keynote for the nation of eight hours as a laborer's day, that we may, in the not distant future, catch up with Australia in this reform, which has been universally accomplished there, and is annually celebrated as a Laborers' Emancipation Day.

Never was public sentiment apparently so ripe for a movement along the whole line against Man-Killers. Numerous experiments warrant us in the belief that employers would lose nothing and employés gain much by the universal adoption of "the Saturday half holiday," with "early closing" for all other days, combined with prohibition of labor beyond eight hours a day for men, and of all child-labor during the time that should be devoted to growth and education.

PROPERTY.—We wish well to the effort to obtain an international copyright law, but it seems to us that the advocates of the law err in their claim that property in the contents of a book is just like property in any material thing, and that an invasion of the right in either case is simply stealing. They themselves do not act on their own principle, for they ask a copyright for only forty-two years. To be consistent, that is, to maintain their own principle, they should insist upon a perpetual right. If I make a stone, or anything else, valuable by my labor, natural law and the statute make that my property forever. Now if the product of mental labor stands on just the same footing, why should there be any limita tion? To take without leave after forty-two years have elapsed is the same as to take before that period. The argument limps fatally.

Suggestive.

THE FAITHFUL FRIEND.

[Found by a guest at the National Hotel in Atlanta, Ga., written in an old account book.]

In a very humble cot,
In a rather quiet spot,
In the suds and in the soap,
Worked a woman, full of hope,
Working, singing, all alone,
In a sort of undertone:
"With a Saviour for a friend,
He will keep me till the end."

Sometimes, happening along,
I had heard the semi-song,
And I often used to smile,
More in sympathy than guile,
But I never said a word
In regard to what I heard,
As she sang about her Friend,
Who would keep her to the end.

Not in sorrow, nor in glee,
Working all day long was she,
As her children, three or four,
Played around her on the floor,
But, in monotone, the song
She was humming all day long:
"With a Saviour for a friend,
He will keep me to the end."

Just a trifle lonesome she,
Just as poor as poor could be,
But her spirits always rose
Like the bubbles in her clothes;
And, though widowed and alone,
Cheered her with the monotone
Of a Saviour and a friend,
Who would keep her to the end.

I have seen her rub and scrub
On the wash-board in the tub,
While the baby sopped in suds,
Rolled and tumbled in the duds,
Or was paddling in the pools
With old scissors stuck in spools,
She still humming of her Friend,
Who would keep her to the end.

Human hopes and human creeds
Have their root in human needs,
And I would not wish to strip
From that washerwoman's lip
Any song that she can sing,
Any hope that song may bring,
For the woman has a Friend,
Who will keep her to the end. —The Advance.

SUNDAY AND ITS NEWSPAPERS.—Some of the ministers in New York on Sunday discussed Sunday newspapers in a way which has evidently disturbed the editors. Rev. Dr. Parkhurst says "that there is no influence to-day that is operating with greater rapidity to saturate the Sunday air with secularism, and wipe out the distinctions that have hitherto obtained between the one day and the six days, than our Sunday morning newspapers." Rev. Dr. Van Dyke puts the same idea into plainer words, when he speaks of "reducing Sunday to the level of the other days of the week." The underlying question is whether the best interests of society, of home, of all persons who work with their hands, do not require a day of rest, a day devoted to other thoughts, to other acts, to other occupations, moral, mental and physical, than the other days of the week engross. If that is true, then the day should be set off by itself so far as is practicable, and the Sunday newspaper, the sign and token of our working time, violates those best interests.

There is a multitude of people who care nothing for the theological argument, who resent the phrases of the pulpit, who do not discuss moral themes, who are yet at heart anxious for the welfare of the community. They understand well that with an effort to check it, some work must be done on Sunday; to keep churches open, for example, and to provide food and newspapers for Monday morning. The common sense of people is asking, in view of the tendencies against the old-fashioned Sabbath, whether the body and the heart, the spirits and the welfare of the race, do not require the change which the Sabbath of Christianity provides. Relief from the dog-trot of business, from the monotony of secular vocations, from the week's diversions, can only be secured by the complete separation which religious teaching proposes and demands.

The Sunday newspaper, any newspaper, is a close link to the secular week, a heavy weight pressing everything down to the level of the other days. It keeps the mind revolving in the same circle, it forbids any escape from the routine of Monday and of Saturday, it permits the opening of no window into the outer and the upper air. There is a difference in Sunday newspapers. Some are utterably bad and thrive on their evil qualities. The best of them drag Sunday down to the plane of work and worry. They fill the ears with the sound of machinery; the streets are vocal with their cries; the din of toil and strife becomes constant as the moan of the sea. Can there be no distraction from this crazing whirl, from this engrossment with one class of themes?

The question of Sunday newspapers does not relate simply to fifty persons more or less concerned in making and selling them. It touches the families who read them, the pedestrians who have them thrust into their faces, society at large chained to the car of the week's troubles and burdens. To talk about "secularism," has a twang of cant which invites hostility. Thousands and tens of thousands of people want Sunday for a day distinct and separate, and the working millions ought to fortify it as their own, a day of rest, of better clothes and of thoughts apart from the morning's news and the world's strifes.

Great events may befall which engross all minds, Sunday or week day. Battles on which hang the destinies of States, deaths of persons in whom all are interested, accidents, calamities, may justify publication of newspapers, as they unite the community in anxiety, apprehension, sorrow. Those are exceptional cases. The testimony is almost universal, that one begins the week with better spirits, with more elasticity, clearness of brain, and vitality of body, if he makes Sunday a day apart, than if he keeps in the ordinary ruts of thought and reading and action.

Sunday hours vary. The Jewish practice, the old New England habit, began the Sabbath with sundown of the preceding day, and closed it with the set of sun. Not all men can always extend Sunday's rest over twenty-four hours. The rule to devote a seventh of time to occupations entirely different from the routine of the week, has hygiene and reason on its side. Thrift and industry are well, but both are most productive when a day of repose is recognized, as well for communities as for individuals.

The Sunday newspapers boast that they have come to stay. If they have, they have hardened life, have soiled the white lily of the week, have added to the hours and burdens of toil. The ideal Sunday, a day for man, for repose and aspiration, for entire relief from toil and the world's cares, for cheerfulness and hope, is one of the most beautiful conceptions that time permits. The influences are not good which make it just like the other days of the week.—Utica Herald, Feb. 1st.

MEXICO.—At a meeting of the Long Island Historical Society the other day, an instructive and interesting address on the present condition of Mexico was delivered by a gentleman who has recently visited that country. The account which he gave of the wretched state of the inhabitants, suggests an enquiry into the causes of the immense difference between the deprivation of that people and the prosperity of our own. No one who saw the "Mexican Exhibit" at the New Orleans Exposition last year can for a moment suppose that the deplorable poverty of Mexico is due to a lack of natural advantages and resources. In many parts of the country the soil is exceedingly fertile, and there are almost all varieties of climate and productions. It is not the country or the climate, then, that is at fault; nor can it be said that the form of government is chargeable with the existing condition of affairs; for, however faulty the administration of the government may be, the form of it has been closely modelled after that of the United States. Moreover, it must be remembered that in most matters of culture and civilization Mexico began her career, after the Spanish conquest, far in advance of the ruder English colonies to the northward. It is not generally known, perhaps, but it is true that the first book that was printed and published in North America, was printed and published at the City of Mexico; and in other respects Mexico had a long start of the United States. To day she is far behind her Northern neighbor in every respect; and what is more, the difference is constantly growing wider. No doubt the blighting effect of Spanish dominion had something to do with the arrest of Mexican development; but even since she threw off the foreign yoke her condition has hardly improved under the Republic. The country is represented as growing poorer, instead of richer, and the people as becoming more ignorant and depraved instead of more intelligent and enlightened.

In looking for the causes of the comparative poverty of Mexico, and the actual decay of its civilization, it is impossible to avoid the conclusion that the existing condition of affairs is due almost wholly to the influence of the Roman Catholic denomination upon the people of that land. Certainly it has had a fair opportunity to work out its mission in that country. From the time when Hernando Cortes burned Guatemozin, the Diocese of Rome has had exclusive control of the education and civilization of the people. Until very recently, Protestant teachings were not tolerated in any form; and even now it is so persecuted and banned that it is able to make but little progress. The entire population has been for generations under the influence of the Roman hierarchy; and though there has been no little vice and crime, there has been no lack of devotion and "piety." Indeed, so unlimited and unquestioned has that influence been, that it is perfectly fair to say that the Diocese of Rome has in Mexico been able to shape the manners, the morals, the character of the entire Mexican people quite according to her will; and we see what the result is to-day. To say nothing of the low tone of public and private morals, and the undeniable depravity of the religious life of the people, notwithstanding their religious zeal and bigotry, the material and civil condition of Mexico is simply deplorable. No doubt the problem of Mexican civilization has been complicated by the exceedingly complex character of the population. About one-half are Indians of pure blood; the remainder are mostly mongrels, with the exception of about one-fifth of the whole, who are Spaniards. All these elements, however, have been brought completely under the influence of the Roman dominion, have been made perfectly homogeneous in religious and moral culture, and yield to her a uniform and unquestioning obedience. If, therefore, they are contented in their degradation, Rome has made them so, and keeps them so. If ignorance, poverty, and vice are welcome and congenial to them, Rome is at least willing that such should be their case. Nay, it is easily demonstrable that at every step in Mexican history the Bishop of Rome has opposed an organized resistance to all genuine progress and enlightenment, and is still consuming the wealth and paralyzing the energy of the people. Certainly the abject and utter failure of Mexican civilization is nothing less or other than the failure of the Roman religion in that land. Upon a fair field, and with no interference, that religion has failed utterly and disastrously.—The Churchman.

A WORD TO YOUNG MEN.—Water is the strongest drink. It drives mills; it's the drink of lions and horses; and Samson never drank anything else. Let young men be teetotallers if only for economy's sake. The beer money will soon build a house. If what goes into the mash-tub went into the kneading-trough, families would be better fed and better taught. If what is spent in waste were only saved against a rainy day, poor-houses would never be built. The man who spends his money with the publican, and thinks the landlord's bow and "How do ye do, my good fellow?" mean true respect, is a perfect simpleton.

We don't light fires for the herring's comfort, but to roast him. Men do not keep pot-houses for the laborer's good; if they do, they certainly miss their aim. Why, then, should people drink "for the good of the house"? If I spend money for the good of the house, let it be my own—and not the landlord's. It is a bad well into which you must put water; and the beer-house is a bad friend, because it takes your all, and leaves you nothing but headaches.

He who calls those his friends who let him sit and drink by the hour together, is ignorant—very ignorant. Why, red lions and tigers and eagles and vultures are all creatures of prey; and why do so many put themselves within the power of their jaws and talons?

Such as drink and live riotously, and wonder why their faces are so blotchy, and their pockets so bare, would leave off wondering if they had two grains of wisdom. They might as well ask an elm tree for pears as to look to loose habits for health and wealth. Those who go to the public house for happiness climb a tree to find fish. Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

Edelweiss.

RADIANT in the Alpen-glow
As the everlasting snow,
Strong in thy simplicity,
What are mountain storms to thee?
In the sunshine and the cloud,
Often by the tempest bowed,
Peaceful in that awful place
Is thy trustful, upturned face.
In thy sky-home safe thou art,
"Blessed are the pure in heart,"
Edelweiss!

—Marion B. Allen, in Cottage Hearth.

Proem to Genesis:

A Plea for a Fair Trial.

BY THE RIGHT HON. W. E. GLADSTONE, M.P.

VOUS avez une manière si aimable d'annoncer les plus mauvaises nouvelles, qu'elles perdent par là de leurs désagrémens. So wrote, de haut en bas, the Duchess of York to Beau Brummell, sixty or seventy years back; and so write I, de bas en haut, to the two very eminent champions who have in the Nineteenth Century of December entered appearances on behalf of Dr. Réville's Prolégomènes, with a decisiveness of tone, at all events, which admits of no mistake: Professor Huxley and Professor Max Müller. My first duty is to acknowledge in both cases the abundant courtesy and indulgence with which I am personally treated. And my first thought is that, where even disagreement is made in a manner pleasant, it will be a duty to search and see if there be any points of agreement or approximation, which will be more pleasant still. This indulgence and courtesy deserves in the case of Professor Huxley a special warmth of acknowledgment, because, while thus more than liberal to the individual, he has for the class of Reconcilers, in which he places me, an unconcealed and unmeasured scorn. These are they who impose upon man a burden of false science in the name of religion, who dictate as a Divine command "an implicit belief in the cosmogony of Genesis;" and who "stir unwisdom and fanaticism to their depths." Judgments so severe should surely be supported by citation or other evidence, for which I look in vain. To some they might suggest the idea that Passion may sometimes unawares intrude even within the precincts of the temple of Science. But I admit that a great master of his art may well be provoked, when he finds his materials tumbled about by incapable hands, and may mistake for irreverence what is only want of skill.

While acknowledging the great courtesy with which Professor Huxley treats his antagonist individually, and while simply listening to his denunciations of the Reconcilers as one listens to distant thunders, with a sort of sense that after all they will do no great harm, I must presume to animadvert with considerable freedom upon his method; upon the sweeping character of his advocacy; upon his perceptible exaggeration of points in controversy; upon his mode of dealing with authorities; and upon the curious fallacy of substitution by which he enables himself to found the widest proscriptions of the claim of the Book of Genesis to contain a Divine record upon a reasoned impeachment of its scientific accuracy in, as I shall show, a single particular.

As to the first of these topics, nothing can be more equitable than Professor Huxley's intention to intervene as a "science proctor" in that part of the debate raised by M. Réville, "to which he proposes to restrict his observations." This is the part on which he proposes in his first page to report as a student—and every reader will inwardly add, as one of the most eminent among all students—of natural science. Now this is not the cosmogonical part of the account in Genesis. On Genesis 1: 1–19, containing the cosmogony, he does not report as an expert, but refers us to "those who are specially conversant with the sciences involved;" adding his opinion about their opinion. Yet in his second page, without making any reference to this broad distinction, he at once forgets the just limitation of his first, and our "proctor for science" pronounces on M. Réville's estimate, not of the fourfold succession in the stratification of the earth, but of "the account of the Creation given in the Book of Genesis," that its terms are as "respectful as in his judgment they are just." Thus the proctorship for science, justly assumed for matters within his province as a student, is rather hastily extended to matters which he himself declares to be beyond it. In truth it will appear, that as there are many roads to heaven with one ending, so, provided only a man arrives at the conclusion that the great Proem of Genesis lends no support to the argument for Revelation, it does not much matter how he gets there. For in this "just" account of the Creation I have shown that M. Réville supports his accusation of scientific error by three particulars: that in the first he contradicts the judgment of scholars on the sense of the original; in the second he both misquotes (by inadvertence) the terms of the text, and overlooks the distinction made so palpable (if not earlier) half a century ago, by the work of Dr. Buckland, between bara and asa; while the third proceeds on the assumption that there could be no light to produce vegetation except light derived from a visible sun. These three charges constitute the head and front of M. Réville's indictment against the cosmogony; and the fatal flaws in them, without any notice or defence, are now all taken under the mantle of our science proctor, who returns to the charge at the close of his article, and again dismisses with comprehensive honor as "wise and moderate," what he had ushered in as reverent and just. So much for the sweeping, undiscriminating character of an advocacy which, in a scientific writer, we might perhaps have expected to be carefully limited and defined.

I take next the exaggeration which appears to me to mark unhappily Professor Huxley's method. Under this head I include all needless multiplication of points of controversy, whether in the form of overstating differences, or understating agreements, with an adversary.

As I have lived for more than half a century in an atmosphere of contention, my stock of controversial fire has perhaps become abnormally low; while Professor Huxley, who has been inhabiting the Elysian regions of science, the edita doctrinâ sapientûm templa serena, may be enjoying all the freshness of an unjaded appetite. Certainly one of the lessons life has taught me is, that where there is known to be a common object, the pursuit of truth, there should also be a studious desire to interpret the adversary in the best sense his words will fairly bear; to avoid whatever widens the breach; and to make the most of whatever tends to narrow it. These I hold to be part of the laws of knightly tournament.

I do not, therefore, fully understand why Professor Huxley makes it a matter of objection to me that, in rebuking a writer who had treated evolution wholesale as a novelty in the world, I cited a few old instances of moral and historical evolution only, and did not extend my front by examining Indian sages and the founders of Greek philosophy. Nor why, when I have spoken of physical evolution as of a thing to me most acceptable, but not yet in its rigor (to my knowledge) proved, we have only the rather niggardly acknowledgment that I have made "the most oblique admissions of a possible value." Thus it is when agreement is threatened, but far otherwise when differences are to be blazoned. When I have spoken of the succession of orders in the most general terms only, this is declared a sharply divided succession in which the last species of one cannot overlap the first species of another. When I have pleaded on simple grounds of reasoning for the supposition of a substantial correspondence between Genesis 1. and science, have waived all question of a verbal inspiration, all question whether the whole of the statements can now be made good, I am treated as one of those who impose "in the name of religion" as a divine requisition "an implicit belief in the accuracy of the cosmogony of Genesis," and who deserve to have their heads broken in consequence.

I have urged nothing "in the name of religion." I have sought to adduce probable evidence that a guidance more than human lies within the great Proem of the Book of Genesis, just as I might adduce probable evidence to show that Francis did or did not write Junius, that William the Third was or was not responsible for the massacre of Glencoe; I have expressly excepted detail, and have stated that in my inquiry "the authority of Scripture cannot be alleged in proof of a primitive revelation." I object to all these exaggerations of charge, as savoring of the spirit of the Inquisition, and as restraints on literary freedom.

My next observation as to the Professor's method refers to his treatment of authorities.

In one passage Mr. Huxley expresses his regret that I have not named my authority for the statement made concerning the fourfold succession, in order that he might have transferred his attentions from myself to a new delinquent. Now, published works are (as I may show) a fair subject for reference. But as to pointing out any person who might have favored me with his views in private correspondence, I own that I should have some scruple in handing him over to be pilloried as a Reconciler, and to be pelted with charges of unwisdom and fanaticism, which I myself, from long use, am perfectly content to bear.

I did refer to three great and famous names: those of Cuvier, Sir John Herschel, and Whewell. Mr. Huxley speaks of me as having quoted them in support of my case on the fourfold succession; and at the same time notices that I admitted Cuvier not to be a recent authority, which in geology proper is, I believe, nearly equivalent to saying he is, for particulars, no authority at all. This recital is singularly inaccurate. I cited them, not with reference to the fourfold succession, but generally for "the general accordance of the Mosaic cosmogony with the results of modern inquiry," and particularly in connection with the nebular hypothesis. It is the cosmogony (Gen. 1: 1–19), not the fourfold succession, which was the sole object of Réville's attack, and the main object of my defence; and which is the largest portion of the whole subject. Will Mr. Huxley venture to say that Cuvier is an unavailable authority, or that Herschel and Whewell are other than great and venerable names, with reference to the cosmogony? Yet he has quietly set them aside without notice; and they with many more are inclusively bespattered with the charges, which he has launched against the pestilent tribe of Reconcilers.

My fourth and last observation on the "method" of Professor Huxley is that, after discussing a part, and that not the most considerable part, of the Proem of Genesis, he has broadly pronounced upon the whole. This is a mode of reasoning which logic rejects, and which I presume to savor more of license than of science. The fourfold succession is condemned with argument; the cosmogony is thrown into the bargain. True, Mr. Huxley refers in a single sentence to three detached points of it partially touched in my observations. But all my argument, the chief argument of my paper, leads up to the nebular or rotatory hypothesis. This hypothesis, with the authorities cited—of whom one is the author of Vestiges of the Creation—is inclusively condemned, and without a word vouchsafed to it.

I shall presently express my gratitude for the scientific part of Mr. Huxley's paper. But there are two sides to the question. The whole matter at issue is, 1, a comparison between the probable meaning of the Proem to Genesis and the results of cosmological and geological science; 2, the question whether this comparison favors or does not favor the belief that an element of divine knowledge—knowledge which was not accessible to the simple action of the human faculties—is conveyed to us in this Proem. It is not enough to be accurate in one term of a comparison, unless we are accurate in both. A master of English may speak the vilest and most blundering French. I do not think Mr. Huxley has even endeavored to understand what is the idea, what is the intention, which his opponent ascribes to the Mosaic writer; or what is the conception which his opponent forms of the weighty word Revelation. He holds the writer responsible for scientific precision: I look for nothing of the kind, but assign to him a statement general, which admits exceptions; popular, which aims mainly at producing moral impression; summary, which can not but be open to more or less of criticism in detail. He thinks it is a lecture. I think it is a sermon. He describes living creatures by structure. The Mosaic writer describes them by habitat. Both, I suppose, are right. I suppose that description by habitat would be unavailing for the purposes of science. I feel sure that description by structure, such as the geologists supply, would have been unavailing for the purpose of summary teaching with religious aim. Of Revelation I will speak by and by.

In order to institute with profit the comparison, now in view, the very first thing necessary is to determine, so far as the subject matter allows, what it was that the Pentateuchal or Mosaic writer designed to convey to the minds of those for whom he wrote. The case is, in more ways than one, I conceive, the direct reverse of that which the Professor has alleged. It is not bringing Science to be tried at the bar of Religion. It is bringing Religion, so far as it is represented by this part of the Holy Scriptures, to be tried at the bar of Science. The indictment against the Pentateuchal writer is, that he has written what is scientifically untrue. We have to find then, in the first place what it is that he has written, according to the text, not an inerrable text, as it now stands before us.

First, I assume there is no dispute that in Genesis 1: 20–27 he has represented a fourfold sequence or succession of living organisms. Aware of my own inability to define in any tolerable manner the classes of these organisms, I resorted to the general phrases —water population, air population, land population.

The immediate purpose of these phrases was not to correspond with the classifications of Science, but to bring together in brief and convenient form the larger and more varied modes of expression used in verses 20, 21, 24, 25 of the chapter.

I think, however, I have been to blame for having brought into a contact with science, which was not sufficiently defined, terms that have no scientific meaning: water population, air population and (two-fold) land population. I shall now discard them and shall substitute others, which have the double advantage of being used by geologists, and perhaps of expressing better than my phrases what was in the mind of the Mosaic writer. These are the words—1, fishes; 2, birds; 3, mammals; 4, man. By all, I think, it will be felt that the first object is to know what the Pentateuchal writer means. The relation of his meaning to science is essential, but, in orderly argumentation, subsequent. The matter now before us is a matter of reasonable and probable interpretation. What is the proper key to this hermeneutic work? In my opinion it is to be found in a just estimate of the purpose with which the author wrote, and with which the Book of Genesis was, in this part of it, either composed or compiled.

If this be the true point of departure, it opens up a question of extreme interest, at which I have but faintly glanced in my paper, and which is nowhere touched in the reply to me. What proper place has such a composition as the first chapter of Genesis in such a work as the Scriptures of the Old Testament? They are indisputably written with a religious aim; and their subject matter is religious. We may describe this aim in various ways. For the present purpose, suffice it to say they are conversant with belief in God, with inculcation of duties founded on that belief, with history and prophecy obviously having it for their central point. But this chapter, at the least down to verse 25, and perhaps throughout, stands on a different ground. In concise and rapid outline, it traverses a vast region of physics. It is easy to understand St. Paul when he speaks of the world as bearing witness to God. What he said was capable of being verified or tested by the common experimental knowledge of all who heard him. Of it, of our Saviour's mention of the lilies—and may it not be said generally of the references in Scripture to natural knowledge?—they are at once accounted for by the positions in which they stand. But this first chapter of Genesis professes to set out in its own way a large and comprehensive scheme of physical facts: the transition from chaos to kosmos, from the inanimate to life, from life in its lower orders to man. Being knowledge of an order anterior to the creation of Adamic man, it was beyond verification, as being beyond experience. As a physical exposition in miniature, it stands alone in the Sacred Record. And, as this singular composition is solitary in the Bible, so it seems to be hardly less solitary in the sacred books of the world. "The only important resemblance of any ancient cosmogony with the Scriptural account is to be found in the Persian or Zoroastrian;" this Bishop Browne proceeds to account for on the following among other grounds: that Zoroaster was probably brought into contact with the Hebrews, and even perhaps with the prophet Daniel; a supposition which supplies the groundwork of a recent and remarkable romance, not proceeding from a Christian school. Again, the Proem does not carry any Egyptian marks. In the twenty-seven thousand lines of Homer, archaic as they are and ever turning to the past, there is, I think, only one which belongs to physiology. The beautiful sketch of a cosmogony by Ovid seems in considerable degree to follow the Mosaic outline; but it was composed at a time when the treasure of the Hebrew records had been for two centuries imparted, through the Septuagint, to the Aryan nations.

Professor Huxley, if I understand him rightly, considers the Mosaic writer, not, perhaps, as having intended to embrace the whole truth of science in the province of geology, but at least as liable to be convicted of scientific worthlessness if his language will not stand the test of this construction. Thus the "water population" is to include "the innumerable hosts of marine invertebrated animals." It seems to me that these discoveries, taken as a whole, and also taken in all their parts and particulars, do not afford a proper, I mean a rational, standard for the interpretation of the Mosaic writer; that the recent discovery of the Silurian scorpion, a highly organized animal, is of little moment either way to the question now before us; that it is not an account of the extinct species which we should consider the Mosaic writer as intending to convey; that while his words are capable of covering them, as the oikoumenè of the New Testament covers the red and yellow man, the rules of rational construction recommend and require our assigning to them a more limited meaning, which I will presently describe.

Another material point in Professor Huxley's interpretation appears to me to lie altogether beyond the natural force of the words, and to be of an arbitrary character. He includes in it the proposition that the production of the respective orders was effected during each of "three distinct and successive periods of time, and only during those periods of time;" or again, in one of these, "and not at any other of these;" as, in a series of games at chess, one is done before another begins; or, as in a "march past," one regiment goes before another comes. No doubt there may be a degree of literalism which will even suffice to show that, as "every winged fowl" was produced on the fourth day of the Hexaemeron, therefore the birth of new fowls continually is a contradiction to the text of Genesis. But does not the equity of common sense require us to understand simply that the order of "winged fowl," whatever that may mean, took its place in creation at a certain time, and that from that time its various component classes were in course of production? Is it not the fact that in synoptical statements of successive events, distributed in time for the sake of producing easy and clear impressions, general truth is aimed at, and periods are allowed to overlap? If, with such a view, we arrange the schools of Greek philosophy in numerical order, according to the dates of their inception, we do not mean that one expired before another was founded. If the archæologist describes to us as successive in time the ages of stone, bronze and iron, he certainly does not mean that no kinds of stone implement were invented after bronze began, or no kinds of bronze after iron began. When Thucydides said that the ancient limited monarchies were succeeded by tyrannies, he did not mean that all the monarchs died at once and a set of tyrants, like Deucalion's men, rose up and took their places. Woe be, I should say, to any one who tries summarily to present in series the phases of ancient facts, if they are to be judged under the rule of Professor Huxley.

Proceeding, on what I hold to be open ground, to state my own idea of the true key to the meaning of the Mosaic record, I suggest that it was intended to give moral, and not scientific, instruction to those for whom it was written. That for the Adamic race, recent on the earth, and young in faculties, the traditions here incorporated, which were probably far older than the Book, had a natural and a highly moral purpose in conveying to their minds a lively sense of the wise and loving care with which the Almighty Father, who demanded much at their hands, had beforehand given them much, in the provident adaptation of the world to be their dwelling place, and of the created orders for their use and rule. It appears to me that, given the very nature of the Scriptures, this is clearly the rational point of view. If it is so, then, it follows, that just as the tradition described earth, air and heaven in the manner in which they superficially presented themselves to the daily experience of man—not scientifically, but so he spoke of fishes, of birds, of beasts, of what man was most concerned with; and, last in the series, of man himself, largely and generally, as facts of his experience; from which great moral lessons of wonder, gratitude and obedience were to be deduced, to aid him in the great work of his life training.

> The common air, the sun, the skies—

If further proof be wanting, that what the Mosaic writer had in his mind were the creatures with which Adamic man was conversant, we have it in the direct form of verse 28, which gives to man for meat the fruit of every seed-yielding tree, and every seed-yielding herb, and the dominion of every beast, fowl and reptile living. There is here a marked absence of reference to any but the then living species.

This, then, is the key to the meaning of the Book, and of the tradition, if, as I suppose, it was before the Book, which seems to me to offer the most probable, and therefore the rational guide to its interpretation. The question we shall have to face is whether this statement so understood, this majestic and touching lesson of the childhood of Adamic man, stands in such a relation to scientific truth, as far as it is now known, as to give warrant to the inference that the guidance under which it was composed was more than that of faculties merely human, at that stage of development, and likewise of information, which belonged to the childhood of humanity.

We have, then, before us one term of the desired comparison. Let us now turn to the other.

And here my first duty is to render my grateful thanks to Professor Huxley for having corrected my either erroneous or superannuated assumption as to the state of scientific opinion on the second and third terms of the fourfold succession of life. As one probable doctor sufficed to make an opinion probable, so the dissent of this eminent man would of itself overthrow and pulverize my proposition that there was a scientific consensus as to a sequence like that of Genesis in the production of animal life, as between fishes, birds, mammals and man. I shall compare the text of Genesis with geological statements; but shall make no attempt, unless this be an attempt, to profit by a consensus of geologists.

I suppose it to be admitted on all hands that no perfectly comprehensive and complete correspondence can be established between the terms of the Mosaic text and modern discovery. No one, for instance, could conclude from it that which appears to be generally recognized, that a great reptile age would be revealed by the mesozoic rocks.

Yet I think readers, who have been swept away by the torrent of Mr. Huxley's denunciations, will feel some surprise when, on drawing summarily into line the main allegations, and especially this ruling order of the Proem, they see how small a part of them is brought into question by Mr. Huxley, and to how large an extent they are favored by the tendencies, presumptions, and even conclusions of scientific inquiry.

First, as to the cosmogony, or the formation of the earth and the heavenly bodies—

1. The first operation recorded in Genesis appears to be the formation of light. It is detached, apparently, from the waste or formless elemental mass (verses 2–5), which is left relatively dark by its withdrawal.

2. Next we hear of the existence of vapor, and of its condensation into water on the surface of the earth (verses 6–10). Vegetation subsequently begins: but this belongs rather to geology than to cosmogony (verses 11, 12).

3. In a new period the heavenly bodies are declared to be fully formed and visible, dividing the day from the night (verses 14–18).

Under the guidance particularly of Dr. Whewell, I have referred to the nebular hypothesis as confirmatory of this account.

Mr. Huxley has not either denied the hypothesis or argued against it. But I turn to Phillips's Manual of Geology, edited and adapted by Mr. Seeley and Mr. Etheridge (1885). It has a section in Vol. I. (pp. 15–19) on "Modern Speculations Concerning the Origin of the Earth."

The first agent here noticed as contributing to the work of production is the "gas hydrogen in a burning state," which now forms the enveloping portion of the sun's atmosphere; whence we are told the inference arises that the earth also was once "incandescent at its surface," and that its rocks may have been "products of combustion." Is not this representation of light with heat for its ally, as the first element in this speculation, remarkably accordant with the opening of the Proem to Genesis?

Next it appears (ibid.) that "the product of this combustion is vapor," which with diminished heat condenses into water, and eventually accumulates "in depressions on the sun's surface so as to form oceans and seas." "It is at least probable that the earth has passed through a phase of this kind" (ibid.). "The other planets are apparently more or less like the earth in possessing atmospheres and seas." Is there not here a remarkable concurrence with the second great act of the cosmogony?"

Plainly, as I suppose it is agreeable to these suppositions that, as vapor gradually passes into water, and the atmosphere is cleared, the full adaptation of sun and moon by visibility for their functions should come in due sequence, as it comes in Gen. 1: 14–18.

Pursuing its subject, the Manual proceeds (p. 17): "This consideration leads up to what has been called the nebular hypothesis," which "supposes that, before the stars existed, the materials of which they consist were diffused in the heavens in a state of vapor" (ibid.). The text then proceeds to describe how local centres of condensation might throw off rings, these rings break into planets, and the planets, under conditions of sufficient force, repeat the process, and thus produce satellites like those of Saturn, or like the Moon.

I therefore think that, so far as cosmogony is concerned, the effect of Mr. Huxley's paper is not by any means to leave it as it was, but to leave it materially fortified by the Manual of Geology, which I understand to be a standard of authority at the present time.

Turning now to the region of that science, I understand the main statements of Genesis, in successive order of time, but without any measurement of its divisions, to be as follows:

1. A period of land, anterior to all life (verses 9, 10).

2. A period of vegetable life, anterior to animal life (verses 11, 12).

3. A period of animal life, in the order of fishes (verse 20).

4. Another stage of animal life, in the order of birds.

5. Another, in the order of beasts (verses 24, 25).

6. Last of all, man (verses 26, 27).

Here is a chain of six links, attached to a previous chain of three. And I think it not a little remarkable that of this entire succession, the only step directly challenged is that of numbers four and five, which Mr. Huxley is inclined rather to reverse. He admits distinctly the seniority of fishes. How came that seniority to be set down here? He admits as probable upon present knowledge, in the person of Homo sapiens, the juniority of man. How came this juniority to be set down here? He proceeds indeed to describe an opposite opinion concerning man as holding exactly the same rank as the one to which he had given an apparent sanction. As I do not precisely understand the bearing of the terms he uses, I pass them by, and I shall take the liberty of referring presently to the latest authorities, which he has himself suggested that I should consult. But I add to the questions I have just put this other inquiry. How came the Mosaic writer to place the fishes and the men in their true relative positions not only to one another, and not only to the rest of the animal succession, but in a definite and that a true relation of time to the origin of the first plant life, and to the colossal operations by which the earth was fitted for them all? Mr. Huxley knows very well that it would be in the highest degree irrational to ascribe this correct distribution to the doctrine of chances; nor will the stone of Sisyphus of itself constitute a sufficient answer to inquiries which are founded, not upon a fanciful attempt to equate every word of the Proem with every dictum of science, but upon those principles of probable reasoning by which all rational lives are and must be guided.

I find the latest published authority on geology in the Second or Mr. Etheridge's volume of the Manual of Professor Phillips, and by this I will now proceed to test the sixfold series which I have ventured upon presenting.

First, however, looking back for a moment to a work,* obviously of the highest authority, on the geology of its day, I find in it a table of the order of appearance of animal life upon the earth, which, beginning with the oldest, gives us—

1. Invertebrates
2. Fishes
3. Reptiles
4. Birds
5. Mammals
6. Man.

I omit all reference to specifications and speak only of the principal lines of division.

In the Phillips–Etheridge Manual, beginning as before with the oldest, I find the following arrangement, given partly by statement and partly by diagram.

1. "The Azoic or Archæan time of Dana;" called Pre-Cambrian by other physicists.

2. A commencement of plant life indicated by Dana as anterior to invertebrate animal life; long anterior to the vertebrate forms, which alone are mentioned in Genesis.

3. Three periods of invertebrate life.

4. Age of fishes.

5. Age of reptiles.

6. Age of mammals, much less remote.

7. Age of man, much less remote than mammals.

As to birds, though they have not a distinct and separate age assigned them, the Manual supplies us very clearly with their place in "the succession of animal life." We are here furnished with the following series, after the fishes: 1. Fossil reptiles; 2. Ornithosauria—they were "flying animals, which combined the characters of reptiles with those of birds;" 3. The first birds of the secondary rocks with "feathers in all respects similar to those of existing birds;" 4. Mammals.

I have been permitted to see in proof another statement from an authority still more recent, Professor Prestwich, which is now passing through the press. In it I find the following seniority assigned to the orders which I here name:

1. Plants (cryptogamous)
2. Fishes
3. Birds
4. Mammals
5. Man.

It will now, I hope, be observed that, according to the probable intention of the Mosaic writer, these five orders enumerated by him correspond with the state of geological knowledge, presented to us by the most recent authorities, in this sense; that the origins of these orders respectively have the same succession as is assigned in Genesis to those representatives of the orders, which alone were probably known to the experience of Adamic man. My fourfold succession thus grows into a fivefold one. By placing before the first plant life the azoic period, it becomes sixfold. And again by placing before this the principal stages of the cosmogony, it becomes, according as they are stated, nine or tenfold; every portion holding the place most agreeable to modern hypothesis and modern science respectively.

I now notice the points in which, so far as I understand, the text of the Proem, as it stands, is either incomplete or at variance with the representations of science.

1. It does not notice the great periods of invertebrate life standing between 1 and 2 of my last enumeration.

2. It also passes by the great age of Reptiles, with their antecessors the Amphibia, which come between 2 and 3. The secondary or Mesozoic period, says the Manual, "has often been termed the age of Reptiles."

3. It mentions plants in terms which, as I understand from Professor Huxley and otherwise, correspond with the later, not the earlier, forms of plant life.

4. It mentions reptiles in the same category with its mammals.

Now, as regards the first two heads, these omissions, enormous with reference to the scientific record, are completely in harmony with the probable aim of the Mosaic writer, as embracing only the formation of the objects and creatures with which early man was conversant. The introduction of these orders, invisible and unknown, would have been not agreeable, but injurious, to his purpose.

As respects the third, it will strike the reader of the Proem that plant life (verses 11, 12) is mentioned with a particularity which is not found in the accounts of the living orders; nor in the second notice of the Creation, which appears, indeed, pretty distinctly to refer to recent plant life (Gen. 2: 5, 8, 9). Questions have been raised as to the translation of these passages, which I am not able to solve. But I bear in mind the difficulties which attend both oral traditions and the conservation of ancient MS., and I am not in any way troubled by the discrepancy before us, if it be a discrepancy, as it is the general structure and effect of the Mosaic statement on which I take my stand.

With regard to reptiles, while I should also hold by my last remark, the case is different. They appear to be mentioned as contemporary with mammals, whereas they are of prior origin. But the relative significance of the several orders evidently affected the method of the Mosaic writer. Agreeably to this idea, insects are not named at all. So reptiles were a family fallen from greatness; instead of stamping on a great period of life its leading character, they merely skulked upon the earth. They are introduced, as will appear better from the LXX. than from the A.V. or R.V., as a sort of appendage to mammals. Lying outside both the use and the dominion of man, and far less within his probable notice, they are not wholly omitted like insects, but treated apparently in a loose manner as not one of the main features of the picture which the writer meant to draw. In the Song of the Three Children, where the four principal orders are recited after the series in Genesis, reptiles are dropped altogether, which suggests either that the present text is unsound, or, perhaps more probably, that they were deemed a secondary and insignificant part of it. But, however this case may be regarded, of course I cannot draw from it any support to my general contention.

I distinguish, then, in the broadest manner, between Professor Huxley's exposition of certain facts of science, and his treatment of the Book of Genesis. I accept the first, with the reverence due to a great teacher from the meanest of his hearers, as a needed correction to myself, and a valuable instruction for the world. But, subject to that correction, I adhere to my proposition respecting the fourfold succession in the Proem; which further I extend to a fivefold succession respecting life, and to the great stages of the cosmogony to boot. The five origins, or first appearances of plants, fishes, birds, mammals and man, are given to us in Genesis in the order of succession, in which they are also given by the latest geological authorities.

It is, therefore, by attaching to words a sense they were never meant to bear, and by this only, that Mr. Huxley establishes the parallels (so to speak), from which he works his heavy artillery. Land population is a phrase meant by me to describe the idea of the Mosaic writer, which I conceive to be that of the animals familiarly known to early man. But, by treating this as a scientific phrase, it is made to include extinct reptiles, which I understand Mr. Huxley to treat as being land animals; as, by taking birds of a very high formation, it may be held that mammal forms existed before such birds were produced. These are artificial contradictions, set up by altering in its essence one of the two things which it is sought to compare.

If I am asked whether I contend for the absolute accordance of the Mosaic writer, as interpreted by me, with the facts and presumptions of science, as I have endeavored to extract them from the best authorities, I answer that I have not endeavored to show either that any accordance has been demonstrated, or that more than a substantial accordance—an accordance in principal relevant particulars—is to be accepted as shown by probable evidence.

In the cosmogony of the Proem, which stands on a distinct footing as lying wholly beyond the experience of primitive man, I am not aware that any serious flaw is alleged; but the nebular hypothesis with which it is compared appears to be, perhaps from the necessity of the case, no more than a theory; a theory, however, long discussed, much favored, and widely accepted in the scientific world.

In the geological part, we are liable to those modifications or displacements of testimony which the future progress of the science may produce. In this view its testimony does not in strictness pass, I suppose, out of the category of probable into that of demonstrative evidence. Yet it can hardly be supposed that careful researches, and reasonings strictly adjusted to method, both continued through some generations, have not in a large measure produced what has the character of real knowledge. With that real knowledge the reader will now have seen how far I claim for the Proem to Genesis, fairly tried, to be in real and most striking accordance.

And this brings me to the point at which I have to observe that Mr. Huxley, I think, has not mastered, and probably has not tried to master, the idea of his opponent as to what it is that is essentially embraced in the idea of a Divine revelation to man.

So far as I am aware, there is no definition, properly so called, of revelation either contained in Scripture or established by the general and permanent consent of Christians. In a word polemically used, of indeterminate or variable sense, Professor Huxley has no title to impute to his opponent, without inquiry, anything more than it must of necessity convey.

But he seems to assume that revelation is to be conceived of as if it were a lawyer's parchment, or a sum in arithmetic, wherein a flaw discovered at a particular point is ipso facto fatal to the whole. Very little reflection would show Professor Huxley that there may be those who find evidences of the communication of Divine knowledge in the Proem to Genesis as they read it in their Bibles, without approaching to any such conception. There is the uncertainty of translation; translators are not inspired. There is the difficulty of transcription; transcribers are not inspired, and an element of error is inseparable from the work of a series of copyists. How this works in the long courses of time we see in the varying texts of the Old Testament, with rival claims not easy to adjust. Thus the authors of the recent Revision have had to choose in the Massoretic text itself between different readings, and "in exceptional cases" have given a preference to the Ancient Versions. Thus, upon practical grounds quite apart from the higher questions concerning the original composition, we seem at once to find a human element in the sacred text. That there is a further and larger question, not shut out from the view even of the most convinced and sincere believers, Mr. Huxley may perceive by reading, for example, Coleridge's Confessions of an Inquiring Spirit. The question whether this Proem bears witness to a Divine communication, to a working beyond that of merely human faculties in the composition of the Scriptures, is essentially one for the disciples of Bishop Butler; a question, not of demonstrative, but of probable evidence. I am not prepared to abandon, but rather to defend, the following proposition. It is perfectly conceivable that a document penned by the human hand, and transmitted by human means, may contain matter questionable, uncertain, or even mistaken, and yet may by its contents as a whole present such πίστεις, such moral proofs of truth divinely imparted, as ought irrefragably pro tanto to command assent and govern practice. A man may possibly admit something not reconciled, and yet may be what Mr. Huxley denounces as a Reconciler.

* Palæontology, by Richard Owen.

I do not suppose it would be feasible, even for Professor Huxley, taking the nebular hypothesis and geological discovery for his guides, to give, in the compass of the first twenty-seven verses of Genesis, an account of the cosmogony, and of the succession of life in the stratification of the earth, which would combine scientific precision of statement with the majesty, the simplicity, the intelligibility, and the impressiveness of the record before us. Let me modestly call it, for argument's sake, an approximation to the present presumptions and conclusions of science. Let me assume that the statement in the text as to plants, and the statement of verses 24, 25 as to reptiles, cannot in all points be sustained; and yet still there remain great unshaken facts to be weighed. First, the fact that such a record should have been made at all. Secondly, the fact that, instead of dwelling in generalities, it has placed itself under the severe conditions of a chronological order, reaching from the first nisus of chaotic matter to the consummated production of a fair and goodly, a furnished and a peopled world. Thirdly, the fact that its cosmogony seems, in the light of the nineteenth century, to draw more and more of countenance from the best natural philosophy; and fourthly, that it has described the successive origins of the five great categories of present life, with which human experience was and is conversant, in that order which geological authority confirms. How came these things to be? How came they to be, not among Accadians, or Assyrians, or Egyptians, who monopolized the stores of human knowledge when this wonderful tradition was born; but among the obscure records of a people who, dwelling in Palestine for twelve hundred years from their sojourn in the valley of the Nile, hardly had force to stamp even so much as their name upon the history of the world at large, and only then began to be admitted to the general communion of mankind when their Scriptures assumed the dress which a Gentile tongue was needed to supply? It is more rational, I contend, to say that these astonishing anticipations were a God given supply, than to suppose that a race, who fell uniformly and entirely short of the great intellectual development of antiquity, should here not only have equalled and outstripped it, but have entirely transcended, in kind even more than in degree, all known exercise of human faculties.

Whether this was knowledge conveyed to the mind of the Mosaic author, I do not presume to determine. There has been, in the belief of Christians, a profound providential purpose, little or variously visible to us, which presided, from Genesis to the Apocalypse, over the formation of the marvellous compound, which we term the Holy Scriptures. This we wonderingly embrace without being much perplexed by the questions which are raised on them; for instance, by the question, In what exact relation the books of the Apocrypha, sometimes termed deutero-canonical, stand to the books of the Hebrew Canon. Difficulties of detail, such as may (or ultimately may not) be found to exist in the Proem to Genesis, have much the same relation to the evidence of revealed knowledge in this record, as the spots in the sun to his all unfolding and sufficing light. But as to the Mosaic writer himself, all I presume to accept is the fact that he put upon undying record, in this portion of his work, a series of particulars which, interpreted in the growing light of modern knowledge, require from us, on the whole, as reasonable men, the admission that we do not see how he could have written them, and that in all likelihood he did not write them, without aid from the guidance of a more than human power. It is in this guidance, and not necessarily or uniformly in the consciousness of the writer, that, according to my poor conception, the idea of Revelation mainly lies.

And now one word on the subject of Evolution. I cannot follow Mr. Huxley in his minute acquaintance with Indian sages, and I am not aware that Evolution has a place in the greater number of the schools of Greek philosophy. Nor can I comprehend the rapidity with which persons of authority have come to treat the Darwinian hypothesis as having reached the final stage of demonstration. To the eye of a looker on their pace and method seem rather too much like a steeplechase. But this may very well be due to their want of appropriate knowledge and habits of thought. For myself, in my loose and unformed way of looking at Evolution, I feel only too much biassed in its favor, by what I conceive to be its relation to the great argument of design.

Not that I share the horror with which some men of science appear to contemplate a multitude of what they term "sudden" acts of creation. All things considered, a singular expression: but one, I suppose, meaning the act which produces, in the region of nature, something not related by an unbroken succession of measured and equable stages to what has gone before it. But what has equality or brevity of stage to do with the question how far the act is creative? I fail to see, or indeed am somewhat disposed to deny, that the short stage is less creative than the long, the single than the manifold, the equable than the jointed or graduated stage. Evolution is, to me, series with development. And like series in mathematics, whether arithmetical or geometrical, it establishes in things an unbroken progression; it places each thing (if only it stand the test of ability to live) in a distinct relation to every other thing, and makes each a witness to all that have preceded it, a prophecy of all that are to follow it. It gives to the argument of design, now called the teleological argument, at once a wider expansion, and an augmented tenacity and solidity of tissue. But I must proceed.

I find Mr. Huxley asserting that the things of science, with which he is so splendidly conversant, are "susceptible of clear intellectual comprehension." Is this rhetoric, or is it a formula of philosophy? If the latter, will it bear examination? He preëminently understands the relations between those things which Nature offers to his view; but does he understand each thing in itself, or how the last term but one in an evolutional series passes into and becomes the last? The seed may produce the tree, the tree the branch, the branch the twig, the twig the leaf or flower; but can we understand the slightest mutation or growth of Nature in itself? can we tell how the twig passes into leaf or flower, one jot more than if the flower or leaf, instead of coming from the twig, came directly from the tree or from the seed?

I cannot but trace some signs of haste in Professor Huxley's assertion that, outside the province of science, we have only imagination, hope and ignorance. Not, as we shall presently see, that he is one of those who rob mankind of the best and highest of their inheritance, by denying the reality of all but material objects. But the statement is surely open to objection, as omitting or seeming to omit from view the vast fields of knowledge only probable, which are not of mere hope, nor of mere imagination, nor of mere ignorance; which include alike the inward and the outward life of man; within which lie the real instruments of his training, and where he is to learn how to think, to act, to be.

I will now proceed to notice briefly the last page of Professor Huxley's paper, in which he drops the scientist and becomes simply the man. I read it with deep interest, and with no small sympathy. In touching upon it, I shall make no reference (let him forgive me the expression) to his "damnatory clauses," or to his harmless menace, so deftly conveyed through the Prophet Micah, to the public peace.

The exaltation of Religion as against Theology is at the present day not only so fashionable, but usually so domineering and contemptuous, that I am grateful to Professor Huxley for his frank statement that Theology is a branch of science; nor do I in the smallest degree quarrel with his contention that Religion and Theology ought not to be confounded. We may have a great deal of Religion with very little Theology; and a great deal of Theology with very little Religion. I feel sure that Professor Huxley must observe with pleasure how strongly practical, ethical and social is the general tenor of the three synoptic Gospels; and how the appearance in the world of the great doctrinal Gospel was reserved to a later stage, as if to meet a later need, when men had been toned anew by the morality and, above all, by the life of our Lord.

I am not, therefore, writing against him, when I remark upon the habit of treating Theology with an affectation of contempt. It is nothing better, I believe, than a mere fashion; having no more reference to permanent principle than the mass of ephemeral fashions that come from Paris have with the immovable types of Beauty. Those who take for the burden of their song "Respect Religion, but despise Theology," seem to me just as rational as if a person were to say "Admire the trees, the plants, the flowers, the sun, moon, or stars, but despise Botany and despise Astronomy." Theology is ordered knowledge; representing in the region of the intellect what religion represents in the heart and life of man. And this religion, Mr. Huxley says a little further on, is summed up in the terms of the Prophet Micah (6: 8): "Do justly, and love mercy, and walk humbly with thy God." I forbear to inquire whether every addition to this—such, for instance, as the Beatitudes—is to be proscribed. But I will not dispute that in these words is conveyed the true ideal of religious discipline and attainment. They really import that identification of the will which is set out with such wonderful force in the very simple words of the Paradiso—

In la sua volontade è nostra pace, and which no one has more beautifully described than (I think) Charles Lamb: "He gave his heart to the Purifier, his will to the Will that governs the universe." It may be we shall find that Christianity itself is in some sort a scaffolding, and that the final building is a pure and perfect theism: when the kingdom shall be "delivered up to God," "that God may be all in all." Still, I cannot help being struck with an impression that Mr. Huxley appears to cite these terms of Micah, as if they reduced the work of religion from a difficult to a very easy performance. But look at them again. Examine them well. They are, in truth, in Cowper's words—

Higher than the heights above,
Deeper than the depths beneath.

Do justly, that is to say, extinguish self; love mercy, cut utterly away all the pride and wrath, and all the cupidity, that make this fair world a wilderness; walk humbly with thy God, take His will and set it in the place where thine own was used to rule. "Ring out the old, ring in the new." Pluck down the tyrant from his place; set up the true Master on His lawful throne.

There are certainly human beings, of happy composition, who mount these airy heights with elastic step, and with unbated breath.

Sponte suâ, sine lege, fidem rectumque colebat.

This comparative refinement of nature in some may even lead them to undervalue the stores of that rich armory, which Christianity has provided to equip us for our great life battle. The text of the Prophet Micah, developed into all the breadth of St. Paul and St. Augustine, is not too much—is it not often all too little?—for the needs of ordinary men.—Nineteenth Century, January.

More About Gas Wells.

THE interest elicited by the brief allusions to gas wells in my communication of January 21st warrants a few additional facts. As to the absence of odor, my statement should have been limited to the Western Pennsylvania field. The gas recently found in Western Ohio is odorous enough for all practical purposes. The Pennsylvania gas, coming from the sandstones and shales of the Lower Coal Measures and the Devonian strata immediately below, doubtless originates largely from vegetable decomposition, and contains as high as 67 per cent of so-called marsh gas and 22 per cent of free hydrogen. This composition gives it great heating, but poor illuminating, qualities. The gas recently found in such quantities at Findlay, Ohio, is from a much lower geological horizon, and its discovery in that locality has been a perfect surprise to the geologists. There the gas occurs in the Lower Silurian limestones, and is probably of animal origin.

The quantity of gas produced in some of these wells is perfectly astounding. The well which was struck at Findlay on the 21st of January is estimated by competent authorities to produce a daily flow of 40,000,000 cubic feet of gas. The terrific roaring of the escaping gas can be heard for a distance of five miles. The pressure here has not been estimated. The highest pressure yet measured was in a well in Western Pennsylvania, where it was 750 pounds to the square inch. The average pressure in the Pittsburg district is at the wells from 100 to 200 pounds to the square inch. The pressure in the pipes nine miles away is from 60 to 75 pounds to the square inch. The pressure in ordinary gas pipes is from two to five pounds to a square inch; and in a locomotive it rarely ranges above 125 pounds to the square inch.

The heating power of a thousand cubic feet of natural gas is equivalent to about 55 pounds of average Pittsburg bituminous coal. In September last it was estimated that in Pittsburg alone 1,500 dwellings, 66 glass factories, 34 rolling mills and 45 other industrial establishments were being supplied with natural gas, and that about 10,000 tons of coal are thereby displaced daily. The value of the coal supplanted by natural gas in 1884 is estimated at one and a half millions of dollars, which must have been greatly increased in 1885, and is likely to be increased in still greater ratio the present year.—Prof. G. F. Wright, of Oberlin, in The Congregationalist.

Our Contributors.

Sympathy.

BY REV. W. W. HALLOWAY, JR.

OF all the gentler feelings,
Not one appears to me
So fraught with holy promptings,
So sweet as Sympathy.

Some rule more absolutely,
Some urge to grander deed,
But none like this is fitted
To soothe in hours of need.

We long for it in sorrow
As parchèd lips will ache
For cooling draughts of water,
Their fevered thirst to slake.

No earthly love is perfect
Without its presence felt,
But they are one whose spirits
O'er mutual loss have knelt.

Oh, sweet and strange affection!
Oh, strong and subtle tie!
It cannot heal one wounding
Nor give those back who die,

And yet our life without it,
Would be a weary waste,
And every cup of anguish
Twice bitter to the taste.

DOVER, N. J.

The Heretic Priest; A Tale of Reformation Days in the Netherlands.

(Translated from the Dutch of E. Gerdes, for the Christian Intelligencer, by Rev. Daniel Van Pelt.)

CHAPTER VII.—THE BROTHERS UNITED.

WHEN our friend the ferryman, Peter Kremsen by name, had seen the peasant's wagon depart and vanish in the darkness, assured that his friends were in safe hands, he returned to his boat. He consoled himself, as he was crossing, with the thought of speedy rest after so much exposure and toil. But he was doomed to disappointment.

He had scarcely reached home, and had but just sat down by a lusty fire, at which he wished to dry his clothes before retiring, when a soft knock was heard at the door. He arose and called: "Who is there?"

But there was no answer. Peter therefore concluded that he had mistaken the sound, and that it was perhaps the wind which had shaken one of the shutters. But he had no sooner resumed his seat than the knocking was repeated. There was no mistaking it now. He opened a little window to see who had come to disturb him now. He did not recognize the person who stood before his door, but he could dimly see through the darkness that he carried something on his shoulder. He inquired:

"Who is there and what is wanted?"

"Here's a soldier who seems almost drowned. Won't you help me try and revive him," answered a voice out of the darkness.

The humane boatman immediately closed the window and opened the door. The stranger entered, bearing the dripping and unconscious form of a soldier. But as soon as the visitor came near the bright glow of the wood fire blazing upon the hearth, Peter recognized at once the man whom he had seen on the road to Weersbeek, poorly disguised as an aged dealer in sacred images. Floris had told him that this was none other than the brother of the parish priest. He therefore remarked in a casual way:

"How much you resemble the pastor of Weersbeek."

"Do you think so?" replied the young man, with an effort to appear unconcerned.

"Yes. And it also seems to me that your brown hair is very much like that which I saw partially concealed by a gray wig some one wore this afternoon."

The stranger said nothing, but cast a quick, sidelong glance at the countenance of his interviewer, as if he would read his purpose in speaking thus to him.

"While I was ferrying Father Josephus over this evening, on his way to Mechlin, he told me that he was on the track of a certain Philip Cruize, who, as well as the priest's brother, Herman Van der Woude, was to-day at the parsonage. Are you acquainted with either of these?"

The stranger now advanced and confronted Peter Kremsem, and said with an air of deep dejection:

"You would not torment me with these questions if you were not perfectly sure who I am. Know then, that I am, as you conjecture, this Herman Van der Woude. If Granvelle's spies are in the neighborhood of this house, call them in and betray me. I am persecuted on all sides; I can find no way of escape. I yield to God's providences. His will be done!"

And the same Herman Van der Woude, brave and proud as a lion in his might only a few hours ago, now, utterly crushed beneath the sense of a relentless persecution which he could not escape, sank upon a stool in the weakness of despair and buried his face in his hands.

The boatman touched him on the shoulder, took from his pocket some of the slips of paper covered with Scripture texts which Floris had given him at parting, and read by the light of the fire:

"Let us run with patience the race set before us, looking unto Jesus, the Author and Finisher of our faith, who for the joy set before Him endured the cross, despising the shame."

The despondent youth seemed electrified by the hearing of these words at a moment like this and from so unexpected a source. He sprang to his feet, grasped our friend Peter by the arm, and cried out excitedly:

"How did you come to know these words? Are not you the monastery's ferryman, and thus in the service of those who seek to exterminate with fire and sword all those who love and read God's Word?"

"I found these words written upon one of a number of slips of paper presented to me by a young man who—"

"What is his name? Floris Berthem, my brother's pupil?"

"The same. He has cast in his lot with the Reformed. He was in the study when you met your brother, and the words you spoke were blessed to his conversion. He is now, I have every reason to believe, in safety, together with his uncle, Philip Cruize."

"With Philip Cruize?" said Herman. "I sought him everywhere, but in vain. Tell me all that has happened."

While the boatman related to Van der Woude the events of the night which we already know, they directed their attention to the soldier, removing his clothes and drying them before the fire. It seemed, however, that the poor fellow had really perished in the water, for every effort to bring him to life remained wholly fruitless. Herman in turn told how he had taken the road to Louvain, but learning that a detachment of soldiers was on their way to Weersbeek by that road, he had turned aside, intending to cross the River Dyle. But here, too, he heard rumors of approaching troops. He now retraced his steps towards the Demer river, leaving Weersbeek far to the East, hoping to find a chance to cross that river and thus by a circuitous route reach Berthem village. Arrived at the river's edge, he had perceived this soldier's body lying partially in the water, almost at his very feet. He lifted him out, and in the hope of saving a life, he had dragged him as well as he could to the ferryman's house.

The two men now seriously considered what was next to be done. The first thing that naturally suggested itself was that Herman should clothe himself in the soldier's uniform. Then in this disguise, which would be the least likely to awaken suspicion, he could safely venture to join himself to Philip Cruize and Floris. Kremsen, in the meantime, would bury the corpse, which they had carried to an adjoining barn, and remove all traces of the exchange of clothing. Having fixed upon these plans they sat down for a few moments' rest before the oarsman should take Herman across the river.

They had not long been seated when the sound of several approaching steps was heard. Kremsen and his guest sprang to their feet to ascertain what this might mean, but almost immediately a strong hand beat upon the door and the command rung out in an accent half Spanish, half Flemish:

"Ferryman, row us over!"

"What do you wish, my friends," replied the latter, opening the little window. "How came you to be so late?"

The moon now shone brightly, and by its light he not only saw that this was a party of soldiers, some three or four in number, under command of an officer, who had addressed him, but he could hardly suppress an outcry of surprise when he saw who the prisoner was whom they were conducting. It was none other than the priest of Weersbeek, his hands bound upon his back; involuntarily, and scarce knowing what he said, the boatman repeated his former query: "What do you wish, friends?"

The officer uttered a frightful curse, and said: "Are you deaf? We want to cross the river. We have taken this accursed heretic prisoner, and must get to Mechlin by way of Bontersem and Louvain. Be quick, therefore, or we will burn this wretched hovel of yours over your head."

A happy thought now struck the quick-witted boatman.

"Don't be so hasty, officer. I must have a little time to get ready. But I have a piece of good luck in store for you. There's a soldier who has lost his way inside. He'll like nothing better than to go along with you, and you need more men to guard your prisoner. What do you say to that?"

The officer, much mollified by this good news, quickly responded:

"Where is he? We'll give him employment at once. Quick, open your door, and out with you both!"

The boatman closed the window. Herman Van der Woude had not been slow to take the hint conveyed to himself by the suggestion to the officer. Peter hurriedly whispered in his ear:

"The prisoner is your brother. You heard you were to help guard him. Don't forget to induce the officer to stop at the first farm house as you enter Bontersem." Then taking a pistol from a closet, he gave it to his friend, bidding him to secrete it. All this was but the work of a moment. Opening the door he called out cheerily:

"Here, officer, is the soldier."

The officer gave his new recruit one quick but sharp glance, which seemed to satisfy him; at least, he suspected nothing, and charged him at once with the care of the prisoner. Meanwhile Peter Kremsen had got his boat in readiness; the officer ordered his men to embark, directing Herman to assist the prisoner, who had at once recognized his brother but had carefully refrained from the least expression of astonishment.

And how had the worthy priest came to these straits? True to the words he had repeated more than once both to his brother and to Floris, he had done as he felt convinced would be pleasing to God. We left him prostrate in prayer before Him, after his pupil's departure from the oratory. That prayer was heard. The strife of conflicting feelings was taken away. All became peace. He resolved to forsake his errors, to take an open stand for the pure and undefiled Gospel. To this end he made a few hasty preparations to leave the parsonage, and determined, if possible, to overtake Floris.

At that very moment, however, his house was being surrounded by soldiers, the minions of the Inquisition. As he stepped forth, Bible in hand, to carry out his purpose, he was seized and bound. Sister Brigitta wailed and lamented, but, it need not be said, without creating a diversion in favor of her beloved master. Brutal maledictions and exasperating accusations were hurled at him, but he remained quietly submissive. Hard was the way of God with him. But in the midst of his misfortunes he gained strength from the conviction that since he had followed the leadings of God's Spirit his heavenly Father would not forsake him; nay, not even at the stake. Was it not already a sign of God's providing care, that he had encountered his brother under circumstances so remarkable? God had sent Herman to him, and it was perhaps the earnest of deliverance.

(To be continued.)

Hebrew in Our Colleges Once More.

BY REV. N. M. STEFFENS, D.D.

PROF. LANSING in his article, "Prof. Steffens on Hebrew in Our Colleges," buries me under an avalanche of personal abuse, and completely overwhelms me with questions. Are the times of the odium theologicum to be renewed? Is he again to be known as the great man who succeeds in making people believe that he whom he desires to crush is an ignoramus? Have I been guilty of such a method in my article, hurling at our esteemed Prof. Lansing personal invectives, unworthy a gentleman and a Christian, I am willing to apologize. If not, why do I receive such a rough treatment from the hand of a brother?

Prof. Lansing seems to be a great mind-reader. The heading of my article would have been different, he categorically maintains, "if the spirit shown in the article had been expressed." The fact is, that I had several headings in my mind, but I selected the one actually used on account of its appropriateness. Has my judgment been at fault?

Our good brother also pretends to know the reason why I italicized the word our in the combination our Seminary. This reason seems so clear to him that he abstains from giving it to his readers, simply stating: "Comments unnecessary." Not knowing the unexpressed comments, I am unable to say whether the Professor is right or wrong. Let me interpret my own words. Writers in the INTELLIGENCER always speak about our Seminary, forgetting that the Church has, in fact, two Seminaries at present. Do you wonder that many at the West feel that we have apparently little sympathy from the Church at large, whilst our Seminary at New Brunswick is the petted child of the family? We do not envy our Eastern Seminary this fostering care of the Church. We rejoice in her prosperity and wish her godspeed in her work. But it is my honest conviction that if our Church at the West does not prosper, the whole Church will suffer. And we cannot prosper at the West without a theological school in good working order, sustained by the Church at large. If the Professor does not like this spirit in my article, I cannot help it, but I am sure that this spirit bears no ill-will to anybody, but fervently desires the prosperity of the whole Church, East and West.

Prof. Lansing bluntly states: "I take it that he has no knowledge of Arabic." A fine assumption indeed! This club is heavy enough to kill me outright. I know, happily, a little about Arabic and other cognate Semitic languages. Of course I am far from maintaining that I can compete with a man who speaks this wonderful tongue from his childhood. I confess that I am not an Arabic scholar. The little I know, however, about the Semitic languages, I am happy to say helps me very much in my work as teacher of Hebrew in our Western Seminary. I would not give away the knowledge I possess for a fortune.

But admitting that I am not an Arabic philologian, is the Professor then not right in resenting that I throw down the gauntlet and assume the role of judge? About what? About questions of Arabic philology? Far be it from me to do such a thing. But if the courage to have and to speak out my own opinions and convictions about matters in which I take a professional interest is identical with throwing down the gauntlet and assuming the role of a judge, well—then I simply do it and defy anybody to deny me the liberty.

May I ask Prof. Lansing to tell me where the "wild" statements came in in my article? I pride myself of having studied logic to some purpose, and I would be sorry indeed if he could prove that my statements are wild. If his proofs, however, are of a piece with his assertion, that the expression of any honest doubts about the wisdom of introducing Arabic into our Seminaries is an admonitory sentence, then I am willing to bear the aspersion of making wild statements.

I fear it would take up too much room if I endeavored to answer all the questions put to me by Prof. Lansing. All these questions, it seems to me, are irrelevant. They do not touch the point in dispute at all. The fact is, as I have already stated in my former article, that I substantially agree with him in what constitutes a philosophico-scientific knowledge of the Semitic languages. There cannot be any dispute about these things among educated theologians. The fervor which the Professor exhibited in showing up my ignorance regarding these points, was really astonishing. I could not help smiling about it.

The question as put by me is not whether it is necessary for teachers of Hebrew to know Arabic, but whether it is prudent to add Arabic to the studies of our young men in our Seminaries under present conditions. And in this respect I stand to-day where I stood when I carefully penned my first article. Non multa sed multum, is certainly a good rule for a seminary as well as for a college, academy or common school. And I am sure our educational methods favor, alas! the multa instead of the multum. As long as graduates from the Seminaries in all simplicity tell us that they do not like Hodge's Systematic Theology because there is so much Latin in it; as long as candidates for licensure tell their examiners that they have forgotten their Greek Grammar, we have certainly reasons enough to pause before we extend the lists of their studies. And what shall become of us if students begin to look upon the study of Greek as a college-fetich, discarding it altogether as an abominable idolatry?

But Prof. Lansing contends that it is easier for students to get a substantial knowledge of Hebrew if they add Arabic to it. Speaking of his own experience he tells us that his knowledge of Arabic has helped him wonderfully in his work as a pastor. I do not doubt it for a moment. But do not forget it, our esteemed brother speaks Arabic from his youth. If a German studies the Scandinavian tongues, it helps him wonderfully that he is a Teuton himself; but would you advise a native from Arabia to study German in order to learn one of the Scandinavian dialects? Of course, if he desires to study the Teuton language philologically and comes well prepared for the task, let him do it by all means, but if he has another object in view, let him pause before he begins. A practical theologian has to remember the wise saying: "In der Beschraenkung zeigt sich der Meister." (A master knows how to limit himself.)

I am glad to hear that the enthusiasm of our friends for the study of Arabic cannot be damped. I see it was presumption in me to entertain this idea. Pardon me. But, after all, a little calmness and moderation would not be out of place. Prof. Lansing would not only introduce Hebrew into Colleges, but Arabic also. This is really too much of a good thing. How willingly I otherwise would be to follow his lead in contending for the introduction of the study of Hebrew into our Colleges—for I would with all my heart give him the first place in such a cause—this overflowing enthusiasm for his beloved Arabic would debar me from it. Such a scheme would defeat itself.

In conclusion I congratulate Prof. Lansing upon having succeeded in forming a magnificent class (in Arabic) doing magnificent work. If the results prove to be magnificent too, I will be the first to bow before the logic of facts.

Till then let us agree to differ and remain brothers and colaborers in Christ for the upbuilding of His kingdom.

WESTERN SEMINARY, HOLLAND, MICH.

Prohibition.

EDITOR OF CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER: Your editorial headed "Prohibition Again," has left several interrogation points sticking in my mind. I am a Prohibitionist; have been one for many years; remain one still, although I did not vote for the third party candidate. Not only so, I embrace every proper occasion to advocate prohibition in and out of the pulpit. Was my refusal to vote the prohibition ticket inconsistent with the principle I advocate? If a religious paper cannot discuss the subject in its columns, how can I discuss it with propriety in the pulpit? Must I not keep silent for the same reasons you give for silence? Does the fact that some men choose to make the question a political one force me to make it one also? Must I, in order to escape the charge of discussing "politics in the pulpit," ignore the question of prohibition altogether? Many Prohibitionists, like myself, belong to either of the old parties. How can they discuss the subject without becoming traitors to their party?

Your editorial implies that the Prohibitionist, in order to be consistent, must ally himself to the third party. Does this follow? Cannot the subject be discussed as a moral question, apart from partisan considerations? It has been so discussed before the third party came into existence; what is to prevent it now? Can any religious paper or Christian minister ignore a subject which, as Senator Cullom, of Illinois, said in my hearing, "has come to stay," without escaping the charge of moral weakness? What has the third party to do with my convictions of principle? And shall I lock my lips because some choose to be extremists?

If the vote on the question, "Shall the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors be prohibited in this State? would probably be a surprise to politicians, and would have a great moral effect," why not open your columns to the discussion of the question from this standpoint? If such a vote would have a "great moral effect" in New York State, why not in every State of the Union? And if so, then what is to hinder it from being made a national question?

Prohibition is my goal, even though I am not a third party man; in the meantime I will take what I can get—high license or anything else in the way of restriction. And so I discuss the question in the pulpit and out of it. Am I right or wrong?

If I can and ought to discuss the question, why cannot a religious paper? Is it not the duty of such a paper, as well as mine, to set men right and keep them right, on all moral questions?

The question of prohibition has come to stay, and constantly obtrudes itself upon our attention, and since this is the fact, shall we not do all in our power to give it proper form and direction; and convince men that its ultimate success depends upon its moral, rather than political bearings? Shall not the INTELLIGENCER, at least, discuss the question from its moral aspects, and show men the possibility of doing this, without becoming obnoxious or entangled in endless contradictions? This, in my humble opinion, is much better than giving the whole subject into the hands of extremists, or of passing it by with a shrug of the shoulder. Yours, ???

[Our correspondent mistakes the position of the INTELLIGENCER. We said that some of our friends wished to know why we "did not take more decided ground in favor of prohibition." The objection was not that we did not advocate it, but were not decided or forcible enough. A great deal has been printed in these columns in favor of total abstinence and prohibition. In our judgment these themes have had their full share of space; at least the endeavor has been to give them that share. There are many topics to be presented in such a journal as this. The objection was that prohibition was not advocated as strongly and as constantly as some of our friends desired. We have no intention to exclude it and have not excluded it. But a considerable number of our subscribers are members of the party which has suffered by the vote of the third party. They feel very sore about it. They consider other questions important, regard other issues essential to local and national welfare. We would like to have them favor prohibition. Many of them do. In order to secure their attention our advocacy must be considerate. Besides, we have other ends in view, a chief one being to create and foster an interest in our branch of the Reformed Church, its faith, its institutions and its work. How can that be attained if when a man is sore because his candidate has been defeated at the polls or because his election is imperilled, he meets an article strongly advocating prohibition and tending to strengthen the third party, then throws the paper aside, does not read it again for weeks, or perhaps refuses to take it any longer? Which is most important, that this journal shall serve the Church, and say a word considerately now and then in favor of restricting the liquor traffic, or that it shall enter upon such an advocacy of prohibition as would exclude it from many families and leave them ignorant of the current affairs of their own denomination? The question is not whether we shall ignore prohibition, for that we have not done and do not intend to do, but whether we shall "take more decided ground."—ED.]

THE HOLY REST.—"If thou turn away thy foot from the Sabbath, from doing thy pleasure on my holy day, and call the Sabbath a delight, the holy of the Lord, honourable; and shalt honor him, not doing thine own ways, nor finding thine own pleasure, nor speaking thine own words; then shalt thou delight thyself in the Lord."—ISA. 58: 13.

If a spiritual rest, a holy rest, one day in seven, is to the Christian a weariness; if he must go to the world for rest on that day, how can he endure an endless Sabbath, of which the earthly is the type! If the shadow is a burden, how can he sustain the substance? PASSAIC.

THE WARDEN of the State prison at Joliet, Ill., addressed the Monday morning meeting of the Congregational Ministers' Union of Chicago two weeks ago, and The Advance reports that he said: "There are about 1,600 convicts, of whom but 23 are women. Prisoners who confess themselves to have been either intemperate or moderate drinkers are fully two thirds of the whole. The educated are to the illiterate as only 1 to 16. About one-quarter of the newcomers, each year, are Roman Catholics. One man claims to be a Congregationalist—probably, says the warden, from his dislike to the Presbyterian strong form of government! Of 758 convicts, 111 were under 20 years of age, and only eight-tenths of one per cent were between the ages of 50 and 60. The average length of life of the criminal classes is but 25 years, while that of our population at large is 35. Burglars and thieves generally succeed in retaining but about one-tenth of their booty, the rest being secured, under one pretext and another, by pawnbrokers and other receivers of stolen goods. Of 2,100 prisoners confined for longer or shorter periods last year, only 142 came under punitive discipline. The warden contradicts emphatically the statement sometimes made that a large number of convicts are graduates from Sunday-schools."

THE SON of the late Mr. H. B. Claflin, in obedience to a verbal request of his father in his last illness, has sent a check for $20 000 to the American Home Missionary Society. This is the second or third payment of this sort he has made in executing the wishes of his father not recorded in his will. Mr. Claflin is making an example that will have effect.

Our Church.

We are thankful for [illegible] exactly stated; or for marked copies or clippings from [illegible], which we would not otherwise see. To insure publication in next number, they must reach us by noon on Monday. A condensation of items is unavoidable

The Gospel in Song and Sermon.

IN the Middle Collegiate Church at Lafayette place and Fourth street, special services are to held every night in the week except Saturday, from Feb. 21st to March 7th, opening at a quarter before eight with a choral service of fifteen minutes. On Monday, the 22d, the Rev. C. H. Parkhurst, D.D., will preach; on Tuesday, the 23d, and Wednesday, the 24th, the Rev. Geo. H. Smyth; on Thursday, the 25th, the Rev. T. L. Cuyler, D.D. On Friday, the 26th, the Rev. Graham Taylor, of Hartford, will take charge of the work, preaching at all the remaining services except those on Sunday, March 7th.

The music will be led by a choir of men and boys under the direction of Mr. George F. Le Jeune. There will be Bible stories and songs for boys and girls every afternoon at four o'clock from Feb. 22d to March 5th; and two special services for women, conducted in the German language, on Thursdays, Feb. 25th, and March 4th.

Special Religious Services.

THE first week of the special religious services held in the Prospect Hill Reformed Church, New York city, has passed, but it has left behind it the recollection of rich blessing received. The meetings, held every night except Saturday, grew in interest, and had the weather proved more favorable we feel sure that we could have reported a crowded church. The addresses of Rev. Wm. W. Clark, always Biblical, proved most inspiring; the hearts of God's people were deeply stirred and some of the unsaved were led to confess Christ. The church is anticipating a continuance of the good work so auspiciously commenced, during the second week of its services, which are to be conducted by the Rev. Dr. Easton, of New Brunswick.

Ninth Annual Report of the Union Theological School, Tokio, Japan.

1. THE Faculty continues as reported last year. Mr. Ogimi has again given his valuable services, and the corps of instructors has been further strengthened by the presence and aid of Dr. Imbrie and Mr. Miller.

2. The course of study has been shortened to three years. The change is made possible by the preparation of text-books, and occasions no loss to the students. The Chinese course was discontinued in September and the entrance examination was made as severe as the former examination for graduation. In exceptional cases students insufficiently prepared may be admitted on condition of independent study, a further examination in Chinese being held at the close of the first year. Instruction in English has been provided, our purpose being to teach students to read commentaries and similar works. The study is elective.

3. Twenty students were present at the close of the school year in July, an increase over the previous year of three. This year thirty-four are in attendance, classified as follows: Seniors, twelve; Middles, nine; Juniors, fourteen. The attendance and diligence of the students throughout the year have been on the whole satisfactory.

4. Most of the students engaged in evangelistic work during the summer vacation, under the direction of the Union Committee. Henceforth the summer vacation will continue from the middle of June to the first of October, thus giving more time for missionary work. The winter and spring vacations have been correspondingly shortened.

5. A dormitory has been purchased, the ground being rented. It is in the native style and will easily accommodate thirty students. The wisdom of the purchase is already apparent in the greater regularity of attendance and the growth of friendliness among the students.

6. The evening class has been discontinued. The men for whom it was established completed the course, were licensed by Chiu Kwai, and are now engaged in evangelistic work. Other men did not come forward in sufficient numbers to make its continuance advisable.

7. The following works have been printed during the year:

By Dr. Amerman: 1. "On the Attributes of God and the Trinity," 220 pages; 2. "On Church Government," 121 pages; 3. "On the Divine Decrees," 56 pages; 4. "On the Creation of the Universe," 175 pages. By Mr. Knox: 5. "On Homiletics," (completed,) 175 pages.

A volume—"Jesus Christ the Son of God,"—a course of ten lectures on the proofs of Christianity, by Mr. Knox, is now ready for the press, and a work on the "Apostolic History," being a commentary on the Acts, by Dr. Imbrie, will be completed during the present year.

8. The Library has received valuable gifts from Mr. McLaren, including a set of "Bibliotheca Classica;" a few volumes have been purchased. The Mission Board of the United Presbyterian Church of Scotland has granted £10 for the purchase of books, in accordance with the request of the Council asking the three Boards to contribute fifty dollars each annually.

The Library now contains about 2,000 bound volumes, for the greater part in the English language, and an equal number of unbound volumes and pamphlets, the greater part being standard works in the Japanese and Chinese languages.

9. The Reading Room has been supplied with the choicest English, American and Japanese periodicals at no expense to the Missions. The number of subscribers is larger than at any previous time.

10. The current expenses for the year, including repairs on dormitory, have been Yen 789 87, divided equally among the three Missions. In addition Yen 300 was paid for the dormitory, and Yen 17.70 has been given for books for the Library, making in all Yen 1,107.57.

11. In conclusion it only remains for us to return thanks to our heavenly Father for the blessings of the year past, and to beseech the continuance of His favor for the year to come, trusting that through His grace the school may be an efficient aid in the establishment of the Church in Japan.

GEO. WM. KNOX,
JAS. L. AMERMAN, } Permanent Instructors.

UNION THEOLOGICAL SCHOOL, Tokio, Dec. 28th, 1885.

....THE EVANGELISTIC SERVICES in the Reformed Church in 34th street, N. Y., Rev. Dr. Dickson's, have been well attended and have resulted in spiritual blessings to many souls.

The ladies of the church who have called on the families in that section of the city, soliciting attendance, have been cordially received.

An attractive feature of the services is the choir, which consists of twenty members, who occupy the platform in front of the pulpit. Their singing adds very much to the interest of the services.

Last Sabbath evening Rev. R. Terry, D.D., preached to a large and attentive congregation. The services will be continued every evening this week, except Saturday.

....ELLENVILLE, N. Y.—The clouds have returned after the rain, and only to bestow richer and greater blessing. The seven young girls who stood up and received welcome into the church at our last communion had brought us great joy. The services of the Week of Prayer and some extra services following had closed, as there seemed no special reason for their continuance. But after a two weeks' interim the evidences of a spirit of inquiry became so manifest that nightly services were begun again. These have been going on for more than a week. The Gospel, simple and direct, has been preached by the pastor, unassisted by outside agencies. The Spirit of the Lord has been graciously present in power. The lecture room has been filled night after night with eager faces that tell of hungry souls. The quiet has been most awesome. Many have sought the inquiry room each night and thirty names are on the list of those awakened or already rejoicing in hope. H.

Trailing Arbutus.

THE Children's Society of the Church of Kerhonkson, Ulster Co., wish to earn some money to give to the Boards of Missions. They have resolved, therefore, to gather trailing Arbutus, which grows abundantly in the vicinity, and to send it at a moderate price to those who may order it. There must be many persons in localities where cultivation has destroyed this coy flower, and others living in cities, who hunger for a sight once more of this lovely harbinger of spring. What a delight it would be to have a few sprays in the house! Orders can be sent to Rev. William Darragh, Kerhonkson, Ulster Co., New York. Neither the children nor Mr. Darragh have asked for this notice. Information of their plan came indirectly to this office, and we wish to help the children and a good cause.

....THE MISSIONARY CONFERENCE of the Classis of Newark, held at Plainfield on the 3d, notwithstanding the heavy snow storm, was not altogether a failure. The audiences were small, but the papers and addresses were exceedingly interesting and helpful. Those who ventured out in the face of the blizzard were well paid for their undertaking. The entire programme was carried out, and found a fitting climax in the splendid address of Dr. Ellinwood, of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions. Doubtless the missionary fire enkindled at this meeting has already lighted the sacrifices on many other altars of self-denying devotion. B.

....THE Sabbath-school of the Sandham Memorial Church at Marion, Dakota, gratefully acknowledges the receipt of a barrel of Christmas gifts from the Sabbath school of the Reformed Church of Hopewell, N. Y.

"He that giveth unto the poor lendeth unto the Lord." WESSEL VON RUSCHEN, Supt.

....THE Sabbath school of Bon Homme, Dak., Rev. S. J. Harmeling, pastor, received a barrel of Christmas gifts from the Third Reformed Dutch Church, Broad street below Poplar, Philadelphia. We appreciate the kindness of these friends and thank them heartily. LUCAS KREMER, Supt.

....KISKATOM, N. Y.—The third anniversary of "The Ladies' Missionary and Tract Society" of the Reformed Church, was observed on Wednesday, the 10th instant. The annual reports of the Secretary and Treasurer were read by the pastor. These testified to a good degree of prosperity. The twenty tract distributors and missionary collectors had given to about 300 families nearly 6,500 pages of tracts and 14 copies of Scriptures, in whole or in part. They had also collected $88 63 for Domestic and Foreign Missions, to aid our Woman's Executive Committee for Domestic Missions, and our Woman's Board of Foreign Missions. This is not intended to interfere with the regular church contributions. Appropriate and quickening addresses were delivered by Rev. A. G. Lansing, of Blue Mountain, and Rev. H. Van Der Wart, of Athens. The Gospel of Christ was urged as the regenerating power in our own land and in all countries. To this end, educated preachers and plenty of money must be furnished by the Church. SECRETARY.

...THE PASTORS' ASSOCIATION met as usual at 34 Vesey street on Monday. There is to be no meeting next Monday.

....GLEN, N. Y.—A revival is in progress in this church, Rev. S. O. Lawsing, pastor. About twenty-five hopeful conversions are said to have occurred, and the interest continues.

....THE LECTURES AT NEW BRUNSWICK before the Society of Inquiry.—The date of Rev. Dr. Mabon's lecture is changed to March 3d, and the evening of March 31st will be occupied by Rev Jacob Chamberlain, M.D., D.D., of India, who will speak upon "Coöperation in Foreign Missions." Prof. Meyer's subject, not definitely settled at the time of last week's announcement, will be "Thoughts on Old Testament Exegesis."

....ROTTERDAM, N. Y.—The ladies of the First Church held a fair and festival during the evenings of Feb. 11th to 13th to increase the repair fund, the intention being to remodel the interior of the church building when the winter is over.

...WESTERN ITEMS.—The congregation of Orange City, Iowa, has presented a sleigh to Rev. A. Buursma....The Church of Harrison, Dakota, has given a fine horse to Rev. A. Stegeman, a property he was much in need of, the congregation being scattered over a wide region....The First Church of Grand Rapids, Mich., improved the opportunity afforded by his birthday to give Pastor Moerdyke a surprise party....Rev. H. Borges, who has been pastor of the Presbyterian Church of New Amsterdam, Wis., has arrived at Greenleafton, Minn., where he is soon to be installed over the Reformed Church.

....PEAPACK, N. J.—February 7th, 1886, will be a day long remembered in the village of Peapack. On that day the Reformed Church celebrated the Lord's Supper under particularly interesting circumstances. The Holy Ghost, in answer to the earnest supplications of the faithful, had visited this congregation and blessed many.

During the Week of Prayer a marked interest in Divine things encouraged a continuation of the meetings through several weeks. Night after night the lecture room was crowded with an earnest, serious throng. One after another rose for prayers. The number of those who sought and found the Saviour soon reached the remarkable figures of fifty-four. So great was the feeling that during the day men could be seen in little groups earnestly talking of the way of salvation. The whole village was stirred. Of the one hundred and more with whom the pastor conversed, not one was found unconcerned, all felt an interest; but all did not decide for Christ. It was the happy privilege of the pastor, however, to welcome the fifty-four to the Lord's table. A number were heads of families; the great majority were young men and women; a few were children from 9 to 14; yet all were, as we believe, truly converted to God.

We have great reason to rejoice and be glad in the visitation of God's Spirit.

The young people have been organized as a society under the name of The Young People's Christian Association. Their object is to "grow in grace and knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ." S.

....ALBANY, N. Y.—The following description is given by an Albany paper of the marble baptismal font, presented by Miss M. L. Egberts to the First Church: "The font was designed and executed by Mr. William Manson, of this city. It is octagonal in shape and consists of four parts, the base, supra-base, shaft and bowl. It is three and one-half feet high, and is elegantly embellished by the sculptor's chisel. On the front margin of the bowl is this inscription: "One Faith;" on the sides, "One Lord" and "One Baptism," and on the rear a Maltese cross, all being raised from the marble. On the back of the base is an imbedded silver plate, on which is inscribed, "Presented by Mary L. Egberts, January 1, 1886." This beautiful work of art is made of imported Italian marble, and weighs a little over two thousand pounds. It has been placed on the chancel dais at the left of the pulpit."

Miss Egberts is the oldest active member of the church, with which she united by letter from the Church of Coeymans in 1834. She is one of the oldest subscribers to THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER.

The INTELLIGENCER has also lost recently one of its subscribers of longest standing by the death of Mrs. William Youngblood, suitably noticed in another column. She had been a subscriber from the first number. Her attachment to the Church was very strong and one of the chief features of her last years were her earnest and importunate prayers for God's blessing upon it.

....REV. PHILIP PHELPS, D.D., has accepted a call from the churches of North Blenheim and Breakabeen, in Schoharie Co., N. Y., and will begin his pastorate next Sabbath.

The General Outlook.

....The Young Women's Christian Association of this city set on foot an effort, a few months ago, to obtain funds for the erection of their new building. The amount desired was $125,000; the amount pledged is $150,000, which is $25,000 more than they need for the building proper. The Society is to be congratulated upon its great success, and will no doubt turn the surplus to a good account in the prosecution of the work in which it is engaged.

....Bishop Bowman, of St. Louis, who is reported to be the senior Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, says that he has held Methodist Conferences in every State and Territory in the Union, as well as in China, India, Japan and several other foreign countries.

....At the opening of the new chapel of the Chicago Theological Seminary, (Congregational,) an announcement was made of the gift of $110,000 from two individuals toward an endowment for the Seminary of $350,000, to be raised within three years.

....It appears from the following item that the Baptists are not so fortunate: The trustees of the Chicago University, a Baptist institution, have decided to give up the property, first, because the incumbrances amount to $291,500 while the appraised value of the property is only $250,000, and second, they have no money.

....Bishop McTyeire, President of the Board of Trust of Vanderbilt University, has received from Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt, executor of the late William H. Vanderbilt, $200,000 in Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railway bonds, which bear seven per cent.

...Iceland was lately visited by a German statistician. We clip from his interesting report the following data: The Icelanders are all Lutherans. Some French missionaries tried very hard to make converts, but without any result. There are 1 Roman Catholic, 1 Methodist, 4 Unitarians and 3 Mormons to be found among a population of 72,445 souls (Census of 1880). The island is divided into 20 deaneries, with 141 pastorates. The head of the clergy is the bishop at Reykyavik. 217 of the 299 churches are built of imported timber, 75 of peat or turf, and only 7 of stone. The well known fact is confirmed that the Icelandic Lutherans, poor as they are, possess the true and lasting riches of knowledge to a remarkable degree. As many of them are settling permanently in the Northwest, they form a very desirable addition to our ranks.—The Lutheran.

....The Baptist and Methodist churches at Franklin, N. Y., are enjoying a season of revival. The meetings have been continued without intermission every evening for more than two months, and most of the time in the afternoon and evening. More than 130 have been recognized as inquirers, and nearly all have found peace in believing. In its beginning the work was among the quite young, but, more recently, it has been reaching an older class till many heads of families have been converted, and among them some quite advanced in years.

....On a recent Sunday evening the Rev. Jacob Freshman baptized several Israelites at the Hebrew-Christian Church of this city; one of them was a rabbi, who had formerly preached in some of the synagogues of New York.

...The Rev. C. S. Sargent, of New Haven, Vermont, has given to the Congregationalist the following cheering description of a work of the Holy Spirit: "The churches of the Champlain Valley are experiencing a work of grace and an outpouring of the Spirit such as has not been known for fifty years. The blessing came in answer to prayer. Beginning before the Week of Prayer in New Haven, it has continued with increasing power. Nearly or quite one hundred in this little town have found Christ, or are to-day seeking for peace There has been no evangelist nor has there been any desire for one. The pastor preaches every evening, and is ably supported by an earnest, united church. Old enmities are forgotten in forgiveness and tears, and the voices of many who have been members of the church for years are now heard for the first time. Whole families have found the Saviour, and altars are being set up in homes that have been prayerless White-haired men—not only fathers, but the grandfathers, who have resisted the voice and pleading of the Spirit for years—have at last yielded, and with broken words asked forgiveness of God and man. Some have gone through all their neighborhood seeking reconciliation, and, like Zaccheus, offering to restore.

"And now the fire has been lighted in Middlebury, Whiting, and in Orwell, while Vergennes will begin meetings this week, seeking God's blessing. The Middlebury pastor, a most unselfish and unsparing minister, Rev. S. L. B Speare, has called to his aid a neighboring brother, Rev. B. F. Mills, of West Rutland. All the churches have united with the Congregational in the work, except the Episcopal, and day after day and night after night this great church has been filled with an earnest multitude. Between one hundred and two hundred have expressed their determination to follow Christ. All but six students in the college express the Christian hope. And the end is not yet.

"As Middlebury is the leading town of the county; the influence of its revival is felt far and wide. Cornwall, which last year, under the wise and able ministry of Rev. M. C. Stebbins, received fifty or more members, is again awakened. In Whiting some twenty-five have been converted. Other churches in the other towns are rejoicing that God is with them. The Methodist churches in Monkton and Weybridge have received large additions. The song of the whole valley, from mountain to lake, is, 'The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad.'"

...The Lord's Supper was celebrated in the First Reformed Church, Lebanon, Pa., on the 29th ult., in the German, and on the 6th inst., in the English language. There were added to the church fifty-three persons, of whom forty five were confirmed, of whom eighteen were men and twenty-seven women. Six of those confirmed received adult baptism, and eight are heads of families.

The church was densely crowded, the aisles being occupied by extra seats. The number of communicants was the largest in the history of the congregation. Deep solemnity pervaded the vast congregations, for the Spirit of God was evidently present, moving upon the hearts of the people. At the afternoon prayer-meeting the chapel was crowded, and all seemed to feel that it was good to be there.

The pastor was assisted by his son, the Rev. L. G. Kremer, of Christ Reformed Church, Hagerstown, Md.

....The Presbyterian of February 13th says: "The Convention of Presbyterian ministers and elders, held for prayer and conference in the First Presbyterian Church in Pittsburg, Pa., on Tuesday and Wednesday of last week, was largely attended, and a deep interest was evinced. At the closing session Rev. J. J. Brownson, D.D., read a pastoral letter to the church which had been prepared by a special committee. It was full of wise counsel and earnest admonition. It referred to the Conventions of 1842 and 1857 particularly. Speaking of the latter it said: 'The Convention was a veritable Pentecost within these very walls, from which went forth Divine influence which belted the world with spiritual blessings.' The Convention decided that February 17th be fixed as a day for humiliation and prayer in all the churches represented in the Convention."

A call for a Convention for Conference and Prayer, similar to the Pittsburg Convention, to meet at Cincinnati, March 16th, has been issued. It proposes that two days be spent in prayer for God's blessing on the churches. It says: "The deep undertone of religious feeling in many of our churches, the already greatly increased activity of many of our members, the spirit of unwonted harmony and co-operation manifested between our own churches and the several branches of the Christian family, and the almost universal expectancy and desire for something better than we have yet obtained, seem to indicate that we are on the eve of very great and important events."

....Mr. C. T. Studd, the Cambridge University athlete, converted during Mr. Moody's visit, on going as a missionary to China offered Mr. Hudson Taylor, the founder of the China Inland Mission, the whole of his large fortune of £100,000. Mr. Taylor refused it, but Mr. Studd insisted, and put it in the hands of trustees, who pay the interest to the mission of which he is now one of the self-denying missionaries.

....Rev. Thomas Parker Dudley, of Lexington, Ky., is believed to be the oldest Baptist minister in America. He is ninety-four years old, is blind and very feeble. He began to preach in 1820 and has preached in 14 States.

....Just before leaving Chicago, Mr. Moody spoke at Farwell Hall upon City Evangelization, proposing a plan to be acted upon at once. Let Chicago raise a fund of $250,000 for evangelistic work. "Spend $50,000 on a building, and put out the balance at interest, and from the income support a Training School for Workers." To this school he promises to devote a portion of each year. Mr. Moody's plan met with a prompt response from Mr. Cyrus H. McCormick in the form of a subscription of $100,000, and several $5,000 subscriptions followed. The enterprise is to be placed under the direction of The Bible Work of Chicago, an institution already incorporated and organized.

....The proportion of Christian students in the Presbyterian colleges seems to be still very large. There are twenty colleges under Presbyterian control, and these institutions have 1,881 students in all. Of these 1,147 are members of Christian churches, while 341 are reported as studying for the ministry. These are very encouraging facts. And without going into the figures in detail, we may say that the proportion of Christian students in the colleges controlled by evangelical denominations is rarely less than one-half. It is only in the State Universities and at Harvard that the mass of the students are not Christians. There is, on the whole, great reason to be encouraged by the state of religion in our colleges. In 1813, it is said that only two or three Princeton students were members of the church; now 204 out of 435 students are church members. The world does move, and in some vitally important aspects its movement is in the right direction.—The Examiner.

News of the Week.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 10.—The damage done by the riot in London is estimated at under £5,000. It was checked by the police.... Sir William Vernon-Harcourt, Chancellor of the Exchequer, is re-elected to Parliament from Derby....The steamer "Alaska" sailed to Fastnet from New York in six days and eighteen hours....Two hundred unemployed workmen at Nottingham, England, forced an entrance into the room where the workhouse guardians were holding a meeting and clamored for bread....An advance in all the cotton mills in New Bedford, Mass., of 10 per cent will be made on March 1st. ....Another of the Tarrytown robbers has been caught, and Inspector Byrne is confident he will get all of them....Speeches on the silver question made in the House by Messrs. Findlay and Warner....General Hancock died at Governor's Island yesterday afternoon of a malignant carbuncle complicated with acute diabetes....In the coke region colored men will take the place of the coke strikers....A woman living in Barre, Penn., left her two years old child sitting in a high chair near the stove and visited a neighbor for a little while, and when she returned she found the child lying on the stove burned to a crisp....A farm hand employed by John Hoar in Northfield, Ohio, because he was refused a kiss by one of Mr. Hoar's daughters, struck them both with a piece of iron and left them for dead, and then set fire to the barn, burning twenty-three cows, twenty hogs, one horse, and corn and wheat and farm implements. Loss $20,000 ...Sharp is still under examination. He is unable to account for $692,000.

THURSDAY, 11.—A riotous crowd continues to parade through London, causing a panic among shopmen, destroying a number of windows, but showing personal violence to no one....Mr. Forster, of England, is sinking rapidly....The British patrols have been attacked near Suakim....Servia has decided to purchase 50,000 rifles and 25,000,000 cartridges....The anti-Chinese agitators have been quieted in Seattle, W. T.... District-Attorney Martine, of New York, has been severely criticised for certain actions regarding Edwin E. Glaskin....A plan to remove the menagerie to another part of Central Park, N. Y., is proposed, as it is thought to injure property where it now stands....There was a $75,000 loss by fire on Broadway, New York city, last night in O. B. Potter's seven story building....The Meadow Brook Hunting Club stable near Hempstead, L. I., was burned, and twenty-five valuable horses destroyed....Two of the Tarrytown robbers have confessed their crime....Both Houses of Congress adjourned in honor of Major-General Hancock. ....There is a great deal of indignation felt against Keeper Laverty of the Trenton State Prison on account of immoral conduct.

FRIDAY, 12.—On account of the riots in England there is to be a government inquiry into the condition of the working classes. Several arrests have been made in consequence of the riots and an extra force of police has been engaged....A riot is said to be existing at Leicester, England, on account of a strike....Mr. Gladstone is preparing a bill for the expropriation of land in Ireland by means of State funds....M. Basly, a workingman deputy in the Chamber of Deputies, Paris, made a violent socialistic harangue in defense of the striking miners at Decazeville ...A loan of £5,000,000 was signed in Belgium to colonize a Congo State. ....The Fitz-John Porter bill was discussed in Congress....The two Houses of the Legislature at Albany disagree on the Canal appropriation....The men who were locked out by the cigar makers in New York have returned to work....A mob destroyed the sewer of a reformatory at Elmira because it was condemned by the Board of Health ... A livery stable in St. Louis burned, destroying thirty-eight horses....Heavy freshets are reported from New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware....An excited mob threatened to cut through the reservoir dam to find the body of a drowned boy....There was a heavy explosion of giant gun powder on the route of the new aqueduct.

(Continued on page eighteen.)

The Home.

AUNT MARJORIE'S CORNER.

[Among the mothers whose eyes turn expectantly toward this part of the INTELLIGENCER, there are doubtless many, more is the pity, who do not see Babyhood, from which we take this "Familiar Talk," which will appeal to every maternal heart.]

Baby's Little Sister.

BY MARION HARLAND.

AMID the flutter, the bustle, the suspense, the pain, the rejoicings attendant upon the advent of the newest baby, one member of the household is almost sure to be overlooked. The queen of yesterday suffers, for the first time in her brief life, from neglect. Fed, clothed, and physically comfortable, she yet feels herself left out in a world that has, without warning, become cold and friendless. Her abdication has been involuntary and rude. She went to bed a sovereign and awoke in exile. "Mamma's room," the happiest hunting-ground of her infancy, is forbidden territory, and Mrs. Gamp, in alpaca and spectacles, hovers menacingly on the frontier. The servants stumble over without seeing her in rushing to and fro; her own nurse is preoccupied with sober thoughts of the addition to her cares. The late favorite pulls vainly at her apron and heartstrings.

"You are a big girl now and must learn to look after yourself. We can't have two babies in the house," is, in the Little Sister's ear, a sentence of banishment to Siberia.

She is exceptionally happy if to the feeling of forlornness and desertion be not superadded the smart of active insult. The humorous sense of the low-bred is gratified by the sight of blood drawn by their sportive thrusts. It is great fun to see the sensitive child wince and weep under their fleers at the nose-out-of-joint, their success in quickening jealousy that, when conceived, shall bring forth hatred. The mother gives little thought in her happy languor to the dethroned princess, after she has seen her led in on tiptoe to leave a timid kiss on her brother's red face, one full of awe and longing on her own pale lips. If, as the days slip on, a rumor that Little Sister does not love the dear baby sifts to her ears, she is rather amused than grieved. Time, that has filled her arms and heart with the new treasure, will right everything; the angel-boy will win the silly child over in due season.

Time, being more merciful than mother and maids, generally accomplishes the desirable end. Until the gradual cure is wrought the young thing suffers anguish so needless that one's blood heats in telling the story.

When but a child myself I heard a five-year-old playmate ask her mother, who was fondling a baby-brother:

"Did you ever call me your 'precious dove' when I was little?"

Baby though I was, I interpreted the cadence of the query, read back of the record of the pleading eyes. At the distance of almost half a century from the scene I recall indignantly the careless reply:

"Oh! I suppose so, child. Don't lean on my lap. You crowd against your brother!"

Little Sister is herself crowded into the background, and, in families where there is a scarcity of hirelings, is pressed into the active service of the usurper. Her short legs ache with much trotting of errands from nursery to kitchen, and around the corner to the druggist's for bottle-nipples, condensed milk, and Mellin's Food. Throat and chest swell with suppressed shouts and song, hushed lest she should disturb the baby; her temper is roughened by friction against new rules of law and order. She is set to rock the cradle when she pines to be at play, and should the baby awake during her watch she is scolded. Worst of all, she misses the dear covert of mamma's lap when she is tired or sleepy or in trouble; the warm circle of the arms is filled by another, and she is therefore the more ready to believe herself shut out also from the mother-heart. As she grows stronger and more helpful, and the baby less like a roll of carded wool, she is allowed as a prime treat to hold him until she is strained to faintness under the weight she is too proud to confess is too much for soft muscles and bones. In humbler homes she is, at a pitiably early age, sent out to wheel perambulator or wagon in the open air for the whole morning or afternoon, and held responsible for the safety and content of the passenger.

We laugh at the bon-mot of the reprobate who professed his ability to live up to but one orthodox tenet—the doctrine of total depravity. We sober into tenderness that is not far removed from tearful admiration over the loyalty, the heroic magnanimity, the saintly sweetness of our Little Sister as she holds in her dimpled fists the well-being, the very life of one whom circumstance and cruel jests would, but for her native angelhood, have taught her to regard as robber and pest.

"Mamma!" says brave little Van of Miss Phelps's "Avis," with his last breath, "does—you—love—me—best of—my little sister?"

Avis's heart broke with the answer, because he was already beyond the hearing of it.

We moralize and poetize over acres of paper concerning other interesting and trying transition-periods—the brook-and-river meeting of girlhood; the lad's assumption of the toga virilis; the easy decline from maturity into old age. The passage from babyhood to nobodyhood is more sudden and utter than any other change to which humankind is heir, save that from life to death; is least considered and least pitied.

I was present once when a young mother was showering caresses on her month-old girl, her first-born, a boy of two years, standing silently by. He was a gentle little fellow, and so shy of demonstrations that both of us were surprised when he withheld his mother's hand from stroking the baby's cheek, to lay it on his own head. The blue eyes were full of unchildish tears.

From that moment the tiny sister was known in the family as "Eddie's baby." Mamma and nurse took care of her, but she belonged to him. He was consulted as to her dress and food. If she cried he ran to see what the matter was; while she slept he dragooned the household into silence, that "his baby might get her nap out." Her wrongs were his; for her rights he would have fought while strength and breath lasted. When she could sit on the floor and claim a monopoly of the choicest playthings, he was only too thankful to be allowed to hand them to her. Her trial-steps were guided by his hands, and the patience with which he reiterated syllable and word coaxingly for her imitation, his rapture when she achieved intelligent articulation, were the prettiest nursery episodes imaginable.

"Whose little daughter is this?" inquired a stranger, meeting the two walking hand-in-hand on the piazza of a summer hotel.

The boy reared his golden head proudly.

"Mine!" he replied. "My mamma borned her, but she belongs, weally and twuly, to me!"

He had just passed his fourth birthday when he lay dying in his quarantined bed chamber all through one soft September day. An hour before the death-film blotted out the blue from the sweet, faint eyes he opened them wide and laughed. A door unclosed in the upper story and let fall down the staircase the sound of a baby's voice trying to turn a tune he had taught her a week ago.

"What a sweet singer she is!" he faltered fondly. "It makes me 'most well when I hear her!"

Be pitiful, busy mother, tempted by stress of work, and many interruptions to push away the baby of yesternight, that the new claimant of to-day be not neglected. Grade lovingly the descent from the Delectable Heights of your embrace to the level of the multitude who must fend and fare for themselves. Have as many babies as you have children. In the realm where you sit a queen the latest-born should stand as near—and no nearer—the throne than the first. Give to each elder child a proprietorship in lesser and least, developing unselfish graces by love that makes service joy, not duty.

"And It Came to Pass."

"Lead them, my God, to Thee,
Lead them to Thee,
These children dear of mine
Thou lendest me.
Oh, by Thy love divine
Lead them, my God, to Thee,
Safely to Thee."

IT was less than a month after I had become a Sunday-school teacher, that at Normal class we sang the hymn "Jesus Save," of which the above lines are one of the stanzas. I well remember how long, very long it seemed to me I must wait for the answer to that prayer-hymn, before any of those dear children just promoted from the primary class would take upon themselves the vows assumed by their parents at their baptismal consecration.

The years have come and gone since then, until last Sunday marked our eighth anniversary as a class, with four of the original girls still as members. The day could not pass without some recognition, but I was wholly unprepared for so large a blessing as was mine. Just at the close of the session, Ella D., as she bade me good-by, said: "Miss H., do you remember the little cards you gave us that first Sunday? You had written on them, 'I will be God's child,' and asked us if we would sign our names, and now it is true, all of us who did are Christians."

That unforgotted incident, recalled by such a loving testimony, thrilled my heart. What had seemed so far in the dim future that Sunday afternoon, when, in much trembling and weakness, I left a loved teacher's class to obey the Divine command, "Go teach," had in reality come to pass.

As for some time my teacher has been deprived of active service, I called that same day to see her. She will always be my teacher, and it is a privilege to be considered "one of Miss Knight's girls." For a moment she failed to recall the day, and then began a self-accusation, so I mentioned how I, too, had forgotten what one of my girls remembered.

Isn't it a lesson to teachers? In each instance the scholar's memory proved the better. We may not know, 'tis well we cannot tell what words of ours shall return in blessing. That they will, our whole experience teaches; for what the mouth of the Lord hath spoken shall come to pass. G. L.

JANUARY 20th, 1886.

"CASANDRA'S CASKET." By Emma Marshall. The literary quality of this story is a good deal above the average of books prepared for our Sunday-school libraries. The plot of the story is involved but is cleverly handled and consistently developed, and the portraiture of character is strong and lifelike. From beginning to end the narrative is wholesome in tone and contains many lessons which young people may very profitably consider. (Carters.)

CHILDREN'S PORTFOLIO.

The Trustful Sparrow.

"THIS crumb is mine," said Sparrow Gray,
"The only one I've had to-day,
And I should be a silly bird
To give you half, or even third;
For see! the ground is white with snow,
And may be weeks, for aught I know."

"If 'tis," replied the younger bird,
"I'll tell you what I overheard:
I heard some little children say,
In that great house across the way,
How they should scatter crumbs of bread,
That every bird might be well fed,
Till all the ice and snow were gone;
So cheer up. Pray don't look forlorn:
I'd rather gaze on miles of snow
Than see a bird with looks of woe."

"You simple!" twittered Sparrow Gray,
"That's always just your heedless way.
No matter whether foul or fair,
It's 'chirp, chirp, chirp,' without a care.
And now you think you'll be well fed;
I hope you haven't been misled;
But time will tell. Good-day, good-day,"
And greedy Sparrow flew away.

The little bird was left alone—
Poor wee, wee Sparrow, scarce half-grown!
The cold winds soon began to blow;
No shelter offered, high nor low;
But mindful of the promised crumbs,
To the great house at length he comes,
A little shivering, hungry bird.
Then to the window where he heard
The children's voices, straight he flies,
And with his chirping Sparrow-cries
Soon brought them thronging to his side.
Then quick the sash they opened wide,
Strewed thick with crumbs the sheltered sill,
Till wee, wee Sparrow had his fill,
And chirping soft, as if to say,
"I thank you, thank you," flew away.

Dear little children! dear wee bird!
Could we but heed the promised Word
Of One who keeps both great and small,
And notes a single sparrow's fall!

—Elizabeth A. Davis, in Harper's Young People.

How a Pet was Saved.

THE reports of mad dogs that I see in the papers recall two interesting stories, and I write down one for Susie P. and the other readers of Cousin Lois' page.

Now if you fancy that I am going to let you know the very spot where my dog went mad you are mistaken, for that is my secret, and were I to reveal it, every boy and girl would be teasing to go there.

Think of a large, roomy old house, three stories high, one hundred years old, with great halls and wide piazzas and deep fireplaces. The house in the midst of a beautiful lawn; on one side the river, and on the other the ocean. Just beyond the gate such glorious woods! What a place to play in! Then a garden full of flowers and fruit trees—those famous pear trees and gooseberry bushes and grape vines. I wonder whether Lulu remembers the "pear wine" that she and Bee used to make, and those enchanting attic rooms in which they used to play, and the canoe on the top of the cupboard.

Lulu, Susie, Willie, three darlings, with their little maid, Bee, were very, very happy. Their pets were the cows and chickens and horses and a dog, a dear, dear dog that was like another child.

One day just after dinner, papa was away. Bee was minding Willie while his own nurse was at dinner, and we were on the piazza. Suddenly the dog rushed in, foaming at the mouth, with eyes bloodshot, flesh quivering. He darted through the great hall out into the back yard. We were terribly frightened. Darling mamma gathered her children about her, and we shut ourselves into the dining-room.

The man who worked in the house heard the noise and ran up from the kitchen. He was as frightened as we were when we called out, "Tip is mad! Tip is mad! Oh, Patrick, shoot him! shoot him!"

Patrick was quite brave when danger was far off, but to see close by the piazza a dog acting so strangely filled him with fear.

"Yis, yis. Och! he's mad intirely, and we'll all be kilt! Yis, Misses H., yis; I'd shoot him if I had a weapon. I'll call John. The poker! the poker!"

"Don't hurt Tip," said Lulu, while we were still pale and trembling.

Now the servants below had summoned the farmer and his men. They were unwilling to shoot the poor beast, and a council of war having been called, it was decided to get the dog into the barn and await the arrival of the master. He being once secured there, Pat discoursed about the danger of "kapin' them insects about the place where there were so many childer and farm byes, and they might all be eat up wid them so ravenous, and thin what use was they when the wife was a widdy! Och hone!"

We suffered both from fear of the dog and sorrow that he must die, for we all dearly loved "Tip." He was a favorite with every member of the family, and it was sad to feel that the master's hand must give him his death. The hours passed on. We heard the approach of the wagon bringing the master. The men rushed out to tell him the sad news. "Tip was in the barn stark mad. Misses and childer frightened to death."

For a moment the master trembled. Then he heard the cries and moans of the suffering animal. With the true courage love always gives, he went to the door and through an aperture saw his dear Tip extended on the floor, foaming and moaning. He called. As if by magic the poor brute lay quiet, then tried to draw himself up. The master went cautiously in, and approaching his favorite, spoke gently and soothingly. He saw that his presence had a most favorable effect, for the animal grew quiet and allowed the master to stroke him. The men subsided, while we in the house were now trembling with fear lest the dog should bite his master, but kindness finally prevailed, and love, generous love, conquered. We saw the poor dog finally brought out of the barn, and we all gathered round to watch him drink a pan of warm milk. Oh, how we rejoiced to find that Tip was not mad! and how happy was the good father that no accident had happened and that the dog had been imprisoned in the barn and not shot. Many and many a poor beast, hunted by wicked boys or cruel men may be goaded to madness; and though dogs may sometimes have the hydrophobia from other causes, cruelty or fear only makes the matter worse. It is not right to expose ourselves to danger, yet here was a dear pet saved by intelligent kindness and courage.

My other story is very funny, and I may relate it to you some day. K. M. S.

Astoria.

A Word to the Boys.

WHAT do you think, young friends, of the hundreds of thousands who are trying to cheat themselves and others into the belief that alcoholic drinks are good for them? Are they to be pitied and not blamed? Do you want to be one of these wretched men? If we are to have drunkards in the future, some of them are to come from the boys to whom I am writing; and I ask you again if you want to be one of them? No! of course you don't!

Well, I have a plan for you that is just as sure to save you from such a fate, as the sun is to rise tomorrow morning. It never failed; it never will fail; and I think it is worth knowing. Never touch liquor in any form. That is the plan, and it is not only worth knowing, but it is worth putting in practice.

I know you don't drink now, and it seems to you as if you never would. But your temptation will come, and it probably will come in this way: You will find yourself, some time, with a number of companions, and they will have a bottle of wine on the table. They will drink and offer it to you. They will regard it as a manly practice, and very likely they will look upon you as a milksop if you don't indulge with them. Then what will you do? eh, what will you do? Will you say "No, no! none of that stuff for me! I know a trick worth half a dozen of that!" or will you take the glass with your own common sense protesting, and your conscience making the whole draught bitter, and a feeling that you have damaged yourself, and then go off with a hot head and a skulking soul that at once begins to make apologies for itself, and will keep doing so during all his life? Boys, do not become drunkards.—J. G. Holland.

A Spider-Shower.

A WRITER in Chambers's Journal describes as follows a spider-shower he saw in September, 1875:

On the morning of the shower there had been some electrical disturbance. There had been one loud peal of thunder, but no rain.

About 10 A.M. I noticed small spiders running over my coat-sleeves, and had to brush off several trails of gossamer-web.

Looking round, I found that brick walls, houses, branches of trees, etc., had these webs dangling from them, and that other gossamer-webs were continually falling from above, and adding to the accumulation.

By midday, a long fence was festooned from point to point of its triangular rail-tops with a ribbon like ladder of gossamer; and this was growing broader and broader as the tiny creatures kept running along this ladder, each increasing the breadth by adding its own contribution of another silken thread.

All along this ladder the little strangers were running in an excited and hurried manner, as if they had lost their way, and had got into a strange country.

Some, in travelling over their improvised road, made mistakes, and got into bordering webs of the garden spiders, where they were speedily devoured.

About 1 P.M. the clouds cleared off, the sun shone out, and I noticed that some of the spiders had begun to re-ascend into the atmosphere.

Fixing my eyes upon one of them, I observed that as it left the gossamer pathway, it selected a clean spot on the iron railing, and gathering its limbs closely together, it projected from its spinnerets several threads which expanded outwards, and stretched upwards from nine to twelve inches.

Then this parachute seemed to show a buoyant tendency, and suddenly the tiny creature left hold of the iron rail, or was lifted off it, and quickly "vanished into thin air."

Possible the real home of gossamer spiders may be in the blue ether, where, in the wonderful economy of nature, they may have their appointed work to do. Or, it may be that these Liliputian roamers through space, like the migratory birds, have their appointed periods for going in one direction and returning in another.

Who knows? He only who made them and us, and whose ordained ministers are, humanly speaking, infinite in their number and variety.

Be Awake.

I HAVE heard of a little maiden who said "It was so very hard, she always had to go to bed just when she wished to stay up, and to get up just when she wished to go to bed;" and I know many children feel as she did; but if they had old heads on their young shoulders, they would know that those who are growing, require more sleep than those who are at their full strength; and also, that if they do not go to bed early, they will not be ready to get up for the bright morning hours, which are the very best of the whole day.

It is a happy thing to be awake early, and to get into the habit of rising early. Lord Chatham said: "I should have inscribed on the curtains of your bed and on the walls of your chamber, 'If you do not rise early, you can make progress in nothing.'" Therefore, that you may be early awake, and may keep awake at your lessons, or at your work, be early in bed. I sometimes wish, when I hear children grumbling about having to go too soon to their pleasant bed, so soft and sweet, that they knew what it was to be really weary. In the factories, before the law was passed which limited the hours of labor, children often fell asleep over their work, though they knew they would be speedily aroused, and punished for doing so. During the battle of the Nile, many shipboys were so weary that they were seen lying asleep on the decks, awakened neither by the noise around them, nor by the fear of their officer's anger, nor by their own danger. They were so weary that they must sleep, whatever came of it. I think if some little people who make ugly faces about going to bed, had more to tire them, they would not only be glad to go to bed, but would thank God that they had a bed to go to, while the children of poverty have to sleep as they can—oftentimes cold and comfortless. —Chatterbox.

John Knox's Clock.

A CORRESPONDENT of the New York World writes from Huntington, Pa., concerning an ancient timepiece once owned by John Knox: "Not on account of its intrinsic worth, but owing to its historical value, W. H. Woods, Esq., of this city, has in his possession a clock that would command perhaps as high a figure as any other timepiece in the country. It was built at Paisley, Scotland, by Eavn Skeoch, in 1560, and was owned by John Knox, the great Scottish reformer, from whom Mr. Woods is a lineal descendant. John Knox died in 1572. His big clock was handed down to his family for nearly a hundred and fifty years, when it finally came into the hands of John Witherspoon, father of one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. When John Witherspoon, the son, left Scotland in 1768 to take charge of Princeton College, he brought the old heirloom with him, and when he was elected to the Continental Congress the old timepiece was ticking in his parlors, and indicated the hour of his departure to transact his patriotic duties.

"Dr. Witherspoon prized the clock very highly. He cleaned it himself at regular intervals, and took pleasure in showing it to his friends and the members of Congress. When he died he requested that it should remain in his family and descend to the first-born of succeeding generations. At the death of Dr. Witherspoon, in 1794, the clock came into possession of his daughter Marion, who subsequently married the Rev. Dr. James S. Woods, of Lewiston, this State, who died in 1862. At the death of Mrs. Woods, shortly after, the clock came into the possession of its present owner, W. H. Woods, in whose parlor it now stands. The clock is still a good time-keeper, eight feet high, built of rosewood, with brass works. Mr. Woods was urged to place the clock on exhibition at the Centennial, but refused to let it be taken from the house."

Little Heads Together.

A DOUBLE ACROSTIC FOR "RAPPIE."

Primals.—A sovereign who in middle age began to reign
And war with darkness, ignorance and pain.

Finals.—Magician, spanning time and space,
Summoning the voice of friend if not his face.

1. The word of a wise man.
2. A novel.
3. A kind of poem.
4. Neither.
5. A speckled beauty.
6. An idol.
7. Connected with ships.
8. A kind of shot.
9. An old Indian king.
10. Taught English boys to smoke.
11. An audible answer.
12. A leaper from Maine.
13. The end of a wood pile.

K. M. S.

PI.

Xev ton noth teh eptos' ndim
Hitw yht lahswol tiw:
Exv tno ohtu hte 'topse nmid,
Rfo htuo tsnac nto hatfmo ti.
Leacr nda girbth ti dlshou eb vere,
Wlfgnio kile a sytrcla virre ;
Tghirb sa ghtli, nad realc sa niwd.

DIAMOND.

1. In japonica. 2. Placed. 3. Used in sealing documents. 4. A plant of the genus Crocus. 5. A president of the United States. 6. A small dog. 7. Fragrant flowers. 8. A conjunction. 9. In nebulous.

Answers to Puzzles of January 27th.

Hidden Proverb.—The integrity of the upright shall guide them.

Enigma.—Strike while the iron is hot.

Diamond.—

W
L E T
L O B E S
W E B S T E R
T E T R A
S E A
R

Cerrect answers from Midwout and Rappie Bowne.

Everything for the "Children's Portfolio" should be addressed to Cousin Lois, at this office.

The Reading Room.

Our Book-Shelves.

....“MY STUDY AND OTHER ESSAYS.” By Austin Phelps, D.D. This volume consists mainly of discussions republished from various periodicals. They are none the worse but rather the better for that, since they are revised and enlarged. Nearly half of them are upon topics connected with retribution, upon which they speak with manly force and precision, being in striking contrast with the loose thinking and feeble reasoning so common in our day. Prof. Phelps writes in a direct, crisp style, and is usually accurate in his use of words. But he says (p. 265) “redolent with” instead of “redolent of.” He quotes 2 Cor. 5:11 twice as if it read “the terrors of the Lord,” when the first noun is singular in the Authorized Version, and the Revised Version, in common with most critics, renders the phrase, “the fear of the Lord,”—reverential fear or piety. But these are small specks upon what is really a valuable and timely book. (Charles Scribner's Sons.)

....“GOD'S REVELATIONS OF HIMSELF TO MEN AS SUCCESSIVELY MADE IN THE PATRIARCHAL, JEWISH AND CHRISTIAN DISPENSATIONS, AND IN THE MESSIANIC KINGDOM.” By Samuel J. Andrews. A quarter of a century ago Mr. Andrews issued “The Life of our Lord upon Earth,” a book which met with great favor and has not been superseded by any of the numerous lives of Christ that have been published since. The present work is not the equal of that. Much of its matter is familiar, though in the chapters on The Dead Under the Theocracy, The Scribes and The Messiah in the Apocryphal Books there is much that is fresh and strongly put. The chief peculiarity of the book, its making the Messianic Kingdom commence at the Second Advent, is contrary to accepted opinions, and in our judgment is not made out. (Scribners.)

....“MECHANICS AND FAITH,” by Charles Talbot Porter, is intended to be in the line of Drummond's now famous work, as indicated by the secondary title, “A Study of Spiritual Truth in Nature.” It displays considerable ingenuity, and some originality, and no one can read it without receiving valuable impressions and suggestions. At the same time, the writer lacks the clearness of thought, aptness of illustration, and still more the charm of imagination, which makes Prof. Drummond's book so popular and delightful. The spirit of the author is religious, and his teachings in the main are sound, but he must have his fling at “Calvinism” as “the natural product of a barbarous age,” especially in the matter of eternal punishment, entirely shirking the strict analogy of the “mechanical” universe with the destruction of that which persistently opposes or resists the Divine laws. (Putnams.)

....“DOMESTICUS: A Tale of the Imperial City.” By William Allen Butler. We have here a serio-comic story of housekeeping and home-making in New York city. Disguised with the thin Latin covering, we have “Domesticus,” the malignant genius who, under Protean forms, haunts all married couples who try to live out of a boarding house. The descriptions of “Domesticus Hibernicus” and “Contrabandus,” and the trials of the “Little Lady” who was tortured by the household tyrant, will be keenly relished by all readers. The simple love tale of “Juventus,” who went to battle, and of “Prima,” who waited his return, gives special flavor to a book which is just the sort for household reading, especially for those laying the foundations of home. (Charles Scribner's Sons.)

....“THE HOUSE AT CRAGUE; or, Her Own Way.” By Mary B. Sleight. This authoress, already favorably known to the readers of the INTELLIGENCER in the way of shorter pieces, has made a successful venture at a more extended story in the above. It is told with a delightful simplicity and realism, and maintains its interest throughout. The general tenor of the plot, as well as the moral, is given in the title, and we need not anticipate it farther than to commend it as a pleasing and wholesome book for young people. (Thomas Y. Crowell & Co.)

....“THE INFANT PHILOSOPHER. Stray Leaves from a Baby's Journal.” By T. S. Verdi, M.D. It is not quite easy to put out of view the absurdity involved in the plan of this book, nor to accept, as natural productions of an infantile mind, the cogent reasoning—expressed in accurate language, with plenty of large words—which Dr. Verdi ascribes to his “Infant Philosopher.” But if one can forget

....“THE PETTIBONE NAME.” By Margaret Sidney. (The Household Library, No. 1.) If this incongruous elements, he will be able to accept the Baby's Journal as a convenient and agreeable medium for conveying sensible advice relating to the care of infants. The mistakes of parents, nurses and doctors are described in a very telling way, and the humorous vein which runs through the book adds to the effectiveness of its criticisms of many popular methods. (Fords, Howard & Hulbert.)

troductory volume fairly indicates the character of the new Household Library, it may be taken for granted that it will furnish a collection of cheap, convenient and attractive books deserving of a place in every family library. “The Pettibone Name” is written in a peculiarly strong and sprightly style, gives an admirable picture of New England society, and presents a series of character sketches which are exceeding y interesting studies. The narrative is, of course, “a story with a moral,” and a good deal more than this, for, by the skilful management of the plot, many a salutary lesson is unobtrusively suggested. (D. Lothrop & Co.)

....“MISS BELINDA'S FRIENDS.” By Mary Dwinell Chellis. As a means of setting forth, in a very entertaining way, the need, aims and methods of temperance work, this narrative will undoubtedly prove effective. It covers a good deal of ground and does so thoroughly. The book will be found especially useful in furnishing suggestions as to the methods most likely to be successful in combating intemperance. Apart from its special aim, the story is worth reading for the sake of the healthful stimulus to Christian effort which it imparts. (Nat. Temperance Society.)

....“THE PROFESSOR'S GIRLS” is a wholesome and entertaining story by Annette Lucile Noble. It contrasts disinterestedness and selfishness, open dealing and hypocrisy in a way which proves that it is the product of a clear head, a Christian heart and a cunning hand. (Pres. Board of Publication.)

....“STALL'S LUTHERAN YEAR BOOK FOR 1886.” Edited and published by Rev. Sylvanus Stall, A.M. A well printed and excellent ministerial register and array of church statistics of the Lutheran churches in the United States and abroad.

....“WITHOUT BLEMISH.” To Day's Problem. By Mrs. J. H. Walworth. The negro is fitted to the warmer climate and peculiar occupations of the South, and though he is now free to go where he will and to do what he will in any legitimate line of industry, yet he is in the South to stay. The problem of his future usefulness, now that he is invested with citizenship, is to be solved by a second emancipation from the thrall of mental and moral darkness, through educational advantages. This is the purport of the book. The story is well conceived and written in Mrs. Walworth's masterly and elegant style. As the story unfolds a warm sympathy is kindled in spite of one's self for Olga, the heroine, who is the suffering victim of a most cruel plot, but who in the end scores a glorious triumph. (Cassell & Co.)

Our Library Table.

Periodicals, Serials and Notes.

....Wide Awake is always true to its name, and the February number is especially bright and attractive. The frontispiece, which is a gem of art, introduces the opening poem, “The Nest in the Wind,” by Mary Bradley. “The Eliotsdale Punishment,” “How Daniel Abbott outwitted the Indians,” “Saved by a Kite,” and “Mr. Pepys' Valentine” are entertaining short stories. “Autograph Hunting and Autographs,” by Nora Perry, is a quite delightful article, and the serials by Charles Remington Talbot, Harriet Prescott Spofford and Margaret Sidney will interest many readers.

....The Monthly Interpreter for December last is as usual well stored with instructive matter. Prof. Sayce continues his valuable series, The Old Testament in the Light of Recent Discoveries, discussing in this paper the ethnographical details in the tenth chapter of Genesis. Dr. Shanks writes on the authorship of the second part of Zechariah, adopting, we are sorry to see, the modern opinion that it does not belong to the prophet whose name the book bears, but was written before the exile. He does not pretend to show or even conjecture how, if that were the case, these chapters came to hold the place they have from time immemorial held in the post-exilian book.

....The New Englander for February has a very good article by Prof. Hunt on the Place of English in the College Curriculum and a very timely paper on Municipal Reform. The department of Educational Topics is occupied with Mr. Mason Young's attack on the policy of Yale College and a crushing reply to the same by Treasurer Kingsley and the editor. The Review does excellent work in vindicating the New Haven institutions against bitter and unjust aspersions.

....Outing has come to this city, to 140 Nassau street Mr. Poultney Bigelow has the editorial control, and with him are associated Mr. Theodore Roosevelt and Mr. Cleveland H. Dodge. The magazine has been especially satisfactory in the past and cannot fail to become still more attractive in the future. Mr. Roosevelt assumes no financial or executive responsibility, but becomes a counselling and contributing editor. He will soon begin a series of articles on big game hunting in the Rockies. Mr. Dodge is well known as an expert in wholesome manly exercises. No magazine has had a warmer welcome month by month from us. The papers from evidently accomplished men and women have been so free from conventionalities, so full of the frank and hearty spirit of the out-door life which has been their chief theme, have also been so robust and genial and animated that they have been an intellectual tonic of unspeakable value to men bound by necessity to a life largely sedentary. The lovers of out-door enjoyment cannot afford to neglect the records which occupy the pages of this periodical. The current number contains another section of Mr. Stevens' tour Around the World on a Bicycle—why does he ride on Sunday?—an analysis of the tests by which the “Puritan” and “Priscilla” were tried, a scientific treatment of The Modern Ice-Yacht, and other entertaining illustrated papers, and the usual thorough record of what is going on in the world of Bicycling and Tricycling, Yachting, Canoeing, Tennis, Shooting, etc.

. ..The New York Fashion Bazar is a monthly periodical of seventy four large octavo or quarto pages, each containing three columns of text, abounding in illustrations of the latest styles in the dresses of ladies and children, of head coverings, and of ornaments, and of embroidery patterns. Not being men milliners we are ignorant of the technical terms which ought to be used on this very important matter. There are also stories, short and continued, original and selected, a department in which ladies discuss topics in which they are especially interested, some book reviews, a taste of Social Gossip, a column or two of recipes, and a page of music. The yearly subscription is $3. The publisher is the well-known Mr. George Munro, of the Seaside Library, etc.

....Month after month we wonder at the resources of the editors of The Pansy, and of Our Little Ones and The Nursery. The verses, the stories, the descriptions of natural phenomena are ever fresh, bright and entertaining. No better stories for old as well as young folks than those of The Pansy are to be found anywhere, and the engravings in Our Little Ones are hardly inferior to the best work in the great monthlies.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

Charles Scribner's Sons: Domesticus. A Tale of the Imperial City. By William Allen Butler. 12mo, pp. 281. $1.25; also,

An Apache Campaign in the Sierra Madre. An Account of the Expedition in Pursuit of the Hostile Chiricahua Apaches in the Spring of 1883. By Capt. John G. Bourke. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 112. $1; also

What Does History Teach. By John Stuart Blackie. 16mo, pp. 128. 75 cents.

Macniven & Wallace, Edinburgh, Scotland: Annals of the Disruption; With Extracts from the Narratives of the Ministers Who Left the Scottish Establishment in 1843. By the Rev. Thos. Brown, F.R.S.E. Illustrated. 8vo, pp. 841. 5 shillings.

Thomas Y. Crowell & Co.: Alice Withrow; or, The Summer at Home. By Lucy Randolph Fleming. 12mo, pp. 241. $1.25; also, Transformed. By Faye Huntington. 12mo, pp. 341. $1.25.

Funk & Wagnalls: Saint Augustin, Melanchthon, Neander. Three Biographies. By Philip Schaff. 12mo, pp. 168. $1; also,

Commentary on the Gospel of John, with an Historical and Critical Introduction. By F. Godet. Vol. I. Translated from the Third French Edition, with a Preface, Introductory Suggestions and Additional Notes, by Timothy Dwight. 8vo, pp. 559. Cloth, $3; also,

Old Wells Dug Out: Being a Third Series of Sermons. By T. DeWitt Talmage. 12mo, pp. 432. $2.

Massachusetts New-Church Union: Lectures upon the Doctrines of the New Church. By Rev. John Worcester. Delivered in Newtownville, 1885. 12mo, pp. 97. Cloth.

John J. Hood, Philadelphia: Precious Hymns for Times of Refreshing and Revival. Selected by Thomas Harrison. Musical Editors, John R. Sweney and Wm. J. Kirkpatrick. 12mo, pp. 96. Board, 35 cents.

Oliver Ditson & Co.: Temperance Song-Herald. For the Use of Temperance Meetings, Lodges, and the Home Circle. Compiled by J. C. Macy. 8vo, pp. 112.

Cassell & Co.: General Gordon. By the Rev. S. A. Swaine. With Portrait. 12mo, pp. 128. 50 cents.

Government Printing Office, Washington: Report of the Commissioner of Education for the Year 1883-'84. Octavo, cloth, pp. 943.

UNBOUND BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

Sheet Music: Apple Blossoms. Words by Miss A. Kemp. Music by Johannes Braunschiedl; and

Good-Night My Love, Serenade. Words by the Baroness de Vigne Music by Randolph King. C. H. Ditson & Co., New York; also,

Brother Charlie. Song for Soprano or Tenor. Words by Virginia Townsend. Music by Frederick W. Batcheider; and Where Are the Swallows Fled? Words by Adelaide Proctor. Music by S. A. Sargent. O. Ditson & Co., Boston, Mass.

The Century Magazine versus John Bunyan and Evangelicalism; and The Bible of Our Fathers. James H. Baird, Clarksburgh, W. Va.

Eighth Annual Report of the New York Christian Home for Intemperate Men, 1175 Madison avenue, corner 86th street, for the year 1885.

Circulars of Information of the Bureau of Education. No. 4, 1885. Education in Japan.

Ramblings in Beulah Land: A Continuation of Experiences in the Life of Jennie Smith. No. 1. 16mo, pp. 156. 25 cents. Garrigues Brothers, Philadelphia.

A House Divided Against Itself. A Novel. By Mrs. Oliphant. (No. 511, Harper's Franklin Square Library.) 4to, pp. 82. 20 cents; also, Fortune's Wheel. A Novel. By Alex. Innes Shaud. (No. 54, Harper's Handy Series.) 16mo, pp. 292. 25 cents.

Morgan's Horror. A Romance of the “West Countree.” By George Manville Fenn. (Cassell's “Rainbow” Series.) 12mo, pp. 192. 25 cents; also, Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin. (Cassell's National Library, Vol. I., No. 3.) 16mo, pp. 192. 10 cents.

PERIODICALS.

February.—The Expositor, The Gospel In All Lands, The Phrenological Journal, The English Pulpit of To-Day, The Old Testament Student.

March.—The Quiver, Harper's Monthly Magazine, The Magazine of Art.

THE

GLADSTONE AND HUXLEY

Controversy on the subject of

Science and Genesis

is now being published in

The Popular Science Monthly.

The February number contains Professor Huxley's reply to Mr. Gladstone's first article. In the March number Mr Gladstone replies to Professor Huxley; and the April number will contain the rejoinder by Professor Huxley.

Single numbers, 50 cents.

Yearly subscription, $5.00.

D. APPLETON & CO., Publishers,

1, 3 & 5 BOND ST., N. Y.

ANSON D. F RANDOLPH & CO.

Have now ready the 3d Edition of

THE DIVINE ORIGIN OF CHRISTIANITY

INDICATED BY ITS HISTORICAL EFFECTS.

By RICHARD S. STORRS, D.D., LL.D. 8vo, cloth, $3 0.

"The book will attract special attention because of the comprehensive, concise, and eloquent manner in which existing materials are employed, in accordance with a well-known principle of reasoning. The principle applied by the author is, that the cause is known by its effects, the tree by its fruits; and his proposition virtually is, that Christendom is the proof of Christianity....The reader will find that he is occupied with a piece of close reasoning at the same time he is borne along upon a current of fascinating eloquence....The uncommon union of instruction and argument with literary grace adapts the volume for general circulation. It will be more likely than most works of the kind to get the attention of that considerable number whose belief has been shaken by the skeptical belles-lettres of the day."

Broadway and 20th St., New York.

Sent by mail, prepaid, on receipt of price.

JUST ISSUED

BY THE

Presbyterian Board of Publication.

Half-Hours with the Lessons of 1886.

Forty-eight short sermons on the lessons of 1886 by twenty-four prominent Pastors and Preachers.

Specially prepared to aid Superintendents and Teachers.

12mo. Price, in cloth binding, $1.25. Paper binding, 85c.

Westminster Question Book for 1886.

A manual for teachers and older scholars, containing the Text of the Lesson, Helps for Scholars, Questions, Lesson Plan, Golden Text, Home Studies and Catechism.

Price, 15 cents, net.

My Soul, Thou Hast Much Goods.

BY HELEN R. EDSON.

24mo. Fancy Paper Cover. Price, 25 cents

Golden Promises.

SELECTED FROM GOD'S WORD.

BY REV. SAMUEL FULTON.

24mo. Fancy Paper Cover. Price, 25 cents.

Address orders to

JOHN A. BLACK, Business Sup't,

1334 CHESTNUT ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Or, Ward & Drummond, 116 Nassau St, New York, N. Y.

OUR New Catalogue of Books for family, Sunday-school, ministers, students, or teachers' Library will be sent free to any address on receipt of a postal request. Address PHILLIPS & HUNT, Publishers, 805 Broadway, New York.

EDUCATIONAL.

UNIVERSITY

of the City of New York.

JOHN HALL, D.D., LL.D., Chancellor.

1. DEPARTMENT OF ARTS, Tuition Free.
2. DEPARTMENT OF SCIENCE, Tuition Free.
3. SCHOOL OF CIVIL ENGINEERING, Tuition $100
4. DEPARTMENT OF LAW.
5. DEPARTMENT OF MEDICINE.

 Catalogues, with full particulars of all Courses, may be had upon application to the Registrar.

BEST TEACHERS AMERICAN and FOREIGN, promptly provided for Families, Schools, Colleges Skilled Teachers supplied with Positions. Circulars of Good Schools free to Parents. School Property rented and sold. School and Kindergarten Material, etc.

J. W. SCHERMERHORN & CO.,

AMERICAN SCHOOL INSTITUTE, 7 East 14th St., N. Y

SCHOOL SONG BOOKS.

For High Schools, Seminaries, &c.

Song Greeting.
(60 cts. or $6 per doz.) By L. O. Emerson. A really admirable collection of good songs.

High School Book of Song.
(75 cts. or $8 per doz.) By E. Leslie. Fine collection of the best Part-Songs, Duets, &c

Song Reader. Book 2.
(60 cts. or $5 per doz.) By Emerson and Brown. Practical note reader, with good music.

Public School Hymnal.
(40 cts. or $3.60 per doz By Irving Emerson. Large collection of well chosen hymns and tunes.

Welcome Chorus, by W. S. Tilden.

High School Choir, by Emerson & Tilden.

Laurel Wreath, by W. O. Perkins, are three very successful High School Song Books. Price, each, $1 or $9 per doz.

For Common Schools.

American School Music Readers, Book 1 (35 cts.), Book 2 (50 cts.), Book 3 (50 cts.), by Emerson & Tilden, are increasingly popular in graded schools.

Song Bells, by L. O. Emerson, and

Golden Robin, by W. O. Perkins, are two very popular general collections of genial school songs. Price of each, 50 cts. or $4.80 per doz.

Any book mailed for retail price.

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston.
Chas. H. Ditson & Co., 867 Broadway, N. Y.

CHOIR LEADERS

Are aware of the fact that the greatest musical need of the choir is good, new Scripture and Hymn Anthems for opening, closing, and occasional use. This need the "MUSICAL VISITOR" proposes to supply every month. It will have in each number enough to last a choir until the next issue. In addition to this, there will be a number of fine Organ Voluntaries, while in the reading department will be found the usual assortment of Sketches, Stories, Essays, and articles of special interest to choir and chorus members.

Choice Anthems and Choir Pieces

Subscription, $1.50 a year.

In Clubs of 5 or more, $1.00 each.

A sample copy of January "Visitor" containing 3 Anthems and 2 Voluntaries, will be mailed to any address for ten cents. Address

THE JOHN CHURCH CO.,
CINCINNATI, O.

ANTHEM BOOKS.

Sure to Give Satisfaction.

DIAMOND COLLECTION.—DANKS.
64 pp., Paper, $3.60 per doz.; 35c. each by Mail.

ESTIVAL ANTHEMS.—DANKS.
64 pp., Paper, $3 60 per doz.; 35c. each by Mail.

ALMER'S BOOK OF ANTHEMS.
Boards, $9.00 per doz.; $1.00 each by Mail.

EMPLE ANTHEMS.—LOWRY & DOANE.
Boards, $12.00 per doz.; $1.25 each by Mail.

CHORAL ANTHEMS.—DANKS.
Boards, $13.50 per doz.; $1.50 each by Mail.

ENGLISH ANTHEMS.—LASAR.
Cloth, $24.00 per doz.; $2.25 each by Mail.

☞ A Full Catalogue Sent on Request.

BIGLOW & MAIN, 76 East Ninth St., N. Y.
81 Randolph St., Chicago.

FOR ONE MONTH.

GREAT BARGAINS IN THEOLOGICAL, SUNDAY-SCHOOL AND MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS. FAMILY AND TEACHERS' BIBLES A SPECIALTY.

Come and see at

N. TIBBALS & SONS,
124 Nassau St., New York City.

POPULAR LECTURES.

SUBJECTS

1.—The Romance of the Revolution.
2.—An Evening with Longfellow
3.—The Tudors
4.—Monologue—National Poems and Events

Address MRS. E. T. BARRETT,

SING SING, N. Y

GEO. MATHER'S SONS, PRINTING INK

Manufacturers. Superior Black and Colored Ink Lithographic and Plate Ink. Varnishes, etc. 60 John street New York.

The Intelligencer is printed with our ink.

LADIES WANTED, to work for us at their own homes. $7 to $10 per week can be easily made; no canvassing; fascinating and steady employment. Particulars and sample of the work sent for stamp. Address HOME MF'G CO., P. O. Box 1916 Boston, Mass

A. S. BARNES & CO., Publishers of the authorized Hymn and Tune Book for the Reformed Church in America. Write for introductory terms 111 and 113 WILLIAM STREET, NEW YORK

WANTED LADIES AND GENTLEMEN who wish to make $5 to $4 a day easily at their own homes. Work sent by mail. No canvassing. Address with stamp, Crown Mfg. Co., 294 Vine St., Cin'ti, O.

FORTY-FIRST ANNUAL REPORT

—OF THE—

NEW-YORK LIFE INSURANCE CO.

Office: Nos. 346 & 348 Broadway, New York.

JANUARY 1, 1886.

Amount of Net Cash Assets, January 1, 1885 ..... $57,835,998 45

REVENUE ACCOUNT.

Premiums	$13,517,426 03
Less deferred premiums, January 1, 1885	795,323 00	$12,722,103 03
Interest and rents (including realized gains on Securities and Real Estate sold)	3,859,577 47
Less Interest accrued January 1, 1885	460,507 76	3,399,069 71	$16,121,172 74
			$73,957,171 19

DISBURSEMENT ACCOUNT.

Losses by death, including reversionary additions to same	$2,999,169 64
Endowments, matured and discounted, including reversionary additions to same	741,767 47
Annuities, dividends, and purchased policies	3,940,999 64
Total Paid Policy-holders	$7,681,873 75
Taxes and re-insurances	250,142 32
Commissions, brokerages, agency expenses and physicians' fees	2,024,000 70
Office and law expenses, salaries, advertising, printing, &c.	488,546 62	$10,444,553 19
		$63,512,618 00

ASSETS.

Cash in bank on hand, and in transit (since received)	$2,042,542 60
U. S. Bonds and other bonds and stocks (market value, $36,991,923 88	33,640,220 56
Real Estate	6,825,532 63
Bonds and Mortgages, first lien on real estate (buildings insured for $16,500,000 and the policies assigned to the Company as additional collateral security)	18,15 ,500 00
Temporary Loans (market value of securities held as collateral, $5 4,450 0)	451 500 00
*Loans on existing policies (the reserve held by the Company on these policies amounts to over $2,000,000 00)	416,034 15
*Quarterly and semi-annual premiums on existing policies, due subsequent to January 1, 188	878,161 65
*Premiums on existing policies in course of transmission and collection. (The Reserve on these policies, included in Liabilities, is estimated at $955,000)	575,699 50
Agents' balances	68,142 73
Accrued Interest on investments, January 1, 1886	43 ,284 18	$63,513,618 05
Market value of securities over cost on Company's books		3,351,703 32

*A detailed schedule of these items will accompany the usual annual report filed with the Insurance Department of the State of New York.

CASH ASSETS, January 1 1886 ..... $66,864,321 32

Appropriated as follows:

Adjusted losses, due subsequent to January 1, 1886	$144 424 01
Reported losses, awaiting proof, &c	248,424 12
Matured endowments, due and unpaid (claims not presented)	41,854 06
Annuities due and unpaid (uncalled for)	10,595 21
Reserved for re-insurance on existing policies; participating insurance at 4 per cent Carlisle net premium; non-participating at 5 per cent Carlisle net premium	56,200,875 00
Reserved for contingent liabilities to Tontine Dividend Fund, January 1, 1885, over and above a 4 per cent reserve on existing policies of that class	$2,633,796 70
Addition to the Fund during 1885	952,683 31
	$3,586,480 01
DEDUCT— Returned to Tontine policy-holders during the year on matured Tontines	462,737 24
Balance of Tontine Fund January 1, 1886	3,123,742 77
Reserved for premiums paid in advance	29,934 3
		$59,799 848 19
Divisible Surplus (Company's Standard)		$7 064,473 13
Surplus by the New York State Standard, at 4½ per cent		$13,225,053 94

From the undivided surplus of $7,064,473 13 the Board of Trustees has declared a Reversionary dividend to participating policies in proportion to their contribution to surplus, available on settlement of next annual premium.

Surplus:
JAN. 1, 1885 :—Company's Standard, $4,371,014; State Standard, $9,896,773
JAN. 1, 1886 :—Company's Standard, 7,064,473; State Standard, 13,225,053
INCREASE :—Company's Standard, $2,693,459; State Standard, $3,328,280

Death-claims paid.	Income from Interest.	Insurance in force.	Cash Assets.
1881, $2,013,203	1881, $2,432,654	Jan. 1, 1882, $151,760,824	Jan. 1, 1882, $47,238,781
1882, 1,955,292	1882, 2,798,018	" 1883, 171,415,097	" 1883, 50,500,346
1883, 2,263,032	1883, 2,712,863	" 1884, 198,736,043	" 1884, 55,542,902
1884, 2,257,175	1884, 2,971,624	" 1885, 229,382,586	" 1885, 59,283,753
1885, 2,999,109	1885, 3,399,069	" 1886, 259,674,500	" 1886, 66,864,321

During the year 18,566 policies have been issued, insuring $68,521,452.

TRUSTEES.

William H Appleton, William A. Booth, Elias S. Higgins, Archibald H. Welch, Henry Bowers, Loomis L White, Robert B. Collins, Richard Muser, Edward Martin, Henry Tuck, Alex. Studwell, C. C. Baldwin, R. Suydam Grant, George H. Potts, William L Strong, William H. Beers.

THEODORE M. BANTA, Cashier.
D. ODELL, Superintendent of Agencies.
A. HUNTINGTON, M.D., Medical Director.

WILLIAM H. BEERS, President.
HENRY TUCK, Vice-President.
ARCHIBALD H. WELCH, 2d Vice-Pres.
RUFUS W. WEEKS, Actuary.

HIGHLAND PARK

VOLUSIA COUNTY, FLORIDA.

Parties desiring to purchase Land in Florida should visit and examine this Beautifully located Town before purchasing elsewhere. Situated on a bluff of high rolling land, one of the highest points in Volusia county, and noted for the fertility of the soil. Some of the CHOICE ORANGE GROVES of the State are in this vicinity. The natural attractions of this place are unsurpassed, and the fine climate here helps to make this Town one of the most attractive places for those wishing to make a winter home

FOR ORANGE CULTURE It has no superior, and the lands are also adapted to the culture of Vegetables and the smaller fruits. Some of the Finest Garden Lands in Florida may be found here.

HIGHLAND PARK is located directly on the main line of the Jacksonville, Tampa and Key West Railroad, 104 miles south of Jacksonville, and three-fourths of a mile east of good steamboat landing. The town has been beautifully laid out in good sized building lots, adjoining and near which are tracts in any size to suit purchasers, both pine and hammock lands. Bargains are now being offered to ACTUAL SETTLERS such as will not be found in any other part of the State. Parties wishing to secure one of the best spots in Florida for either a winter or permanent home, should inspect the rare chance now offered. Lots and Lands will be sold on EASY TERMS.

THE HIGHLAND PARK HOTEL Is situated a few rods from the railroad depot, fronting on the beautiful and picturesque Highland Park. This Hotel is now open for the reception of guests. It has all the modern improvements, including Gas, Electric Bells, Hot and Cold Water Baths, pure Water and a perfect system of drainage. In fact this Hotel is one of the most complete and best furnished in the State, outside of the large cities. No pains will be spared to make the guests comfortable. The house is delightfully situated in a grove of oak and magnolia, and helps to form one of the most attractive places in Florida. The Hotel is kept by E. H. SANBORN & CO., of White Mountains, N. H. Persons desirous of spending the winter in Florida, or wishing to make a winter or permanent home, will do well to call and examine Highland Park before locating elsewhere. For further information or particulars, call on or address,

GEO. H. NORRIS, P. O. Spring Garden Centre, Volusia County, Florida.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY

GOOD NEWS TO LADIES.

Greatest inducements ever offered. Now's your time to get up orders for our celebrated Teas and Coffees, and secure a beautiful Gold Band or Moss Rose China Tea Set, or Handsome Decorated Gold Band or Moss Rose Dinner Set, or Gold Band Moss Decorated Toilet Set. For full particulars address

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO.,
P. O. Box 289, 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

CARDS 60 Fancy Pictures, and 25 elegant Cards in Gilt Edge, Silk Fringe, Hidden Name, &c., 1 Songster, 1 850 Prize Puzzles, and 8 parlor games, all for 10cts. Game of Authors, 10cts.

IVORY CO., Clintonville, Conn.

WANTED An active Man or Woman in every county to sell our goods. Salary $75 per Month and Expenses. Canvassing Outfit and Particulars FREE.

STANDARD SILVER-WARE CO., Boston, Mass.

The Church.

"For Thy Great Mercies, O Lord, Hear."

Dan. 9: 18, 19.

O FATHER, for Thy love!
O Saviour, for Thy grace!
O Comforter, as heaven above
Be this Thy dwelling-place.

O for the promised gift!
O for the gracious rain!
Let not Thy Church, O Lord, uplift
Her hungering prayers in vain.

O for the touch of power!
O for the tongues of flame!
O for the coming of the hour
To glorify Thy name.

O for the tender heart!
O for the loving fear!
Blest Holy One, the gift impart
Thy still, small voice to hear.

Here on this holy ground,
While we in reverence wait,
May Thy rich blessing, Lord, be found
Before the mercy-gate.

Hasten the rising sun!
O drive away the night!
Soon may Thy sovereign will be done,
Thy kingdom come in might.

—Thomas Mackeller, in Presbyterian.

True, But a Pity.

A PASTOR in a neighboring city told us the other day that he and a fellow-pastor were led to "launch out into the deep," and went down into one of the worst districts of their city and began some Gospel work. God immediately blessed their efforts and a number of souls were brought to Christ, hopefully saved. In their zeal, the pastors invited these saved ones from the "lower classes" to come to their churches, as there were no churches in their neighborhood. Well, these "young converts" came. And, moreover, in the weekly prayer meeting they began to tell what the Lord had done for them. Their clothes were not of the best; their manners not of the most refined; their mode of speech and expression not in accordance with that used in the drawing rooms of the best people. Upon the whole, the pastor said, their people were so shocked at this apparition of "common sinners" in their midst that the officers of the church advised them to give up their work among the "lapsed masses" if there was to be an incursion of such people into their churches and prayer meetings. In our solemn judgment, nothing better could happen to the Church of God than to have an infusion of just such "new blood," if we may so speak, into our respectable churches and congregations. Whenever Christianity grows away from the down trodden by sin, and the degraded poor, it has grown away from its primitive type. Whenever the fellowship of Christ and Christ's people begins to be bounded by social lines, then it ceases. There ought to be one place on this footstool where the rich and the poor meet together and find an equality in the common kinship which binds us to Christ and to each other—Words and Weapons.

Spurgeon on Verbosity and "Lastly."

ENDEAVOR with all your might to avoid verbosity. Say as much as you can in a few words. If you can say a thing well in twenty-five words, try to say it as well in twelve; and if it be possible to cut these down to six, give your mind to it. Some things you may reduce even more than this by never saying them at all. Wordiness is the disease which comes of fluency. Good speakers have most cause to dread it. After listening to a very good brother the other day, I could not help repeating to myself the chorus of one of the revival hymns, "Beautiful words! Beautiful words! Beautiful words!" There was nothing else, not a striking thought in a bushelful; but, oh, such beautiful words! It was once my painful privilege to hear a good brother, now in heaven, who was great at making much palatable soup with a mere morsel of meat. When he was preaching, or speaking, he used to say, in the space of half an hour, about as much as one could think of in half a minute. He would expand the subject so admirably that, while you listened, you thought it was very wonderful; and when he had done, you squeezed up the matter in your hand, and lo, there was nothing! Oh, how one sighed for a solid inch of thought in lieu of acres of verbiage!

Once more, let me hint to you that it is cruel to make your hearers hope that you are about to close, and then go on again. I have suffered this wrong from brethren at the prayer meeting. I have felt sure that the friend meant to pull up, and he has gone on again, without apology or reason. I am sure it must be dreadful when a preacher says, "To conclude," and then "finally," and then "lastly," and then "finally and lastly." A divine, who is still in the body, is never very lively, but he has great gifts in holding on. When you think he has done, he issues a supplement, which is almost always headed, "Another blessed thought!" His hearers' thoughts are not always blessed, and they often agree with the American who said, "Oh, that the man would quit!" "One word more," said a speaker, "and I am done." And the reporters found, when the word was written down, that it contained fifteen hundred syllables. The famous word of Aristophanes was outdone. That same speaker often says, "a single remark," and then talks for fifteen minutes.

More City Churches.

IN Philadelphia our brethren seem to have a conception of the importance of possessing the new land, and are constantly planting mission chapels in the new neighborhoods, but as a general thing no such wisdom directs our denominational mission efforts. Brooklyn Baptists have been content for years to spend over two-thirds of their missionary funds on several churches, with little chance for growth, in various places on Long Island, while in their own great city almost all the progress that is made in planting or sustaining new churches, is through individual and unorganized efforts. New York Baptists may be satisfied with the results of their missionary operations, and think that the money raised is used to the best possible advantage, but surely in the metropolis far more ought to be done in planting new churches, which will soon be self-supporting, than we have seen in the past.

When any Christian man looks upon our cities on Sundays and compares them with the past, can he avoid alarm? The open stores which force themselves on his attention in so many of our avenues, the crowds who are madly rushing in the pursuit of pleasure, and the places of amusement which are thrown open, all indicate that vast numbers of our people are drifting away from the old moorings. Nothing is being done, proportionately to the needs of the times, to sanctify the manhood of our nation. If a new church is started it is often handicapped with debt, and the people who attend it have the need of money to sustain it impressed in their minds more than they do Gospel truth. Many people from the very inability to contribute to sustain a church as they feel would be expected of them, drift out of church life altogether. It is high time that our stronger churches considered their duties to their own cities. Provision ought to be made for founding new churches, and there ought to be faith enough to send forth numerous and efficient colonies to commence with, and funds ought to be supplied that the bug-bear of heavy debt and insufficient income shall not frighten people of moderate means away.—Baptist Weekly.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Work in the West.

TO the Sunday-school of the Reformed Church of Harlem, N. Y., a missionary of the American Sunday-School Union reports a recent tour among their schools in northwestern Arkansas, southwestern Missouri and the northern Indian Territory, in which he delivered 11 sermons, 12 addresses, attended two Sunday-school conventions, and visited many families, supplying them with Bibles and Testaments. He gave a Testament to each of five daughters of a blind widow, a Bible to a poor widow, and one to a widow whose husband had just been murdered, and to a Christian Indian woman, and to a poor old man.

From all quarters come glad tidings of conversions in the schools of the Union.

Home Readings.

Lesson 9, First Quarter.

M. The Work Hindered ..... Ezra 4: 1-24.
T. The New Decree..... Ezra 6: 1-13.
W. The People Encouraged..... Hag. 2: 1-8.
T. The Temple Dedicated..... Ezra 6: 14-22.
F. Ezra's Commission..... Ezra 7: 1-28.
S. His Journey to Jerusalem..... Ezra 8: 15-36.
S. Nehemiah's Prayer..... Neh. 1: 1-11.

—From the Westminster Question Book.

International Sunday-School Lesson.

BY REV. JOHN C. VAN DEVENTER.

Feb. 28th.—"Nehemiah's Prayer."—Neh. 1: 1-11.

Golden Text.—"Give us help from trouble; for vain is the help of man."—Ps. 108: 12.

Central Truth.—"Cast thy burden on the Lord; and he shall sustain thee."—Ps. 55: 22.

INTRODUCTION.

ABOUT twenty years after the return of the exiles to Jerusalem the temple was completed and dedicated to the worship of Jehovah. As time went on it became evident that something more than a temple was necessary in order to preserve the people of God as a peculiar people. Mixed marriages with surrounding heathen; the disregard of the Sabbath; and other evils springing out of these caused a rapid and dreadful demoralization of the people. Thirteen years before the event recorded in our lesson Ezra had led a second company of pilgrims back to Judea, and had succeeded in accomplishing a partial and temporary reform. In spite of his work, however, the prospect was extremely discouraging to the patriot or faithful follower of Jehovah, who longed for the former glory and purity of the city of God. Ninety years had elapsed since the first return when Nehemiah was led to go up to Jerusalem to try and help his struggling brethren. Our lesson tells us how he was brought to give himself to this great and arduous task.

THE LESSON.

I. THE BURDEN CARRIED.—vs. 1-4.

V. 1.—"The words of Nehemiah the son of Hachaliah." We know nothing more than this about the family of this man, but it is generally supposed that he was of royal descent. His name, meaning "Comfort of Jehovah," is well suited to his character and work. "In the month Chisleu." The Jewish month corresponding with part of November and December. "In the twentieth year." Following the Persian chronology and dating by the reign of Artaxerxes. "As I was in Shushan the palace." Shushan or Susa is a name applied interchangeably to the palace and the capital city. It was situated east from Babylon and about a thousand miles from Jerusalem.

V. 2.—"Hanani one of my brethren, came." It is not stated that Hanani and his companions had been sent to Shushan for the purpose of obtaining help, but it is certainly probable "I asked them concerning the Jews." It is very evident that Nehemiah's heart was at Jerusalem long before he went there in person. His separation at so great a distance, and his high office at the court did not weaken his sympathy with his brethren.

V. 3.—"The remnant that are left of the captivity there in the province are in great affliction and reproach." The visitors have no rose colored picture to present. They represent the returned exiles as both in trouble and disgrace. The enmity of jealous neighbors, and the wickedness of unfaithful Jews had united to bring about this sad state of things. "The wall of Jerusalem is broken down, and the gates thereof are burned with fire."

At first this statement seems to refer to some recent disaster, but we have no record that any attempt had been made as yet, to enclose the city with walls, and the words must refer to the desolation of the city at the time of its destruction, and to the fact that the ruins still laid about the place, while the city still was defenceless.

V. 4.—"When I heard these words." It is hardly possible that Nehemiah had had no previous intimation of how matters were going at Jerusalem, but he evidently did not realize the full extent of the trouble until this time. "I sat down and wept, and mourned....and fasted, and prayed." These words describe the state of Nehemiah's feelings during about four months, or from the time of his receiving this news until the opportunity was presented for laying the matter before the king. It is not necessary to suppose that he absented himself from court during this interval, but only that the thought of his struggling and sinning countrymen was seldom out of his mind. He knew that tears and fasting could not help his brethren, so he prayed for guidance and blessing in the practical scheme which he was entertaining.

II. THE BURDEN CAST OFF.—vs. 5-11.

V. 5.—The prayer of Nehemiah may be regarded as in many respects a model, and is worthy of detailed examination. "O Lord God of heaven." The prayer opens with a recognition of the national and universal dominion of God—Lord over Jews, Gentiles, and the universe. The more we exalt God in our thoughts, the greater will be our confidence in prayer. "The great and terrible God." We wonder that he should have chosen these aspects of the Divine character as the basis of his plea, but he knew that these very attributes, while they aggravated the guilt of sinners and made punishment a necessity, also secured the faithful observance of promises. The justice of God is as important an element of the Christian's faith as it is of the sinner's doom. "That keepeth covenant and mercy." Each clause brings us nearer to the heart of God. This prayer is addressed to Him who chose Abraham, and entered into covenant with him, and who had during all the intervening time been fulfilling that covenant, even when visiting for sin. "For them that love him and observe his commandments." This covenant faithfulness is no excuse for sin, but is an encouragement to confess and forsake sin, and so Nehemiah used it.

V. 6.—The next characteristic of this prayer which we notice is its honest confession of sin. Some prayers are made up largely of fault finding with God or our fellows. Nehemiah recognized sin as the cause of disaster, and seeks for better times through becoming better men. "Confess the sins of the children of Israel." Their sins which had led them into captivity, as well as those more recently committed which hindered the return of God's favor upon them. "Both I and my father's house have sinned." He identifies himself with the nation in this confession. Perhaps he recognizes the fact that he had sinned by not going up to Jerusalem before this to share the hardships and opportunities there met with.

V. 7.—We have dealt very corruptly against thee." There is here no attempt to shift or deny responsibility. He comes as a sinner and seeks pardon and cleansing. The different words used to express the requirements of God are employed here in order to emphasize the extent and degree of the corruption confessed.

V. 8.—"Remember I beseech thee the word that thou com- mandest thy servant Moses." No mention is made of future amendment as a plea for present mercy, there is no rehearsing the virtues of some of the heroes of Jewish history, but simply an appeal to the Word of the LORD. This is the only sure foundation on which to base our prayers or our hopes. "If ye transgress, I will scatter you." Why should Nehemiah refer to this threat? Simply because the fulfillment of it to the very letter was a guarantee that the accompanying promise would be fulfilled.

V. 9.—"But if ye turn unto me." As disaster had followed turning away from God, blessing was conditioned upon returning to Him. "And keep my commandments and do them." The turning was not to be merely saying "Lord, Lord," but doing the things which He had said. "Though there were of you cast out unto the uttermost part of the heaven." The enormity of the guilt, or the greatness of the consequent disaster was to be no bar to the mercy of a reconciled God. "Yet will I gather them from thence." So God is gathering His scattered people out of the nations. Nehemiah does not quote any one passage of Scripture but uses the substance of the entire covenant at Sinai.

V. 10—"Now these are thy servants and thy people." We can imagine how it strengthened Nehemiah's faith to be able to bear his people before the LORD in this way. So may we bring the children of the covenant to the God of all mercies for a blessing. "Whom thou has redeemed." The former mercies had not depended upon the deserts of the people, and now blessings could be sought from the God of grace. He that had begun the work of redeeming a people unto himself would not leave that work half finished.

V. 11.—"Let now thine ear be attentive to the prayer of thy servant, and to the prayers of thy servants, who desire to fear thy name." This first specific petition seeks for grace for repentance and reformation. Help within is sought before help without is asked for. "Prosper thy servant this day." He evidently had the plan in mind which he was ultimately enabled to carry out. He knew that it must fail without God's blessing, and that it could not fail with His blessing. "Grant him mercy in the sight of this man." Humanly speaking, everything depended upon the mood of the king. Yet Nehemiah knew that He who had moved Cyrus to order the rebuilding of the temple could lead Artaxerxes to consent to the project now under consideration. "For I was the king's cupbearer." His official position is mentioned only incidentally in order to prepare the way for the story contained in the next chapter. We can only state that Nehemiah's prayer was heard, that the king consented to his plan, and that he succeeded in doing a blessed work at Jerusalem.

LESSONS FOR TO-DAY.

1. Duty finds us wherever we may be.
2. "If one member suffer, all the members suffer with it."
3. "Pray for the peace of Jerusalem; they shall prosper that love thee."
4. "God is our refuge and strength."
5. The faithfulness of God is the foundation of our faith.
6. Prayer without the confession of sin is vain.
7. God's word does not return unto Him void.
8. God prospers His servants in answer to their prayers.

The Old, Old Story.

IT was not told by a minister, not even in the Sunday school, but in the home of a devoted teacher to a congregation of one. This is the way the story was told, and this is the way it went down into one human heart.

A poor ragged boy was found one Sunday by the teacher among the regular scholars of her class. The lady had no idea how the thing happened. But there the boy was in his pitiful plight, and the other boys were having a little fun over the awkwardness and poverty of the stranger. The teacher drew the boy close to her side, and asked his name. Hanging is head he muttered, "My name is Jimmy."

"How old are you?" was asked, with other questions which drew out the fact that the boy was ten years old, and that he could not read. The case was so pitiful that the teacher only whispered, "I want you to go home with me after school."

At length the teacher was seated in the house with the strange boy, to whom she gave an apple to make him feel at home, when the conversation went along something like this:

"Jimmy, is your mother living?"

"I never had any mother as I knowed of. I allers lived with Benjamin, the bone-picker."

"Well, Jimmy, I hope you love Jesus."

"Jesus, who is He?"

"Why, Jimmy, you must have heard of Jesus—stop and think."

With an honest and wondering look the boy replied, "Upon my word and honor I never heard tell on Him. I suppose He is some big gentleman that wouldn't speak to Jimmy."

The teacher had never before met a person that had not heard of Jesus. At first a strange chill came over her, and next a thrill of joy at being permitted to tell the story of the Cross to another for the first time. A prayer was sent up—"Lord help me," and the lady went on talking of Jesus. The boy listened with a stare of bewilderment; his gaze was riveted more and more upon his teacher as he drew closer and closer to her until his elbow rested on her lap. Tears came, filling his eyes and running down his cheeks, when he said, "It seems awful strange; nobody ever told me before that Jesus died for me. Are you sure there is no mistake about it? I allers thought I was of no account anyhow. Please tell me where they buried Him. I wish I could put some flowers on His grave."

When the teacher could recover her self-control after the pathos of these words, she said, "Jimmy, I have not told you the best of all. The grave could not hold Jesus," and she went on to tell the boy about the resurrection and ascension. Her listener was spell-bound, as he heard still further of Christ's praying for Jimmy, and that He was just as near to him as the boy was to the teacher, and that Jesus had a home for him in heaven by-and-by.

The story had now penetrated Jimmy's heart, and he said, "I don't see how anybody could help loving One that died for 'em; but how can I tell what He wants me to do? I can't see Him, nor hear Him talk. I wish I had seen Him before He died."

The teacher went on to tell about the Bible, about the strength Christ gives to them who try to obey Him, and how near we can all be to Him now that He is risen from the dead.

Jimmy said inquiringly, "You told me that Jesus would come and live in my heart but I know He won't stay where there is so much badness. Only yesterday I tried to steal some apples, and when I feel awful hungry, I just think I could steal anything. How can I get this awful feelin' out of me, so as to be good?" to which the teacher replied by telling more of the love of Christ and His cleansing blood.

"Now please, teacher," said the boy, "won't you tell Mr. Jesus who I am? I don't know how to ask Him, as long as I can't see Him. Mebbe I won't ask Him mannerly-like, and He won't answer me."

The teacher replied that praying is talking to Jesus. "You can tell Him just what you want, and ask Him for it."

"Well," replied Jimmy, "I think I would like to have you tell Him about me first, for you have known Him so long, and He will take more notice of Jimmy if somebody comes with Him."

They knelt in prayer, the teacher introducing Jimmy to Jesus, as the boy expressed it. Then in honest and rude faith Jimmy said: "I feel so well acquainted with Him now, you bet it won't be the last time I'll talk to Him."

The boy took up his old torn cap, as if hurrying away, when the teacher said: "What is your hurry, Jimmy?"

In a subdued and confidential tone the boy replied: "I want to hurry home and tell Benjamin about Jesus; he is so sickly like, and it would be an awful thing if he should die and not hear about Jesus." Then, half covering his mouth with his hand, he whispered, "And he told me to steal the apples, and that is why I am in such a hurry. Good-by."

This is a real incident. Such paganism may be found within pistol shot of our church spires. Here we see the charm of the old, old story, as fresh and powerful as ever. How many of us could tell the story so simply? What Christianity wants most to-day is not a better philosophy, but lives so true and hearts so loving that it shall not be so hard to get the story told.—Rev. F. G. Clark, D.D., in The Evangelist.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate

Valuable in Indigestion.

Dr. DANIEL T. NELSON, Chicago, says: "I find it a pleasant and valuable remedy in indigestion, particularly in overworked men."

Catarrh Cured

Catarrh is a very prevalent disease, with distressing and offensive symptoms. Hood's Sarsaparilla gives ready relief and speedy cure, from the fact it acts through the blood, and thus reaches every part of the system.

"I suffered with catarrh fifteen years. Took Hood's Sarsaparilla and I am not troubled any with catarrh, and my general health is much better." I. W. LILLIS, Postal Clerk Chicago & St. Louis Railroad.

"I suffered with catarrh 6 or 8 years; tried many wonderful cures, inhalers, etc., spending nearly one hundred dollars without benefit. I tried Hood's Sarsaparilla, and was greatly improved." M. A. ABBEY, Worcester, Mass.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by three peculiarities: 1st, the combination of remedial agents; 2d, the proportion; 3d, the process of securing the active medicinal qualities. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown. Send for book containing additional evidence.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over." J. P. THOMPSON, Register of Deeds, Lowell, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla beats all others, and is worth its weight in gold." I. BARRINGTON, 130 Bank Street, New York City.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Made only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

YOU CAN DYE ANYTHING ANY COLOR

With Diamond Dyes, for 10 cts. They never fail. 32 fast colors. They also make inks, color photo's, etc. Send for colored samples and Dye book. Gold, Silver, Copper and Bronze Paints for any use—only 10 cents a pk'ge. Druggists sell or we send post-paid.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

FINANCIAL.

7 PER CENT. INTEREST FIRST MORTGAGE FARM LOANS.

Personal acquaintance with lands and values. Over 2,000 loans made. NO CUSTOMER has ever LOST A DOLLAR of principal or interest on any loans made here. Interest collected and sent to you, free of cost, each year. These loans are very safe, and pay nearly U.S. BONDS, known and recommended by leading business men and clergymen, East and West—men for whom I have been making these investments for TEN YEARS PAST.

REFERENCES.

REV. WM. L. GAGE, D.D., Hartford, Ct.
M. E. GATES, PH.D., LL.D., President Rutgers College, New Brunswick, N. J.
DR. WM. J. MILNE, President Geneseo Normal School, Geneseo, N. Y.
HON. E. M. TOPLIFF, Manchester, N. H.
REV. JOHN W. RAY, Lake City, Minn.
DR. JNO. K. BUCKLYN, Mystic Bridge, Ct.
Importers' and Traders' National Bank, New York.
First National Bank, St. Paul, Minn.
The Congregationalist, Boston, N. Y. Observer, and hundreds of others in all parts of the United States.

All are pleased with my Investments. Circular, references, letters giving experience and testimony of old customers, and a New Map of Dakota sent free on application. Mention this paper. Address

E. P. GATES,
Pres. Merchant's Bank,
Grand Forks, Dakota.

7% NET

Security 3 to 6 times loan. INTEREST semi-annual and paid at your home. 29th year of residence, and 10th of business. No investor ever had to pay taxes, costs of foreclosure, wait for interest, or take land. BEST of References all around you. Write if you have money to loan.

D. S. B. JOHNSTON & SON,
Negotiators of Mortgage Loans,
MENTION THIS PAPER. St. Paul, Minn

6%, 7%, 8%.

The American Investment Company, of Emmetsburg, Iowa, incorporated, with a paid-up capital of $500,000, with branches at Huron and Mitchell, Dakota, offer First Mortgage Farm Loans in Iowa, Minn., Dakota, and Neb., both Principal and Interest Guaranteed. Also 6 per cent. Debenture Bonds (obligations of the Company), running 10 years, secured by Mortgage loans deposited with the Mercantile Trust Co., N. Y. It also issues Demand Certificates of Deposit at 5 per cent. interest. Write for pamphlet and references.

Home Office, Emmetsburg, Iowa.
E. S. Ormsby, Pres., 150 Nassau St., N. Y.

INVEST

Through the Sound and Reliable

WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE CO.

F. M. PERKINS, President, LAWRENCE, KAN. L. H. PERKINS, Secretary.

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS, $250,000.

Carefully selected 1st Mortgage Farm Loans payable in N. Y. Unrivalled facilities. Absolute satisfaction. 10 years' experience. No losses. Refer to 3d Nat'l Bank, N.Y. City; Nat'l Bank, Lawrence, Kan.; and Hundreds of Investors. Send for pamphlet, forms and full information. Branch Offices in N. Y. City, Albany & Phila. N.Y. Office, 137 B'way, C.C. Hine & Son, Agts.

CURE FOR THE DEAF

Peck's Patent Improved Cushioned Ear Drums

PERFECTLY RESTORE THE HEARING, and perform the work of the Natural Drum. Always in position, but invisible to others and comfortable to wear. All Conversation and even whispers heard distinctly. We refer to those using them. Send for illustrated book with testimonials, free. Address, F. HISCOX, 853 Broadway, N. Y. Mention this paper.

ATLANTIC Mutual Insurance Co.

NEW YORK OFFICE, 51 WALL STREET

ORGANIZED 1842.

Insures against Marine and Inland Navigation Risks.

And will issue Policies making Loss payable in England.

Assets for the Security of its Policies are more than TEN MILLION DOLLARS.

The profits of the Company revert to the assured and are divided annually, upon the Premiums terminated during the year, Certificates for which are issued, bearing interest in accordance with its Charter.

J. D. JONES, President.
CHARLES DENNIS, Vice President
W. H. H. MOORE, 2d Vice Pres't.
A. A. RAVEN 3d Vice Pres't.
J. H. CHAPMAN, Secretary.

CONTINENTAL Insurance Co.

Continental Buildings
100 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

Cor. COURT and MONTAGUE STS., BROOKLYN
106 BROADWAY, BROOKLYN, E.D.

Insures against loss by Fire at reasonable rates.

Reserve for re-insurance	$2,265,427 88
of which for Inland Marine, $55,969 52
Reserve ample for all other claims	553,171 26
Capital paid in cash	1,000,000 00
Net surplus	1,358,879 85
Total Cash Assets, Jan. 1, 1886.	$5,177,478 99

This Company conducts its business under the restrictions of the New York Safety Fund Law. The two Safety Funds together equal $1,200,000.

H. H. LAMPORT, President.
CYRUS PECK, Secretary.

HOME INSURANCE COMPANY OF NEW YORK.

OFFICE, No. 119 BROADWAY.

Sixty-fifth Semi-Annual Statement, Showing the Condition of the Company on the first day of January, 1886.

CASH CAPITAL	$3,000,000 00
Reserve Premium Fund	3,011,637 00
Reserve for Unpaid Losses and Claims	378,483 98
Net Surplus	1,227,995 10
Cash Assets	$7,618,116 08

SUMMARY OF ASSETS

Cash in Banks	$245,795 99
Bonds and Mortgages, being first lien on Real Estate	857,550 00
United States Stocks (market value)	2,879,390 00
Bank and Railroad Stocks and Bonds (market value)	1,522,550 00
State and City Bonds (market value)	222,000 00
Loans on Stocks, payable on demand	122,800 00
Interest due on 1st January, 1886	97,056 02
Premiums uncollected and in hands of Agents	258,290 30
Real Estate	1,272,633 77
Total	$7,618,116 08

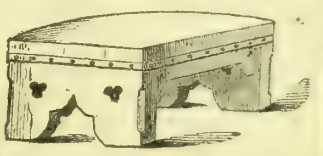
CHAS. J. MARTIN, President.
D. A. HEALD, Vice-President.
J. H. WASHBURN, V. P. & Sec'y.
T. B. GREENE, W. L. BIGELOW, E. G. SNOW, JR., Ass't Sec's.



Kneeling Bench for use in Church or at Home. Arranged to hold Books.

—CHURCH FURNISHINGS.—

STAINED GLASS MEMORIAL WINDOWS.
MEMORIAL TABLETS OF BRASS, BRONZE, &C.
COMMUNION SERVICES OF SILVER.
S. S. BANNERS, EMBROIDERY, DECORATIONS.
CHURCH FURNITURE.

SEND FOR HAND-BOOKS.

J. & R. LAMB, 59 CARMINE ST., NEW YORK.

BELLS.

McShane Bell Foundry
Finest Grade of Bells,
CHIMES AND PEALS for CHURCHES, &c. Send for Price and Catalogue. Address
H. McSHANE & CO.,
Mention this paper. Baltimore, Md

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY.
Bells of Pure Copper and Tin for Churches, Schools, Fire Alarms, Farms, etc. FULLY WARRANTED. Catalogue sent Free.
VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

MENEELY & COMPANY
West Troy, N. Y. Bells,
For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others

CINCINNATI BELL FOUNDRY CO
SUCCESSORS IN BELLS - TO THE
BLYMYER MANUFACTURING CO
CATALOGUE WITH 3000 TESTIMONIALS
BELLS, CHURCH, SCHOOL, FIRE ALARM

PILES. Instant relief. Final cure in 10 days, and never returns. No purge, no salve no suppository. Sufferers will learn of a simple remedy Free, by addressing C. J. MASON, 78 Nassau St., N. Y.

The Dead.

LAST week, just as we were closing the forms, the death of Gen. Winfield Scott Hancock was announced. It was a startling announcement, for no one beyond his family and staff knew that he had been ailing for some time. On Friday evening ex Governor Horatio Seymour died at the residence of his sister, Mrs. Conkling, at Utica. Gen. Hancock would have been sixty-two years old if he had lived until last Sunday. He was born in Montgomery County, Pennsylvania. Governor Seymour would have been seventy six years old on the last day of May. He was a native of the beautiful region included in the town of Pompey, Onondaga Co., New York. Gen. Hancock married Miss Russell, the daughter of a St. Louis merchant. Governor Seymour's widow was Miss Mary Bleecker, of Albany, N. Y.

Gen. Hancock was a brave and skilful soldier. His record is without a blemish, from the field of Molino del Rey to the battles of the Wilderness. No one has accused him of delay, of failing to lead his men with the highest ability and courage whenever ordered, of flinching from a position of extreme danger and difficulty. He was a true hero and a magnetic leader, as skilful as he was courageous,—a splendid soldier.

Governor Seymour was one of the few public men of this State of the last thirty years entitled to the name of statesman. The pitiable criterion of the present day that measures the discharge of public duties by "business principles," he never descended to. His views were comprehensive and anticipated the future. Some of his utterances during the Civil War were condemned; but of the breadth of his statesmanship in public affairs there can be no doubt. He has made many addresses, written a number of papers, exhibiting not only that he was an accomplished gentleman, but that he held a comprehensive policy which embraced the various interests of the commonwealth, the causes which had produced the existing condition and the character and power of the influences now active. He was a statesman, and not a mere keeper of accounts.

Both of these distinguished men were affable and benevolent, and won the love of their fellows. What is still better, both were men of integrity, pure men, of unstained character and life. No moral failings in either are to be glossed over by the press or by those who knew them best. No accusation of deceitfulness, or dishonesty, or impurity, or unfaithfulness to friends or associates, or of lack of sympathy or charity, stands against either.

Mr. Stead's Release.

NEVER has Exeter Hall been more densely crowded, and certainly never by a more enthusiastic audience, than on Monday evening, when a meeting was held within its walls to welcome Mr. W. T. Stead, whose term of imprisonment expired in the morning. Mr. Stansfeld, M.P., occupied the chair, and in his opening remarks said that they had met to welcome, on his release from Holloway Gaol, one of the most fearless and devoted men he had ever known. To such a man the best, and indeed the only, welcome they could give, and the only tribute they could pay, was to determine to prosecute his work. He denied that Mr. Stead had exaggerated the vice and crime existing in the metropolis, and as a member of Parliament of twenty five years' standing, he expressed the strongest and most absolute conviction that the Criminal Law Amendment Bill would not have become the law of the land but for the exposure in The Pall Mall Gazette. A resolution was then moved by the Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, to the effect that the meeting accorded to Mr. Stead its increased confidence and warmest gratitude, and pledged itself to the furtherance of the great national work he had done so much to promote. They welcomed Mr. Stead, he said, as an innocent man, and a good man, and testified that the Government and their legal accomplices had utterly failed to affix any stain of crime upon that honest Englishman. A reference by Mr. Hughes to Dr. Hey wood Smith, who was on the platform, was received with loud and prolonged cheers. The resolution was seconded by Mr. Costelloe and supported by Mr. C. Maclaren, M.P., the Rev. B. Waugh, and Mrs. Fenwick Miller. The presentation to Mr. Stead, who was accompanied by his wife and children, of a Bible from the Young Men's Christian Association, and of an address and purse containing 27,000 pence, subscribed by as many English women, formed the next business. Mr. Stead then rose to reply amidst a scene which has been seldom if ever witnessed before in Exeter Hall or elsewhere. The vast audience, of which three fourths were, we should judge, men, stood waving their handkerchiefs and cheering for several minutes, swept away by an enthusiasm difficult to conceive by those who were not present. When silence was restored, Mr. Stead offered a brief prayer, and then, in a powerful and eloquent speech, which lasted over an hour, defended in the main the course he had taken, although admitting that he had made errors in judgment. For the suffering brought upon Rebecca Jarrett, in whom he said he had unabated confidence, he expressed deep regret. His gaolers and warders had treated him with extreme kindness. The only man who had uttered an unkind or unfeeling word to him while in prison was the chaplain of Coldbathfields. As the practical result of his work the age of protection for girls had been raised not only in this country, but in Tasmania, Victoria, and New South Wales.—Christian World, London, Jan. 21st.

Wages.

DR. GIFFEN read a paper one day in the last week of January before the Statistical Society of London on the Progress of the Working Classes during the last fifty years, in which he said:

"There has been a vast improvement in the wages and condition of all working men through all parts of the kingdom. While the hours of labor have been shortened 20 per cent, wages have increased nearly, if not quite, 100 per cent. The weekly wage of 4s. earned by Irish laborers fifty years ago has become 8s.; the 7s. 6d. earned then by the Welsh laborer has become 15s.; the 9s. earned by the Scotch laborer is now 18s.; and 8s. or 10s. paid to the English laborer has changed to 13s. or 15s. The worst-paid labor in towns has gained in corresponding degree. In the large manufacturing towns the rise ranges from 15s. to 25s. The composition of the masses has changed in the time, and added to the improvement; for fifty years ago the Irish peasants were a third of the working classes, and now they are less than an eighth. The working masses in Great Britain, meanwhile, have doubled their numbers, the agricultural laborers being only one-eighth of the total, and the remaining three-fourths being artisans and other town-workers, who fifty years ago formed only one-third of the entire population. Rise of wages in England has been matched by a like rise on the Continent. The total income of this country fifty years ago was 500 millions a year, of which two-fifths came from agriculture; now it is 1,270 millions, of which only one-sixth is derived from agriculture; though, as that sixth amounts to more now than the two-fifths used to amount to, the agricultural laborer, getting his proportionate share of it, is better off. The nine millions of the working classes fifty years ago earned altogether about 171 millions a year, or £19 a head; now the thirteen millions of them earn a total of 550 millions, or £42 a head, which shows an increase of over one hundred per cent. During these fifty years prices have declined all round, except in the particulars of rent and meat. Bread stuffs, clothing, tropical produce, and miscellaneous articles of all kinds are cheaper than they were. There has been an advance in the price of meat, except bacon; but this is accounted for by increased consumption, since 50 years ago the working classes ate scarcely any meat but bacon. But on the whole a sovereign goes farther than it did. It is not the capitalist, but the laborer, who has reaped most economic advantage from the improvement in that time."

Financial.

TUESDAY, Feb. 16th.

THE imports of merchandise at this port last week were reported at $8,911,309, and the exports at $5,754,292. The imports thus far this year exceed those of the same time last year by $5,800,000, and the exports have been $7,200,000 less. The import of specie last week amounted to $128,239, and the export to $1,246,900. Sterling exchange sold yesterday at $4 87 1–2 for 60 day bills and $4 89 1–2 for demand....The Associated Banks of this city last week increased loans $5,235,800, lost in specie $1,041,600, gained in legal tender $1,875 and in deposits $5,515,900. The surplus of reserve was reduced $545,575, making it $34,468,145. Money continues abundant and is loaned at 1 to 3 per cent on call, and from 3 1–2 to 6 per cent on commercial paper, and at an average of 5 per cent on time. Yesterday money closed at 1 1–2 to 2 per cent with a strong upward tendency. For export by to-morrow's steamer $607,000 specie are reported engaged. The silver dollar is worth to-day 79.20 cents as bullion....Foreign grain markets are reported to-day dull for wheat, firm for corn. The visible supply in this country of wheat shows a dimination of 546,321 bushels for the week. Quotations were: March wheat here 90 5–8, in Chicago 79; corn here 50 7–8, in Chicago 37 1–8; oats here 37 5–8, in Chicago 29 3–4. Pork and lard are both lower, and beef dull. Cotton was firm yesterday at Liverpool. Quotations here were: Feb. 9.96–97; March 9.00-01; April 9.09; May 9.19–20; June 9.29–30....The railroad combination has strong financial support and encounters strong opposition. The Stock Market is strong, but in some doubt as to the future.

Misrepresentation of the New York State Board of Health by the Royal Baking Powder Co.

At a meeting of the State Board of Health held February 11th, 1885, it was

Resolved, That the advertisement of the Royal Baking Powder Company quoting the State Board of Health of New York, as recommending, through one of its analysts, its purity etc., is a misrepresentation. In no case does the State Board of Health or its representatives cause such examination to be made with a view of recommending particular products.

ALFRED L. CARROLL, M. D.,
Secretary.

News of the Week.

(Continued from page eleven.)

SATURDAY, 13.—Riots renewed in the hosiery factories at Leicester, England. Houses attacked and policemen stoned and street lamps smashed....It is reported that Mr. Biggar intends to withdraw from the House of Commons. ..Ex-Governor Seymour died last night. The funeral services will take place in the Trinity Church at Utica, N. Y....The damage done by the storm of last Thursday is considerable. It was felt from Northern New England to Delaware Bay and west to the Alleghany mountains. Three life saving men and five sailors were drowned on Barnegat Shoals in attempting to rescue a bark, which had stranded there. Damage done in Providence, R. I., will amount to $50,000....Smallpox is reported to be existing in the coke region. Hungarian strikers have purchased revolvers, and formed a society imitating the Mollie Maguires ...Trouble is expected to-day at Seattle. The Chinese have bought rifles and revolvers and will defend their lives and property ...General Hancock's funeral occurs to-day in Trinity Church of this city. The cold weather down South this winter has not seriously effected the orange trees, more than to strip them of their leaves. They promise a fair crop for the present year....A delicate operation was performed on a baby at the South Side Hospital in Chicago whose body was covered with hair moles. The hair moles were removed and the little patient is doing well.

MONDAY, 15.—The strikers at Leicester, England, were dispersed by the police... A treaty of peace is to be signed by Servia. ....A full account of the mutiny of two Manila Indian sailors on the ship "F. N. Thayer" has been reported....The Bishop Harrington, a missionary in Zanzibar, is said to have been killed by the natives.... A number of dynamiters have been arrested in Spain....Great losses from floods in New England and New York....Governor Hill and his staff expected to attend ex-Governor Horatio Seymour's funeral....George Q. Cannon, the notorious Mormon leader, was arrested in Nevada....A Greek sailor was murdered at sea by two of his mates.... Orders for the arrest of ex-Sheriff Davidson have been issued and he has fled to New Jersey ...Boston was almost cut off from communication with the rest of the country by the recent flood....Extensive damage by high water and ice gorges in the Mohawk, Susquehanna, Mississippi and Missouri rivers....An attempt was made to hang a young woman in Illinois.

TUESDAY, 16.—The damage by floods near Boston and in Eastern Connecticut is great. Assistance in Boston has been given to 700 families, and the injury in Connecticut is reckoned at $1,000,000....In the Committee of the House a resolution for free silver coinage was defeated by one vote....A wall of the storehouse burned at Tompkinsville, Staten Island, in January, fell yesterday on seven men, injuring one, probably fatally. ...The House resolved to investigate the Telephone scandal....Town of Flagstaff, Arizona, nearly destroyed on Sunday by fire. ....Gilmore gave two concerts on Sunday in this city for the Parnell Fund; result $6,000 net....Mobs of unemployed workmen yesterday in three English cities. Queen Victoria gives £500 to relieve the distress.... The Socialists who incited the riot in London are to be tried to-morrow....Mob of French Canadians near Quebec yesterday. ....Prussia is excited by fears that the Government is preparing to yield everything to the Pope....Burmah is to be garrisoned by 16,000 troops.

THE NEW YORK LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY has just made public its Forty-first Annual Report. As about twenty years of the growth of this now strong organization are recalled and the rapid and substantial increase of financial strength is noted, one cannot avoid wondering what will be the result of the twenty or forty years to come. The amount insured during 1845 was less than a million of dollars, during last year it was over 68 millions. The cash assets then amounted to $17,496, and are now nearly 67 millions of dollars. The payments to policy holders aggregate 89 millions. Nothing seems to hinder the advance of this Company. During the "hard times," from 1873 to 1878, the assets increased from 24 to 36 millions. At present they are growing at the rate of over seven millions a year. Such a life of forty years is calculated to inspire confidence in the years before us. The security for the total amount insured increases in a greater proportion than the risks assumed. In 1854 the cash assets were only one-tenth of the amount insured, now they have become one-fifth, that is, the security is twice as great now as it was thirty years ago.

The twenty-sixth annual report of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, just issued, shows that at the close of 1885, its assets were $66,553,387; its surplus, $13,862,239; its income, $16,590,053; and that the amount of new insurance written during the year was $96,011,378. The Equitable is fully entitled to rank as one of the principal life insurance companies of the world. The public is indebted to it for indisputable insurance, and for the popular system of tontines. The former guarantees that the insured will not leave an insurance to be sued for at his death; while the latter provides for a distribution of the insurance profits among those policyholders who live and keep their policies in force, according to the contract.

Our readers will confer a favor upon the publishers of this paper and, perhaps, find it to their own advantage if, when answering an advertisement found in these columns, mention is made that it was seen in THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER.

The purest, sweetest and best Cod Liver Oil in the world, manufactured from fresh, healthly livers, upon the sea-shore. It is absolutely pure and sweet. Patients who have once taken it prefer it to all others. Physicians have decided it superior to any of the other oils in the market. Made by CASWELL, HAZARD & CO., New York.

PIMPLES removed and the Skin made smooth by using Juniper Tar Soap, manufactured by Caswell Hazard & Co., New York
Sold by druggists.

Publisher's Department.

THOUSANDS ARE BORN with a tendency to consumption. Such persons, if they value life, must not permit a Cough or Cold to become a fixture in the lungs and chest. The best known remedy for either is Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar. 25c., 50c. and $1.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap heals and beautifies, 25c.
German Corn Remover kills Corns, Bunions, 25c
Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye—Black & Brown, 50c.
Pike's Toothache Drops cure in 1 Minute, 25c.

Dr. Scott's Electric Hair Curler and Tooth Brush will be sent to any part of the world on receipt of $1, and if not satisfactory the money will be refunded. Ladies and gentlemen who wish to quickly bang, crimp or curl the hair, beard or moustache by a new method, or to possess sound, white teeth and rosy gums, are invited to read the brief but interesting description of these new inventions. Dr. Scott's Electric Appliances are now sold and well known in every part of the world, and are guaranteed by the Pall Mall Electric Association of London, England. Agents, male or female, are wanted for the above articles, and also for Dr. Scott's Beautiful Electric Corsets, Belts, Electric Hair, Flesh and Tooth Brushes and Insoles. No risk. Quick sales. Satisfaction guaranteed. For terms address G. A. Scott, 842 Broadway, New York.

Scrofula, salt rheum, all humors, boils, pimples, and diseases of the blood, general debility, dyspepsia, biliousness, sick headache, kidney and liver complaints, catarrh and rheumatism, are cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Take it now. 100 Doses One Dollar.

Clergymen, lawyers, public speakers, and singers, confirm the opinion of the general public in regard to Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. All say it is the best remedy that can be procured for all affections of the vocal organs, throat and lungs.

Best, easiest to use and cheapest. Piso's Remedy for Catarrh. By druggists. 50c.

Market Report.

Review of the New York Market for Butter, Cheese, etc. Reported by DAVID W. LEWIS & Co., Produce Commission Merchants, 49 Pearl St., New York.
Commission on Butter, Eggs, Poultry, etc., is five per cent; Flour, Grain, etc., 2½ per cent.
Marking-plates furnished when desired.

NEW YORK, February 13, 1886.

BUTTER.—Receipts for the week, 19,894 pks.; exports 1,149 pks.

Since the late intense cold snap Western creamery butter has been arriving wintry and crumbly and some of it scarcely passable, and the amount of really useable butter was lessened. Held Western creamery was about sold out, and buyers began to look for the finest N. Y. State creamery and dairy makes, and all fancy N. Y. State butter was higher. Butter that is only fit to compete with substitutes can hardly be expected to advance much in price, but grainy, silky, fine-flavored make are now all wanted and quick sale at an advance of say 1a3c. for the week. We quote

Solid silky grain-fed fresh Elgin creamery	35	@36
Fancy fresh grain-fed Eastern creamery	35	@36
Heavy bodied, grainy, high-flavored dairy, fresh	28	@30
A strictly fancy Delaware dairy, entire	25	@26
Fair to good dairies	16	@22
Fine summer firkins	20	@24
Fresh Western imitation creamery	23	@27
Western store-packed butter	7	@10
Winter make, common roll butter	9	@13
Grease	4	@ 5

CHEESE.—Receipts for the week, 12,510 boxes; exports 13,830 boxes.

Home trade are buying a few fine late-made cheese at 9½a9¾c. and even up to 10c. There were also considerable transactions in fine cheese for export, mostly at 9½a10c., and an exceptional trade or two in finest colored at 10¼c. There were considerable receipts of skimmed cheese, and stock of that sort accumulated with say some sales at 2a3c. The situation seems to be a tenable one at present prices, but the market leaves off without much life or spirit. We quote:

	FANCY.	FINE.	FAULTY.
Factory, full cream.	9¾@10¼	9½@ 9¾	6 @ 8
Night's milk.
" skimmed.	7 @ 8	4 @ 5	2 @ 3

EGGS.—Receipts for the week, 3,712 bbls.

This market is lower. The patent egg-hatcher gives Northern pullets that will lay in February, and the Southern transportation lines stretch away into the sunny South, bringing thence full supplies. There were sales of some fresh District of Columbia cases at 2-½2 ; also 10 bbls. of Ohios at same figure. Ice-house stock is pretty well through with. We quote:

Near-by fresh laid, per doz	22	@23½
Western and Canada, per doz	21	@22½
Limed eggs, per doz	15	@18

MARRIAGES.

DRUMMOND—RUOFF.—At the bride's home, Schenectady, N. Y., at 3.30 P.M., on Wednesday, Feb 10, 1886, by the Rev. Wm. Elliot Griffis, Mr. William Edward Drummond, of Kobe, Japan, to Miss Emilie Julie Ruoff, of Schenectady.

DEATHS.

Obituary notices five cents per line (nine word to the line.) For subscribers we will insert fifteen lines free; all lines in excess of that number will be charged same as non-subscribers.

DAVIS.—At Flatbush, Ulster Co., N. Y., Feb. 6, Peter Davis, in the 79th year of his age.

For over 56 years a member of the Reformed church in this place and in its religious work, especially the prayer-meeting and Sunday-school, without doubt its most valuable member. Former pastors of the Flatbush church and the many friends of the deceased, clergymen and students from New Brunswick who have visited him at his home on the banks of the Hudson, while regretting his death, will be reconciled to his departure, knowing its gain to this faithful servant of Christ. His wife, still in good health, survives him. Three years ago they celebrated their golden wedding. Mr. Davis was the father of the Rev. John A. Davis, pastor of the First Reformed Church, Newark, N. J., and of the Rev. Titus Elwood Davis, pastor of the Presbyterian church at Schaghticoke, N. Y. PASTOR.

MULFORD.—Nov. 1, 1885, Esther Mulford, aged 65 years, daughter of the late David Mulford, of Staatsburgh, N. Y.

VAN NESTE.—Of diphtheria, Jan. 19, 1886, at Cornwall, Orange Co., N. Y., Georgiana, only child of Peter B. and Ella Thurston Van Neste, and grandchild of Rev. Geo. J. Van Neste, aged 6 years, 3 months and 17 days. A gathered lily.

YOUNGBLOOD.—Entered into rest, Jan. 9, in the 77th year of her age, Josephine, widow of Rev. William Youngblood, missionary of the Reformed Dutch Church in Java and Borneo.

Mrs. Youngblood was the eldest daughter of Dr. Peter A. Millspaugh, of Montgomery, Orange Co., N. Y. Early in life she united with the "Brick Church" there, under the pastorate of Rev. Jesse Fonda, D.D. In 1837 she sailed with her husband in the ship "Ceylon" from New York for Batavia, Java, forming a part of the first company of missionaries—nine in number—sent by the Reformed Church, under the A. B. C. F. M. to Netherlands, India. After years of loving service in pioneer missionary work in the wilds of Borneo, Mr. and Mrs. Youngblood were compelled by impaired health to return to their native land, where Mr. Youngblood was soon called to his rest.

Although an invalid for many years, yet with heart and hand Mrs. Youngblood has worked, as strength was given her, for the Master, whose cause was so dear to her. She was a woman of rare strength and sweetness of character, and in her last illness, which lasted for many months, not a murmur was forced from her lips, even during spasms of intense suffering.

The funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. Dr. Ormiston, who, in his tribute to her memory, said that during his entire ministry he had never met with a character more humble, unselfish and saintly.

She was laid to rest by the side of her sainted husband in the "old Brick Church yard" in Montgomery, the committal service there being read by Rev. F. S. Schenck, of that place. Surrounded by the dust of past generations on that beautiful hillside they calmly await the resurrection of the dead, for, "even so, them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him."

Notices and Acknowledgments

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY.—Evangelical but not denominational. Prints in 147 languages in aid of foreign missions; grants religious reading to the needy; sends colporters to millions in our highways and hedges, and to the immigrants in Castle Garden and elsewhere. This work depends wholly on charitable gifts. Donations and legacies are earnestly solicited. A summary of the sixtieth year mailed free. O. R. Kingsbury, Treasurer, 150 Nassau street, New York.

Board of Education.

RECEIPTS FOR JANUARY, 1886.

From Holland, Neb., $10; Schraalenburg, N.J., 14; 1st Brooklyn, L.I., 24.25; Naumburg, N.Y., 1.58; New Bremen, N.Y., 1.08; Walter Bicker, Esq., Far Rockaway, L.I., 3.50; Overyssel, Mich., 21.93; 2d Hackensack, N.J., 10; 2d Coxsackie, N.Y., 11.08; Auriesville, N.Y., 10; Hagaman's Mills, N.Y., q. c., 6.53; Flatlands, L.I., semi-an., 12.45; Central ave., Jersey City, 4.50; Rhinebeck, N.Y., 25; Tappan, N.Y., 6.36; Cortlandtown, N.Y., 5.67; 2d Schenectady, N.Y., 5.10; Fair St., Kingston, N.Y., 11.63; S. S. Jamaica, L.I., 26.05; West Branch, Sioux Centre, Iowa, 10; Flatbush, Ulster Co., N.Y., 5.78; North Branch, N.J., 10.32; Bergen, N.J., 20.28; Port Ewen, N.Y., 3.25. Total, $260.34.

SPECIAL FUNDS.—Anonymous, aid to students, $20; A Friend, 1st Poughkeepsie, for Northwestern Academy, 500; David Terhune, Hackensack, N.J., for Northwestern Academy, 10. Total, $530.

F. J. HOSFORD, Treasurer,
34 Vesey Street, N. Y.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans.
ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall-st., N. Y.

THE BEST

boon ever bestowed upon man is perfect health, and the true way to insure health is to purify your blood with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Mrs. Eliza A. Clough, 34 Arlington st., Lowell, Mass., writes: "Every winter and spring my family, including myself, use several bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Experience has convinced me that, as a powerful purifier, it is very much superior to any other preparation of Sarsaparilla. All persons of scrofulous or consumptive tendencies, and especially delicate children, are sure to be greatly benefited by its use." J. W. Starr, Laconia, Iowa, writes: "For years I was troubled with Scrofulous complaints. I tried several different preparations, which did me little, if any, good. Two bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla effected a complete cure. It is my opinion that this medicine is the best blood of the day." C. E. Upton, Nashua, N. H., writes: "For a number of years I was troubled with a humor in my eyes, and unable to obtain relief until I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I have taken several bottles, am greatly benefited, and believe it to be the best of blood purifiers." R. Harris, Creel City, Ramsey Co., Dakota, writes: "I have been an intense sufferer, with Dyspepsia, for the past three years. Six months ago I began to use

Blood

Purifier

AYER'S
Sarsaparilla

It has effected an entire cure, and I am now as well as ever."

Sold by all Druggists.
Price $1; Six bottles, $5.
Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass., U. S. A.

CONSUMPTION

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong in my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., N.Y.

JAMES PYLE'S

PEARLINE

The Great Invention,
For EASY WASHING,
IN HARD OR SOFT, HOT OR COLD WATER.
Without Harm to FABRIC or HANDS,
and particularly adapted to Warm Climates.
No family, rich or poor, should be without it.
Sold by all Grocers, but beware of vile imitations. PEARLINE is manufactured only by
JAMES PYLE, NEW YORK.

Is a Book of 70 pages, with 200 engravings of Orchard and Small Fruits, Nuts, &c. Gives honest description of Golden Queen Raspberry, Lawson Pear, and over 400 other Fruits, instructions for planting, pruning, cultivation and management, with low prices for Trees and Plants. Price 10c. with colored plates; without plates 5c.
Price Lists free.

THE DINGEE & CONARD CO'S
BEAUTIFUL EVER-BLOOMING
ROSES

Our Great Specialty is growing and distributing ROSES. We have all the latest novelties and finest standard sorts, in different sizes and prices to suit all wants. Over 450 choicest varieties to choose from. We send strong Pot Roses safely by mail to all Post Offices, purchaser's choice of varieties, all labeled,
3 TO 12 PLANTS $1. $8 to $15 per Hundred.
according to value. Two year Roses by express. Our New Guide, 78 pages, elegantly illustrated, Free. Address THE DINGEE & CONARD CO., Rose Growers, West Grove, Chester Co. Pa.

Will be mailed FREE to all applicants, and to customers of last year without ordering it. It contains about 120 pages, 600 illustrations, prices, accurate descriptions and valuable directions for planting all varieties of VEGETABLE and FLOWER SEEDS, BULBS, etc. Invaluable to all, especially to Market Gardeners. Send for it.
D. M. FERRY & CO., Detroit, Michigan.

VIRGINIA LAND AGENCY.
Cheap Farms. Splendid Climate. Short Mild Winters. Good Markets. Descriptive Land List Free.
GRIFFIN & JERVIS, Petersburg, Va.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.
EPPS'S COCOA.
BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood, and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

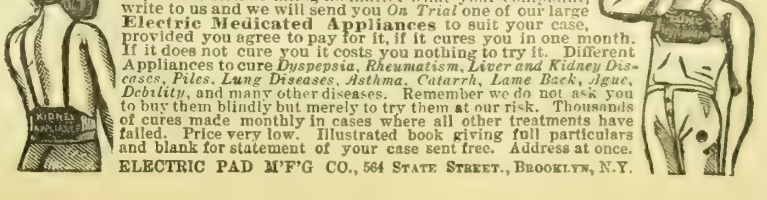
Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins by Grocers, labelled thus:
JAS. EPPS & CO., Homœopathic Chemists, London, England.

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS, a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you.
Address, DR. H. G. ROOT, 183 Pearl St., New York

PISO'S CURE FOR
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION

DEAFNESS Its CAUSES and CURE, by one who was deaf twenty-four years. Treated by most of the noted specialists of the day with no benefit. Cured himself in three months, and since then hundreds of others by same process. A plain, simple and successful home treatment. Address T. S. PAGE, 128 East 26th St., New York City.



If you are sick or ailing no matter what your complaint, write to us and we will send you On Trial one of our large Electric Medicated Appliances to suit your case, provided you agree to pay for it, if it cures you in one month. If it does not cure you it costs you nothing to try it. Different Appliances to cure Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Diseases, Piles, Lung Diseases, Asthma, Catarrh, Lame Back, Ague, Debility, and many other diseases. Remember we do not ask you to buy them blindly but merely to try them at our risk. Thousands of cures made monthly in cases where all other treatments have failed. Price very low. Illustrated book giving full particulars and blank for statement of your case sent free. Address at once.
ELECTRIC PAD M'F'G CO., 564 STATE STREET., BROOKLYN, N.Y.

Because it is so unusually handsome and attractive in appearance, many persons think the Ivory Soap is intended for toilet use only. While it may be used for the toilet with pleasant and satisfactory results, it is a laundry soap in all that the name implies. Prof. Silliman, of Yale College, says: "As a "laundry soap the "Ivory has no super- "ior."

Free of charge. A full size cake of Ivory Soap will be sent to any one who can not get it of their grocer, if six two-cent stamps, to pay postage, are sent to Procter & Gamble, Cincinnati. Please mention this paper.

MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD.

The question often asked, How does MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD compare with other foods and tonics? We refer to Dr. S W. Abbott's report for 1886. He is the State Inspector of Foods for Massachusetts.

	Albumen.	Alcoholic matter.	Organic matter.	Ash.....
Murdock's Liquid Food.....14 10		1 97	16.45	0.42
Liebig's.....Not any		54.87	5?.16	23.74
Valentine's .....do.		28 67	22.62	1? 09
Johnston's.....do.		20.13	47.16	3 30
Delacre's .....do.		56.13	00.00	19.24

MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD contains 14.10 per cent. of albumen; all other foods do not contain any. Common food does not contain over one per cent. that is available.

It contains less organic matter than common food, and common food contains 16.85; the other preparations from 22.62 to 60.50 per cent

It contains 0.42 of ash, which is indigestible matter. The others contain from 3 30 to 23.74 per cent.

In alcoholic extracts 1.97. The other preparations are all TONICS, as they contain from 20.13 to 56.13 per cent.

These facts show why MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD excels all other foods and preparations in making new blood, and cleansing the system of disease.

Murdock's Liquid Food Co., Boston.

A MILLION BOOKS

RARE, CURIOUS, CURRENT. IN STOCK.

ALMOST GIVEN AWAY.

Libraries Supplied Cheaper than at any Book Store in the World.

LIBRARIES AND BOOKS BOUGHT.

MAMMOTH CATALOGUE FREE.

LEGGAT BROTHERS,

81 CHAMBERS STREET,

3d door West of City Hall Park. NEW YORK.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

GOLD MEDAL PARIS EXPOSITION—1878.

R. H. MACY & CO.,

14TH STREET, SIXTH AVE., AND 13TH STREET NEW YORK.

GRAND CENTRAL FANCY AND DRY GOODS ESTABLISHMENT.

Special Sale of Ladies' and Children's

MUSLIN UNDERWEAR,

all of our own manufacture and design. Our prices are the lowest in the country.

Rare bargains in

LINENS

and Housekeeping Goods, our own direct importation.

Unapproachable bargains in

BLACK AND COLORED Silks and Dress Goods.

Our prices below all competition.

Tremendous mark-down in

SUITS AND CLOAKS.

Our Entire Stock at Lower Prices than ever before known.

Special Care Given to Mail Orders.

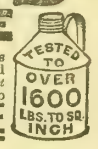
Spring and Summer Catalogue will be ready about April 1. Copies will be mailed on receipt of Ten Cents.

R. H. MACY & CO.

LE PAGE'S LIQUID GLUE

Is used by thousands of first class Manufacturers and Mechanics on their best work. Received GOLD MEDAL, London, '83. Pronounced strongest glue known. Send card of dealer who does not keep it, with five 2c stamps for SAMPLE CAN FREE

Russia Cement Co., Gloucester, Mass.



KNABE PIANOFORTES.

UNEQUALLED IN

Tone, Touch, Workmanship and Durability.

WILLIAM KNABE & CO.,

Nos. 204 and 206 West Baltimore Street, Baltimore. No. 112 Fifth Avenue, N. Y.

Arnold, Constable & Co

Dress Novelties.

Have now open a choice selection of Spring Novelties in Plain and Fancy Wool Dress Goods, etc.

Broadway & 19th st.

NEW YORK.

BENJ. F. TRUMPY,

Real Estate Office,

336 Broome Street,

ONE DOOR EAST OF BOWERY.

Management of Estates, Renting and Sale of Property, and Collecting of Rents.

AGENT FOR

German American Insurance Co.
Westchester Insurance Co.
Hamburg Bremen Insurance Co.
Mutual Life Insurance Co.

THE

SECURITY MUTUAL BENEFIT SOCIETY,

No. 233 Broadway, New York.

ONLY TWELVE ASSESSMENTS

Have been levied from 1881 to 1886, averaging three a year, and making the cost for assessments to a man of 40 years, but $4.40 a year for each $1000 of insurance.

Send for Circulars. Agents Wanted!

☞ Remunerative employment offered energetic and reliable men.

DON'T put all your eggs in one basket, but remember that the EQUITABLE MORTGAGE CO. guarantees its 7 per cent Farm Mortgages, principal and interest. Office, 135 and 137 Broadway, New York.

1886 GREGORY'S SEED CATALOGUE 1886

FAIR AND SQUARE DEALING.

Believing that if a man has dealt squarely with his fellowmen his patrons are his best advertisers, I invite all to make inquiry of the character of my seeds among over a million of Farmers, Gardeners and Planters who have used them during the past thirty years. Raising a large portion of the seed sold, (few seedsmen raise the seed they sell) I was the first seedsman in the United States to warrant (as per catalogue) their purity and freshness. My new Vegetable and Flower Seed Catalogue for 1886 will be sent FREE to all who write for it. Among an immense variety, my friends will find in it (and in none other) a new drumhead Cabbage, just about as early as Henderson's, but nearly twice as large! James J. H. Gregory, Marblehead, Mass.

M'COMBER'S PATENT BOOTS AND SHOES.

Everybody can now enjoy my Patent Boots and Shoes. I am now manufacturing my Patent Boots and Shoes on a large scale with new and improved machinery, and selling at greatly reduced prices so as to place them within the reach of all. I will send to all applicants price-lists, full instructions for self-measurement for men, women and children, and return the shoes as quickly as they can be made. They will fit beautifully, will never warp, distort, or injure the tenderest foot, and will restore bad and distorted feet to symmetry and comfort. I make no shoddy goods, and my highest class boots and shoes are unsurpassed either in material or workmanship, and my lowest class goods are superior in every respect to all others at the same price. Those who desire perfect boots and shoes should send for my free illustrated pamphlets, JOEL M'COMBER, Inventor and Manufacturer, of M'COMBER'S PATENT BOOTS AND SHOES, AND M'COMBER'S PATENT LASTS, 52 East 10th Street, New York.

To preserve the leather of all kinds, for ladies' or gentlemen's boots and shoes, and to make them soft and beautiful, use my Seal Polish Blacking. Mention the INTELLIGENCER

Dr. SCOTT'S ELECTRIC CURLER.
Sent on Trial. Postpaid.
50c.
By its said the hair, beard or moustache can be curled any desired style in from one to two minutes. For ladies it produces the "Langtry Style," the "Patti Bang," the "Montague Curl," and any other form desired by ladies wearing their hair in the fashionable "loose and fluffy" mode. Gentlemen's moustaches and beards curled for the day in a few seconds. A beautiful article; handle of rosewood, other part nickel-plated.
Dr. SCOTT'S ELECTRIC TOOTH BRUSH. 50c.
Dr. SCOTT'S ELECTRIC TOOTH BRUSH. The finest Tooth Brush ever made, [illegible] by a new patented process which renders it impossible for bristles to come out in use. Each of above articles guaranteed and sent on trial postpaid on receipt of [illegible], or both for $1. They may be returned if not satisfactory. CANVASSING AGENTS WANTED for Dr. SCOTT'S ELECTRIC CORSETS, BRUSHES, BELTS, Etc. No risk, quick sales. GEO. A. SCOTT, 842 Broadway, New York. Sold at Drug and Fancy Stores. Mention this publication.

The Twenty-Sixth Annual Statement of the

EQUITABLE

Life Assurance Society

OF THE UNITED STATES,

For the Year Ending Dec. 31, 1885.

AMOUNT OF LEDGER ASSETS January 1, 1885		$55,537,780 66
INCOME.
Premiums	$13,461,679 22
Interest, Rents, &c	3,128,373 91	16,590,0 3 13
		$72,127,773 79
DISBURSEMENTS.
Claims by Death and Matured Endowments		$4,278,191 28
Dividends, Surrender Values, and Annuities		2,620,039 09
Discounted Endowments		245,458 68
Total paid Policyholders		$7,138,689 05
Dividend on Capital		7,000 00
Commissions, Advertising, Postage, and Exchange		1,427,282 37
General Expenses		1,302,118 68
State, County, and City Taxes		165,169 84
		$10,040,259 94
Net Cash Assets, Dec. 31, 1885		$62,087,513 85
ASSETS.
Bonds and Mortgages		$16,588,832 91
New York Real Estate, including the Equitable Building and purchases under foreclosure		8,360,782 62
United States Stocks, State Stocks, City Stocks, and other Investments.		23,416,239 94
Loans secured by Bonds and Stocks (market value, $1,969,637)		1,420,475 00
Real Estate outside the State of New York, including purchases under foreclosure and Society's Buildings in other cities		4,255,285 30
Cash in Banks and Trust Companies, at interest; and in transit (since received)		4,878,078 81
Due from Agents on account of Premiums		168,239 27
		$62,087,513 85
Market value of Stocks and Bonds over book value		2,193,864 03
Interest and Rents due and accrued		614,611 63
Premiums due and in process of collection (less premiums paid in advance, $29,835)		396,344 00
Deferred Premiums		1,361,054 00
Total Assets, Dec. 31, 1885		$66,553,387 50

I hereby certify, that after a personal examination of the securities and accounts described in the foregoing statement, I find the same to be true and correct as stated.

JOHN A. MCCALL, JR., Comptroller.

TOTAL LIABILITIES, including legal Reserve on all existing policies, (4 per cent. Standard)	$52,691,148 37
Total undivided Surplus, over Four per cent. Reserve	$13,862,239 13
Of which the proportion contributed (as computed) by Policies in general class, is	$5,145,539 13
Of which the proportion contributed (as computed) by Policies in Tontine class, is	8,716,700 00

(Upon the New York State Standard, 4½ per cent., the Surplus is, as computed, $17, 95,329 40.)

We certify to the correctness of the above calculation of the reserve and surplus. From this surplus the usual dividends will be made.

GEO. W. PHILLIPS, J. G. VAN CISE, } Actuaries.

New Assurance written in 1885	$96,011,378 00
Total Outstanding Assurance	$317,338,246 00
Increase of Premium Income	$1,430,349 00
Increase of Surplus	$3,378,622 03
Increase of Assets	$8,391,461 96

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

HENRY B. HYDE, President.

J. W. ALEXANDER,	JOHN A. STEWART,
LOUIS FITZGERALD,	JOHN D. JONES,
HENRY A. HURLBUT,	R. L. KENNEDY,
H. G. MARQUAND,	EUGENE KELLY,
W. A. WHEELOCK,	CORNELIUS N. BLISS,
HENRY DAY,	GEO. C. MAGOUN,
MARCELLUS HARTLEY,	WM. B. KENDALL,
JOHN SLOANE	SAMUEL BORROWE,
H. M. ALEXANDER,	B. WILLIAMSON,
CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW,	WM. WALKER,
CHARLES G. LANDON,	G. W. CARLETON.
HENRY S. TERBELL,	E. W. LAMBERT,
THOMAS S. YOUNG,	B. F. RANDOLPH,
ROBERT BLISS,	J. F. DE NAVARRO,
DANIEL D. LORD,	J. J. MCCOOK,
JAMES M. HALSTEAD,	W. WHITEWRIGHT,
HORACE PORTER,	ALANSON TRASK,
G. DE F. LAY,	E. B. COLT,
W. ALEXANDER,	WM. M. BLISS,
PARKER HANDY,	C. B. ALEXANDER,
	ED. W. SCOTT,
OLIVER AMES
EUSTACE C. FITZ,	H. B. WOLCOTT, Denver.
S. H. PHILLIPS, Boston.	A. VAN BERGEN, Paris.
THOS. A. BIDDLE,	H. J. FAIRCHILD, Manchester, Eng.
GEO. H. STUART,	GUSTAV G. POHL, Hamburg.
T. DEWITT CUYLER, Philadelphia

The Christian Intelligencer.

Een-dracht maakt macht.

VOL. LVII.—No. 8. WHOLE No. 2900. NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 1886. $2.65 A YEAR IN ADVANCE. No. 48 CHURCH STREET.

EDITORS: Rev. JOHN M. FERRIS, D.D. Rev. N. H. VAN ARSDALE.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR: MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

"I HAVE seven years in the record of my own life when I was held in the iron grasp of intemperance. I would give the world to blot it out; but, alas! I cannot," was a sentence spoken by Mr. John B. Gough at his last public lecture. Then stepping forward with an impressive gesture he added: "Therefore, young men, make your record—," and was silenced by paralysis. This end of his public services presents the chief characteristic of those services. Mr. Gough labored to convince individuals of the danger of the use of intoxicants by appeals to the intellect, heart and conscience. No other man of the last fifty years has had more to do with forming the temperance sentiment of the people of this country, and few have been more influential in Great Britain. He not only convinced men of the peril of indulging in liquors but inspired them with an earnest purpose to contend persistently against drinking customs. Many of the most effective and honored advocates of total abstinence and of temperance measures to-day received their first impulse from Mr. Gough, and the spirit they exhibit is that which they drew from him. He never engaged actively, we believe, in any political measures to advance the temperance cause. He trusted in moral suasion. His life and its results are instructive. His death brings his whole career before us, and we see the nature and the results of his methods. He told men how moderate drinking developed naturally, easily, into drunkenness; of the woe attendant on intoxication, of the ruin it inflicts, the anguish it produces, the deep degradation in which it ends, and told this as a godly, Christian man. He diligently gathered facts on these points and repeated them with graphic power.

"THE MEETINGS have closed." So correspondents write. The special meetings must come to an end at some time. The mental and physical strain accompanying them cannot be endured forever. The interference with the performance of other necessary duties must stop. Every man's business demands constant attention, diligent application, and the expenditure of a great amount of energy. For a time, for the sake of a far greater good, he can interrupt his attention to his occupation, but must soon resume it. Therefore the meetings must cease. But the desire for the presence of the Spirit of God and ardent prayer for the conversion of men and the strengthening of the Church need not and should not abate. Probably there are no substantial reasons for believing that the influence of the Spirit of God on the souls of men has declined. Yet men say, when the meetings have been discontinued, "The revival is over." Who knows that? The kingdom of God comes "without observation." There may be many, perhaps more than those who have made confession of their faith, who are seriously considering the truths of revelation and conscientiously endeavoring to ascertain their duty as to both faith and obedience. They are quiet and reticent, but have been recently impressed as never before. The probability is that the continuation of special meetings would have little additional influence over them. It is not unlikely that the cessation of the meetings has their approbation, for they are sensible people. There is, then, still much work to be done that the full harvest may be gathered in. What it is and how it is to be done deserves very careful and prayerful consideration The first end to be attained is to prevent the conclusion that the power of the Spirit of God has departed because the meetings are closed. It is not certain that the something to be done is something new and different from what has been done. On the contrary a restatement of what has been said, with additional arguments and pleas—a review, buttressed with additional considerations, and making truth clearer, and widening the application—may be what is most needful. Now is the time when wisdom is necessary, and God has promised to give it to those who ask Him for it. But, above all things, neither pastors nor people must for a moment allow any one to think that the revival has ceased.

THE CHURCH should inquire into the condition of workingmen who constitute so large a portion of the body of citizens, and look into the causes which oppress them. True social improvements are effected by the convictions and advocacy of Christian people. Other men take up the methods proposed by the Church and claim them as their own, but generally endeavors to relieve the overburdened and depressed originate with and are advanced by those who have received by faith the spirit of Christ. A report recently published by the Secretary of Internal Affairs of Pennsylvania, a State officer, contains some impressive facts, which throw light upon the strikes and almost riotous demonstrations now and then occurring in the coal regions. It has been customary to reckon that miners working under contract receive $2.70 a day, $16 20 a week, and $842.40 a year; other miners $2 a day, $12 a week; and $624 a year; and coming down to laborers, $1.40 to $1.78 a day, $8.40 to $10.68 a week, and $436 80 to $555.36 a year. But these men do not have work every day. They are often idle, not because they wish to be, but because they must, because employment is not to be had. The Secretary has made a careful inquiry, resulting in an "exhibit of actual wages paid in the anthracite coal regions of Pennsylvania, based on the actual time employed," and in this table it is found that contract miners earn on the average $459.68 a year, other miners $364, and laborers from $255 to $319, engineers $459, blacksmiths $372, drivers $276, firemen $297, and boys from $88 to $107. These are the earnings of a year. Such figures make one's heart ache. No wonder that when a reduction of daily pay is made there is an outbreak and the violence of desperation. How much more of this kind of thing is there in this country? Why do not workingmen's unions and clubs give us such facts as these? They know them; they can tell the actual annual living earned by the majority of their fellows, and ought to make the figures public. The cause is to be found in competition. Rival railways have been constructed into these coal regions from every side and each one is striving to earn interest on bonds and dividends on stocks. Competition has reduced the price of coal until the men employed in the mines cannot be paid enough to live decently and with a fair measure of comfort. There has been also competition in labor and an influx of labor from other countries which has overstocked the market. Looking at the condition of these workmen one is disposed to favor a Drexel-Morgan or any other combination which will tend to reduce competition in part, and if such a combination should add fifty cents a ton to the cost of coal to consumers, no one should complain if it should tend to furnish more constant employment to a selected body of laborers at a better rate of wages. Whatever may be the remedy, such facts as those presented by this State officer ought to be known and considered. The first step toward a remedy is accurate information.

IT WOULD BE interesting to know what religious weekly is meant by the following, recently published in the Hartford Courant:

"The representative of one of the great so-called religious papers of the country called at the office of one of our large Connecticut factories and offered as a personal favor to write up the whole concern in big shape for $1,000. The offer was declined in the same noble spirit of self-sacrifice with which it was made. Then it was renewed at $500 (under request of secrecy if accepted). This was declined, too; and the religious representative knocked himself down step by step until, while his first demand was for $1,000, his last offer was to do it for nothing if they would take 50 copies of the paper containing the proposed article! And they wouldn't accept that; they didn't so much object to being written up, but they didn't know what to do, they said, with the 50 papers."

Without intending to excuse such unseemly operations, not the first we have heard of, we mention the fact that publishers often pursue a policy not approved by the editor or editorial force, and that agents or representatives often make attempts, sometimes successful, which have not been authorized by publisher or editor, and which, when they become known, are disapproved.

A SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION for the State of New York is soon to be selected. Three or four place hunters, politicians far more than they are educators, are endeavoring to capture the position, and have their forces at work at Albany. Those who esteem the welfare of the commonwealth superior to partisan success are heartily opposed to making the office a political one, and they are the great body of intelligent and truly patriotic citizens. In their judgment it would be a calamity of a most serious character if the place should be filled by any one less than an educator of experience and proved ability.

The State Superintendent can and must have great influence over the common schools of the State. He can correct bad methods if he knows how, if he knows bad from good; or, if ignorant of the science of education, he can and will let unwise plans and methods run on, and allow thousands of children to be deprived of what they ought to have and need to have, which the State is taxed for and which common honesty demands. This great State ought to have and can have, pays money enough to have, a system of education equal to that of any of her sister States. And the system should reach and elevate the children of every secluded hamlet as well as those of large towns and cities, where the schools are conspicuous and where faulty methods are soon exposed. Such a system, enlightening and purifying every nook and corner of the State, New York can have if it will put the right man in command. As it is, nearly every one of the Northwestern States is in advance of New York in this matter. The Eastern States, where such a blunder as making a political tool the Superintendent of the Public Schools would arouse a popular indignation which would sweep the dominant party almost out of existence, have for years excelled New York in the matter of public instruction.

The friends of a right and useful administration of the office of Superintendent have been looking about for the right man, and they have selected Dr. William J. Milne, Principal of the Geneseo State Normal School, as their candidate. The choice is in every respect an admirable one. Dr. Milne is a fine classical and general scholar, who graduated with honors from the University of Rochester. He has published a useful and popular series of mathematical text-books, and has been sought after as a lecturer on educational topics. He has had experience and has achieved success. He has taken the whole course, beginning as a teacher in a district school, advancing to the classical department of the Normal School at Brockport, and being now the head of the State Normal School at Geneseo. Under his management this school has become one of the largest and best in the State. He has administrative ability of a high order, is progressive while holding fast that which is good, and has a great desire to see the schools of the State equal and if possible superior to those of any other.

One who knows him well and who is a competent judge, writes in these words in regard to him: "I do not hesitate to say that I could not name another man in the State who is so well qualified as he is, by natural gifts, acquired fitness, education, experience and sound judgment, to administer well the office of State Superintendent."

What can our New York readers do? They can write to the Senator and Assemblyman who represent them and convey to them their opinion and desire in this business of incalculable importance.

"Old Colony" Papers.

THE BOY RUSKIN.

IT is seldom that we have an instance of a man acting as his own Boswell so thoroughly and with such naïveté as Mr. John Ruskin in his autobiography,* now publishing in chapters. Boswell's appreciation of the great Johnson was not more complete and undisguised than is that of the author of "Præterita" for Ruskin. He has even the same rambling and diffuse way of telling his story, which makes "Bozzy" the most charming of gossips. He does not hesitate, for instance, to affirm that if his early opportunities had not been restricted by his parents' want of insight, he would have been "probably the first geologist of his time in Europe."

One of the most curious things in the book is the clearness with which the writer perceives his boyish egotism, and the triumphant illustration which he affords of Wordsworth's maxim that "the child is father to the man." He describes himself as "a conceited and unentertainingly troublesome little monkey." He has certainly evolved himself out of the monkey stage, and can never be accused of not being entertaining. He satirically designates himself in those days as "my high-mightiness." He gives as a reason for his not minding the "chaffing" which he got from other boys, that "the fountain of pure conceit in his heart sustained him serenely against all deprecation, whether by master or companion." In another place he accounts for his wasting a great deal of time in trying to study in his own way, by "my conceit developing every hour more venomously, as I began to perceive the weakness of my masters."

In the true Boswellian spirit he conceives of nothing too trivial to be mentioned in the development of his hero, at the same time giving the sufficient reason for these minute details of childhood, that "nobody else can tell" the story of "boyish achievements and experiments," whereas "in later years my friends in some respects know me better than I know myself." Let me not be understood as censuring this utter frankness, but as rejoicing in it. Had he not possessed it, he had better not have taken up the autobiographic pen. In this kind of writing, he that doubts is—well, he might as well deal out soda water from a tin pail!

The boy Ruskin was contended for by four distinct appetencies of taste and tendencies of genius, which never came to fulfilment. He himself speaks of these as "the quadrilateral plan of my fortifiable dispositions," and then goes on to describe lamentfully the influences which failed to fortify either the one or the other of them, and left him the rather indescribable John Ruskin, the evolution of whom the world recognizes as the very best thing he could have done for it. One was poetry, or "the effort to express sentiment in rhyme, the sentiment being really genuine under all the superficial vanities of its display, and the rhymes rhythmical, only without any ideas in them." After "staring at the sea or scampering on a moor," there was "pleasure in making some sort of melodious noise about it, like the waves themselves or the peewits."* The second was geology, already alluded to. The third was a "violent instinct for architecture," though he doubts his "power of design" and thinks he "never could have built or carved anything." And the fourth was that he had in him "the making of a fine engraver." But he mourns the loss to engraving less than that "incalculable one to geology." It may be so, but the greater probability is that Ruskin only adds another to the long list of men of genius who have had an almost monomaniacal, as well as ludicrous conviction, that they were greatest in some other direction than that in which their power had been recognized by the world.

Certainly there was little to feed his art-instinct in early life, and few indications of personal achievement in that direction. He confesses that he never saw any boy's work in his life "showing so little original faculty, or grasp by memory." He "could literally draw nothing, not a cat, not a mouse, not a boat, not a bush 'out of my head.'" And his first attempts from nature were not felt by his father "to be the least flattering to his vanity." The family picture gallery was limited to a "little water-color by Prout of a wayside cottage," and two miniatures on ivory.

Observation was the great teacher of the future art critic and word-painter. From infancy he would spend hours in examining the stones and leaf forms of the grounds to which he was jealously restricted, and the figures on the wall paper and the carpets, in default of playthings and picture books, when indoors. No wonder, then, that we find him at ten years old filled "with indescribable rapture" on being permitted to go into a cave and "pursue his mineralogical studies on fluor, calcite and the ores of lead," and even "in the glittering white broken spar, speckled with galena, by which the walls of the hotel garden were made bright." Two years later we find him at the seaside, spending all day in "simply staring and wondering at the tumbling and creamy strength of the sea." And yet his interest at first was rather in the sights of the shore than for the wide sea, and he "grew into the sense of ocean as the earth-shaker, by the rattling beach and the lisping sand." The ponds and ditches and bridges, the fields and the trees of his environment, and even the pump and gutter over the way, were similarly stared at, and are reproduced in his autobiography as elements in his education.

Nothing can exceed the vividness of those early images, nor of the touches with which he conveys them. He speaks of a quiet and commonplace cousin Mary, who came to live with his parents, as "a serene neutral tint in the harmony of the household." He describes "the amazing and appalling sensation" of first going to a lighted church in the evening, as of "a vision preliminary to the Day of Judgment." His brief characterizations of his six other cousins, four sons and two daughters of his Croydon aunt, are portraits. Also of a poor relation, Nanny Clowsley, "an entirely cheerful old woman who lived, with a Dutch clock and some old teacups, in a single room, with small bed in alcove, on the third story of a gabled house." His cousin Margaret, he frankly says, never interested him because "I never liked invalids, and don't to this day; and Margaret used to wear her hair in ringlets, which I couldn't bear the sight of."

Travel was another potent tutor. At five years of age he was taken to Paris; also to Waterloo, the battle having been fought only nine years before. He took a series of graded lessons in mountain scenery,—the Tintern and Malvern hills, the Cumberland lake district, the mountains of Wales, and finally the Alps. Ruskin makes a great deal of "first sights." Although the Seine and Notre Dame and the other "big things" made no lasting impression on his mind, he remembers distinctly the little every day objects with which he came in contact. His recollection of that visit to the field of Waterloo is still vivid, while "the results of a later examination have faded mostly away." That first sight of the Alps was an era in his life. He fairly trembles at thought of the family debate whether they should go from Strasburg to Basle, or to Schaffhausen, at which latter place they would have the Fall, the Black Forest and the chain of the Alps within their grasp. "How much depended on the issue of that debate!" How well he remembers "watching the line of the Black Forest hills enlarge and rise as they crossed the plain of the Rhine." "Gates of the hills," he exclaims, "opening for me to a new life—to cease no more, except at the Gates of the Hills whence one returns not!" The first sight of a Swiss cottage is also enthusiastically noted. The Alps burst suddenly and unexpectedly upon their sight, the next evening as they walked out:

"They were clear as crystal, sharp on the pure horizon edge, and already tinged with rose by the setting sun. Infinitely beyond all that we had ever thought or dreamed, the seen walls of lost Eden could not have been more beautiful to us,—not more awful, round heaven, the walls of sacred Death. . . . not only the revelation of the beauty of the earth, but the opening of the first page of its volume. I went down that evening from the garden terrace of Schaffhausen with my destiny fixed, in all of it which was to be sacred and useful."

The persons who came across his life in these days to influence him, directly or indirectly, are also made to sit for their portraits. Among these are Dr. Andrews, his mother's pastor and his own tutor in Greek. One of the chief benefits he derived from the small Greek he learned was the discovery that "the Greeks liked doves, swallows and roses as well as I did." Others were Dr. Grant, the family physician and an enthusiastic naturalist; a Mr. and Mrs. Richard Gray, "the entirely best-matched pair I have yet seen in this match-making world and dispensation," "Mrs. Gray's principal occupation in life"—having no children of her own—being "to spoil me." Another was Thomas Pringle, a litterateur of that day who wrote some passable poetry and made a fiasco in his editorship of the first six numbers of Blackwood's Magazine. Pringle introduced him to the poet Rogers, and to Hogg, "the Ettrick Shepherd," and gave him discriminating encouragement in his literary progress. Ruskin's mother was a great educating influence in this respect, ingraining into his mind the truth, too often overlooked, that accuracy of diction means accuracy of perception, and precision of accent means precision of feeling. I wish she had taught him not to be so free handed with his "pepper box" of commas!

F. N. Zabriskie

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 15, 1886.

* Præterita. Parts IV.-VII. (John Wiley & Sons.)

* His facility of versifying is illustrated by a poem in four books, entitled "The Iteriad," giving an account of his journey among the Lakes in 1830, he being then eleven years old.

WE HAVE received a thin pamphlet entitled "Open Brief aan Dr. A. Kuyper door Dr. Ph. T. Hoedemaker." We are not quite sure of its intent, as we do not understand precisely the ecclesiastical status in Holland. But it bears upon the conflict between the Orthodox and the Moderns (as the Rationalists call themselves), and the way in which the truth is to be vindicated. There are those who would secure soundness of teaching in any individual by breaking loose from the church authorities and maintaining their own ministers, whereas Dr. Hoedemaker insists upon combined action of the whole body so that the Orthodox should not be few and feeble and set an example of schism, but labor strenuously to secure a re-organization of the Church, and after that, a return to the principles of the Reformation. The "Open Letter" is written in a very excellent spirit, and is full of respect for the eminent Kuyper, and at the same time firm and manly in setting forth the writer's own views. The difference is one not of ends but of means, and should not produce alienation. May the Lord soon free the Church of Holland from the grievous oppression of unbelieving office-bearers!

"A GOOD NAME is rather to be chosen than great riches." The pastor of one of the leading Congregational churches in New England, who has also an honored name for long service among the Presbyterians, thus writes to a domine in our Church: "If we could only combine Congregationalists, Presbyterians and Reformed, you giving us your name, 'The Reformed Church in America,' and your Heidelberg Catechism, we should make a long stride toward the millenium."

INSPIRATION.—With a hearty dislike of the peculiarities from which the Baptist denomination gets its name we unite a profound respect for its general and sturdy soundness in the faith. A striking illustration of this latter feature is at hand. In the October number of the Baptist Review Prof. Fox had a shallow and ill-considered article on Inspiration, the tenor of which may be inferred from one sentence, "It is plain beyond a question that if the apostles had had telephones, we should have no New Testament." In the January number of the same review is a symposium on the subject by seven eminent scholars, Dodge of Hamilton, Robinson of Brown, Manly of Louisville, Lincoln of Newton, Pepper of Colby, Stevens of ——, and Owen of Denison, (we miss a voice of Rochester), all of whom without exception set forth the truth that has been assailed, and maintain with energy its supreme importance. It was worth while giving place to the crude attack, since it has drawn out such an array of able defenders who know what they believe and are able to give a good reason for holding it.

Suggestive.

THE DINGY SOD HOUSE OF DAKOTA.

I passed it far out on the prairie
The house of necessity born;
No lines of its dinginess vary,
So sombre, so dark, so forlorn.

Is bounded by measureless acres;
Not a fence or a tree is in sight;
But, though plain as the dress of the Quakers,
It stands in the sun's broadest light.

The badger near by makes his burrow,
The gopher his hillock of soil,
And ploughs, with their mile-lengths of furrow
Go round it with infinite toil.

A well-curb, a wash-bench, a woman,
With poultry and pigs, are outside;
The clothes-line is wondrously human
In look, and the vista—how wide

You can go to the sunrise or "sundown
In straight lines, the left or the right,
And leagues of long level are run down
Before you escape from its sight.

The roof is well thatched with coarse grasses;
A stove-pipe peers out to the sky.
'Tis a picture whose plainness surpasses
All objects that challenge the eye.

Twisted hay serves its owner for fuel:
He twists it at ease by the roar
Of a hay fire, which parries the cruel,
Harsh bite of the wind at the door.

Sometimes in an ocean of color
(In summer 'tis yellow or green)
It stands. In November a duller
Broad carpet about it is seen.

In winter, while blasts from the prairie
Bring "blizzards" that cease not to blow,
'Tis as warm as an isle of Canary,
Deep under the tempest and snow.

—Joel Benton, in Harper's Magazine for March.

BOOKS AND THE BOOK.—One thing I want you very much to be quite clear about. No amount of "good little books" will do you any good unless they lead you to love the Book of books. If you really love Jesus, you are quite sure to love His Word. But one reason why some of you do not love it half as much as you wish you did, is because you do not know enough of it. And you only read, you don't "search," which is what God especially tells you to do. A capital piece of advice was given by a man who did a very great deal towards leading people to love and know their Bibles. He said, "When you take your Bibles, you should be always hunting for something."—F. R. Havergal.

NOWADAYS orthodox Congregationalists get so much Universalism from their own pastors that a sermon by a Universalist minister is sometimes novel only through its conservatism.—Boston Christian Register.

NOW IS THE TIME.—Perhaps there is now a "shy, solitary, serious thonght" in your heart about becoming a Christian. If you let it alone it may fly away like a bird through a cage-door left open, and may never come back. Or else a crowd of business cares and plans, or perhaps a pressure of social invitations will flock in, and the good thought be smothered to death. You have smothered just such blessed thoughts before. The thought in your heart is to become a Christian now; and the great bell rings out, "Now is the accepted time; behold! now is the day of salvation." No soul was ever yet saved, and no good deed was ever done to-morrow. Be careful, dear friend, lest to-morrow find you beyond the world of probation!—Dr. T. L. Cuyler.

PAPAL FOLLY.—Steps are being taken at Rome to canonize 277 servants of God (so-called) who "lived holy lives, or died heroically in England in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. Among their number are 149 secular priests, 18 Jesuits, 7 Benedictines, 12 Franciscans, and the rest laymen." These men were either alien priests or traitorous Englishmen, who strove to bring England under the yoke of foreign powers, whose names, whether they are canonized or not, will be handed down to the detestation of future generations, wherever the English language is spoken. It would have been kinder to allow the grass to grow quietly on their graves, than to reveal their names to the scorn of the great Anglo-Saxon races in England, North America, and the Colonies, who had permitted the waters of oblivion to wash out their memories.—The Christian, London.

THE VALUE OF DRUDGERY.—Drudgery is inseparable from labors of intellectual research and efforts at moral improvement. It is the test of faculty, the price of knowledge, the matter of duty; and from the agent's own soul must come the spark and breath that turn it from cold fuel into living fire. Can he not find it, and send it forth? Then the stuff is not in him that will make either the true scholar or the Christian man. Had this not been understood in the earlier ages of the revival of learning and the reformation of religion, we should never have had the great names which distinguished that period: among scholars, of Casaubon and Scaliger; in the sphere of art and science, of Michael Angelo; in Church and State, of Savonarola and Cromwell. All the great minds and consciences, all the great actors upon the scene of things, have been men always able to dispense with their quiet ease, give themselves labor, take up drudgery with a cheerful mind, and so conquer the difficulties before them. Life is a battle, and conquest will remain only with those who have the vigor for victory.—Dr. J. Martineau.

MORMONISM.—A great deal of interest has been excited in the Mormon question by the revival of the Edmund's bill, recently brought to the consideration of Congress. There are some who regard the measures proposed as too severe, and others think the bill strikes at the fundamental principle of religious liberty in this country. Its intention is to terminate polygamy, a system of evil so degrading to all who practise it, that it would seem impossible for any one of ordinary intelligence and purity of character to offer a word of apology for it. But polygamy is not the only wrong at which the Edmund's bill strikes. They are quite mistaken who think that if this feature of Mormonism were eliminated from the system that Utah might safely, and at once, be admitted to the sisterhood of States. It ought to be known that the so called Latter-day Saints have assumed the attitude of rebellion against the United States. Every Mormon who passes through the Endowment House takes an oath of eternal enmity against the people and government of this land. It has been the purpose of the leaders to build up an empire in the West which shall defy this government, and if possible, destroy it. A very Utopian scheme, no doubt, but it indicates the animus of the system. It is the spirit of rebellion, and will not down.

This ascendency is continuously, and most resolutely sought. Subjects are being gathered in Utah, Idaho, Nevada, Arizona and New Mexico, and Mormon leaders hope to gain such a position among those mountain-fastnesses that they may declare their independence of the United States and have their own way. It is quite certain that unless something is speedily done to arrest the advance of this movement the ultimate suppression of the system will require measures such as brought to an end the civil war in the South; in the absence of which there will be established on our soil the worst hierarchy, and the most degrading, enslaving monarchy of which there is, or will be, any record in the annals of time. Surely the most vigorous action is required. Self interest, patriotism, humanity, religion demand it.

Leniency in dealing with this enormous evil has become weakness. Rebellion has no claim on national clemency. It is not long since John Taylor, a worthy successor to Brigham Young, said, "Let the government dare to lay so much as a finger upon us and we will show the people of the United States what we can do." The Mayor of Salt Lake City said, "If the authorities at Washington are wise they will not interfere with us." Such expressions will not intimidate this great nation, but they suggest grave dangers if we continue to temporize with this rapidly growing and increasingly defiant power.—The Presbyterian.

COLONIAL NEW YORK.—A worthy history of colonial New York, which shall show the part which Dutch civilization has played in the formation of our nation and government, is still a desideratum. It is no secret to the student of Holland and Dutch history, that the most of the ideas so boasted of as peculiar to the Pilgrims and New England are of Dutch, and not of English, origin. Many, if not the majority of the early American pioneers of freedom, toleration, military energy and legal ability, received their training in Holland, and not in England. Two of the most eminent outside of Massachusetts, Roger Williams and William Penn, were trained in Dutch ideas, language and literature. Their culture was of free Holland. The former received his notions of aboriginal tenure of land and liberality in worship from his Dutch studies, while William Penn was half Dutchman, for he had a Dutch mother. He did what the Dutch had done before him in Pennsylvania, in buying the land he occupied. Not only had the Pilgrims, and other leaders of colonies to New England, been refugees in Holland, but Sirs Thomas Gates and Dale, and Samuel Argall of Virginia, Miles Standish, Captain John Mason, and Lyon Gardner of New England, had been officers of the Dutch Army.

The common-school system, the ideas of recognizing Indian claims to the soil and purchasing them, the method of recording deeds of land, now our national procedure, were Dutch and not English. In many lines of enterprise the leaders of colonies to New England simply put in practice what they had seen in long operation in Holland. The commercial supremacy of New York is but the outcome of the mercantile skill of the Netherlanders who settled the city.

The Dutch did not, indeed, come to America as refugees flying from religious persecution. They had no need to be "pilgrims." Their republic, their township system, their representation for taxation, their freedom, toleration and Protestant faith were already secured. They were a century in advance of old England politically, and a long way ahead of New England in religious tolerance. The Dutch in New York not only tolerated the religious refugees driven out of intolerant Puritan land in Massachusetts, but they allowed freedom to all faiths. When Stuyvesant abused the Quakers he was rebuked by the authorities in Holland. They had the first organized church and the first church building under roof in the territory now covered by the United States. With their first settled emigrants came schoolmaster and minister. They preached the Gospel to the Indians four years before John Eliot. Furthermore, the question of resistance to the English governors and the preparation of the colonies for the resistance and revolution against Great Britain were wrought out mainly in New York by the Dutch. And in the revolution New York was the only State of the thirteen that paid up all her quotas in men, in money and supplies. Though Mr. Bancroft, in the revised edition of his history, does much more justice to these facts than in his older text, he is still far from correct in his sense of the proportion of truth. Even Lodge, in his lectures on the colonies, shows too much influence of Irving's caricatures, which are too generally accepted as genuine history "down East."—The Critic, January 23d.

Our Church.

We are thankful for items of Church News compactly stated; or for marked copies or clippings from local exchanges, which we would not otherwise see. To insure publication in next number, they must reach us by noon on Monday. A condensation of items is unavoidable

Rutgers College.

NEW BRUNSWICK, Feb. 16th, 1886.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER: Since the Day of Prayer for Colleges there has been a growing interest among the students in the subject of religion. Dr. Wm. M Taylor, of the Broadway Tabernacle, on that day preached an exceptionally powerful and impressive sermon. Soon after this came the Conference, held in Kirkpatrick Chapel, of the Christian Associations connected with the various colleges and higher schools of New Jersey. This was attended by over seventy delegates and large numbers of our own students. The meetings were addressed by Mr. Wishard, of New York, Mr. Yatman, of Newark, and on the Sabbath a sermon full of appropriate and admirable truth was preached by Dr. W. M. Paxton, of Princeton Theological Seminary. One of most impressive exercises of the Conference was the Sunday morning Bible Class, conducted by Mr. McConaughy, General Secretary of Christian Associations, Philadelphia. The value of the Word of God and the importance of simple faith in it have seldom been presented with so much power. All the sessions were of an interesting character, marked by earnest Christian zeal, by elevated faith, by humble devout prayers, and by personal confession and consecration. Above these general features, however, there were two things which distinguished the young men in all their discussions: supreme reliance upon the Word of God as the only agency that can enlighten and quicken souls, and a sense of personal responsibility in the matter of speaking with urgency to their companions on the claims of conscience and Christ. A profound impression was stamped on many minds, and the results cannot but be happy. Several noon day prayer-meetings followed last week after the adjournment of the convention, which were largely attended; and during which five students made for the first time open confession of their faith in Jesus as a personal Saviour and expressed their determination henceforth to live a new life.

The intellectual condition of the College was never better. Good, hard work is here the law of the student's life; and as a consequence he has neither time nor inclination for disorder. His standard of excellence becomes ever higher, leading him to a conscientious, manly deportment and to ardent endeavors to achieve an adequate preparation for usefulness beyond the College walls.

A master has been secured in gymnastics, and henceforth under his careful and safe training the two lower classes will be required to engage in needful exercise.

Considerable additions are being continually made to the Library, and many of the young men daily spend a portion of their time there in investigating certain subjects which have been assigned them for composition.

The organ has been enlarged by new pipes, giving it greater variety and volume of tones, and it has been transferred from the gallery to the left of the pulpit. It is proposed to make the chapel services on Sunday more varied and interesting by introducing the repetition by the audience of the Lord's Prayer after the Invocation, and by reading the Psalter responsively.

On the whole the institution is doing admirably under Dr. Gates' administration. Its friends may feel assured that for thorough education, combined with a religious atmosphere, there are few better places to which young men may be sent.

ALUMNUS.

The Vedder Lectures.

THE Vedder Lectures will be delivered this year by the Rev. George S. Bishop, D.D., of Orange, N. J. The subjects announced are: I. Faith and Common Sense; II. God Above Nature; III. Creation Above Nature; IV. Bible Above Nature; V. Redemption Above Nature.

The first lecture will be delivered on the evening of Sunday, Feb. 28th, in the Second Reformed Church of New Brunswick; the others in the College Chapel, on the evenings of Monday, March 1st, Thursday, the 4th, Monday, the 8th and Thursday, the 11th.

The deep impression produced by Dr. Bishop's sermon on the Day of Prayer for Colleges, a year ago, leads to a general desire to hear him in this course of lectures. The subject chosen and the titles announced are suggestive of food for thought in the lectures this year.

Important.

IN view of the responsible position I occupy, it is incumbent on me that I should state very plainly the critical condition of the treasury of the Board of Foreign Missions, so that every minister and member of our denomination may have full knowledge of the grave situation. The facts are these: The appropriations are really no greater than those of last year, whereas the receipts have been steadily less each month of this fiscal year; the consequence is, the entire security fund has been pledged lor loans. The payments during the coming summer months will (as usual) very largely exceed the receipts. Under these circumstances the Board has but one course before it,—retrenchment of the most ruinous character.

Shall this mortifying step be taken?

The Church must answer this question. Unless the treasury shall be largely relieved, and that speedily, the most disastrous effects will be entailed on our missions GAMALIEL G. SMITH, Treasurer.

....BROOKLYN, N. Y.—The First Church, on Bedford avenue, during the pastorate of Rev. Dr. E. P. Terhune has steadily increased in numbers, not with spasmodic so much as with healthful growth. Families are constantly being added to its household; at each communion there are accessions on confession of their faith, as well as by letter, and all departments of church work are successfully administered. Dr. Terhune's preaching attracts earnestly attentive congregations, which have never been larger than during the present winter.

....ELLENVILLE, N. Y.—The number of earnest inquirers has risen to upwards of fifty. The special meetings have closed and a training class has been formed. H.

....FONDA, N. Y.—A short time before the meeting of the Missionary Conference in the Reformed Church, a meeting of the Consistory and trustees was held, at which it was resolved to endeavor to raise the debt that had accumulated on account of repairs to the church property and by other expenditures. The committee appointed entered upon their duties at once, and before the meeting of the Conference were enabled to report more than the necessary amount pledged. Last Sunday they distributed their report, in which it appears that all the indebtedness of the church is met and a nice surplus is left in the hands of the treasurer. The ladies also report $375 in their treasury. All thanks to the blessed Lord who put it into the hearts of the people to respond so liberally, and to the committee who performed their part so promptly and efficiently in these days of financial depression.

Not only in the temporal, but in what is better and brighter, in the spiritual life the congregation has been quickened, commencing before the Conference with extra meetings. They were continued up to the Week of Prayer, since which time six weeks of glorious spiritual refreshing have been enjoyed by the church, believers and those who were recently afar off from the Lord alike rejoicing in the presence of the Spirit. It is many years since we have had such a large attendance and such sustained interest.

Dr. De Baun has nightly presented "the blessed Gospel" in such plain, forcible and able talks that none could fail to know the way. He has been ably assisted by the attendance of Rev. Messrs. J. C. Boyd and W. Frothingham who, with the brethren, have promptly and faithfully held up his hands.

Already a goodly number have expressed a trust in the Saviour and the good work continues. To Him who hath loved us and who gave Himself for us be the praise!

The missionary boxes, which for the first time were collected last Sunday, showed a nice sum realized, and it is hoped when all are collected the sum will be $75 to $100. G. and S.

FEB. 17th, 1886.

....WESTERN ITEMS.—The Women's Missionary Society of the church at Milwaukee, Wis., intend soon to support a second native helper in the foreign field....Sermons in the English language are now preached Sunday evenings in the First and Third Churches of Holland, Mich....The Fifth Church of Grand Rapids, Mich., recently organized, has selected a building site and purchased two lots....The Rev. K. B. Weiland, of Lennox, Dakota, has accepted a call from Patersonville, Sioux County, Iowa....The Rev. Wm. Moerdyke, South Holland, Mich., has accepted the call to the First Church of Pella, Iowa.

....THE PASTORS' ASSOCIATION will meet at 34 Vesey street, Monday, March 1st, at 10 o'clock, to listen to a paper on "The Visible Unity of the Church of Christ," by the Rev. D. M. Talmage.

....NEW BRUNSWICK, N J.—It is reported that Dr. T. C. Easton has tendered his resignation as pastor of the First Church, to enable him to accept the call to the First Church of Newark, N. J., to take effect about the first of March.

...GREENVILLE, JERSEY CITY, N. J.—Sunday, February 14th, 1886, was truly a red-letter day in the history of the Greenville Reformed Church of Jersey City, when its fifteenth anniversary was celebrated. Invitations had been sent, as far as possible, to all who had ever been connected with the church or congregation, the day was prematurely spring-like, the little church was crowded to its utmost capacity, and everybody seemed joyous and happy. 1871 and 1886, in large golden characters on either side of the pulpit, told us of the fifteen years between the feeble infancy of the church in an old country school house, and its youthful activity and strength now. The pulpit was almost hidden by the profusion of flowers around it, while seated there were the only pastors the church has ever had,—the Rev. A. H. Young, pastor for nine years, and the Rev. P. T. Pockman, who has filled that office for four years and a half. Delightful and appropriate music for the occasion was rendered by a large, well-trained choir. The morning sermon by Rev. Mr. Young, from Isa. 12: 6, was an attractive and impressive description of the Christian's Mount Zion. There in his spiritual home,—the church,—he finds instruction, inspiration, strength, and relief from life's burdens. No wonder the very stones and timbers of the church are sacred in our eyes.

After the sermon the pastor asked for a collection of $500 for church purposes, which was at once responded to by the congregation in a much larger amount.

In the afternoon there was a Sunday-school reunion, the usual exercises being modified to suit the anniversary in the school, for that, too, was fifteen years old. The superintendent read a review of its work, former superintendents made addresses, while letters were read from those who could not be present, the whole enlivened by spirited singing by the school. It started with twenty-seven pupils and now numbers about two hundred.

In the evening an historical discourse was delivered by the pastor. He said it is difficult to determine who first thought of a Reformed Dutch Church at Greenville. Long ago, when it was only a small German village, three miles from Jersey City ferry, it was part of the field of the Bergen Reformed Dutch Church, which was probably the oldest in the State, having been organized in 1660. In 1828 a Reformed Church was organized at Bayonne, when Greenville fell under its care, the Bayonne minister preaching there Sunday afternoons.

In November, 1870, the people of Greenville determined to have a Sunday-school and church of their own. They hired and fitted up an old school house. Here they organized their Sunday-school, Jan. 1st, 1871, with six teachers and twenty-one scholars. On the same day the first church service was held there. There were present three ministers, the house was crowded and much interest manifested. On the 19th of February, 1871, a committee from the South Classis of Bergen legally organized "The Reformed Church of Greenville, N. J.," with twenty-five members. The large assembly present was addressed by the Rev. Wm. R. Duryee, D.D., and a Consistory was ordained by the venerable B. C. Taylor, D.D. The Rev. A. H. Young was called as pastor on March 27th, 1872. The edifice now occupied by the church was built in 1875 at a cost of more than $5,000. When dedicated, on Jan. 16th, 1876, the church had 46 families, 68 communicants, and 140 Sunday-school scholars. The present pastor, Rev. P. T. Pockman, was installed Oct. 9th, 1881. The number of families now is 74, communicants 140, Sunday-school scholars about 200, and current church expenses are $2,000. For benevolent purposes last year $562.55 were given, and the amount raised during 15 years for congregational, benevolent and religious purposes has been $38,555. There has also been received from legacies $11,500; and there is now on hand as a building fund for a new church the sum of $7,000.

On Monday evening the anniversary was closed by a social entertainment in the crowded church, when music, speeches, refreshments and sociability made the hours pleasant for everybody, and all agreed that from first to last the anniversary had been a success. It is hoped that it will result in an awakening and strengenthing of the spiritual life of the church. S. H. C.

GREENVILLE, Feb. 18th, 1886.

....THE LECTURES before the Society of Inquiry of the Seminary at New Brunswick draw large audiences, are practical and profitable as well as interesting. Rev. Dr. A. F. Schauffler made an address on city missions, presenting some original views; he recommended for example teaching a congregation by object lessons. The great importance of missionary work in the cities was described with power. Rev. Dr. Woodbridge has lectured on The Church and the World Power, showing first the often successful efforts of worldly power to identify itself with by taking possession of the Church, as in the Papal body, and proceeding to the proof that between a true Christian Church and the World Power there is inevitably a conflict that cannot cease until one has gained the mastery. The injuries attendant upon on invasion of the Church by the World were set forth clearly and vigorously. The Rev. John Hall, D.D., of this city, gave on Monday evening of last week a very sensible and engaging talk on the Pastor's Relations to Missions, that is, the address seemed to be off-hand talk but was really a well considered expression of his convictions and the results of his experience. Dr. Hall insisted that every church, large or small, ought to be a missionary body, that the duty to be such should be brought into many sermons because it properly belongs in them, until the Church shall know and acknowledge its responsibility.

....PROSPECT HILL, N. Y. CITY.—The special religious services held every night except Saturdays for two weeks in the Prospect Hill Church, are at an end, but none who attended them can ever forget them. The attendance, while not testing the church's capacity at all, was quite satisfactory; many strangers were present each evening, and all experienced the power of the Spirit's presence. The church feels greatly indebted to the gifted brethren, the Rev. W. W. Clark and Dr. T. C. Easton, who so faithfully and powerfully presented the truths of the Word. Being men of our own denomination, they sympathized thoroughly with the church's needs, and have, we believe, done much to quicken its life and deepen its consecration. The Gospel was preached; the Gospel was sung; the work progressed along truly churchly lines, and in consequence, without very much excitement, a work of grace was commenced which we trust will result not merely in the building up of God's people, but in the conversion of many souls. The harvest is ripe, and with God's help we hope to be able to safely garner much of the golden grain. W.

....THE AMERICAN SUNDAY, the Museums and Libraries, the Public Press, and the Half-Saturday Holiday, by the Rev. Carlos Martyn, an address delivered in the Bloomingdale Church on Sabbath, Jan. 31st, is published in a pamphlet. It is Scriptural, sensible, kind and comprehensive. The size of the pamphlet is convenient. The text is printed in a manner that helps the reader. This seems to be a very good pub lication for general circulation.

....COLT'S NECK, N. Y.—Tbis church, which had been closed since Oct. 15th, 1885, for repairs, was reopened for worship Sunday, Feb. 14th. While the church was closed, the congregation worshipped in the district school house, and with much rejoicing met again in their usual place of worship, which had been undergoing a thorough renewing, and had been made pleasing and attractive in every way. The pastor, Rev. G. W. Labaw, preached on the morning of the reopening an appropriate sermon from Ps. 122: 1, "I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord."

....ATHENS, N. Y.—The Athens Record says of the Rev. Herman Vanderwart, who has accepted the call of the First Church of Hackensack, N. J., and who will shortly resign his pastorate at Athens: "He has been here three years, having succeeded to the pulpit made vacant by the resignation of the Rev. A. D. Campbell on the 1st of January, 1883. The church, which at the time of his assumption of the charge was enjoying a high degree of prosperity, has moved steadily forward in the path of success during his incumbency, and he leaves it, in both a spiritual and material sense, in a condition which reflects great credit on his stewardship."

....THE CLASSIS OF RENSSELAER met on the 16th inst., and dissolved the pastoral relation between the Rev. Wm. Veenschoten and the Church of Schodack, N. Y. He was dismissed to the Classis of Hudson. The Classis recorded their high appreciation of Mr. Veenschoten's excellent service at Schodack, and their regret at the sundering of Classical relations which have always been most pleasant. The Rev. H. A. Hendrickson was appointed the Classical Agent for Foreign Missions. S. C.

Gleanings from our Exchanges.

....The lecture-room of the First Church of Hudson, N. Y., says the Hudson Register of February 10th, was transformed into a perfect "bower of beauty" last evening for the reception entertainment which was there given to Rev. Dr. Wm. H. Gleason and his estimable wife, which occasion was attended by an exceedingly large and enthusiastic representative assemblage. The ladies of the decorative committee provided handsome draperies, pictures, bronzes, potted plants, rare cut flowers, etc., all of which were artistically arranged; while the refreshment room was also supplied by the special committee for the same with an abundance of dainties, which were liberally served. The social intercourse was animated and hearty, while the committee on introductions was kept busily engaged in presenting the parishioners and friends to the new pastor and his interesting wife.

....Special meetings are still continued every evening in the lecture-room of the Blawenburg Church, N. J. Considerable interest is manifested, and many are inquiring the way to Christ. Dr. J. F. Mesick has assisted the pastor, Rev. W. B. Voorhees, in the meetings.

....The Rev. E. G. Read, of the Second Church, Somerville, N. J., preached Sunday morning, a week ago, on Polygamy and Divorce, as infringements on the Seventh Commandment. On the subject of divorce he held that the State had no right to grant divorces except on Scriptural grounds, which were at most two, adultery and wilful desertion, and the sermon was largely occupied in proving this position.

....On Monday evening, 15th inst., the Ladies' Society of the church at Franklin Park, N. J., gave an entertainment at the church. President M. E. Gates, of Rutgers College, delivered an address, having for his subject, "A Young Man's Fortune." He proceeded to demonstrate that the real secret of success was not favorable surroundings, or high station, or influential friends, but was in the "Power of the Will" inherent in the young man himself. Many historical and biographical illustrations were introduced, and the moral of the subject was enforced by eloquent and cogent reasoning. The audience was large and highly appreciated the address. An important part of the entertainment was the musical portion, which was very fine and greatly enjoyed. Despite the bad condition of the roads the audience was large and enthusiastic, and the affair was a financial success.

....The Rev I. P. Brokaw, of Freehold, N. J., delivered, Monday evening, February 15th, in his church, an entertaining lecture on "Summer Sights Over the Sea," of which the Monmouth Democrat says: "His descriptions were graphic, sometimes grand and beautiful, sometimes humorous, and sometimes, as in the recital of his description of his visit to Switzerland, rising to the sublime, but never tiresome."

....The Classis of Raritan held a successful Missionary Convention in the church at Raritan, Tuesday, February 16th. Nearly all the churches were represented, and some by large delegations of the consistories and members. The secretaries of the Mission Boards, Drs. Cobb and West, were present and addressed the convention. Short, stirring addresses were also made by Revs. Blauvelt, Doolittle, Davis, Pool, and other members of the Classis.

The General Outlook.

....A remarkable work of grace is reported in Connersville, Ind. One hundred and six persons have connected themselves with the Presbyterian church alone on profession of faith since the year opened, and others are coming out for Christ at every meeting. The movement is not a union movement, as each church holds its separate service, and the churches are filled night after night. The results have been very conspicuous in the town. It is reported that the saloons are becoming bankrupt for want of patronage.

....So prevalent is the spirit of revival throughout the country, and the religious awakenings are so extensive and hopeful in some vicinities that many churches and associations are abandoning the old grooves in which they have been running and concentrating their forces on revival work. Here is an item of news to the point: In the "Ministers' Meetings" in Chicago and Philadelphia the discussion of selected topics has been suspended, and the members of these associations have given themselves to prayer, especially fervent and longing prayer for the revival of religion in all the churches. Evangelistic meetings are held in many of the churches in both cities. The same might be said of this and other cities.

...."Colonel Ingersoll," the notorious reviler of Christianity, is reported to be suffering from a sore throat, which disables him for the lecture platform, and which has forced him to cancel fifty engagements.

....When Bradlaugh was admitted into Parliament he swore upon the Bible which he scorns, and appealed to God whose existence he denies. What consummate mockery!

....Pastor Schneller, of Bethlehem, now preaches regularly at Hebron, the ancient city where Abraham, Isaac and Jacob were buried. The Gospel has not been preached there since 1187, when the city fell into the hands of Saladin.

....The Year Book of the Congregational Church shows a membership in the United States of 418,564—a gain of 17,015 in the past year.

....The New York Society for the Suppression of Vice last year, in fines and forfeits, caused to be paid into the public treasury $144,050.95, and destroyed tons of immoral literature.

..The Russian government calls the Lutheran Church in the Baltic provinces, which Church existed and flourished long before the world heard of Peter the Great and St. Petersburg, a "tolerated" religious society, and decrees, that no churches can be built without an official permit. Several churches in course of erection had to be left unfinished and the erection of others was flatly refused.

....The last of the seven ministers who were deposed in the Presbytery of Strath bogie before the disruption of the Church of Scotland has passed away by the death of Rev. J. A. Cruickshank, for forty-eight years minister in Mortloch.

....The Chief of Police of Newburyport, Mass., told the Mayor of that city that it was impossible to get evidence to convict for violation of the Sunday law. Thereupon his honor went himself with two policemen; in about three minutes he obtained the necessary evidence and then raided two saloons.

....The Universalist body is lamenting the death of the Rev. Thomas B. Thayer, D.D., which occurred at Roxbury, Mass., on the 12th. He was in his seventy-fourth year. For years he was the pastor of the Shawmut Street Universalist Church of Boston. He was influential also through literary work, being at one time the editor of the Universalist Quarterly, for years an editorial contributor to the Christian Leader, and the author of some books which have had considerable popularity. He was of Baptist parentage. The great age of some of the ministers present at the funeral of Dr. Thayer attracted general notice. There were the the Rev. Messrs. M. B. Ballou, aged 85; L. R. Paige, D.D., aged, 83; T. J. Sawyer, D.D., aged 82; E. Hewitt, aged 80, and E. Thompson, aged 76.

....The Waldensian Church was sorely bereaved about a month ago by the death of Dr. Chiesi. He was advanced in years, but down to a short time ago was full of vigor and vitality and no one supposed his end to be so near. He became a Christian when Italy was under the iron heel of Romanism, and notwithstanding the severity of the law and its administration engaged with zeal in the distribution of the Holy Scriptures. His regard for the Bible was a conspicuous trait. Bred a lawyer, he contributed a series of writings in defence and support of the truth. He engaged ardently in promoting education and was one of the chief benefactors of Italy by establishing good schools.

...The sale of Bibles, religious books and magazines through the colporteurs of Mr. Spurgeon's Church amounted during the past year to nearly $45,000. Seventy-eight men were employed in the work, and fifteen hundred towns and villages were visited.

News of the Week.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 17.—Lord De Vesci has replied to Mr. Gladstone concerning the wants and wishes of the Irish people, saying that he thought the late Parliamentary elections were fought on the land plank rather than on the question of self government.... The withdrawal of Mr. Segré, Italian Charge d' Affaires at Bogota, has rendered a peaceful solution of the difficulties between Italy and Columbia difficult....It is reported that a conspiracy has been discovered in Belgrade to overthrow King Milan and place upon the throne Prince Alexander Karageorgevitch. Several persons have been arrested....A building fell in Liverpool while several score of workmen were engaged upon it. Eighteen of the men had broken arms and legs. It is known that several men were killed and remained in the debris....John B. Gough is lying very ill at the residence of the Rev. Dr. Burns in Frankford, Pa. Three physicians are in attendance....Silk weavers in Paterson, N. J., are on a strike ...The McCormick Reaper Works at Chicago are closed, because non-union workmen are employed, throwing 1,400 men out of employment....A railroad train plunged into the Kanawha river, W. Va., and a number of passengers were drowned and one killed and several injured....James Westerman, an ex-tax-collector of Southfield, S. I., N. Y., disappeared two years ago leaving his bondsmen to face a deficiency of $6,000. He was arrested yesterday while visiting his family at Clifton, S. I.

THURSDAY, 18.—Mr. Chamberlain disagrees with Premier Gladstone on Greek matters....A note has been sent to the Porte from the Russian Government signifying its adhesion to the agreement between Bulgaria and Turkey, excepting the article concerning the military convention....Count von Moltke, Chief Marshall of the German Empire, is seriously ill....Count de Lesseps arrived at Colon yesterday and the official staff of the Panama Canal Company welcomed him as he came ashore from the steamer....John B. Gough is still speechless; suffers no pain, but his left side is still paralyzed. A later report gives his condition as being very low. ..All the cotton goods factories in and near Augusta, Ga., are running to their full capacity....A Polish Church was burned in Toledo, Ohio, by the Poles, who indulged in riots....The Aqueduct Commissioners have authorized the lining of the new aqueduct with brick, against the wishes of Mayor Grace and Controller Loew, who say it will cost $1,500,000....The ice harvest has re commenced in a number of places along the Hudson river, and it is thought that there will be no ice famine next summer....The Grant Monument Fund now amounts to $115,345.67. ....A number of houses in Boston damaged by the recent flood have been condemned. Colonel Burleigh, who accompanied the Soudan expedition as a correspondent of The Daily Telegraph, was presented at Glasgow with a clock and statuettes and a purse of £300. While the committee were presenting the gifts a sheriff's officer claimed the gifts in behalf of Mr. Tagg, against whom the Colonel had brought an action for slander.

FRIDAY, 19.—Mr. Gladstone announced in Parliament that a bill relating to Ireland would be offered in March....A riot occurred at Bristol, England, between British and foreign sailors, growing out of jealousy.... A family of eight persons were murdered by a negro living near Palarm, Ark. The people intend to procure bloodhounds to follow the murderer....Masked men made an attempt to drive the Chinese out of Nicolaus, Cal. The Chinamen were put on board a vessel and taken to Sacramento.... New Jersey railroad tax law declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of the State ...The Vanderbilt mausoleum in the Moravian Church cemetery at New Dorp, S. I., has seventy-two catacombs in the chapel floor. Forty-eight smaller tombs will be added in the ground floor for the children of the various members of the family....Subscriptions have been started for Mrs. Hancock. The fund now amounts to $28,715.

(Continued on page twelve.)

Our Contributors.

The Heretic Priest; A Tale of Reformation Days in the Netherlands.

(Translated from the Dutch of E. Gerdes, for the Christian Intelligencer, by Rev. Daniel Van Pelt.)

CHAPTER VIII.—WAITING HIS CHANCE.

ABOUT an hour after the party of soldiers who had arrested the priest of Weersbeek had been ferried across the river by our friend the boatman, another band, mostly composed of Spaniards, was on the way from Louvain to Boutersem, to join the various small parties that had been engaged in mak ing arrests in this neighborhood. This was in accord ance with a plan proposed by Father Josephus himself. After uniting their forces at the above named village, they were to join still other detach ments from the cities of Mechlin, Aerschot, and Hal, at a fixed rendezvous, and then precipitate themselves upon the secret conference of the heretics at Berthem, of which treasonable information had been conveyed to the authorities. Thus they hoped to crush the heretics and rebels of these parts at one fell blow.

Neither Herman Van der Woude nor his brother suspected anything of these carefully arranged combinations. The former entertained the hope that if the officer could be induced to stop at the peasant's house where Philip Cruize and his nephew had taken refuge, prompt and resolute action on the part of these friends and himself would secure the rescue of his brother, and at the same time place themselves beyond the reach of their enemies, after which they would leave this region altogether and gain a place of safety. He found no difficulty in persuading the officer to request refreshments and quarters at the peasant's house, the first they met on entering the village. But unfortunately for Herman's plans and hopes, the officer was a cautious man. Finding on their approach that at this unseasonable hour the family were evidently still astir, as lights were seen from more than one window, he suspected that there must be some extraordinary reason for it. He halted his men at a little distance from the dwelling, and going forward alone with noiseless step he placed himself directly underneath the window of the room where we saw our friends seated, in a former chapter. From their conversation he soon concluded that here was a fine opportunity to make a sweeping arrest of more than one arch-heretic. Returning to his men, he told them of their good fortune, and exhorted them to be brave, but prudent. Then he gave the command to go forward, and we have seen before how completely he surprised the inmates, so that Philip and Dathenus had barely time to secrete themselves.

Herman Van der Woude cast swift and searching glances all about the apartments; through the door leading to the hay loft over the stable, which had been left open to allay the suspicion of any one's being in hiding there, he thought he perceived two forms hastily concealing themselves. He therefore sought in the best manner possible without being detected himself, to give signs as to his real character and intentions. These would have been but very ineffectual, if Philip's quick eye—which was not to be deceived by disguises since he himself had been compelled to practice so many of them—had not at once recognized his friend, especially as he was seen in the immediate presence of his undisguised brother, whom he so strongly resembled. Philip communicated this discovery to his companion, and at once comprehending the meaning of Herman's signs, they held themselves in readiness to aid him in the attempt to rescue his brother and overpower and secure his captors.

"Mr. Justus!" was the cry wherewith Floris left the monk's couch and hastened to meet his instructor. But the officer conceived that it was a crime for any one even to bear, much more to exhibit, any affection toward one who had abandoned the true church. He struck the eager youth a heavy blow with the flat of the sword-blade across the shoulders, and exclaimed:

"Back, you young rascal! Who are you? Do you know this heretic?"

Floris drew back a step or two, but gave the priest a look full of grateful happiness, and in defiance of the officer's opposition, said:

"Courage, Mr. Justus! God is more powerful than all our enemies!"

The officer was about to strike him again, when an assault was made upon Floris from an entirely unexpected quarter. Feeling himself fiercely seized from behind, he looked around and beheld the face of Father Josephus convulsed with an expression of deadly hatred and uncontrollable rage, and straining every nerve of his exhausted body to hold him in a firm embrace.

"Officer!" he cried, "I am Father Josephus, and have with me a letter from His Eminence Cardinal Granvelle, authorizing me to cause the arrest of all heretics. Bind this lad and secure all the others of the brood in this house. It is a very nest of heretics."

Floris struggled in vain to disengage himself from the monk's unwelcome embrace. The officer commanded him to be bound, and had already seized him for this purpose, when Herman Van der Woude, after having quietly and adroitly cut his brother's cords, gave a signal to Philip Cruize. The peasant had his finger upon the trigger of his pistol, and was red with fury at the treatment of young Floris. Philip was at his side in a moment and whispered in his ear: "Give heed to that soldier next to the priest. He is a friend. We must all help each other." The peasant, brave as he was, had despaired of engaging the fearful odds against him. But now matters looked different, and he was ready to strike. Before the officer had laid his hands upon Floris the peasant stepped up to him with pointed pistol, and said:

"What are you doing?"

"Don't you see?" replied the officer tauntingly; "first this boy and then all the rest of you. Come on, comrades, seize this fellow! And who are you?" he added, turning to Cruize and Dathenus.

But before either of them could reply the peasant had drawn the other pistol also, and putting the one against the breast of the officer and threatening the soldiers with the other, he called out:

"I'll shoot down the first man who stirs!"

"Seize the rascal," repeated the officer, in a towering rage.

The soldiers were about to throw themselves upon the peasant, but in that same instant Herman seized one of them from behind and threw him to the ground, and, grasping a second by the throat, he pointed a pistol at him, saying:

"Lay down your arms or I'll shoot."

Two other soldiers were held fast by Govert, Adrian, Philip Cruize and Dathenus, while the fifth escaped from the house and ran away at the top of his speed.

Father Josephus had surrendered Floris to the care of the officer and had sought his couch once more. But in the turn which affairs had now taken he was greatly afraid his victims would escape. As soon as he had regained his breath he sprang up again, and with the vindictiveness of a tigress robbed of its whelps, he fastened his long thin fingers into the priest's hair and dragged him backward to the floor. The peasant observed this movement, and, roused to indignation by the meanness and hatred of the monk, fired and shot him in the right arm. But this gave the officer an opportunity of throwing himself upon the peasant, and he succeeded in mastering the arm wherewith he held the other pistol. Herman was forced to release one soldier in order to go to the assistance of the peasant, but was in turn attacked by the man thus released, and the fight became general. The firing of pistols, the clatter of swords, the cries of the wounded, the shrieks of the peasant's wife, and the curses of the soldiers made a terrific din within so confined a space. Victory remained uncertain and the fury of the fight increased. Herman had thrown the officer to the ground, and was about to pierce him with his sword, when one of the soldiers knocked the weapon from his hand. Philip Cruize and Dathenus had, with Govert's help, disarmed and bound the two soldiers first seized. Father Josephus rushed like a madman in every direction among the combatants. He yelled with pain, and the blood flowed freely from his wound and stained his strangely assorted garments. Still fearing most of all that the especial objects of his hatred, the priest and Floris, might escape him, he rushed furiously upon them, and as he had no weapons and one arm was disabled, he employed his teeth. He called upon all the saints to assist him, and declared he would rather lose his life than suffer these heretics to escape. At last Govert, assisted by the peasant, undertook to secure him and render him harmless; the former threw himself upon him and held his arms in a powerful embrace, while the latter proceeded to bind him fast with a stout piece of rope.

At this instant the voices of several men were heard, and the soldier who had taken flight rushed into the room crying: "Here they are! help! help!"

Our friends turned their eyes to the door, and to their utter dismay saw no less than twenty soldiers pressing into the room. Dathenus prepared for flight but he was seized and a naked sword placed at his throat, with the assurance that if he did not permit himself to be bound, his head would pay the forfeit. The field-preacher could not but yield. Philip Cruize and the priest were set upon by the monk, who had easily shaken himself loose from the peasant and his man upon the entrance of the soldiers. He struck at them wildly, crying out repeatedly: "Did you think I was dead when I lay there upon that couch? No, no! I was only waiting for a good chance!" Pain and loss of blood, however, made his efforts feeble and finally exhausted all his strength, and he would have fallen if the leader of the newly-arrived soldiers had not caught him.

Herman Van der Woude, the peasant, and his man Govert, were resolved to defend themselves to the last extremity, and to die rather than surrender. The one armed with a drawn sword, the other with a loaded pistol, and the third with a long knife used in slaughtering cattle,—they placed themselves firmly against the wall and threatened everyone who dared approach them with certain death.

The soldiers, urged and led by their officers, pressed upon these three devoted men from all directions. On they came, stumbling over the body of the peasant's wife, who had swooned from fright; and now the battle became a life and death struggle. Herman's good sword and strong arm did fearful execution, the peasant reserved his fire for some critical moment and held many at bay, while Govert's sharp knife drew life and blood from many a close contestant. But the odds were too great against them. In less than an hour they were overpowered and prisoners in the hands of the soldiers.

But what had become of Floris? When the last detachment of soldiers arrived, and he saw that resistance was now hopeless, he had taken advantage of the confusion occasioned by the determined struggle of Herman and his companions. Opening the window, which was not far above the ground, he had leaped down and escaped in the darkness.

At break of day a detachment of soldiers might have been seen entering the city of Louvain, conducting a party of prisoners. Father Josephus, whose wound had been dressed, supported by the two officers, was in advance. Herman Van der Woude and the peasant were bound together and came next, while Mr. Justus, Philip Cruize and Govert made up the rear. Petrus Dathenus was held in special ward of two soldiers, and muttered constantly in Latin: "O that fire might fall from heaven and destroy these men of violence!"

Adrian had taken refuge in the hay loft, and when the last sounds of the retreating soldiers had vanished he left his hiding-place. He found his mother covered with wounds upon the floor, and assisted her in dressing them and placed her upon a bed. He then opened the shutters to admit the daylight; as he did so he heard the voice of a woman, weeping. Looking out he was surprised to find Floris Berthem standing in front of the door accompanied by a woman, in whom our readers would have at once recognized Sister Brigitta.

The poor, simple woman, who could believe no wrong of her beloved master, had followed the soldiers who conveyed him away. Impressed with the opinion that her testimony to the contrary would triumphantly clear the priest from the charge of heresy, she was determined to go to Mechlin. She had prevailed upon the weary boatman to take her across the river, and she had but just reached the house of the peasant. Floris, who had concealed himself in the neighboring woods, now that all danger seemed past had come forth, and found her at the door. His recital of the night's events, and the disappointment in coming too late, had caused her to break forth into loud lamentations. Adrian admitted them both, and Brigitta's attentions were very grateful to his wounded mother.

(To be continued.)

The Luminous Clock.

BY THE REV. F. G. CLARK, D.D.

IN the window across the street we see every day a clock with its face turned outward. It has been a matter of curiosity and remark, and no one was able to explain the singular position of the clock. But we were told at last that the clock has a luminous dial which can be read in a dark room at any time of the night. The exposure to the sun is necessary to prepare the dial for this night service—the substance having a power of absorbing the light during the day

It is hard to overlook a homily in this. Every Christian is put in the world to serve as a luminous clock. He is to give the hour to men who see him. He is to represent truths and impulses and purposes which bless the world. "Ye are the light of the world," said our Saviour. But Christ Himself is the true light, and we are luminous only as we abide in His light. A good deal of Christian life goes for the process of absorption. Moses stayed long in the Mount in the very presence of God, and it was because of this that His face shone when He came down to meet the people. God showed Him His glory. He stood in the white light of the Divine presence. He absorbed the light. He received some sort of transfiguration, so that no one could fail to see and feel the marvellous effect. Christians must be taking in the light of holy influence by habits of godly living. The steadfast walk of a good man, as God sees him in the closet, the home, the church and the counting-room—this persistent endeavor to do his duty is the process of absorbing light which blesses others.

It is very easy to lose this point of exposure to light. Religious habits lose their exactness and regularity. The approaches to the Divine presence grow less close and tender. The light fades out of Christian life. The result is that the dial ceases to be luminous. In the night hours of temptation and of sorrow, when great strain and bitterness come into men's lives, they look upon Christians as upon dials. They expect help from those who are on good terms with the great Helper. It is a sad and cruel thing to find the light that is in us turned to darkness. It is a flagrant breach of trust when good men fall into fruitless and unhelpful ways of living.

And this disaster cannot be concealed. It is impossible to counterfeit that simple and sincere godliness which brightens the face of the spiritual Christian. The clock may be set on a high place, but only real light can make its face legible. The world knows how to take knowledge of us whether we have been with Jesus. In fact, the dial of Christian life is like the disk of the moon. We see only the luminous side, never its dark parts. Practically, it is no moon to us except as it is bathed in the light which the sun gives. And every Christian is known or knowable, only as his life is lighted up by dwelling in light.

We pass men on the street as mere men, but when something exposes to view their real godliness we have a new feeling and at once are sensible of the mystic charm of a life hid with Christ in God. It is very easy to explain the feebleness of much so-called Christian life; easy to see why the world seems not to recognize it at all. The clock has not been standing in the sun; the dial is not legible.

The Evangelist.

BY REV. J. HOWARD SUYDAM, D.D.

THE recent action of Trinity Episcopal and the Collegiate Dutch Church in employing specialists to conduct a series of services has awakened a spirited discussion in many clerical associations in reference to the place the evangelist should occupy. It seems as if the "new measures" formerly relegated to fanaticism have entered the strongholds of the most rigid conservatism. While there is no compromise of truth, and no surrender of "proprieties," it has come to pass that some things are deemed proper which were formerly tabooed. It is certainly to the credit of these venerable corporations, which exist for the purpose of carrying forward the work of Christ in the world, that they are disposed to so far forget the past as to introduce means somewhat outrè, in the belief that these will contribute to the furtherance of their avowed and cherished object.

The extravagant and eccentric operations of itinerant revivalists in the past have caused sober-minded churchmen to regard all evangelists with distrust and all efforts in the direction of revival as fraught with elements of dangerous reaction. It has been ascertained that the perversion of a good instrument is not conclusive as opposed to its legitimate use. So evident and monstrous had become the orgies in the worship of Mammon that all the prophets of the Lord have been obliged to cry aloud. Hence, Trinity, at the head of Wall street, opens its doors at noon-day and invites the money-changers to enter to hear what God the Lord will say. And night after night, in the most fashionable quarters of the city and in the height of the gayest season, earnest preachers are pleading with men and women to give heed to the claims of God upon their spiritual nature. While the old paths of orthodoxy are pursued, new ways are opened up whereby to find them.

The men engaged in this work are evangelists in the sense that they are other than the stated pastors, and are known to possess peculiar qualifications for awakening the conscience and persuading men to be reconciled to God. They are ordained to the ministry. They are subject to ecclesiastical authority. They work through recognized means. They are orderly, devout and earnest. They build upon existing foundations. Hence there is no fear, as with the methods of irresponsible sensationalists, that the damage after a revival will more than counterbalance the good effected.

And this is the place of the evangelist in the Church, if we are permitted to regard the term according to its modern usage, and as distinct from the missionary, who carries the Gospel to the destitute.

The people in our churches are usually filled with the truth. They know enough. Something is required to arouse it. It is as if the seed was planted and germinated and the little shoot had come to the surface of the ground, but was not able to break through. A new voice, a new measure, will often (under the Divine Spirit, who works through means) effect this vital result. Experience proves it. How often it is, that a word spoken to an individual brings him to a confession of Christ! The gifted evangelist speaks this word to thousands, and the result is a glorious revival. But he is only one factor in bringing this about. The faithful preacher who preceded him has also been God's instrument. He sowed the seed.

I would that in our Church there might be men recognized as having the peculiar gifts and who might be solemnly set apart to go from church to church and preach their rousing sermons over and over again, until like those of Whitefield and Massillon, the hundreth time would be found more effective than the first. Let us have the ordained evangelist.

Up Country in China.

BY REV. P. W. PITCHER.

THINKING that an account of my first trip in a strange and wonderful land might prove interesting to the readers of the INTELLIGENCER and perhaps quicken a livelier interest in this degraded people, I sit myself down in my study this beautiful November morning to tell you about it.

Mr. Van Dyck was to preach at Tong-aan, a small town of some several ten thousand inhabitants. He invited me to accompany him, and I accepted the invitation. We started off Saturday evening early.

Tong-aan is about thirty miles north of Amoy, and, as there are no railroads yet in China, we did not make that distance as quickly as we would in a more civilized land. And as we are not allowed to use steam vessels, except at treaty points, we are dependent on both wind and tide. It is a long and tedious voyage, and sometimes very rough, and to a poor sailor a very unpleasant one. We were obliged to leave here at six o'clock in order to take the flood tide, expecting thereby to get to the end of our journey before the tide changed. For then the channel would be too shallow, and we would have to lay to. Sometimes there is no wind and then the boat has to be rowed. In such a case they generally employ about six Chinese boatmen, each man at an oar. This makes no mean picture. Dressed in their native garb, with a sort of turban on the head, and standing up at the oars, throwing themselves forward with a spring and moving quickly backward at every stroke, they seem like some phantoms. But it's no phantasm about ten o'clock at night. Such a "rattlety-bang" and commotion are no inducements to sleep.

Well, we are on board our "Gospel Boat." It is about twenty-five feet long and ten feet wide. There is a comfortable little cabin with two berths, and a stationary table, and closets, and shelves, and a mariner's lamp. Here, if the wind is not too boisterous, we will enjoy the night pleasantly. Now we are off. We retire early, and soon we do not know whether we are in China or America.

We wake up in the morning and find we have not reached our desired haven. The tide had changed before midnight and we were compelled to "lay to." This was a disappointment, as we hoped to reach Tong-aan in time for the morning service. But what cannot be cured must be endured. So about eight o'clock Sunday morning we were off again, which will enable us to reach Tong-aan in time for the afternoon service.

During this morning's sail we pass through a picturesque valley. High mountains on every side stretch away beyond our sight. They look cold and desolate; but at their foot there nestles many a Chinese hamlet. Along the way there are numerous farms with their rice fields, sugar-cane fields and sweet potato and onion patches. Now and then an old watch-tower may be seen—a reminder of strife and bloodshed among the different clans. And towering above the valley and looking over it as some evil genius, you may see once in a while a pagoda, a sadder reminder of superstition and idolatry. Now we know we are in China—heathen China.

As I pass along and see darkness written on every doorpost, and decay and squalidness in every form of life, where gods of stone or wood or earth appear on every hand, I ask myself: I wonder if I will ever see China filled with beautiful dwellings and clean paved streets; I wonder if in my time every pagoda and idol will have been swept away and this land be Christian. Such a thing is possible.

At Chioh-jim we leave our boat and take chairs for three miles. I never knew I was such a curiosity before. You would certainly have supposed that I was a travelling show, going through the country. I was a new-comer, and if ever my chair was set down just so surely there would be a crowd of youngsters, and men and women, peeping in to look at me. And then they would all jabber at me. And, I suppose, they thought I jabbered at them. Our conversation was not at all interesting. I do not know what their comments were, but I took it for granted they were favorable, as they all looked pleased. And so all along the journey they would run ahead of the chair, and, getting a good position, stop and look at me. And whoever I passed must stretch his head around and squint at me. Well, I had to endure it. I could not tell them I was a very modest man and did not like to be looked at—and so they looked. I always thought a Chinaman a curiosity in our country, but I never before knew that there could be anything curious about us in their country to call forth such marked attention.

But the gaze of the Chinese was not half so painful as the ride of three miles in that chair. I felt as though I had been roughly handled. Was there a part of this body that did not ache? Then my head began to ache and I wished I was back in Kolongsu. How in the world could I endure that torture back again? But I did, and still live to write about it. Such is the pleasure of travel in China. I am glad to say I was all right the next day and hope to enjoy the trip better the next time.

AMOY, November 28th, 1885.

A Layman's View.

AT the annual meeting of the American Missionary Association, last October, the President of the Association, the Hon. Wm. B. Washburn, LL.D., used the following language:

"But there is one fact which I wish to state which holds true in regard to us, and that is that you may take every church in Massachusetts, and the temper of that church, with rare exceptions, and the manner in which that church will give to any of these benevolent organizations, will depend upon the clergyman who is at the head of that church. It will rise just to the level of that clergyman's interest, and no higher. You might as well undertake to have a stream rise higher than its source as to have a church go beyond the interest which the pastor has."

Possibly the churches in Massachusetts are not singular in that respect. OBSERVER.

THREE years ago the Presbyterian Church organized a new Board, called the Board of Aid for Colleges and Academies, and appointed Dr. H. D. Ganse its Secretary. This Board has planted, and now has under its care, twenty-six new institutions, with a property and endowment of nearly three-quarters of a million dollars. Of these institutions, eighteen are so far advanced as to report 987 students, of whom 274 are church members, 267 are in classical studies, and forty-three have the ministry in view.

The Chicago Interior, commenting on these results, says: "We confidently believe this showing is wholly without precedent in ecclesiastical annals. The records, whether of our own communion or of any other, may well be challenged to match it. Look at the facts. Three-quarters of a million dollars laid away virtually in three years, in lands, buildings and endowments, throughout our vast inter-continental and far western spaces. These spaces are yet to teem with millions of people. These infant institutions are soon to be educational centres for vast populations. Their foundations have been laid under organized agency and intelligent supervision, and not amidst the hurry and scramble of rival towns and sections. The great bulk of their cost has been furnished by the self-denying and often remarkable liberality of the synodical or presbyterial vicinage."

The Reading Room.

Our Book-Shelves.

.... 'PRINCE BISMARCK. An Historical Biography." By Charles Lowe. 2 Vols. Each volume has a portrait, one taken when the Chancellor was seventy years of age, the other when he was nineteen. The latter is a profile, the former almost a full face. The portraits differ as much as their subject at those ages. The Bismarck of even 1849 is, in outward manifestations of character, very unlike the Prime Minister of from 1862 to 1871, and still more unlike the statesman of from 1871 to 1884.

The first of these volumes is introduced by an outline of German history from the period of the Carlovingian Empire to the march of the Prussians under Moltke on Paris, written by Professor Munroe Smith, of Columbia College. No one should neglect this introduction. It is a capital piece of work, clear, discriminative, sufficient, engaging, and just what is needed to prepare the reader for the life which follows.

The biography is satisfactory. The life of an eminent man, written while he is still active and influential, is generally partial, guarded, gentle with his frailties and faults, and over-generous in praise. But these volumes about a German are written by an Englishman, an independent observer, free to say what he thinks, and who, while avoiding the severe criticism which courtesy forbids, faithfully records the infirmities as well as the excellences of one of the greatest men of this century of greatness. The delineation is impartial and complete. The style is neither colloquial nor historical, but occupies a pleasing mean. It is perfectly clear and thoroughly agreeable.

The first volume in due proportions describes the career of Count Otto Edward Leopold von Bismarck, from his birth on April 1st, 1815, to his settlement of the preliminaries of peace with France in 1871. One chapter is given to his youth and early manhood, two to his participation in such parliaments as Prussia and the united German States then had, three to his diplomatic career beginning in 1847, and four chapters to his increasing influence as Prime Minister, from 1862, resulting in the unification of Germany, and humiliation of France.

Little in his early life or his appearance in parliament gave promise of the future. He was a bold rider, a deep and hard drinker, positive and turbulent in debate, a strong, generous, courageous man, fond of frolic, and withal careful, as his wise management of his father's estate proved; extremely conservative and old-school in his political opinions. He was well taught, passed the examinations in the preparatory schools and the university, seemed to learn little but really learned much, for few men are his equals in a philosophic knowledge of history, and the breadth and accuracy of his general knowledge has been often exhibited in debate with learned opponents. He acquired also a German style which Professor von Sybel declared has "a classic worth unsurpassed by the German prose writers of any age." He served with his regiment until he became a skilful soldier—the Emperor believes him to be a great general. By the management of the paternal estates he became thoroughly acquainted with the agricultural interests of the country. But this period was preparative. It was not until fairly engaged in diplomatic duties that the qualities which have attracted the world's admiration began to be seen.

Of the great ends rapidly attained in the twenty years included between 1862 and 1882 it is not necessary to speak. How barriers were swept away, how a movement was inaugurated which advanced with irresistible force until Germany was united and triumphant, is fresh in the minds of all men.

The second volume sets forth clearly and in detail the successive acts of masterly statesmanship which established and consolidated the German Empire on a firm foundation. It will command admiration as a careful, sensible, clear exposition of the political history of Germany during these eventful years. The relations of the Empire to other European States are described and the influences from without which have affected German policy. The preceding biography will no doubt prove more interesting to many readers, but this consideration of the measures by which German unity was consolidated and by which the German nation was advanced to the position of one of the first powers of the world is much more valuable.

After this excellent political history and record of Prince Bismarck's share in it, Mr. Lowe returns to the person of the great Chancellor and in a very interesting chapter relates his "Characteristics." Some of the facts have become known through the entertaining writings of Mr. Moritz Busch, but Mr. Lowe extends the list and presents a more complete portraiture of the Prince. If this chapter should be published separately it would probably reach a large sale.

The appendix contains the Treaties negotiated under Bismarck, the Constitution of the Prussian Kingdom and that of the German Empire.

Few biographies of eminent men of the generation now passing away treat of a person so important and in few of them is the treatment so clear and comprehensive, so entertaining, instructive and satisfactory. (Cassell & Co.)

...."UPLAND AND MEADOW." By Charles C. Abbott, M.D. The author of this attractive narrative is a practical naturalist, who is fond of the forest and the companionships of beasts and birds and fish. His pages remind one of the treatises on nature drawn by the hand of Thoreau, wherein the works of the Divine wisdom are described with a most observant skill and interpretative fondness for their minutest phases. Dr. Abbott's range has been on the Delaware river and the historic creeks in New Jersey and Pennsylvania, in the neighborhood of Trenton. He has gained some celebrity as a writer by his previous works, entitled "Primitive Industry" and "A Naturalist's Rambles About Home." Lovers of books like these are sure of acquiring a knowledge that converts every landscape into a museum, and stores the valleys and the hills within sight of one's birth place with curiosities that rival, if they do not excel in eccentric charm or curious fascination, the storied wonders of distant lands. Such works are treasure-houses for adventurous boys who would shun the effeminating snares of the city. (Harper & Bros.)

...."ZEPH" is an attractive and thrilling story of frontier life in Colorado. The vast constituency of readers who admire the literary work of Mrs. Helen Jackson will be reminded of the great loss they have sustained by the death of the distinguished poet and story writer, when they turn over the pages of her last and most beautiful novel. Mrs. Jackson was seized with her fatal sickness when she was writing this admirable story, and was compelled to hasten its completion. This brilliant woman's life was in the main a literary festival of song and story, and she gave to her immense parish of readers "the best of the wine at the last of the feast." What Fenelon said of Madam de Maintenon applies with equal force to our favorite American writer: "She was wisdom speaking through the mouth of the graces." (Roberts Brothers.)

...."ONE HUNDRED YEARS OF TEMPERANCE." This is "a memorial volume of the Centennial Temperance Conference held in Philadelphia, Pa., last September." It contains a full record of the proceedings of the Conference, including the addresses made at the several sessions; the historical papers presented, treating of the inception of the temperance reformation, total abstinence, prohibitory legislation, temperance in Sunday schools and public schools, legislation in State Legislatures and in Congress, the verdict of science, temperance literature, constitutional prohibition, and other related themes, all covering pretty thoroughly the history of temperance for the century. The addresses were all marked by great fervor; and the papers were carefully prepared by men and women who were evidently masters of their subjects, and who write with the precision and positiveness of such as know whereof they affirm. Much space is given to reports concerning the position taken by different branches of the Church in relation to the subject of temperance, wherein the various deliverances of councils, conferences, Synods, assemblies and other ecclesiastical bodies are specified. Also, historical sketches are given of all temperance organizations and the work accomplished by them; with interesting accounts of the work in the Dominion of Canada and in the British Isles. In the appendix is produced in full the essay by Dr. Benjamin Rush on "The Effects of Ardent Spirits on the Human Body and Mind," published in Philadelphia in 1785, from which event the century, celebrated by the Conference, was dated. In addition to this essay and other pertinent and important matter embraced in the appendix, the Rev. D. Dorchester, D.D., sums up in an able paper the temperance gains of the century.

From this imperfect synopsis some judgment may be formed of the contents and character of this volume and of its value as a book of reference. It will undoubtedly be much and long used as an encyclopædia of information respecting one of the great moral movements of the age, and which gathers fresh momentum as it advances. While all lovers of righteousness have agreed in pronouncing intemperance evil, and only evil, and have been moved by a common desire for its suppression, they have differed in opinion and action, and still differ, as to the best methods of operation to that end. This fact was manifest at the Conference, and at one time came very near marring the harmony of the proceedings. The volume has a brief introduction by Rev. Theodore L. Cuyler, D.D., and a frontispiece portrait of Dr. Benjamin Rush, in which he is "represented as sitting in his library at his table, with his books and papers around him." (National Temperance Society and Publication House.)

Our Library Table.

Periodicals, Serials and Notes.

...The Popular Science Monthly is republishing the debate between Mr. Gladstone and his opponents in relation to the dawn of creation and of worship. It is not necessary to say that it is a battle of giants, not very equal to be sure, being three men against one, but the venerable Premier is certainly a good match for the trio.

....Harper's for March is exceedingly strong in the class of articles which have made its special and unrivalled reputation as a sort of serial cyclopædia. The chief of these is an account of the cyclopean gunnery of Krupp at Essen, by Moncure D. Conway, written with much more of literary excellence than is usually found in such accompaniments to magazine pictures. The paper on "The City of Cleveland," by Edmund Kirke, is highly interesting and graphic, as are also C. H. Farnham's "Cape Breton Folk," and David Ker's "Africa's Awakening." This latter is invaluable, as giving a clear, concise, and picturesque account of the present marvellous opening up of the Dark Continent, and the prospects of its civilization. These are all magnificently illustrated. E. P. Roe begins a series of practical articles on the best use of a bit of land, entitled "The Home Acre." We confess that we like Mr. Roe better in such articles than when he tries to mix his agricultural information with his stories. There is a pretty piece of poetry by Frances L. Mace, "A Rose of Jericho," an excellent short story by Brander Matthews, and an article containing much information on "Dogs and their Management," by Hugh Dalziel. Constance Fenimore Woolson's portrait is more interesting to us than her interminable novel. The "Editor's Study" grows better and broader, and we hail this department as a sign of the times, that more of the literary element is to reappear in our great pictorial magazines.

....The Expositor for February (Randolph & Co.) contains a very full account of Wellhausen and his Theory, by Prof. S. I. Curtiss, Dr. Maclaren on the True Circumcision, Prof. Kirkpatrick on the Revised Version of Judges and Ruth (commends the Revisers' "unwearying diligence and sober judgment"), Dr. M. Dods on The First Three Versions of Zechariah, and Prof. Strack's review of recent foreign literature on the Old Testament. The matter of this number is unusually good.

....Christian Thought, January-February, touches points of great interest as well as difficulty in Music as a Revelation of God and of the Future, by Dr Munger, and Political Economy in its relation to Ethics, by Prof. G. B. Newcomb. This bi-monthly maintains its usual high character as at once profound and Christian.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

Funk & Wagnalls: The Hero of Cowpens: A Revolutionary Sketch. By Rebecca McConkey. Revised Edition. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 295. $1.

Ticknor & Co.: The Life and Genius of Goethe. Lectures at the Concord School of Philosophy. Edited by F. B. Sanborn. With Portrait. 12mo, pp. 454. $2.

National Temperance Society: Let It Alone and It Won't Hurt You. By Edward Carswell. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 286. $1.

White, Stokes & Allen: Leaves from Maple Lawn. By William White. With an Introduction by Richard Henry Stoddard. 12mo, pp. 155. $1.50; also, Puddings and Dainty Desserts. By Thomas J. Murrey. 32mo, pp. 53. 50 cents.

E. P. Dutton & Co.: Sermons and Addresses Delivered in America by Frederick W. Farrar, D.D., F.R.S., Archdeacon and Canon of Westminster. With an Introduction by Phillips Brooks, D.D. With Portrait. 8vo, pp. 364. $2; also,

Under the Mendips. A Tale. By Emma Marshall. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 420. $1.25.

Proceedings at the Unveiling of the Statue of William E. Dodge, Oct. 22, 1885. With Engraving of Statue.

Tribute of the Chamber of Commerce to the Memory of Horace B. Claflin, January 7th, 1886. With Portrait.

UNBOUND BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

Proceedings of the Fourth Baptist Conference. New York, November, 1885. 8vo, pp. 112. 25 cents. The Century Co.

What's Mine's Mine. A Novel. By George Macdonald. (No. 512, Harper's Franklin Square Library.) 4to, pp. 78. 20 cents; also,

Mauleverer's Millions. A Yorkshire Romance. By T. Wemyss Reid. (No. 56, Harper's Handy Series.) 16mo, pp. 257. 25 cents; also,

What Does History Teach? Two Edinburgh Lectures. By John Stuart Blackie. (No. 57, same.) 16mo, pp. 119. 25 cents.

Annual Report of the Women's National Indian Association, November 17th, 1885; also,

Missionary Work of the Women's National Indian Association and Letters of Missionaries; also,

Address of the President, Mrs. J. B. Dickinson, at the Annual Meeting of the Women's National Indian Association, Philadelphia, November 17th, 1885.

The Complete Angler. By Isaac Walton. (Cassell's National Library, Vol. I., No. 4.) 16mo, pp. 192. 10 cents.

PERIODICALS.

February.—The Targum.

March.—Cassell's Family Magazine, The Atlantic Monthly, Wide Awake, The Popular Science Monthly.

IMPORTANT NEW BOOKS.

Oceana: or, England and Her Colonies. By JAMES ANTHONY FROUDE, M.A. Illustrated. 1 vol. crown 8vo, $2.50.

A singularly interesting volume.—[New York Tribune.

Letters to Dead Authors. By ANDREW LANG. 1 vol. Elzevir 12mo, gilt top, $1.

A collection of the brightest, wittiest, and most thoughtful literary criticisms of recent years.

The History of German Literature.

By Professor WILLIAM SCHERER. Translated under the supervision of Prof. Max Müller. 2 vols. 12mo. $3.50.

A history of German literature which is as full of entertainment as it is of instruction, and comprises within a convenient space all that is important to know of German literature.—Prof. H. H. BOYESEN.

What Does History Teach? By JOHN STUART BLACKIE. 1 vol. 16mo, cloth, 75 cents.

A small volume, but one that is packed with treasure.....A bright, brave, inspiring book, we heartily commend it to our readers.—[Hartford Courant.

The Fight for Missouri in 1861.

From the Inauguration of Jackson to the Death of Lyon. By Colonel THOMAS L. SNEAD. 1 vol. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

Domesticus. A Tale of the Imperial City. By WILLIAM ALLEN BUTLER, Author of "Nothing to Wear." 1 vol. 12mo, $1.25.

It is the brightest, most fascinating and thoroughly enjoyable book in lighter literature that has been published for a long time.

Valentino. By WILLIAM WALDORF ASTOR. 1 vol. 12mo, handsomely bound, $2.

The details of workmanship are excellent. Mr. Astor writes apparently out of a full mind and a thorough interest in his subjects.—[Atlantic Monthly.

Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. By ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON, author of "The New Arabian Nights," "Treasure Island," etc. Library Edition, $1; paper, 25 cents.

A work of incontestable genius....What is worth mentioning, because otherwise many people will miss it, is that a noble moral underlies the marvelous tale.—[James Payn in The Independent.

How To Be Happy Though Married.

Being a Hand-book to Marriage. By a Graduate in the University of Matrimony. 1 vol. 12mo. $1.25.

One of the brightest, wittiest, most sensible and wholesome books on the subject of matrimony that we have seen.—[New York Observer.

An Apache Campaign in the Sierra Madre. An Account of the Expedition in Pursuit of the Hostile Chiricahua in the Spring of 1883. By Capt. JOHN G. BOURKE, author of "The Moquis Indians." 1 vol. 12mo, illustrated, cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

A thrilling and absorbing narrative which affords an extremely interesting picture of Indian life.

 These books for sale by all booksellers, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, by*

Charles Scribner's Sons,

743--745 Broadway, New York.

EASTER MUSIC.

"CAPTIVITY CAPTIVE." A new arrangement of Scripture Selections for Easter tide, interspersed with appropriate hymns, set to original music, the whole Service being eminently fitted for use on Easter Sunday for young and old. 16 pp. By Rev. ROBERT LOWRY.
Price, $4 per 100; 5 cts. each by Mail.

"EASTER ANNUAL NO. 10."—Issued this season. Contains new and original songs by popular composers, furnishing an abundant variety of appropriate material for Sunday School Easter Festivals. Price, $4 per 100; 5 cts. each by Mail.

"FESTIVAL ANTHEMS." 64 large octave page Anthems, for Easter and other joyous occasions. Price, $3.60 per doz.; 35c. each by Mail.

A complete Catalogue of Easter Music, Services, Carols, Anthems, etc., sent on request.

BIGLOW & MAIN, 76 East Ninth St., N. Y.
81 Randolph St., Chicago.

EUROPE Travel in Select Party. "THE BEST." Seventh Year. Unique Advantages. Send 10 cents for "The Old World and European Guide." 100 pages, illustrated. A. de Potter, Albany, N. Y.

OUR New Catalogue of Books for family, Sunday-school, ministers, students, or teachers' Library will be sent free to any address on receipt of a postal request. Address PHILLIPS & HUNT, Publishers, 805 Broadway, New York.

A. S. BARNES & CO., Publishers of the authorized Hymn and Tune Book for the Reformed Church in America. Write for introductory terms 111 and 113 WILLIAM STREET, NEW YORK.

GOOD NEWS TO LADIES.

Greatest inducements ever offered. Now's your time to get up orders for our celebrated Teas and Coffees, and secure a beautiful Gold Band or Moss Rose China Tea Set, or Handsome Decorated Gold Band Moss Rose Dinner Set, or Gold Band Moss Decorated Toilet Set. For full particulars address
THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO.,
P. O. Box 289. 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

THE

GLADSTONE AND HUXLEY

Controversy on the subject of

Science and Genesis

is now being published in

The Popular Science Monthly.

The February number contains Professor Huxley's reply to Mr. Gladstone's first article. In the March number Mr. Gladstone replies to Professor Huxley; and the April number will contain the rejoinder by Professor Huxley.

Single numbers, 50 cents.

Yearly subscription, $5.00.

D. APPLETON & CO., Publishers,

1, 3 & 5 BOND ST., N. Y.

SCHOOL SONG BOOKS.

For High Schools, Seminaries, &c.

Song Greeting.
(60 cts. or $6 per doz.) By L. O. Emerson. A really admirable collection of good songs.

High School Book of Song.
(75 cts. or $8 per doz.) By E. Leslie. Fine collection of the best Part-Songs, Duets, &c.

Song Reader. Book 2.
(60 cts. or $5 per doz.) By Emerson and Brown. Practical note reader, with good music.

Public School Hymnal.
(40 cts. or $3.60 per doz By Irving Emerson. Large collection of well chosen hymns and tunes.

Welcome Chorus, by W. S. Tilden.

High School Choir, by Emerson & Tilden.

Laurel Wreath, by W. O. Perkins, are three very successful High School Song Books. Price, each, $1 or $9 per doz.

For Common Schools.

American School Music Readers, Book 1 (35 cts.), Book 2 (50 cts.), Book 3 (50 cts.), by Emerson & Tilden, are increasingly popular in graded schools.

Song Bells, by L. O. Emerson, and

Golden Robin, by W. O. Perkins, are two very popular general collections of genial school songs. Price of each, 50 cts. or $4.80 per doz.

Any book mailed for retail price.

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston.
Chas. H. Ditson & Co., 867 Broadway, N. Y.

EASTER MUSIC

THE RISEN CHRIST.

AN EASTER EXERCISE,
By J. E. HALL.

This consists of a beautiful and instructive Responsive Service, throughout which is interspersed new and appropriate music, the whole forming a complete Easter Exercise for Sunday Schools.
16 pp. Price 5 cents each, or 50 cents a dozen by mail, postpaid; $4.00 a hundred by express, not prepaid.

1886. EASTER CHIMES. 1886.

WITH SERVICE, (Ad Lib.)

A collection of new, bright and pretty carols by the very best writers of words and music, to which is prefixed an exceedingly interesting Responsive Service, prepared by Nettie A. Wellman. The arrangement is such that the Service and Carols may be used separately or combined, as the music is printed after the Service, instead of being interspersed through it. Price, the same as "The Risen Christ."

Send for our complete lists of Easter Music, Free.

PUBLISHED BY

THE JOHN CHURCH CO., Cincinnati, O.
J. CHURCH & CO., 55 E. 13th St., New York City.

JUST PUBLISHED

BY MORRIS COSTER,
1166 Broadway, New York,
NO. 6 OF THE
THIRD VOLUME
OF THE

New Amsterdam Gazette.

Containing full speeches of Judge Hooper Van Vorst, Judge Van Wyck, Rev. Van Dyke, Jr., Hon. Theodore Roosevelt, Hon. DeWitt, etc., at the Dinner of the Holland Society of New York. Also, description of the relics exhibited that evening. An interesting article on Church Music by Rev. Daniel Van Pelt. A sketch of the first settler of the Van Brunt family, etc., etc.

Subscriptions for Volume 3, to be complete in 12 numbers, taken at $1.50 per year on fine paper, at the office of THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER, and by MORRIS COSTER, 1166 Broadway, N. Y. Every number illustrated.

Agents Make $5 a Day Selling Perfect FAMILY SCALES
Entirely new in principle. Weigh one ounce to 25 pounds. What every family needs and will buy. Rapid sales surprise old agents. FORSHEE & McMAKIN, CINCINNATI, O.

CARDS 60 Fancy Pictures, and 25 elegant Cards in Gilt Edge, Silk Fringe, Hidden Name, &c., 1 Songster, 1 $50 Prize Puzzle, and 8 parlor games, all for 10cts. Game of Authors, 10cts.
IVORY CO., Clintonville, Conn.

JUST ISSUED

BY THE

Presbyterian Board of Publication.

Half-Hours with the Lessons of 1886.

Forty-eight short sermons on the lessons of 1886 by twenty-four prominent Pastors and Preachers.

Specially prepared to aid Superintendents and Teachers.

12mo. Price, in cloth binding, $1.25. Paper binding, 85c.

Westminster Question Book for 1886.

A manual for teachers and older scholars, containing the Text of the Lesson, Helps for Scholars, Questions, Lesson Plan, Golden Text, Home Studies and Catechism.

Price, 15 cents, net.

My Soul, Thou Hast Much Goods.

BY HELEN R. EDSON.
24mo. Fancy Paper Cover. Price, 25 cents

Golden Promises.

SELECTED FROM GOD'S WORD.
BY REV. SAMUEL FULTON.
24mo. Fancy Paper Cover. Price, 25 cents.

Address orders to

JOHN A. BLACK, Business Sup't,
1334 CHESTNUT ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Or, Ward & Drummond, 116 Nassau St., New York, N. Y.

EDUCATIONAL.

UNIVERSITY

of the City of New York.

JOHN HALL, D.D., LL.D., Chancellor.

1. DEPARTMENT OF ARTS, Tuition Free.
2. DEPARTMENT OF SCIENCE, Tuition Free.
3. SCHOOL OF CIVIL ENGINEERING, Tuition $100
4. DEPARTMENT OF LAW.
5. DEPARTMENT OF MEDICINE.

 Catalogues, with full particulars of all Courses, may be had upon application to the Registrar.

BEST TEACHERS AMERICAN and FOREIGN, promptly provided for Families, Schools, Colleges
Skilled Teachers supplied with Positions.
Circulars of Good Schools free to Parents.
School Property rented and sold.
School and Kindergarten Material, etc.
J. W. SCHERMERHORN & CO.,
AMERICAN SCHOOL INSTITUTE, 7 East 14th St., N. Y

VASSAR COLLEGE, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. FOR THE LIBERAL EDUCATION OF WOMEN, with a complete College Course, Schools of Painting and Music, Astronomical Observatory, Laboratory of Chemistry and Physics, Cabinets of Natural History, a Museum of Art, a Library of 15,000 Volumes, ten Professors, twenty-three Teachers, and thoroughly equipped for its work. Students at present admitted to a preparatory course. Catalogues sent on application.
J. RYLAND KENDRICK, D. D., Acting President.

Mason & Hamlin

ORGANS: Highest Honors at all Great World's Exhibitions for eighteenyears. One hundred Styles, $22. to $900. For Cash, Easy Payments or Rented. Catalogues free.

PIANOS: New mode of Stringing. Do not require one-quarter as much tuning as Pianos on the prevailing "wrest-pin" system. Remarkable for purity of tone and durability.

ORGAN AND PIANO CO.

154 Tremont St., Boston. 46 E. 14th St. (Union Sq.), N. Y. 149 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

MEMORIAL TABLETS.

MEMORIAL WINDOWS,
CHURCH FURNITURE,
INTERIOR DECORATIONS.

J. & R. LAMB, 59 CARMINE ST., NEW YORK.

SEEDS! SEEDS!

My Annual Priced Catalogue is now ready, and will be mailed free to all applicants. It contains all the leading and most popular sorts of

Vegetables, Farm & Flower Seeds,

Besides all the desirable novelties of last season, and nearly everything else in my line of business.

ALFRED BRIDGEMAN,
37 East 19th Street, New York City.

ATLANTIC

Mutual Insurance Co.

NEW YORK OFFICE, 51 WALL STREET
ORGANIZED 1842.

Insures against Marine and Inland Navigation Risks.
And will issue Policies making Loss payable in England.

Assets for the Security of its Policies are more than TEN MILLION DOLLARS.

The profits of the Company revert to the assured and are divided annually, upon the Premiums terminated during the year, Certificates for which are issued, bearing interest in accordance with its Charter.

J. D. JONES, President.
CHARLES DENNIS, Vice President
W. H. H. MOORE, 2d Vice Pres't.
A. A. RAVEN 3d Vice Pres't.
J. H. CHAPMAN, Secretary.

CONTINENTAL

Insurance Co.

Continental Buildings
100 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

Cor. COURT and MONTAGUE STS., BROOKLYN
106 BROADWAY, BROOKLYN, E.D.

Insures against loss by Fire at reasonable rates.

Reserve for re-insurance	$2,265,427 88
of which for Inland Marine, $55,969 52
Reserve ample for all other claims	553,171 26
Capital paid in cash	1,000,000 00
Net surplus	1,358,879 85
Total Cash Assets, Jan. 1, 1886.	$5,177,478 99

This Company conducts its business under the restrictions of the New York Safety Fund Law. The two Safety Funds together equal $1,200,000.

H. H. LAMPORT, President.
CYRUS PECK, Secretary.

HOME

INSURANCE COMPANY

OF NEW YORK.

OFFICE, No. 119 BROADWAY.

Sixty-fifth Semi-Annual Statement, Showing the Condition of the Company on the first day of January, 1886.

CASH CAPITAL	$3,000,000 00
Reserve Premium Fund	3,011,637 00
Reserve for Unpaid Losses and Claims	378,483 98
Net Surplus	1,227,995 10
Cash Assets	$7,618,116 08

SUMMARY OF ASSETS

Cash in Banks	$245,795 99
Bonds and Mortgages, being first lien on Real Estate	897,550 00
United States Stocks (market value)	2,879,390 00
Bank and Railroad Stocks and Bonds (market value)	1,522,550 00
State and City Bonds (market value)	222,000 00
Loans on Stocks, payable on demand	122,850 00
Interest due on 1st January, 1886	97,056 02
Premiums uncollected and in hands of Agents	358,290 30
Real Estate	1,272,633 77
Total	$7,618,116 08

CHAS. J. MARTIN, President.
D. A. HEALD, Vice-President.
J. H. WASHBURN, V. P. & Sec'y.
T. B. GREENE, W. L. BIGELOW, E. G. SNOW, JR., } Ass't Sec's.

MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD.

The question often asked, How does MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD compare with other foods and tonics? We refer to Dr. S. W. Abbott's report for 1886. He is the State Inspector of Foods for Massachusetts.

	Albumen.	Alcoholic matter.	Organic matter.	Ash.
Murdock's Liquid Food	14.10	1.97	16.45	0.42
Liebig's	Not any	54.87	5?.16	23.74
Valentine's	do.	28 67	22 62	11.09
Johnston's	do.	20.13	47.16	3.30
Delacre's	do.	56.13	60.50	19.24

MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD contains 14.10 per cent. of albumen; all other foods do not contain any. Common food does not contain over one per cent. that is available.

It contains less organic matter than common food, and common food contains 16.85; the other preparations from 22.62 to 60.50 per cent.

It contains 0.42 of Ash, which is indigestible matter. The others contain from 3 30 to 23.74 per cent.

In alcoholic extracts 1.97. The other preparations are all TONICS, as they contain from 20.13 to 56.13 per cent.

These facts show why MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD excels all other foods and preparations in making new blood, and cleansing the system of disease.

Murdock's Liquid Food Co., Boston.

LADIES WANTED, to work for us at their own homes. $7 to $10 per week can be easily made; no canvassing; fascinating and steady employment. Particulars and sample of the work sent for stamp. Address HOME MF'G CO., P. O. Box 1916 Boston, Mass

BELLS.

McShane Bell Foundry
Finest Grade of Bells,
CHIMES AND PEALS for CHURCHES, &c.
Send for Price and Catalogue. Address
H. McSHANE & CO.,
Mention this paper. Baltimore, Md.

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY.
Bells of Pure Copper and Tin for Churches, Schools, Fire Alarms, Farms, etc. FULLY WARRANTED. Catalogue sent Free.
VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

MENEELY & COMPANY
West Troy, N. Y. Bells,
For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others

The Home.

AUNT MARJORIE'S CORNER.

"She Hath Given More Than They All."

"HERE is a sight, my brother Benjamin,
These sons of wealth are giving to the Lord.
Sit here, and see them cast their offerings in;
'Tis worth your wonder, if you trust my word.

"They give like kings, and never till this day
Of mine own nation have I been so proud.
See Adin Israel, as he turns away,
How like a prince he moves among the crowd!

"Just now I saw him lay his offering there;
'Twas gold, 'twas jewels of enormous price;
'Twould build a house of cedar painted fair;
'Twould buy a thousand bulls for sacrifice.

"Here comes another, rich in purple state;
The throng makes way for him, as well it may;
In years, in gold, in pious bounty great;
Here let us note what he doth bring to-day.

"But, oh confusion! we have missed our aim.
Out, woman! In your faded rags to stand,
And from our eyes to hide him as he came,
And with his gift stretched out his princely hand!

"For little, I would push her from the place!
What is her mite? What good does she propose,
That she comes hither to confound our gaze,
And thrust her pittance where a prince bestows?"

"Nay, touch her not." Forth from the shadows stole
A voice that heard their words, and read their thought.
"Nay, touch her not. Hers is the stateliest soul
That enters here; the richest gift hath brought.

"With lily fingers they do give away
What leaves them still too full of wine and oil;
But she, the earnings of this hard-wrought day,
With hands that yet are bleeding from their toil.

"Her purse is emptied; naught remains to buy
A handful of coarse meal to feed her soul,
Or a poor stick of wood to warm her by,
Or bake her frugal loaf upon the coal.

"Her gift's her all. Eternity shall tell
What compensation in her lap shall fall;
But go, proud men, and weigh this lesson well,
That this poor one hath given more than all."

—S. P. Herron

Our Mission Band and How We Conducted It.

DEAR AUNT MARJORIE: In answer to your kind invitation, I gladly send you a sketch—simple but truthful—with the heading you have chosen: "Our Mission Band and How We Conducted It." I do so, being confident that such a Band may exist in every church.

Some years ago, when the young men and maidens of our village were its boys and girls, we were assembled one Sunday afternoon in the Sunday-school room of one of our churches, listening to the interesting address of a missionary from India. The school being accustomed to contribute on one Sunday of each month for foreign missions, always joined our pastor, superintendent and teachers in extending a welcome to every missionary who favored us with a visit. On this particular afternoon the subject of Children's Work for Missions especially claimed our attention. After the exercises had closed and the children had withdrawn, four little girls signified their willingness to form "a mission band" themselves; one to become a private member, the others to serve as President, Secretary and Treasurer. They would hold monthly meetings; lay aside one cent each week—earned or saved; and invite their playmates to their meetings, with the understanding that they would also pay the membership fee if the meetings were interesting to them.

It did not seem possible that this "Young Girls' Band," as it was called, would work so successfully as to be able to gather monthly a well-filled parlor of merry little girls, dressed in their Sunday attire, quietly seated and listening with evident interest to the exercises of the hour; yet it was so, from the beginning. But still more wonderful to relate, the Band celebrated its first anniversary by the admittance of frolicsome, romping boys to full membership. A change of name thus became necessary, and this it was unanimously voted should be, "The Golden Rule Band," with its sweet motto: "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." At the opening of every subsequent meeting the children arose and repeated this verse in concert. I was an invited guest at their first anniversary meeting; and entering the pretty parlor in which it was to be held at three o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, was greeted with smiles and cordial welcomes. The president, secretary and treasurer were seated behind a little table close to the front window and opposite the opened piano. The space between was filled with children. The smallest were seated comfortably on low chairs and stools.

That sweet verse was first sung:

"Rejoice and be glad! The Redeemer has come,
Go look on His cradle, His cross and His tomb.
Sound His praises, tell the story
Of Him who was slain;
Sound His praises, tell with gladness
He liveth again."

The president read "The Parable of the Great Supper," to which so many were invited and yet there was room; a short, simple prayer, asking for the Saviour's blessing, followed; and the opening exercises were over. On other occasions the children arose, and with bowed heads and closed eyes, reverentially repeated the Lord's Prayer together.

The reports were read, approved and accepted. The same officers were unanimously re-elected, and a vice-president and assistant secretary added to their number. The boys were admitted to membership, and appointed to offices of trust, one of which was "taking up the collection," or receiving from each member present the four cents due and reporting it aloud to the treasurer. Failures to pay were also thus publicly announced.

The interesting letter then read by the secretary, from a missionary in India, thanked the Band for its beautiful and useful gifts received for her school, and the loving letter which had accompanied them addressed to herself. The letters frequently interchanged between this Band and the missionaries doubtless did much to sustain interest.

Well selected stories—very brief—of other children who had helped the missionaries, sweet little hymns recited or read, and my few words about the Japanese children,—a variety of whose toys I had brought to show,—made the hour pass quickly by. We sang in conclusion:

"Little children I see, standing close by their King,
And He smiles as their song of salvation they sing."

Subsequent anniversaries were grand occasions. They were held on Sunday evenings in place of the ordinary services. Pastors, superintendents, friends, were present to cheer, encourage and help. A generous collection was expected and received. When the money raised through the year was to be sent to our general society's treasurer, the children themselves decided as to its appropriation,—ever deciding wisely.

To assist in providing interesting information for their meetings, small missionary scrap-books were occasionally prepared. Sheets of note paper were torn apart, and thus formed leaflets which were fastened at the top with colored cords or ribbons. On these leaflets short interesting items, clipped from papers, were pasted with often appropriate wood-cuts, obtained from similar sources. At the meetings these leaflets were loosened and distributed among the boys and girls selected to be readers.

One of the most delightful afternoons I have ever spent, was that on which the Golden Rule Band gathered for an open-air meeting on our front lawn. Nearly one hundred children and a score of adults must, I think, have been present. We were especially honored in having with us a venerable clergyman of the Protestant Episcopal Church, nearly fourscore years of age, whose presence graced the scene as probably naught else could have done. The exercises were entirely conducted by the young people.

EMILY.

In connection with our friend's admirable paper, Aunt Marjorie desires to call special attention to a little publication which Mission Bands and Auxiliaries will find helpful. From the graceful pen of our occasional contributor, Mrs. Lucy Randolph Fleming, and published by the Presbyterian Board, Philadelphia, a little packet of twelve leaflets, in a tinted paper case, will be convenient for reading in meetings and at home. The title, "Little Talks to Little Missionaries," is itself attractive. The talks were prepared by their author, and originally used in a society of young people belonging to her husband's church in Woodstock, Virginia.

Having once attended a meeting of this society, Aunt Marjorie takes the greater interest in these leaflets, each of which is pithy, bright and winning, and has for its suggestion some aptly quoted Scripture text. Remember the title, please, "Little Talks to Little Missionaries," by Lucy Randolph Fleming.

THE OPEN WINDOW.

Some of you are interested in the organization which does its beautiful and modest work for Christ among invalids, being known as The Shut-In Band. This society, at the small cost of fifty cents a year, issues an attractive monthly periodical, designed to be cheering and comforting to all sufferers, and entitled "The Open Window." Its editor is Mary Lowe Dickinson, and among its contributors are Helen E. Brown, Grace Webster Hinsdale, Margaret E. Sangster, and many others who write briefly and lovingly for the Master and His hidden ones. The office of publication is 354 Fourth avenue, N. Y.

Here, too, let me say a word for our own little magazine, The Mission Gleaner, published at 34 Vesey street, at twenty-five cents a year, and issued once in two months, with the latest intelligence from the foreign field regarding our work among women and girls. No society can afford to be without it, and it ought to visit every home in the Reformed Church.

Deborah.

JUDGES 5-7. REVISED VERSION.

SORROW and sighing dwelt in all the land:
The people were oppressed, and courage died
From out the hearts of even the strong men.
Our foes were mighty, and our men were weak;
The Canaanitish hordes were everywhere.
No caravans could pass by the highways,
But travellers had to steal through crooked paths
And narrow byways to escape attack;
And all the villagers took fright and came
To dwell within the towns. Were there no men
Of Israel leal and brave enough to rise
To the emergency of these grave times?
Where were the rulers? Ah! they ceased and ceased,
Until there seemed no men in all the land
To rule and lead.

'Twas then that I arose.
No man, only a woman, raised to be
A mother in our Israel. I sat
Beneath my palm-tree, looking on the world
If haply there should come some wise great man,
Fit for the times. And since there came not one
The people flocked to me, and told their tales
Of wrong and of oppression. Mother-like
I gave my judgment, and they deemed it wise;
And, glad to have some light and help at need,
They did obey me, and they called me judge;
While I kept to myself the dearer name,
And sought to be a mother to them all
In their necessity.

I could not brook
Day after day the insolence and hurt
Of our oppressors. Though I love not war
I love still less the drowsy indolence,
And spiritless inaction, that can know
Its own attacked, and look supinely on.
I could not bear the irritating scene,
And so God gave me Barak, and we went
Against our foes and His, at His command!

Ah! then at last the leaders took the lead,
And some among the people willingly
Offered themselves; and then the trembling earth,
The dropping heavens, the mountains that were moved
Told of the mighty presence of the Lord.
It was a time of test. Was there a shield
Or spear 'mong Israel's forty thousand men?
The tribe of Reuben made some great resolves
Beside the water-courses! but the bleating sheep
Were nearer than the crying brothers were,
And the great-hearted did but little deeds.
And Gilead was inactive in their tents
Beyond the Jordan. Why did Dan remain
Safely within the ships? And Asher sat
Inertly at the haven of the sea
Abiding by his creeks. But Zebulun,
Handling the marshal's staff, gave up their lives,
And all my princely men in Issachar
Were with me in the fight. But over all
The God of Israel was. The very stars
Fought in their courses against Sisera,
The river Kishon swept them all away.
O bless the Lord ye that repose to-day,
And far from all the noise the archers made,
Ride calmly where the banks are green, and still
Or rest beside the fountains, and rehearse
The righteous acts of God!

He over all
Is King for ever. He can raise the weak
To the high places, make the foolish wise.
It was a woman who slew Sisera,
And when a woman ruled o'er Israel
The happy land had rest for forty years.

—Marianne Farningham, in Christian World, London.

The Girls' School at Hadjin.

AT the meeting of the Woman's Board of the Interior at Chicago, auxiliary to the American Board, held on Feb. 4th, a letter was read about the schools in Hadjin, Syria. The following extract tells about the public closing exercises of the Girls' School, after the weeks of examinations:

"It was the first time that certificates had been given in Hadjin, and considering all things, it was a success. It took, however, several pounds of sugar peas to keep the little ones quiet those two and a half hours.

"Before Easter we had examined in our schoolroom, with an audience of over two hundred, the classes in physical geography, Bible lessons on the Psalms and Joshua, the first class in Turkish history, and the whole school in vocal music with reading of notes. Looking over the lessons pursued during the year, that had not yet been examined, the question was, What can I leave out?

"Not arithmetic, for the younger ones will appear in the background. The Bible I will not leave out, for our most important work here is to put that forward. There is to be two or three young doctors in the audience, and physiology could not be left out. Nor would I leave out algebra, for the young men had said, 'Algebra is difficult. Can girls learn that?'

and we had promised to show them that girls could learn that as well as boys. As to drawing, we have previously had every girl do her best on a blackboard, and write her name under it. All the articles they have made in the sewing class shall be displayed, the dark ones on a white background; the light and white ones on a dark background. Let me add, the effect was very pleasing.

"Now, given these lessons and twenty-six girls—all with weak voices, unaccustomed to speaking before a congregation, most of them afraid to let their voices be heard in the presence of a man, even though it is father or brother; given a large church with a bad echo, a restless audience composed of Turks, Greeks, Armenians and Protestants; men, women, children and fleas—and I was to arrange things so as to gain credit to teachers, for they deserve it; show just what our girls did know, no more, no less; please the father and mother of each girl by putting theirs forward; I must weary no one; must get great honor to the Protestant community; and, above all, send the audience home with the feeling that we are a great people!

"The Turkish Governor, the judges, the commander of the soldiers, Mussulman teacher and their various committees, with all the principal men, and teachers of the Armenian community were present, and everyone listened well, especially the Governor, to the Bible lessons, he leaning forward that he might catch every word. Everyone seemed pleased.

"The Turks never tire of praising the exhibition. Only last week, the commander of the soldiers called with some strangers, and he told them that the girls did well in physiology, that they really understood algebra, drew nicely, read Turkish history, and had essays well written in Turkish. We pleased the Protestant community also, and we felt justified in saying that the exhibition had been a success, for no one seemed vexed or hurt, everyone was pleased.

"But more; underneath all the outside show, our great object was to please Jesus, and we felt that we had, for He knew that we had all done our best. We had said, all had understood, that in so far as our examination was superior to those of other communities, so much was the religion we proposed and tried to teach, superior to theirs. The leaven works slowly but it is sure, and you and we together rejoice in every advanced step. J. C. COFFING."

CHILDREN'S PORTFOLIO.

The Lord's Prayer.

THE young people who read these lines may well be thankful that they were born in a Christian land, that their parents surrounded them from their infancy with an atmosphere warm and bright with the love of Jesus Christ, the Son of God, who took upon Himself the dependent condition of a child that He might be the friend, the guide and the example of all children the ages through and the wide world round.

Now let our young readers think a moment. The Buddhist, or worshipper of Budda, repeats over and over again one single word which means nothing, but is supposed to be a prayer. The Mohammedan prays to Allah and acknowledges him to be God, and the one God. But that one word is repeated in a wearisome wail until it is ended by fatigue. And so the Papal devotee is taught to repeat Ave Maria ora pro nobis, according to the number of beads on a string in the hand of the supplicant. This string is a rosary, and the number of times it is gone over is believed to measure the merit of the devotion.

But the prayer for little children, given by the Lord Jesus Christ, was given for all ages, for the old as well as the young, for the learned and the unlearned, for apostles and for disciples, and it can be understood by all. How plain, how comprehensive it is! "Our Father who art in heaven." It is a confession then, that the great God who made all things is the Father of our spirits. And if we have so great and good and wise a Father, why should we not all respect, worship, love and obey Him?

Well, then, if we all have one Father, why should we not love one another? The children of one family should be kindly affectioned one toward another. And when we know that God is good to all and that His tender mercies are exercised toward the weakest and the poorest because they too, no less than the rich and the strong, are His offspring, included in His household and in the care of His Providence; therefore, when we say "Our Father who art in heaven," we confess that the children of sorrow and tribulation are our brothers and sisters.

Besides, since we all have one Father, who is above all and over all, there is no room left for that very evil and wicked pride which causes its victims to despise others. The hateful spirit of the Pharisee caused him to lift up his heart and thank God that he was not as other men. But our Father in heaven is pitiful—more than tender parents are. He is pitiful and He is merciful, and He cannot hate His own children Nor will He permit us to do so if we truly revere His hallowed name and pray that His will may be done in us even as it is done in heaven.

All good fathers and mothers in Christian countries teach their children to use this matchless prayer. It is known as our Lord's Prayer. It has in it no useless words, no vain repetitions, no pride, no vanity, no self-conceit, no foolish boasting, no bitterness of feeling toward neighbor or toward sect, no littleness of selfish avarice or ambition. It is a prayer for the good of all, for peace and good will to all men, for all nations and kindred and tongues. The children old enough to think can go to God direct through prayer in the name of our blessed Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. E. S. P.

CLAVERACK, N. Y.

Elsie's Last Chance.

LITTLE Elsie Venable had one fault that cost her mother many anxious tears; out of a large family of boys and girls she was the only one whose word could not be depended on.

"What shall I do about Elsie?" Mrs. Venable asked her husband. "It breaks my heart that I cannot teach her to tell the truth, no matter how severely I punish her."

"Elsie is a tender-hearted child," replied her husband, thoughtfully; "suppose you make her feel how much it distresses you, by punishing yourself."

One day, after this, Mrs. Venable saw Elsie coming from the garden, with her hands behind her back; she met her at the door and said, gravely, "Didn't I tell you not to eat any more gooseberries, Elsie?"

"I haven't been near the gooseberries," answered the little girl, promptly; but the next minute her hands were found full of berries, and the seeds were sticking between her teeth.

Mrs. Venable led her to her own room, and talked earnestly and sadly about the wickedness of lying. "Now, Elsie," she said in conclusion, "God has given you to me that I may make you a good child; when you commit such a sin, it must be because I have not done my duty by you, so I am going to punish myself. I shall stay in my room all day and eat no food, and pray God to keep my child from ever telling a lie again."

Poor Elsie! She was very miserable. Her mother did not come out to dinner, nor to tea, and a gloom seemed to hang over the house. It was some time before the little girl even felt tempted to tell a story again.

Summer and fall, with their fruits and flowers, passed away. One day in the early winter, Elsie's mother was seized with a sudden and violent illness; the doctor was with her all day, and the children were kept out of the room.

As the early twilight began to gather, Elsie slipped noiselessly up to the bed where the dear mother lay pale and exhausted. She drew her little daughter down to kiss her and whispered, faintly, "Go into my closet, darling, and get yourself an apple."

Now apples were very scarce this year, and the children were only allowed to have one a day from the closet chest. There was nothing that Elsie liked half so well as an apple, and while her mother was speaking the tempter whispered, "She didn't ask whether you had had one; you needn't say anything about it; that won't be a story." But, after an instant's hesitation, the little girl felt that it would be a silent lie, and then she said, "I've had my apple to-day, mamma."

The sick mother saw the hesitation, the quick flush, the look of resolution, and knew just what a struggle it had been, and what a victory. A sweet, bright look came to her suffering face, as she pressed Elsie's hand, whispering faintly, "Dear child—dear Elsie—that was right—and makes mother so happy."

The next morning, very early, Elsie roused up in her little bed, and looked out of the nursery window. A deep snow had fallen during the night and covered everything with its beautiful whiteness. Elsie uttered an exclamation of pleasure, but it was checked by the sound of sobbing in the room, and, standing up in her bed, she saw her father and the elder children clinging together at the hearthstone, weeping bitterly. They had not observed her, and, with a sudden pang at her heart, she slipped out of bed, and ran, in her little bare feet, to the mother's room. It was empty and desolate, and the child stood, shivering and bewildered, until her father came, and, wrapping her in a great warm shawl, carried her down to the parlor.

There, on a white draped couch, lay the precious mother, as cold and white and still as the beautiful snow outside, but wearing, it seemed to Elsie, the same glad, bright look that had come to her face the evening before.

With a burst of tears, the child threw herself upon the quiet form, crying aloud, "O mother, mother! I'm so glad I told you the truth; it was my last chance!"—Elizabeth P. Allan, in The Congregationalist.

For Dame Playfair's Older Class.

THE Bible is a mine of treasure. The deeper that we go down into it the more does its beauty appear. The Holy Spirit opens our spirit to understand and discover the meaning. From this Bible, which is the revelation of the love of the Father to His children, we learn the true plan of life and how the sin and sorrow of this present state may be explained; the sorrow borne as a discipline and the sin forgiven for Jesus Christ's sake. It is natural for us in our troubles to desire help and comfort, and men and women often turn to the Bible as to a kind of friend who will point out some way of aid. I remember seeing a man who had failed in business and was very unhappy, although he knew not the blessedness of religious privilege, sit every day reading the Book of Job. Once when I went into an Indian wigwam upon one of the lakes, I saw a sorrowful Canadian Scotch woman who had married an Indian. Their baby had been buried the day before, and the first thing my eyes lighted on, lying open, was a Bible. The poor mother, no doubt, in her bitter sorrow, had remembered her God and sought comfort in His Word.

As I prepare for my class my Bible questions, I please myself in thinking of the far-away homes where the INTELLIGENCER is the only paper taken. I would like to be sure that after the church services are over and the sweet peace of a Sabbath afternoon or evening draws nigh, that the parents or some older brother and sister gather around them the family and that each one seeks out the answers to the questions, not for amusement only, but to become familiar with the Holy Scriptures, their wonderful books of history, prophecy, Gospel tidings and expositions of Christianity.

Perhaps in this way many may be led to study the Word of God faithfully and with prayer, and to confess that of all the gifts to mankind none is so precious as the Bible, and no other one connects us with our future life. DAME PLAYFAIR.

Little Heads Together.

QUESTIONS FOR DAME PLAYFAIR'S OLDER CLASS.

Many of the words of the Holy Scriptures are symbolical or metaphorical, that is, the name of a thing that we can see, or feel or hear, is put for something that relates to the spirit or mind. There is a class of persons who say that the Bible is all figurative; this is an error. God's Word is plain, but we may study out the reason why certain words are used to express ideas. All Eastern nations have more vivid imaginations than those of cooler blood, and hence as the Scriptures were given to us in the Eastern languages, we find expressions that are more figurative than ours, thus: "Bow down thine ear," means listen; "Go tell that fox," that cunning, deceitful man; enemies of the Cross of Christ, those opposed to the plan of redemption.

In the following list the class will answer what figurative or symbolical word is used for the plain one.

1. Power shown. Isaiah 52:10.
2. Offspring, descendant. Jeremiah 23:5.
3. Strength, victory. Rev. 6:2.
4. Understanding. Psa. 18:28.
5. Following Christ. Matt. 16:24.
6. Immortal bliss. Rev. 2:10.
7. Ignorance, sin. Rom 13:12.
8. Divine influence. Hosea 14:5.
9. Generous desires. Prov. 22:9.
10. Extreme danger. Psa. 69:15.
11. Purity of character. Job 23:10.
12. Preparation for work. 1 Peter 1:13.
13. Season of privilege. Jer. 8:20.
14. Acceptable prayer. Psa. 141:2.
15. Special treasure. Mal. 3:17.
16. Authority. Isaiah 22:22.
17. Beginnings of teaching. 1 Cor. 23:2.
18. Time of ignorance and unbelief. Rom. 13:12.
19. Healing. Psa. 141:5.
20. Region of eternal blessedness. 2 Cor. 12:4.
21. A defence. Isaiah 17:10.
22. Objects of care. John 10:3.
23. Man in power. Daniel 4:20 and 23.
24. The people of God. Psa. 80:8.
25. Salvation. John 4:10.

Answers to Puzzles of February 3d.

Acrostic.— G-edaliah.
I-conium.
D-aberath.
E-shtaol.
O-phir.
N-eapolis.

Crossword.—Crystals.

Square Word.—
B E A R
E Z R A
A R M Y
R A Y S

Correct answers from Lewis D. and Jennie Labagh, Rappie Bowne.

"Uncle Seth's Will," a new book by Mrs. Nathaniel Conklin (Jennie M. Drinkwater) is offered as a prize for the best original puzzle by any boy under fourteen to be received during the month of March. Each competitor should state age and address.

Direct puzzles and answers to Cousin Lois, office of THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER.

Letter from Italy.

ROME, Italy.

"HOW are the mighty fallen," impresses one as he pursues his way among the ruins of this once proud and powerful capital of the world. There is inspiration in the reflection, as one walks among the ruins of the old Forum, or of the palace of the Cæsars' on Palatine Hill, or lingers at Pompey's pillar, where Cæsar fell, that these were the places where were enacted the scenes of Roman eloquence and imperial power that astonished the world and affected the destinies of empires; but for a thousand years here Popes and priests have had full sway, so that the degenerating effects of their power are clear and defined, and we see a profuse crop of liars and beggars. But a better day is dawning for this priest-ridden people since the temporal power has been taken out of the hands of the Pope. King Humbert is much beloved by the people, and is following in the steps of his patriotic predecessor, Victor Emanuel, and will protect the people in their rights of religious freedom.

Two things, perhaps more than all the antiquities and ruins of ancient Rome, impressed us with the greatest force, and will cause us to appreciate more than ever before our Gospel light and freedom. In the catacombs on the Appian way, where the ground is honey-combed for acres and millions have been entombed, we stood in the underground chapel where the early Christians worshipped God in seclusion to avoid persecution and death; and in the Colosseum, built in the reign of Vespasian, just after the beginning of the Christian era, and consecrated by the blood of martyrs, we saw the cell where the early Christians were confined, in full view of the martyrdom of their fellows, awaiting their turn to be thrown to the wild beasts in the presence of the assembled multitudes; for it must be remembered that this Colosseum would seat one hundred thousand people. Thrilling are the historical accounts of these things, but when one visits the spot and views the places where these cruel tragedies were enacted, he is profoundly impressed.

Another spot of intense interest to us was the Mamertine prison. We went down into the lower cell in which St. Paul was confined, which is a gloomy dungeon indeed, constructed very much in the shape of a jug, and the hole through which the prisoners were "cast into prison" corresponds to the mouth of the jug and is about two and a half feet in diameter. A modern staircase has been constructed, leading to the cell for the accommodation of visitors. This cell is memorable also for the confinement of other renowned prisoners. Here Jugurtha, King of Numidia, was starved to death in the year 104 B. C., and here the Cataline conspirators were strangled B. C. 55.

No one visits Rome without becoming interested in St. Peter's, but after all that has been said and written of this grand and noble edifice, no tongue or pen has ever conveyed an adequate idea of the magnificence and grandeur of the great structure. It surpassed our dreams and imaginations. In the symmetry of its architecture, the harmony of color and the richness of its materials, it is simply perfection. It is a great pity that this wonderful edifice could not be made to resound with the eloquence and power of the great Gospel truth as it is in Jesus, instead of being occupied by these childish priestly ceremonies, without sense or worship. We witnessed the ceremonies there on Christmas day, which seemed more like a minstrel or theatrical show than religious service, and as the deluded worshippers in multitudes—the well dressed, the beggar, and the little child alike—gathered around the great bronze statue of St. Peter, kneeling to this image and kissing his toe, we could not avoid the conviction that all this Papal so-called worship is baptized idolatry.

Altogether this is a most interesting city, and one can scarcely make a turn without seeing some ancient landmark of great interest. A. M. QUICK.

The Sunday Newspaper.

THE prelude was on the Sunday newspaper, which Horace Greeley was quoted as having called a social demon. This, said the lecturer, was the opinion of a practical journalist, one who was a friend of the workingman, and who was not a pinched and blue Evangelical. Archdeacon Farrar, when in this country, was astonished at the degradation of our press, especially as seen in the Sunday issue. I am no fanatic as to Sunday, but my conviction is that the sanity of our civilization depends upon the right use of the Lord's day, the giving of one day in seven to rest and moral and spiritual improvement. Under universal suffrage it will be impossible to administer government and preserve public safety without such moral safeguards as the institution of the Sabbath inculcates. Save Sunday and you save the Republic; otherwise not. Abolish Sunday and you widen the gap between capital and labor, encourage the saloon, the gambling den and the brothel. Emerson said Sunday comes to the study of the scholar, as well as the home of the workingman, with such a benediction that it should be received by all upon bended knees. Behind the Sunday paper are many railroads, theatres, saloons, and all dens of vice which are interested in the breaking down of moral forces.

Some time since I attended a church service in the West where but six were present, though an interesting discourse was preached. The same day 3,000 people attended an infidel lecture at a dollar a head, and 30,000 patronized the performance of Buffalo Bill. Men do more work with one day in seven for rest, but machinery and saloons do not. Laxness here is felt in Europe and in the Orient. The Continental Sunday is criticized in many European cities since the Vienna Exhibition, when English and American exhibitors withdrew their goods on Sunday. The influence of the Roman Catholic Church has been harmful to Sunday observance. It was through Catholic advice that the New Orleans Exposition was opened on Sunday. But a healthy change is taking place. At the Baltimore Council strong ground was taken in favor of stricter Sabbath keeping. Can you afford to belong to the respectable few who have Sunday papers in their homes?

They are excused on the ground that they contain religious news, but Mr. Frank Foxcroft, of the Boston Journal, has shown that they contain but ten per cent of such matter, and may contain much less. I look into many of them Monday morning and am reminded of Mr. Crafts's story, in his excellent book on the Sabbath, of the boy who went fishing on that day, but before the fish commenced to bite used always to whistle a Moody and Sankey tune. There are good things in some of these papers, as Mr. Foxcroft says, but are they worth the cost?—Mr. Joseph Cook's Monday Lecture in The Congregationalist.

....The Mayor of Barnstable, North Devon, England, instead of giving the customary expensive banquet on his accession to office, has instituted a series of weekly dinners for the poor of the town. The papers commend the act.

Financial.

TUESDAY, Feb. 23d.

RUMORS abound that the syndicate for the purpose of obtaining control of the Reading Railroad, and to form a combination of coal interests, will be defeated by President Gowen. It is said that the Vanderbilts have sold their large interest in the stock to Mr. Gowen. These reports influenced the Stock Market, the coal stocks declined and the list generally through sympathy. The strong undertone, which has continued for some time, became somewhat uncertain. Something ought to be done with Reading. It is constantly defaulting on some of its obligations. Reorganization seems necessary. Just now the Exchange depends on this matter of the coal roads.

Imports of merchandise last week at this port amounted to $7,838,697, and exports to $4,674 126. Of specie $3,-113,772 was exported, and since Jan. 1st, $9,103 072. Sterling exchange on Saturday sold at $4 88 and $4 89 1-2 for long and short bills respectively. The Bank of England reduced the rate of discount to 2 per cent.

The quotations for grain on Saturday were for March delivery: Wheat here 92 1-2, in Chicago 80 1-2; corn here 50 3-4, in Chicago 37 5-8; oats here 37 7-8, in Chicago 30. The quotation for wheat is of doubtful continuance. Pork and lard are fairly firm. Cotton is lower, closing quotations on Saturday being: Feb., 8.78-79; March, 8 82-83; April, 8.93-94; May, 9.03. The prices of hay and straw are well maintained. The supply has been good, but the demand increased and the market is firm.

The banks increased loans $3,535,400, lost in specie $1,098,900, in legal tenders $1,914,900, in deposits $986,700, and circulation was reduced $158,200. The surplus of reserve was reduced $2,-767,125, and became $31,700,875. The average rate for money on call was 1 3-4 per cent, though loans were made at 3 per cent. Prime commercial paper was discounted at from 3 1-4 to 4 1-2 per cent.

The Royal an Ammoniacal and Short Weight Baking Powder.

Views of the State Chemist of Maine.

I have procured in our open market and analyzed samples of Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder, and the Royal Baking Powder.

Cleveland's Powder I find to be composed of good, pure, wholesome materials properly combined for producing the maximum of gas, and it is in every respect a healthful and desirable article.

The Royal Baking Powder I find to be more complicated in composition, and while the material it is made from is fairly good, it contains one ingredient that should not enter into the composition of any baking powder, namely: Carbonate of Ammonia. This is a strong alkali, unfit for human consumption, and I am surprised that this chemical should be used when it is so well known to be injurious to health in anything used for food. In comparison there should be no hesitation in choosing Cleveland's Baking Powder for purity and wholesomeness.

Cleveland's Powder gives off its gas slowly and evenly, while the Royal passes off much quicker. It is perhaps needless to say that in this respect the Cleveland Powder has the advantage.

The samples of the Royal Powder, which I have carefully weighed, are almost invariably short weight, from ⅛ to ⅓ oz., while the Cleveland Powder holds full weight.

PORTLAND, ME., Aug. 11, 1884.

FRANK L. BARTLETT,
Maine State Assayer.

....Two Texan evangelists, Major Penn and Mr. G. R. Cairns, who have been successful in winning souls in their own and contiguous Southern States, have been holding revival services in Scotland, by invitation, since last November. They began in Galashiels, where many were converted, and since then have been engaged in Glasgow and Nottingham.

....The Pope has converted personal presents of many years into money and has donated the proceeds, $100,000, to the College of the Propaganda.

News of the Week.

(Continued from page five.)

John B. Gough, the lecturer, died yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock in Frankford, Pa. He was taken with paralysis while lecturing at the Frankford Presbyterian Church ... The men employed in the Peekskill National Stove Works struck yesterday for higher wages....Chas. Croker gives in San Francisco $33,000 to the Boys' and Girls' Aid Society to put up a building on the lot given by Senator Fair.

SATURDAY, 20.—Servia is negotiating with Turkey in favor of union with Bosnia. ....The Portuguese Ministry have resigned. The King is about to form a new Cabinet. ...It was resolved by a committee of the Chamber of Deputies of France to give the Ministry power to expel the French princes if necessary ...A Nihilistic circular has been distributed in Moscow....The Senate and House of Representatives adjourned until Tuesday....A measure is introduced in the Legislature of Albany, giving to the elevated railroads a right to connect with other railroads, depots and ferries....Professor Waldo's wife at New Haven wandered away from her home and died. She was probably demented from long illness ....An appeal is to be made to the Court of Errors in New Jersey on account of the recent decision declaring railroad taxes unconstitutional....Very important testimony is being taken in regard to the bribery case of Senator Payne, of Ohio....It is rumored that an ex-Alderman has made a confession concerning the Broadway franchise; and the transfer of the stocks and bonds by Sharp, Richmond, and Foshaw has been enjoined. ....James Henry Paine, grandson of Robert Treat Paine, died in great wretchedness in a garret in Bleecker street, New York city, though he is believed to have been worth half a million, which cannot be found.... Several policemen were discharged in Chicago for not stopping disorders among the strikers....McInerney and McDonald, the Park policemen, were convicted for robbery and remanded for sentence.

MONDAY, 22.—Servia and the Powers have been asked to submit peace proposals. ....Fifty thousand socialists met yesterday in Hyde Park, London. Speeches were made and indignation expressed at the delay of the Government in not providing public works for the relief of the poor....There is said to be an intrigue by certain Royalists to obtain the Portuguese throne....The Powers have sent a final note to Greece before blockading the Greek fleet in Salamis Bay....A disastrous fire broke out in the warehouse owned by the Clyde Steamboat Company at Wilmington, N. C. Loss $1,000,000 with heavy insurance....The rates on the Pacific railroads, West, have been severely cut.... Four men were drowned in the Susquehanna river last Saturday....The New York Alderman remains silent concerning the Broadway investigation, and there were no new startling developments....A man killed his wife in New York with a bed slat because she had pawned clothing loaned by a neighbor....Senator Frye has prepared a bill to provide for an International American Congress....A successful raid against gamblers in East St. Louis was made on Saturday.

TUESDAY, 23.—Lord Randolph Churchill was received with great enthusiasm in Belfast, Ireland. Large bodies of Orangemen in full regalia met him and he was greeted with a hearty welcome....The Greek Ministers of War and the Navy threaten to resign unless war is declared against Turkey Great excitement is felt throughout all Greece and war seems imminent....The London police force is to be reorganized on account of the inefficiency that was displayed during the recent riots....The Polish Bill as discussed in the Lower House of the erman Diet at Berlin; much feeling was splayed on both sides....Nine hundred nvicts in the Central Prison at Thonars, rance, revolted and mastered the guards id had to be suppressed by troops.... here is an alleged proclamation of the mperor of China asking for the return of e Chinamen in this country....The cor- r stone of an American hospital has been id in Mexico....Daniel J. Dalton is held y the Ohio Legislature in contempt be- use of his refusal to produce fraudulent turns in his precinct....A bill allowing appeal in the railroad tax cases has been assed by the New Jersey Legislature ... here is said to be strong influence brought bear by the Roman Catholics to defeat eneral O. O. Howard's promotion to Gen- al Hancock's place....Several persons ere injured in a railway accident near uffalo.

Subscribers Notice.

We need a few copies of the INTELLI- ENCER of January 27th, 1886. Any sub- riber having a copy of that issue and not ishing to preserve it, would confer a favor y sending the paper to this office.

The best Ankle Boot and Collar Pads are ade of zinc and leather. Try them.

INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA, nervous prostration, and l forms of general debility relieved by taking Mens- an's Peptonized Beef Tonic, the only preparation beef containing its entire nutritious properties. is not a mere stimulant like the extracts of beef, it contains blood-making, force-generating, and ife-sustaining properties; is invaluable in all en- ebled conditions, whether the result of exhaustion, ervous prostration, over work, or acute disease; par- cularly when resulting from pulmonary complaints. askell, Hazard & Co., Proprietors, New York. Sold by druggists.

Market Report.

eview of the New York Market for Butter, Cheese, etc. Reported by DAVID W. LEWIS & Co., Pro- duce Commission Merchants, 49 Pearl St., New York.

ommission on Butter, Eggs, Poultry, etc., is five per cent; Flour, Grain, etc., 2½ per cent. arking-plates furnished when desired.

NEW YORK, February 20, 1886.

BUTTER.—Receipts for the week, 17,403 pks.; ex- orts 2,192 pks.

Old butter is pretty well sold down, and if there as a snappy, active trade it would get a benefit on ice. As it is, holders are content to make a clear- ance, and in anticipation of new spring butter sell there is opportunity. Poor and common butter is such sharp contrast with fine grades to which the reamery system has accustomed buyers, that it is ttirely unsaleable for table use. Any slushy, curdy utter, or that is tallowy and furs up on the trier, or sour butter where cream has stood too long, may e bought here for 6a7c. Eighty firkins of last sum- er's make of gathered Ohio butter sold at 8c.; 45 bs of solid Western butter sold at 10c. A Cortland airy of 29 firkins was offered for sale at 14c. A few bs of Chenango county dairy make were offered at ., while at the same time strictly fancy fresh dairy ake is worth here 25a30c., and Eastern or Western esh creamery make is quick sale at 33a35c. New utter commences to arrive and fine tubs sell readily 28a32c., while poor tubs are hardly saleable at ay price. We quote:

olid silky grain-fed fresh Elgin creamery.—	@35
ancy fresh grain-fed Eastern creamery...	33 @35
eavy bodied, grainy, high-flavored dairy, fresh.....	28 @30
strictly fancy Delaware dairy, entire ...	25 @26
air to good dairies.....	16 @22
ine summer firkins	20 @24
resh Western imitation creamery...	23 @27
estern store-packed butter.....	7 @10
inter make, common roll butter.....	9 @13
rease.....	4 @ 5

CHEESE.—Receipts for the week, 18,407 boxes; xports 16,100 boxes.

The market has been slow and prices a trifle lower. xporters have bought mostly of cheese at 8c. and nder. Home trade is unusually light for the sea- on, and 10c. is top for perfection in colored, and ½c. for white cheese. We quote:

	FANCY.	FINE.	FAULTY.
actory, full cream.	9¾@10	9½@ 9¾	6 @ 8
Night's milk.
" skimmed.	7 @ 8	4 @ 5	2 @ 3

EGGS.—Receipts for the week, 5,150 bbls. Imports, 02 cases.

There was more trade and an advance of 2c. per oz. over last week. We quote:

ear-by fresh laid, per doz.....	24 @25
estern and Canada, per doz.....	23 @24
imed eggs, per doz.....	16 @18

GREEN APPLES have light sale. Finest Greenings nd Baldwins selling at $1.65a$1.75 per bbl., fair to ood lots offered at $1.50, while common lots are ominally 75a$1 per bbl.

BEESWAX sells at 25a26c.

EVAPORATED APPLES are dull. We quote:

vaporated apples, fancy.....	7 @ 7½
" " fair to choice	6½@ 6¾
" " common.....	nominal

Our readers will confer a favor upon the ublishers of this paper and, perhaps, find t to their own advantage if, when answering n advertisement found in these columns, nention is made that it was seen in THE HRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER.

MARRIAGES.

COUNTRYMAN—STOWITTS.—At Rural Grove, N. Y., on Wednesday, Feb. 17, at 6 P.M., at the home of the bride, by Rev. G. Wyckoff, Emery Country- man, of Canajoharie, N. Y., to Jennie E. Stowitts, of Rural Grove.

MORROW—JOHNSON.—In Cotulla, Texas, on Jan. 26, by the Rev. W. W. Killough, Mr. W. R. Morrow and Mrs. Lillian F. Johnson.

ROWLAND — REID.— At the residence of the bride's parents, Brooklyn, N. Y., on Tuesday, Feb. 16, by the Rev. Alfred J. Hutton, Caroline Parker, daughter of Aaron L Reid, to Samuel Rowland.

VAN ZANDT—TREE.—At Niskayuna, Feb. 18, by Rev. C. P. Ditmars, Leroy Van Zandt, of Lisha's Kill, N. Y., to Lizzie R. Tree, of Niskayuna, N. Y.

CRISTION—WALTERS.—At the residence of the bride's father, New Durham, N. J., Feb. 17, by the Rev. I. W. Gowen, Ida May Walters to Benjamin Henry Francis Cristion, of Denison, Texas.

DEATHS

Obituary notices five cents per line (nine word to the line.) For subscribers we will insert fifteen lines free; all lines in excess of that number will be charged same as non-subscribers.

BALDWIN.—At 407 Adelphi street, Brooklyn, on Monday morning, Feb. 22, after a painful illness, Rev John Abeel Baldwin, in the 76th year of his age.

Relatives and friends of the family are respect- fully invited to attend the funeral services at his late residence, on Wednesday, the 24th, at 3 o'clock. Interment in Mount Pleasant Cemetery, Newark, N. J., on Thursday, at 2 o'clock.

BRANDT.—At Belleville, N. J., Feb. 19, Frederick Nesbit Brandt, son of the late William H. Brandt.

PRALL.—At his residence, Huguenot, S. I., Wed- nesday, Feb. 17, Benjamin P. Prall, aged 82 years, 9 months and 15 days

Friday, February 19th, 1886, was a memorable day in the little brown church at Huguenot, Staten Island. A large number of the relations and friends of Mr. Benjamin P. Prall united in a memorial ser- vice. The body of the dear old elder laid there, the spirit having gone to the mansions he so often read about in the fourteenth chapter of St. John's Gos- pel. He was in his eighty-third year when his spirit was translated from earth to heaven, and the erect, silver-headed body was laid to rest in the adjoining churchyard.

He was a man of sterling rectitude, who studied to know what was right and then maintained it with unflinching tenacity. Mr. Prall and the late Mr. Isaac K. Jessup were the projectors and first elders of the little church which for thirty-seven years has stood as a memorial of their zeal and love for the Lord's house "They rest from their labors and their works do follow them."

He leaves a family of one daughter (the wife of Mr. James Eddy), three grandsons and three great- grandchildren. By these his loss is greatly felt. But they are not his only children; a large number called him their spiritual father, and rejoiced in his fatherly care and solicitude, and his heart swelled with gladness when he received them in church rela- tionship. He has now entered upon the uninter- rupted joys of heaven, the society of his wife and others of precious memory.

Elder Prall was not a mere sentimental relig on- ist; he was a man of piety, faith and good works. The kingdom of Christ was uppermost in his thoughts. His care of the little Zion, over which he presided, is witness of his love and fidelity.

As a citizen he was beloved and honored. The confidence placed in him was manifested by the large vote he received as a representative in the State Legislature. He was respected by all who knew him, and merited the title of the Honorable among his colleagues.

The sad cong egation was addressed by the vener- able Rev. Francis M. Kip, D.D, who for nine years was the pastor of the church of which Mr Prall was an elder, and Rev. Jacob West, D.D., who for many years has been his friend and adviser. The Scrip- tures were read and prayer offered by Mr. John Laubenheimer, of the Theological Seminary at New Brunswick, N. J., who for more than a year has very acceptably preached for this little flock.

At a meeting of the members of the Reformed church at Huguenot, S. I., February 21st, 1886, the above minute was requested to be entered on the church records, handed to Mrs. Eddy and sent to THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER for publication.

A. C. STRYKER, Elder.

SCHUYLER.—Entered into rest, Sunday morning, Feb. 14, Anna M., wife of the late John C. Schuyler, in the 78th year of her age.

Notices and Acknowledgments

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY.—Evangelical but not denominational. Prints in 147 languages in aid of foreign missions; grants religious reading to the needy; sends colporters to millions in our high- ways and hedges, and to the immigrants in Castle Garden and elsewhere. This work depends wholly on charitable gifts. Donations and legacies are earnestly solicited. A summary of the sixtieth year mailed free. O. R. Kingsbury, Treasurer, 150 Nas- sau street, New York.

CORRESPONDENTS will please address Rev. Wil- liam D. Perry at No. 95 Adelphi street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Woman's Board of Foreign Missions.

RECEIPTS FROM JAN. 11 TO FEB. 9, 1886.

From Mrs. J. Sturges, $50; North Ch. S.S., N.Y., 8.10; Faith Mission Band, 6th ave., N.Y., 31; 1st Poughkeepsie, N.Y., 100; Flatbush, L.I., N.Y., aux., 156.50; Colt's Neck, N.J., 41.31; Mrs. J. H. Van Doren, 5; 5th ave. and 48th st., N.Y., 82; Mt. Vernon, N.Y., aux., 25; Bergen Ch., Jersey City Heights, N. J., 50.90; Memorial Mission Band, Lafayette, Jer- sey City, N. J., 23.25; Boy's Club, Madison ave, Albany, N.Y., 57; Flatbush, Ulster Co., N.Y., S. S., 6.80; Flatbush, Ulster Co., N.Y., aux., 15.32; Freewill offerings, DeWitt Mission, 1.07; Birthday offerings, DeWitt Mission, 3; Union, High Bridge, N. Y., 10; 1st Newark, N.J., present to student, 5; 1st Albany, N.Y., 30; Miss Florence Morehouse, 30; Young la- dies, 2d Philadelphia, Pa., 35; Hudson, N.Y., aux., 26; Astoria, N.Y., 58; Helderberg, N.Y., 28; Warwick, N. Y., 27; 1st Grand Haven, Mich., 30; 2d Tarrytown, N. Y., 50; Ellen- ville, N.Y., 5.88. Total, $991.13.

Parties wishing to remit will please do so by check, if possible, made payable to the Treasurer, or by registered letter, but not by Post-Office order.

MRS. PETER DONALD, Treasurer,
89 West 46th street, New York City.

Publisher's Department.

THOUSANDS ARE BORN with a tendency to con- sumption. Such persons, if they value life, must not permit a Cough or Cold to become a fixture in the lungs and chest. The best known remedy for either is Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar. 25c., 50c. and $1.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap heals and beautifies, 25c.
German Corn Remover kills Corns, Bunions, 25c
Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye—Black & Brown, 50c.
Pike's Toothache Drops cure in 1 Minute, 25c.

Valuable Information.

"Throw Physics to the Dogs" is an old saying, but manifestly true, for are there not many in- stances that have come under your own notice where medicine has utterly failed to effect a cure even in the case of an ordinary headache? To-day, Science demonstrates that the most effective and pleasant remedy for most of the ills that flesh is heir to, is Electro-Magnetism when properly applied, in the shape of Dr. Scott's Electro-Magnetic Corsets, Belts and other appliances as advertised in this issue.

The prices for these genuine goods are very low, when it is remembered that similar appliances of less effect are sold for three, yes and five times the money Dr. Scott asks for his. We have advertised his goods for years, and his responsibility insures your getting just what is advertised and your mon- ey's worth. When ordering, kindly mention that you saw his advertisement in this paper.

The claims as to the curative powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla are based entirely on what the people say it has done for them. Send to C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass., for a book containing statements of many remarkable cures by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral possesses far-reaching and powerful healing qualities which its persistent use will demonstrate in any case of colds, coughs, throat or lung troubles, while its soothing and restorative effects are realized at once.

No Opium in Piso's Cure for Consumption. Cures where other remedies fail. 25c.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Should be kept constantly at hand, for use in emergencies of the household. Many a mother, startled in the night by the ominous sounds of Croup, finds the little sufferer, with red and swollen face, gasping for air. In such cases Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is invaluable. Mrs. Emma Gedney, 159 West 128 st., New York, writes: "While in the country, last winter, my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with Croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral was tried in small and frequent doses, and, in less than half an hour, the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the Pectoral saved my darling's life." Mrs. Chas. B. Landon, Guilford, Conn., writes: "Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Saved My Life,

and also the life of my little son. As he is troubled with Croup, I dare not be without this remedy in the house." Mrs. J. Gregg, Lowell, Mass., writes: "My children have repeatedly taken Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for Coughs and Croup. It gives immediate relief, followed by cure." Mrs. Mary E. Evans, Scranton, Pa., writes: "I have two little boys, both of whom have been, from infancy, subject to violent attacks of Croup. About six months ago we began using Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and it acts like a charm. In a few minutes after the child takes it, he breathes easily and rests well. Every mother ought to know what a blessing I have found in Ayer's Cherry Pectoral." Mrs. Wm. C. Reid, Freehold, N. J., writes: "In our family, Ayer's medicines have been blessings for many years. In cases of Colds and Coughs, we take

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

and the inconvenience is soon forgotten."

PREPARED BY

Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by all Druggists.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.

CATARRH

Also good for Cold in the Head, Headache, Hay Fever, &c. 50 cents.

DEAFNESS its CAUSES and CURE, by one who was deaf twenty-eight years. Treated by most of the noted specialists of the day with no benefit. Cured himself in three months, and since then hundreds of others by same process. A plain, simple and successful home treat- ment. Address T. S. PAGE, 128 East 26th St., New York City.

PILES. Instant relief. Final cure in 10 days, and never returns. No purge, no salve no suppository. Sufferers will learn of a simple remedy Free, by addressing C. J. MASON, 78 Nassau St., N. Y.

FINANCIAL.

7 PER CENT. INTEREST FIRST MORTGAGE FARM LOANS.

Personal acquaintance with lands and values. Over 2,000 loans made NO CUSTOMER has ever LOST A DOLLAR of principal or interest on any loans made here. Interest collected and sent to you, free of cost, each year. These loans are very safe, and pay nearly U.S. BONDS. I am three times as much as known and recommended by leading business men and clergymen, East and West—men for whom I have been making these investments for TEN YEARS PAST.

REFERENCES.

REV. WM. L. GAGE, D.D., Hartford, Ct.
M. E. GATES, PH.D., LL.D., President Rutgers Col- lege, New Brunswick, N. J.
DR. WM. J MILNE, President Geneseo Normal School, Geneseo, N. Y
HON. E. M. TOPLIFF, Manchester, N. H.
REV. JOHN W. RAY, Lake City, Minn
DR. JNO. K. BUCKLYN, Mystic Bridge, Ct.
Importers' and Traders' National Bank, New York.
First National Bank, St. Paul, Minn
The Congregationalist, Boston, N. Y. Observer, and hundreds of others in all parts of the United States.

All are pleased with my Investments. Cir- cular, references, letters giving experience and tes- timony of old customers, and a New Map of Dakota sent free on application. Mention this paper. Address

E. P. GATES,
Pres. Merchant's Bank,
Grand Forks, Dakota.

6% 7% 8%

The American Investment Company, of Emmetsburg, Iowa, incorporated, with a paid-up capital of $500,000, with branches at Huron and Mitchell, Dakota, offer First Mortgage Farm Loans in Iowa, Minn., Dakota, and Neb., both Principal and Interest Guaranteed. Also 6 per cent. De- benture Bonds (obligations of the Company), run- ning 10 years, secured by Mortgage loans deposited with the Mercantile Trust Co., N. Y. It also issues Demand Certificates of Deposit at 5 per cent. interest. Write for pamphlet and references.

Home Office, Emmetsburg, Iowa.
E. S. Ormsby, Pres., 150 Nassau St., N. Y.

INVEST Through the Sound and Reliable
WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE CO.
F. M. PERKINS, President. LAWRENCE, KAN. L. H. PERKINS, Secretary.
CAPITAL AND SURPLUS, $250,000.

Carefully selected 1st Mortgage Farm Loans pay- able in N. Y. Unrivalled facilities. Absolute satis- faction. 10 years' experience. No losses. Refer to 3d Nat'l Bank, N.Y. City; Nat'l Bank, Lawrence, Kan.; and Hundreds of Investors. Send for pamphlet, forms and full information. Branch Offices in N.Y. City, Albany & Phila. N.Y. Office, 137 B'way, C.C. Hine & Son, Agts.

THE LINE SELECTED BY THE U. S. GOV'T TO CARRY THE FAST MAIL.

Burlington Route
C.B.&Q.R.R.

It is the only line with its own track from

CHICAGO TO DENVER,

Either by way of Omaha, Pacific Junc., St. Joseph, Atchison or Kansas City.

It connects in Union Depots with through trains from NEW YORK, PHILADELPHIA, BOSTON and all Eastern points. It is the principal line to

SAN FRANCISCO, PORTLAND & CITY OF MEXICO

It traverses all of the six great States of ILLINOIS, IOWA, MISSOURI, NEBRASKA, KANSAS, COLORADO with branch lines to all their important cities and towns.

From CHICAGO, PEORIA or ST. LOUIS, it runs every day in the year from one to three elegantly equipped through trains over its own tracks between

Chicago and Denver,
Chicago and Omaha,
Chicago and Council Bluffs,
Chicago and St. Joseph,
Chicago and Atchison,
Chicago and Kansas City,
Chicago and Topeka,
Chicago and Cedar Rapids,
Chicago and Sioux City,
Peoria and Council Bluffs,
Peoria and Kansas City,
St. Louis and Omaha,
St. Louis and St. Paul,
Kansas City and Denver,
Kansas City and St. Paul,
Kansas City and Omaha,

For all points in Northwest, West and Southwest.

Its equipment is complete and first class in every particular, and at all important points interlocking Switches and Signals are used, thus insuring com- fort and safety.

For Tickets, Rates, General Information, etc., regarding the Burlington Route, call on any Ticket Agent in the United States or Canada, or address

T. J. POTTER 1st V.P. & GEN. MGR., CHICAGO.
HENRY B. STONE, ASST. GEN. MGR., CHICAGO.
PERCEVAL LOWELL, GEN. PASS. AGT., CHICAGO.

ON 30 DAYS' TRIAL.

THIS NEW
ELASTIC TRUSS

Has a Pad different from all others, is cup shape, with Self- adjusting Ball in center, adapts itself to all positions of the body while the ball in the cup presses back the intes- tines just as a person does with the finger. With light pressure the Her- nia is held securely day and night, and a radical cure certain. It is easy, durable and cheap. Sent by mail. Cir- culars free. EGGLESTON TRUSS CO., Chicago, Ill.

The Church.

"I Will Come Again."

THOU art coming, oh, my Saviour,
Thou art coming, oh, my King!
Every tongue Thy name confessing,
Well may we rejoice and sing.

Thou art coming! Rays of glory
Through the vail Thy death has rent
Gladden now our pilgrim pathway,
Glory from Thy presence sent.

Thou art coming—not a shadow,
Not a mist, and not a tear;
Not a sin and not a sorrow
On that sunrise grand and clear.

Thou art coming! Jesus, Saviour,
Nothing else seems worth a thought;
Oh, how marvellous the glory
And the bliss Thy pain hath brought!

Thou art coming! We are waiting
With a hope that cannot fail,
Asking not the day or hour,
Anchored safe within the vail.

Thou art coming! Thou art coming!
Jesus, our beloved Lord;
Oh, the joy to see Thee reigning,
Worshipped, glorified, adored!

Thou art coming! Thou art coming!
We shall meet Thee on Thy way;
Thou art coming! we shall see Thee,
And be like Thee on that day.

—F. R. Havergal.

A Layman's Opinion of the Bible.

PROF. FRANCIS BOWEN, of Harvard, a man of more than ordinary culture and experience, after speaking of the contents of the sacred volume, comes to this conclusion:

It is for the student to determine whether any system of liberal education can be regarded as complete and generous which does not include thorough study of this great body of Hebrew and Christian literature. My own strong conviction is, that the only hope for the civilization and the happiness of the generations that are to come in this English speaking world depends on the continued reverent study of the English Bible. Especially is this true in regard to those few great doctrines, those underlying truths, so simply and briefly expressed, which I have ventured to call the philosophy of the Jewish and Christian Scriptures. For, know it well, the only choice for us, in this piping nineteenth century, lies between this old philosophy of the Hebrews and the philosophy of despair, the pessimism of Hartmann and Schopenhauer. I know it is said by those who deprecate any such regard for the consequences of our opinions that we have only to follow out loyally our own doubts or convictions, be they what they may, since the interests of truth are paramount. But they misconstrue their own adage. We hold as firmly as they do that the truth can do no harm; and it is just because the acceptance of their doctrine does, and will do, immeasurable harm to the best interests of humanity that we are firmly convinced their doctrine is not the truth. For, either the one God, Father of all, the God alike of Jew, Christian and Mahometan, still lives and reigns enthroned above all height, still moves and governs the universe which He created, or there comes a wail of never dying sorrow from an orphan world and a dead eternity, a pitiable cry which declares existence to be a burden and a wrong, and bids us eat, drink and rot, for to-morrow we sleep and never wake again. Atheism and pessimism are as naturally and closely related to each other as Sin and Death, whom Milton's sublime allegory represents as keeping guard at the gates of hell. Whether, out of such a Chaos, these "embryon atoms" could of themselves, unguided by any organizing mind, have evolved and maintained a universe in which law and order, intellect and conscience, appear and reign, is a question which will hardly be of doubtful decision by any competent thinker. Science herself tells us that they could thus only perpetuate Night and Chaos, since nothing could be evolved out of atoms which was not previously involved in them.

Raffles at Fairs.

IN a pleasant description of a Charity Bazar on the grounds of Warwick Castle, England, M. J. Preston, in the Sunday-School Times, mentions that one of their company made a purchase in a booth, where she was waited upon by a fine-looking woman, plainly dressed in black, who, it was afterwards found, was the Countess of Warwick. After she had delivered the purchased package, the following conversation took place "Let me sell you a ticket or two for a raffle which me off shortly, a pretty picture, which it may be worth your while to make a venture for," she went on to say, with a most persuasive smile.

J—— met her pleasant entreaty with a courteous refusal on the score that she was a traveller, even then on her way to the Con inent.

"Ah!" persisted the lady, coaxingly, "it will be an easy thing to carry it over the seas with you, supposing you to be the fortunate winner of the picture; for, of course, I know you to be an American. And would it not be a pleasant reminder to you, in your new country, of our old castle here?"

Such pressure being brought to bear upon our American, she felt called upon, not to seem ungracious, to explain why she declined to take the tickets.

"In my country, many people object to raffling for religious or charitable purposes; and I have known frequently of considerable sums being refused which were the proceeds of raffles, lotteries, and even charity balls. You will allow me to say that I happen to share this prejudice, as you may term it, of my country people."

"How much you surprise me!" said the lady, with unaffected interest. "How, then, do you ever realize anything at your charity bazaars? Why, if we gave up our raffling system, our bric a-brac and all such pretty trash would go a-begging for purchasers! It is the excitement of the raffle that stimulates our buyers."

"On the contrary," said J——, "we find that we take in more money since we have abandoned this way of making it."

"And you really think it wrong?" persisted the lady, eagerly, "wrong to raffle when the aim is so good a one?"

"Yes; we object to the principle involved; and we really think the gain is all on our side. Let me give you one instance. In the city in which I live, a year ago, the proceeds of a charity ball were divided among four of the city hospitals. The one in which my church is specially interested courteously returned the $3,000 sent, on this ground of principle. A few days after the sum of $5,000 was sent to the trustees, in acknowledgment of their adherence to what the donor thought was their right action."

"And yet," the lady replied, "you have no Established Church, nor government help for your charities and churches! This is so new and strange to me." And she asked to have the points clearly restated to her.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Home Readings.

LESSON 10, FIRST QUARTER.

M. Nehemiah's Mission..... ....Neh. 2:1-20.
T. The Builders Interrupted.....Neh. 4:1-18.
W. The Wall Finished.. .....Neh. 6:1-19.
T. The Law Read..... .....Neh. 8:1-18.
F. Bible Study Commanded.....Deut. 6:1-18.
S. Bible Study Commended.....Acts 17:1-14.
S. Bible Study Loved .....Ps. 119:97-112.

—From the Westminster Question Book.

International Sunday-School Lesson.

BY REV. JOHN C. VAN DEVENTER.

March 7th.—Reading the Law —Neh. 8:1-12.

Golden Text.—"So they read in the book of the Law of God distinctly, and gave the sense, and caused them to understand the reading."—NEH 8:8.

CENTRAL TRUTH.—"The entrance of thy words giveth light."—Ps. 119:130.

INTRODUCTION.

THE prayer of Nehemiah, which formed the subject of our last lesson, was most graciously answered. The king was moved to inquire concerning the sad countenance of his cup bearer, and so the way was opened for Nehemiah to present his plan for the relief of Jerusalem. This plan contemplated the resignation of his high and luxurious appointment at the court, and a journey to the land of his fathers, in order to share the hardships of his countrymen, and to try to remove the evils to which they were subjected. The king consented and Nehemiah set out upon his journey, with appointment as Tirshatha or governor. Three days after his arrival he made a personal inspection of the walls by night, and so became familiar with the work necessary. Under the inspiration of his courage the people "had a mind to the work," and set about it with a will. Their enemies tried by all manner of means to interfere, as they had done so successfully before, but all their attempts were foiled by the vigilance and devotion of Nehemiah. After this work had been brought to a successful end the attention of the governor was called to the sad and hopeless condition of many of the people, who had become involved in debt. He proposed a remedy which, while it did not annul the claims of the creditors, did mitigate the sorrows of the debtors. In this case, as in other instances, he influenced others by his own unselfish example, using his private fortune for the common good. The next step was to accomplish a spiritual reformation, which amounted to a revival of religion. The day upon which the event occurred that is described in our lesson was one long to be remembered by the people as a day of visitation from God.

THE LESSON.

I A DAY OF ASSEMBLY —VS. 1-2

V. 1.—"And all the people gathered themselves together as one man" While it is probable that this gathering was in obedience to a summons from the heads of the nation, yet the people apparently entered heartily into the plan and needed no urging in the matter. "Into the street that was before the water gate." This was more likely an open square, near the wall of the temple. "They spake unto Ezra the scribe to bring the book of the law of Moses." The mass of the people depended for their knowledge of this law upon oral instruction, since copies of the sacred manuscript were scarce and costly. Many of them may have been practically unacquainted with the exact words of the law, and therefore were ignorant of duty and privilege alike.

V. 2 —"The congregation both of men and women and all that could hear with understanding." The law compelled the attendance of the adult males only upon the services of the temple, but we see here all who could reasonably profit by the services, including evidently the youth of the nation. "Upon the first day of the seventh month." The Jewish civil and ecclesiastical years did not coincide, so that this day, while the first of the seventh month of the religious calendar, was the civil New Year's day. It was also the time appointed for the Feast of Trumpets.

II. A DAY OF BIBLE STUDY.—VS. 3-8.

V. 3 —"And read therein from the morning until midday." This reading was evidently interspersed with comments by Ezra or his companions, so that the labor of reading was not so exhausting as at first thought it appears to be. "The ears of all the people were attentive." Literally, "were upon the book of the law,"—seemed fastened to it, so great was their interest.

V. 4 —"And Ezra, the scribe, stood upon a pulpit of wood." This is the only place where a pulpit is mentioned in the Bible, and the word literally means a high place, or platform. The fact that this pulpit had been erected for the occasion shows that this service had been planned by the rulers. Up on either hand of the reader stood representatives of the Levites, as his supporters and, perhaps, helpers. Their share in that day's proceedings is their only title to immortal renown.

V. 5.—"And Ezra opened the book in the sight of all the people." Having given us a general view of the services, the writer now returns to the opening proceedings to take up the account more in detail. "And when he opened it all the people stood up" This was an act of homage exacted by kings and paid to them by all their subjects. The people as by instinct recognized God in His Word and paid royal honors to the King of the Jews.

V. 6.—"Ezra blessed the Lord, the great God." Prayer preceded the reading, which fact explains the blessed effects of the reading. "And all the people answered, Amen, Amen" They were in hearty sympathy with their leader, and gladly united their praises and petitions with his.

V. 7.—In this verse another group of Levites is mentioned by their names as coöperating in the work of instructing the people. It seems probable that these were scattered about in the assembly, in order to supplement the reading with more particular instruction, for, they "caused the people to understand the law." No better aim for the preacher or teacher can be found than this.

V. 8.—"So they read in the book distinctly." God's Word deserves reverent treatment. A hurried reading in mumbling tones is neither worthy of the truth nor profitable to the hearer. "And gave the sense." To many of that company the Hebrew was almost an unknown tongue, so that it was necessary to translate or paraphrase. "And caused to understand the reading." Even when the literal sense was known there was still need of illustration and application. This assembly was in reality a national Bible class.

III. A DAY OF THANKSGIVING.—VS. 9 12.

V. 9.—"For all the people wept when they heard the words of the law." The first effect of acquaintance with God's Word is an humbling sense of personal unworthiness. This multitude saw themselves as condemned sinners in God's sight, and this thought prevented them from apprehending the fact of God's grace to them as sinners. The governor and scribe seeing this outburst of grief, and not wishing to cultivate a morbid sensitiveness, suspended the reading and gave command for the proper observance of the feast.

V. 10 —"Go your way, eat the fat, and drink the sweet." They were to think of the mercy that had led God to visit them notwithstanding their sins, and to rejoice in every token of His favor. "And send portions unto them for whom nothing is prepared." They were to increase their own joy by giving to the desitute, and to prove the sincerity of their repentance by the heartiness of their obedience. "This day is holy unto our Lord." In addition to its significance as the Feast of Trumpets, it was especially a holy day because of the services in which they had been engaged. "The joy of the Lord is your strength." Grief paralyzes, but joy animates.

V. 11.—"So the Levites stilled all the people." The vast multitude was in a remarkably docile mood, and yielded readily to reasonable argument.

V. 12.—The remainder of the day was spent by them in such home pleasures and gracious acts as constitute the charm of our Thanksgiving day.

LESSONS FOR TO-DAY.

Methods of Obtaining a Revival.

1. By solemn assemblies of the people of God.
2. By earnest desire for instruction from the Word.
3. By careful teaching from the Scripture.
4. By devout acknowledgment of God.
5. By close application to the truth.
6. By godly sorrow for sin.
7. By joy in the LORD.
8. By cultivating generous Christian fellowship.
9. By ministering to the wants of the needy.
10. By implicit obedience to God's will.

What Bessie Saw.

THIS morning, when all of the rest had gone down,
I stood by the window to see
The beautiful pictures which there in the night
Jack Frost had been making for me.

There were mountains and windmills and bridges and boats,
Some queer looking houses and trees,
A hammock that swung by itself in the air,
And a giant cut off at the knees.

Then there was a steeple so crooked and high
I was thinking it surely must fall,
When right down below it I happened to spy
The loveliest thing of them all,

The cutest and cunningest dear little girl.
I looked at her hard as I could,
And she stood there as dainty, and looked back at me,
In a little white ulster and hood.

"Good morning," I whispered; for all in a flash
I knew 'twas Jack Frost's little sister.
I was so glad to have her come visiting me,
I reached up quite softly and kissed her.

There, can you believe it! the darling was gone!
Killed dead in that one little minute!
I never once dreamed that a kiss would do that,
Nor could there be any harm in it.

But I am so sorry! for though I have looked
Fifty times at that window since then,
Half hoping to see her once more, yet I know
She can never come back again.

And it may be foolish, but all through the day
I have felt—and I knew that I should—
Just as if I had killed her, that dear baby girl
In a little white ulster and hood.

—Youth's Companion.

He Did Not Think.

DOWN in the fire-room of a big steamer that was lying recently at the wharf in New York, a young man was told to do a certain piece of work in connection with the pumps. There were two pumps close together in the room; one was for feeding the boiler, the other to use in case the ship should take fire. This latter one was capable of throwing a volume of water as large as a man's body.

The young man, who had been employed on the ship for three years, and had always proved himself efficient and reliable, was the only person left in charge of the fire and engine rooms. After the order was given to attend to the work necessary for the engine-pump, he removed the cap from the fire-pump. In a moment he discovered his error, but the force of water was so great that he could not replace the cap on the pump. Without a word he ran to the deck, jumped ashore, and took the cars for his home in another State. The water soon filled the hold of the vessel, and in spite of every effort the steamer sunk. Thousands of dollars of damage was done to the engine and furniture of the cabin and state-rooms, and the vessel was prevented from sailing on the usual date, thus causing another loss to the owners, and great inconvenience to the public.

What do you suppose was the man's answer to the questions as to the cause of the accident? "I did not think."

You see, he had not learned, when a little boy, to give his whole attention to the work in hand. "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with all thy might." And to do with all the power of which a man or woman is capable, it is necessary to learn to give full attention when a child, whether it be work or play; if it is worth doing at all, it is worthy of the whole attention. Never make "I did not think" an excuse for a stupid action. It is the part of wisdom to think.—The Journal and Messenger.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate
As a Nerve Food.

Dr. J. W. SMITH, Wellington, O., says: "In impaired nervous supply I have used it to advantage."

A Lady's Knowledge

may be called in question on very many subjects that she ought to know, but who will dare to dispute her intuitions as to what she ought to wear? No mortal knows better, and she also generally knows where to go to secure it. The present condition of the dry goods trade opens to thrifty, wide awake housekeepers a specially favorable opportunity to lay in a stock of first-class materials for future, personal, or housekeeping use at extremely moderate cost. A few dollars used in purchasing such goods now will prove a wise investment. We believe we have on our counters and for sale to-day the best-selected stock of fine dry-goods in all our departments to be found in this city.

In silks, satins, velvets, and plushes, we present an unequaled variety of colors in finest quality of material and at prices below the cost at this time to produce similar goods. In dress goods, woolens, notions, etc., we offer the best materials at prices the most reasonable, quality considered, to be found anywhere.

In furs, our stock presents unusual attractions, and in our departments of ladies' and children's suits and dresses our reputation for excellence is second to no other house in the trade. In upholstery goods we have all the latest styles in portiéres, lambrequins, furniture coverings, etc.

Connoisseurs in shawls will find our stock the most varied and complete, and prices lower than ever.

In linens, white goods, and blankets, the immense sales we are now making daily is sufficient evidence that we are disposing of great bargains. Good blankets, especially, were never so cheap as now, and will not be obtained very long at the present prices.

In gloves, hosiery, ribbons, underwear, umbrellas, parasols, and the thousand and one articles that go to make up the stock of a strictly first-class dry-goods warehouse, we claim to carry the best stock of goods for the money that careful housekeepers can buy. We invite inspection or correspondence, our customers or visiting friends will always be sure of courteous treatment. Goods shown with pleasure, and samples furnished where possible. Ladies residing at a distance from the city can have their orders promptly filled and forwarded by mail or express, and satisfaction assured.

When writing letters of inquiry or ordering goods by mail, please refer to this paper. Address all letters as follows: James M'Creery & Co., Broadway, corner Eleventh street, New York.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Combines, in a manner peculiar to itself, the best blood-purifying and strengthening remedies of the vegetable kingdom. You will find this wonderful remedy effective where other medicines have failed. Try it now. It will purify your blood, regulate the digestion, and give new life and vigor to the entire body.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla did me great good. I was tired out from overwork, and it toned me up." MRS. G. E. SIMMONS, Cohoes, N. Y.

"I suffered three years from blood poison. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and think I am cured." MRS. M. J. DAVIS, Brockport, N. Y.

Purifies the Blood

Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by three peculiarities: 1st, the combination of remedial agents; 2d, the proportion; 3d, the process of securing the active medicinal qualities. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown. Send for book containing additional evidence.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over." J. P. THOMPSON, Register of Deeds, Lowell, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla beats all others, and is worth its weight in gold." I. BARRINGTON, 130 Bank Street, New York City.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Made only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

7% NET Security 3 to 6 times loan. INTEREST semi-annual and paid at your home. 29th year of residence, and 10th of business. No investor ever had to pay taxes, costs of foreclosure, wait for interest, or take land. BEST of References all around you. Write if you have money to loan.

D. S. B. JOHNSTON & SON,
Negotiators of Mortgage Loans,
MENTION THIS PAPER. St. Paul, Minn

BABY'S BIRTHDAY.

A Beautiful Imported Birthday Card sent to any baby whose mother will send us the names of two or more other babies, and their parents' addresses. Also a handsome Diamond Dye Sample Card to the mother and much valuable information. Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt

5000 YEARS!

NOW, WHY IS IT

That, after five thousand years of study and practice, physicians are still unable to cure such common ailments as Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Liver and Kidney troubles, etc.?

Common sense convinces one that something must be wrong. Other branches of science, surgery, dentistry, etc., have achieved wonderful results, while medicine still remains to a great extent an experiment. Thinking people are exclaiming: Why all these injurious drugs? Why all these large bills and yet no cure? Surely the doctor ought to relieve me after his five thousand years of profound study. Can it be he is still groping in the dark? Let us take an illustration: Here is an ordinary headache, known to the doctors since Adam's time, and yet what physician in Europe or America can cure it?

Now, if a physician, after all the knowledge his profession has acquired in five thousand years, cannot cure a simple headache, how can he undertake to cure the more serious disorders which affect the human family?

In twelve months how much do you spend for medicines? In twelve months how much do you pay your doctor? $10.00, $20.00, $50.00, $100.00, yes $1000.00, AND YET NO CURE!

Now will you keep right on spending such sums, or will you try, at no risk of money, a simple and most agreeable remedy, lasting for years, and

Be Cured Quickly!

$3.00 or $5.00, you say, is a round sum, but what do you pay a doctor for two or three visits? You will never regret reading this entire advertisement. We could fill every page of this magazine with remarkable letters from grateful patrons who have been cured.

In September, 1878, all London was astonished by a new departure in medicine,—a beautiful application of Electro-Magnetic force, which positively cured headache, neuralgia, etc., in two to five minutes (we refer to Dr. Scott's Pure Bristle Electric Hair Brush). The people wondered, the doctors were dumbfounded, while the practical inventor was hailed as a Public Benefactor.

We could fill pages with illustrations of the gross errors of medicine, and thinking people are desiring and awaiting a new departure in therapeutics.

One is now at hand, and it threatens before long to revolutionize the old experimental schools. It has been conclusively demonstrated in the hospitals of London, as well as in large private practice, that most remarkable cures attend the application of Electro-Magnetism to diseased parts of the body. Persons thought to be dead have been restored, and diseases heretofore baffling the best medical skill have yielded to a remedy which is believed to be the "Vital Spark" itself.

It acts immediately upon the blood, nerves, and tissues, producing more benefit in a few hours than the doctor has given in weeks or months.

It has been well said, "electricity is the steam in the human engine which keeps it going and regulates its movements. It is the 'Vital Spark,' life itself, pervading all nature with power to kill or to cure."

NEWARK, N. Y. June 1.
Dr. Scott's Electric Corsets have entirely cured me of muscular rheumatism. It has also cured a severe case of headache and female trouble of eighteen years' standing.
MRS. L. C. SPENCER.

HOLLIS CENTRE, ME. Aug. 29.
I suffered severely from back trouble for years, and found no relief till I wore Dr. Scott's Electric Corsets. They cured me, and I would not be without them. MRS. H. D. BENSON.

DEWITT, N. Y.
I have an invalid sister who had not been dressed for a year. She has worn Dr. Scott's Electric Corsets two weeks and is now able to be dressed and sit up most of the time.
MELVA J. DOE.

PEORIA, ILL.
I suffered from kidney, liver, and nervous troubles for twelve years. Dr. Scott's Electric Belt entirely cured me, after all other remedies had failed. His Electric Hair Brush has cured my neuralgia.
C. W. HORNISH.

Probably never, since the invention of Corsets, has so large a demand been created as now exists for Dr. Scott's Electric Corsets and Belts. They are worn daily in over eight thousand families in the city of New York alone.

If you have any pain, ache, or ill-feeling from any cause, if you seem "pretty well," yet lack energy and do not "feel up to the mark," if you suffer from disease, we beg of you at once to try these remarkable curatives. They cannot and do not injure like medicine,—always doing good, never harm. There is no shock or sensation felt in wearing them. There is no waiting a long time for results; Electro-Magnetism acts quickly,—generally the first week, more frequently the first day, and often even during the first hour they are worn their wonderful curative powers are felt.

The celebrated DR. W. A. HAMMOND, of New York, formerly Surgeon-General of the U. S. Army, lately lectured upon this subject, and advised all medical men to make trial of these agencies, describing at the same time most remarkable cures he had made, even in cases which would seem hopeless.

The Corsets do not differ in appearance from those usually worn, as we substitute our flat steel magnetods in place of the ordinary corset-steels. They are all equally charged, differing only in quality and design. They are elegant in shape and finish, made after the best French pattern, and warranted satisfactory in every respect. Those who have tried them say they will wear no others. Most of the above applies equally well to the Electric Belt for gents or ladies.

The prices are as above. We make corsets in dove and white only. They are sent out in a handsome box, accompanied by a silver-plated compass, by which the Electro-Magnetic influence can be tested. If you cannot get them in your town, we will send either kind to any address, post-paid, on receipt of price, with 20 cents added for packing or registration, and we guarantee safe delivery into your hands. Remit in post-office money-order, draft, check, or in currency by registered letter at our risk.

In ordering, kindly state exact size of Corset usually worn; or, where the size is not known, take a measurement of the waist over the linen, deducting 3 inches for proper size of corset.

This can be done with a piece of common string, which send with your order. Remit to

GEO. A. SCOTT, 842 Broadway, N. Y.

Please mention this Publication. Agents Wanted!

PRICE LIST.

DR. SCOTT'S
CENUINE
ELECTRIC CURATIVE
APPLIANCES.

Pall Mall Electric Association,
OF LONDON and NEW YORK.

Our Brushes are Pure Bristles, Not Wires.

Hair Brushes, Cure Headache in five minutes	$3.00
Flesh Brush, Cures Rheumatism and aches	3.00
Horse Brush, Cures Lameness and Stiffness	5.00
Tooth Brush, Bristles do not come out	.50
Corsets, Prevent and Cure Sickness, $1.00, 1.50, 2.00	3.00
Corset, Nursing	1.50
Corsets, Abdominal, 18 to 36 inches	3.00
Hair Curler, Curls, Bangs and Crimps	.50
Galvanic Generator, Cures Dyspepsia	.50
Nerve and Lung Invigorator, 100 Magnet Power	10.00
" " " 50 " "	5.00
Gentlemen's Belt, Adjustable, Full Power	3.00
Ladies' Abdominal Supporter	12.00
Ladies' Belt, Adjustable, Full Power	3.00
Sleeping Caps, all sizes, 30 Magnet Power	3.00
Office Cap (Silk), all sizes, 25 Magnet Power	3.00
Sciatic Appliance, all sizes	8.00
Leg Appliance, all sizes	5.00
Shoulder Appliance, all sizes	5.00
Knee Cap, all sizes	5.00
Suspensory, Complete (Fine Silk)	5.00
Chest Protector	3.00
Anklet, each, all sizes	3.00
Wristlet, each, all sizes	2.50
Throat Protector, all sizes, Prevents Pneumonia	3.00
Insoles, per pair, all sizes, Prevent Cold Feet	.50
Teething Necklace, Helps the Little Ones	.50

SENT ON TRIAL, POST-PAID.

BALTIMORE, MD.
Intense nervous debility has been my trouble for years. Physicians and their medicines did not help me. I finally derived great relief from Dr. Scott's Electric Belt.
L. H. MILLER.

NILES, MICH., Jan. 5, 1885.
Dr. Scott's Electric Corsets have cured me of acute dyspepsia, from which I had suffered for eight years. His Electric Hair Brush cures my headache every time.
MRS. WM. H. PEAK.

CEDAR FALLS, IOWA.
Dr. Scott—Belt received all O. K. It has done me more good in a short time than all the medicine I have taken in my life. E. W. MEADE.

CHAMBERSBURG, PA., Oct. 8.
I found Dr. Scott's Electric Corsets possessed miraculous power in stimulating and invigorating my enfeebled body, and the Hair Brush had a magic effect on my scalp.
MRS. T. E. SNYDER
Fancy Goods Dealer.

The Great Church LIGHT.

FRINK'S Patent Reflectors give the Most Powerful, the Softest, Cheapest and the Best Light known for Churches, Stores, Show Windows, Parlors, Banks, Offices, Picture Galleries, Theatres, Depots, etc. New and elegant designs. Send size of room. Get circular and estimate. A liberal discount to churches and the trade. I. P. FRINK, 551 Pearl Street, N. Y.

HIGHLAND PARK, VOLUSIA COUNTY, FLORIDA.

Parties desiring to purchase Land in Florida should visit and examine this Beautifully located Town before purchasing elsewhere. Situated on a bluff of high rolling land, one of the highest points in Volusia county, and noted for the fertility of the soil. Some of the CHOICE ORANGE GROVES of the State are in this vicinity. The natural attractions of this place are unsurpassed, and the fine climate here helps to make this Town one of the most attractive places for those wishing to make a winter home.

For Orange Culture it has no superior, and the lands are also adapted to the culture of Vegetables and the smaller fruits. Some of the Finest Garden Lands in Florida may be found here.

Highland Park is located directly on the main line of the Jacksonville, Tampa and Key West Railroad, 104 miles south of Jacksonville, and three-fourths of a mile east of good steamboat landing. The town has been beautifully laid out in good sized building lots, adjoining and near which are tracts in any size to suit purchasers, both pine and hammock lands. Bargains are now being offered to ACTUAL SETTLERS such as will not be found in any other part of the State. Parties wishing to secure one of the best spots in Florida for either a winter or permanent home, should inspect the rare chance now offered. Lots and Lands will be sold on EASY TERMS.

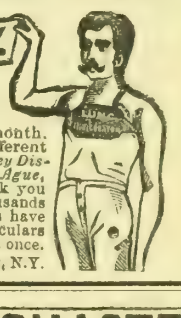
The Highland Park Hotel is situated a few rods from the railroad depot, fronting on the beautiful and picturesque Highland Park. This hotel is now open for the reception of guests. It has all the modern improvements, including Gas, Electric Bells, Hot and Cold Water Baths, pure Water and a perfect system of drainage. In fact this Hotel is one of the most complete and best furnished in the State, outside of the large cities. No pains will be spared to make the guests comfortable. The house is delightfully situated in a grove of oak and magnolia, and helps to form one of the most attractive places in Florida. The Hotel is kept by E. H. SANBORN & CO., of White Mountains, N. H. Persons desirous of spending the winter in Florida, or wishing to make a winter or permanent home, will do well to call and examine Highland Park before locating elsewhere. For further information or particulars, call on or address,

GEO. H. NORRIS, P. O. Spring Garden Centre, Volusia County, Florida.

FAIR AND HONEST.

If you are sick or ailing no matter what your complaint, write to us and we will send you On Trial one of our large Electric Medicated Appliances to suit your case, provided you agree to pay for it, if it cures you in one month. If it does not cure you it costs you nothing to try it. Different Appliances to cure Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Diseases, Piles, Lung Diseases, Asthma, Catarrh, Lame Back, Ague, Debility, and many other diseases. Remember we do not ask you to buy them blindly but merely to try them at our risk. Thousands of cures made monthly in cases where all other treatments have failed. Price very low. Illustrated book giving full particulars and blank for statement of your case sent free. Address at once.

ELECTRIC PAD M'F'G CO., 564 STATE STREET., BROOKLYN, N.Y.



GEO. MATHER'S SONS, PRINTING INK

Manufacturers. Superior Black and Colored Ink Lithographic and Plate Ink. Varnishes, etc. 60 John street, New York.

The Intelligencer is printed with our ink.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD
GOLD MEDAL PARIS EXPOSITION—1878.

WANTED LADIES AND GENTLEMEN who wish to make $5 to $4 a day easily at their own homes. Work sent by mail. No canvassing. Address with stamp, Crown Mfg. Co., 294 Vine St., Cin'ti, O.

WANTED An active Man or Woman in every county to sell our goods. Salary $75 per Month and Expenses. Canvassing Outfit and Particulars FREE. STANDARD SILVER-WARE CO., Boston, Mass.

The clearness and brilliancy of handsome cut glass is always impaired if washed with soap containing resin, which invariably leaves a thin semi-transparent coating in the grooves or furrows, giving the article the appearance of cheap moulded glassware. Ivory Soap contains no resin, is easily rinsed off, and if used with hot water and a soft brush, will give your cut glass the clearness and brilliancy which produce the beautiful prismatic effects.

Free of charge. A full size cake of Ivory Soap will be sent to any one who can not get it of their grocer, if six two-cent stamps, to pay postage, are sent to Procter & Gamble, Cincinnati. Please mention this paper.

BENJ. F. TRUMPY,

Real Estate Office,

336 Broome Street,

ONE DOOR EAST OF BOWERY.

Management of Estates, Renting and Sale of Property, and Collecting of Rents.

AGENT FOR

German American Insurance Co.
Westchester Insurance Co.
Hamburg Bremen Insurance Co.
Mutual Life Insurance Co.

THE

SECURITY

MUTUAL BENEFIT SOCIETY,

No. 233 Broadway, New York.

ONLY TWELVE ASSESSMENTS

Have been levied from 1881 to 1886, averaging three a year, and making the cost for assessments to a man of 40 years, but $4.40 a year for each $1000 of insurance.

Send for Circulars. Agents Wanted!

☞ Remunerative employment offered energetic and reliable men.

A MILLION

BOOKS

RARE, CURIOUS, CURRENT. IN STOCK.

ALMOST GIVEN AWAY.

Libraries Supplied Cheaper than at any Book Store in the World.

LIBRARIES AND BOOKS BOUGHT.

MAMMOTH CATALOGUE FREE.

LEGGAT BROTHERS,

81 CHAMBERS STREET,

3d door West of City Hall Park. NEW YORK.

LE PAGE'S

LIQUID GLUE

UNEQUALLED FOR CEMENTING WOOD, GLASS, CHINA, PAPER, LEATHER, &c. Awarded GOLD MEDAL, LONDON, 1883. Used by Mason & Hamlin Organ and Piano Co., Pullman Palace Cars, &c. Mf'd only by the RUSSIA CEMENT CO. GLOUCESTER, MASS. SOLD EVERYWHERE. ☞ Sample Tin Can by Mail, 25c.

Is Good Health

A desirable possession for wives and mothers? Then remember that Willcox & Gibbs Automatic Sewing Machine is the only one that can be used without serious risk to health.

Willcox & Gibbs S. M. Co., 658 Broadway, N. Y.

R. H. MACY & CO.,

14TH STREET, SIXTH AVE., AND 13TH STREET NEW YORK.

GRAND CENTRAL FANCY AND DRY GOODS ESTABLISHMENT.

Special Sale of Ladies' and Children's

MUSLIN UNDERWEAR,

all of our own manufacture and design. Our prices are the lowest in the country.

Rare bargains in

LINENS

and Housekeeping Goods, our own direct importation.

Unapproachable bargains in

BLACK AND COLORED Silks and Dress Goods.

Our prices below all competition.

Tremendous mark-down in

SUITS AND CLOAKS.

Our Entire Stock at Lower Prices than ever before known.

Special Care Given to Mail Orders.

Spring and Summer Catalogue will be ready about April 1. Copies will be mailed on receipt of Ten Cents.

R. H. MACY & CO.

POPULAR LECTURES.

1.—The Romance of the Revolution.
2.—An Evening with Longfellow
3.—The Tudors
4.—Monologue—National Poems and Events

Address MRS. E. T. BARRETT, SING SING, N. Y

Arnold, Constable & Co

MEN'S HALF HOSE.

1,200 DOZEN

Men's plain and fancy Half Hose, manufactured by the celebrated house of George Brettle & Co., of London, ranging in price from $6.00 to $8.40 per dozen, which is about half their value.

LADIES' SILK STOCKINGS.

NEARLY 500 DOZEN,

Being the handsomest display ever made in Ladies' and Children's English Colored, Black and Fancy Silk Hosiery, ranging in price from two dollars up. These prices are very exceptional and worthy of a careful inspection.

Broadway & 19th st.

NEW YORK.

KNABE PIANOFORTES.

UNEQUALLED IN

Tone, Touch, Workmanship and Durability.

WILLIAM KNABE & CO.,

Nos. 204 and 206 West Baltimore Street, Baltimore. No. 112 Fifth Avenue, N. Y.

EQUITABLE MORTGAGE COMPANY.

CAPITAL, $100,000. (Paid up.)

Aggregate capital and surplus of our associated corporations, $325,000.

7% WESTERN FARM MORTGAGES 7%

In Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, and Nebraska.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST

GUARANTEED.

Send for further information. REFERENCES: Send for further information.

First National Bank, N. Y.; B. E. Tifft, 921 Chestnut St, Phila.; Hon. Redfield Proctor, Rutland, Vt.; J. W. White, Nashua, N. H.; Kendall Bros., Reading, Pa.; Col. Lee Chamberlain, Albany, N. Y.; Rev. S. W. Boardman, Stanhope, N. J.; H. H. Fitch, 23 Court St., Boston, Mass.; Hon. S. S. Lacey, Marshall, Mich.; Gen. R. B. Crawford, Norwalk, Ct.

NEW YORK, 135, 137 B'way. BOSTON, Mass. 23 Court St. OFFICES. PHILADELPHIA, Pa., 112 S. 4th St. KANSAS CITY, Mo., 9th & Walnut Sts.

J. B. WATKINS LAND MORTGAGE CO.

Capital, $750,000. Surplus, $100,000.

FARM MORTGAGES. 7% INTEREST GUARANTEED

PAYABLE BY HALF-YEARLY GUARANTEED COUPONS AT

NATIONAL BANK OF COMMERCE IN NEW YORK.

10,994 Mortgages negotiated, aggregating - - - $7,223,800

Amount of Interest and Principal paid on day of maturity, 4,118,272

Six per cent. Real Estate Mortgage Bonds, principal and interest FULLY GUARANTEED. Security SEVEN fold. For sale at our New York Office.

☞ SEND FOR PAMPHLET FORMS AND TESTIMONIALS.

Address J. B. WATKINS L. M. CO., Lawrence, Kansas,

Or HENRY DICKINSON, New York Manager, 243 Broadway.

HALF A MILLION GARDENS

ARE ANNUALLY SUPPLIED WITH

Peter Henderson's

SEEDS PLANTS

EVERYTHING FOR THE GARDEN

Our Seed Warehouses, the largest in New York, are fitted up with every appliance for the prompt and careful filling of orders.

Our Green-house Establishment at Jersey City is the most extensive in America. Annual Sales, 2½ Million Plants.

Our Catalogue for 1886, of 140 pages, containing colored plates, descriptions and illustrations of the NEWEST, BEST and RAREST SEEDS and PLANTS, will be mailed on receipt of 6 cts. (in stamps) to cover postage.

PETER HENDERSON & CO. 35 & 37 Cortlandt St., NEW YORK.

BURPEE'S SEEDS,

FARM ANNUAL FOR 1886

Will be sent FREE to all who write for it. It is a Handsome Book of 128 Pages, with hundreds of new illustrations, two Colored Plates, and tells all about the Best Garden, Farm and Flower Seeds, Bulbs, Plants, Thoroughbred Stock and Fancy Poultry. It is the only complete catalogue of the kind published, and describes RARE NOVELTIES in VEGETABLES and FLOWERS, of real value, which can not be obtained elsewhere. Send address on a postal to

W. ATLEE BURPEE & CO., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

The Twenty-Sixth Annual Statement of the

EQUITABLE

Life Assurance Society

OF THE UNITED STATES,

For the Year Ending Dec. 31, 1885.

AMOUNT OF LEDGER ASSETS January 1, 1885		$55,537,720 66
INCOME.
Premiums	$13,461,679 22
Interest, Rents, &c.	3,128,373 91	16,590,053 13
		$72,127,773 79
DISBURSEMENTS.
Claims by Death and Matured Endowments		$4,273,191 28
Dividends, Surrender Values, and Annuities		2,620,039 09
Discounted Endowments		245,458 68
Total paid Policyholders		$7,138,689 05
Dividend on Capital		7,000 00
Commissions, Advertising, Postage, and Exchange		1,427,282 37
General Expenses		1,302,118 68
State, County, and City Taxes		165,169 84
		$10,040,259 94
Net Cash Assets, Dec. 31, 1885		$62,087,513 85
ASSETS.
Bonds and Mortgages		$16,568,332 91
New York Real Estate, including the Equitable Building and purchases under foreclosure		8,360,782 62
United States Stocks, State Stocks, City Stocks, and other Investments		26,416,269 94
Loans secured by Bonds and Stocks (market value, $1,969,637)		1,420,475 00
Real Estate outside the State of New York, including purchases under foreclosure and Society's Buildings in other cities		4,255,285 30
Cash in Banks and Trust Companies, at interest; and in transit (since received)		4,878,078 81
Due from Agents on account of Premiums		168,289 27
		$62,087,513 85
Market value of Stocks and Bonds over book value		2,193,864 03
Interest and Rents due and accrued		614,61. 62
Premiums due and in process of collection (less premiums paid in advance, $29,835)		396,344 00
Deferred Premiums		1,561,054 00
Total Assets, Dec. 31, 1885		$66,553,387 50

I hereby certify, that after a personal examination of the securities and accounts described in the foregoing statement, I find the same to be true and correct as stated.

JOHN A. McCALL, JR., Comptroller.

TOTAL LIABILITIES, including legal Reserve on all existing policies, (4 per cent. Standard)	$52,691,148 87
Total undivided Surplus, over Four per cent. Reserve	$13,862,239 13
Of which the proportion contributed (as computed) by Policies in general class, is	$5,145,539 13
Of which the proportion contributed (as computed) by Policies in Tontine class, is	8,716,700 00

(Upon the New York State Standard, 4½ per cent., the Surplus is, as computed, $17,195,329 40.)

We certify to the correctness of the above calculation of the reserve and surplus. From this surplus the usual dividends will be made.

GEO. W. PHILLIPS, J. G. VAN CISE, } Actuaries.

New Assurance written in 1885	$96,011,378 00
Total Outstanding Assurance	$357,338,246 00
Increase of Premium Income	$1,430,349 00
Increase of Surplus	$3,378,622 03
Increase of Assets	$8,391,461 96

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

HENRY B. HYDE, President.

J. W. ALEXANDER, LOUIS FITZGERALD, HENRY A. HURLBUT, D. G. MARQUAND, W. A. WHEELOCK, HENRY DAY, MARCELLUS HARTLEY, JOHN SLOANE, H. M. ALEXANDER, CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW, CHARLES G. LANDON, HENRY S. TERRELL, THOMAS S. YOUNG, ROBERT BLISS, DANIEL D. LORD, JAMES M. HALSTEAD, HORACE PORTER, G. DE F. L. DAY, W. ALEXANDER, PARKER HANDY,

JOHN A. STEWART, JOHN D. JONES, R. L. KENNEDY, EUGENE KELLY, CORNELIUS N. BLISS, GEO. C. MAGOUN, WM. B. KENDALL, SAMUEL BORROWE, B. WILLIAMSON, WM. WALKER, G. W. CARLETON, E. W. LAMBERT, B. F. RANDOLPH, J. F. DE NAVARRO, J. J. McCOOK, W. WHITEWRIGHT, ALANSON TRASK, E. B. COLT, WM. M. BLISS, C. B. ALEXANDER, ED. W. SCOTT

OLIVER AMES, EUSTACE C. FITZ, S. H. PHILLIPS, Boston.

THOS. A. BIDDLE, GEO. H. STUART, T. DEWITT CUYLER, Philadelphia.

H. R. WOLCOTT, Denver.
A. VAN BERGEN, Paris.
H. J. FAIRCHILD, Manchester, Eng.
GUSTAV G. POHL, Hamburg.

The Christian Intelligencer.

Een-dracht maakt macht.

VOL. LVII.—No. 9. WHOLE No. 2901. NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 3, 1886. $2.65 A YEAR IN ADVANCE No. 48 CHURCH STREET.

EDITORS: Rev. JOHN M. FERRIS, D.D. Rev. N. H. VAN ARSDALE.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR: MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

THE LORD'S DAY.—The Outlook objects to our statement that the vast majority of Christendom has held and now holds that "the first day of the week is the day of rest by Divine appointment." It reasserts the exact contrary, and then goes on to say that the Heidelberg Catechism is on its side of the question. It quotes its words saying that in the fourth commandment requires "that I especially on the Sabbath, that is, on the day of rest, diligently frequent the church," etc. Now what can these words mean but that the first day of the week, the Lord's day, is the rest day which God appoints and requires. The Catechism maintains the use and obligation of Sunday on the ground of the law in the Decalogue. We think our friends of the Outlook must try again if they wish to teach us the meaning of our own standards.

And we respectfully insist that their contention is really for a matter of "numerical designation." Like them we uphold the perpetual authority of the fourth command, like them we insist upon the importance of having one day in seven set apart for rest and worship, like them we protest unceasingly against whatever interferes with the spiritual design and sacred character of the institution. Wherein do we differ? Simply on the question whether the first day or the seventh should be observed. To us there is satisfactory evidence in the New Testament that the day was changed. The Jewish Sabbath has become the Christian Lord's day. The old reason for its institution still remains in all its force with the immeasurable enhancement derived from the association of the season with the great central fact of Christianity, the resurrection of our Lord from the tomb. And it seems to us the merest delusion to suppose that a better observance of the day as holy could be secured by going back to the seventh day. Certain it is that the Puritans and the Scotch have kept the first day as rigidly as ever any body of disciples did the seventh. The only real question is, Is the weekly day of rest and worship a matter of divine and perpetual obligation? But this is obscured and blurred by pertinaciously insisting upon a certain numerical designation. And so, notwithstanding the good temper, the sincerity, the ingenuity and the diligence of our Sabbatarian friends, they are simply putting back the cause they have at heart when they coolly tell us that the whole Church of God for eighteen centuries has been left to fall into serious error because they chose to imitate the disciples of Jesus by assembling on the first day of the week.

A LEADER for many years in the Christian activities of this city and vicinity has said recently that he has known no time when "religious susceptibility" was as general as it is at present. As his words come to us by report, but correctly, we believe, we do not give his name. If we were free to give it his testimony would have great weight. He has had a part in a number of great and precious awakenings in this neighborhood, and to him the present time seems more full of promise than any period he recalls. The results thus far do not seem to warrant so strong an expression. Yet in some localities they have been really remarkable. Some of our own churches in communities comparatively small report over fifty enquirers. Other churches are also in the same villages and they have as many, some more, who are seeking the way of life. The interest in these small towns has never been equalled or even approached in their previous history. The desire of Christians for a manifestation of the power of the Holy Spirit, and their willingness to do what they can to bring their neighbors under the influence of the truth, is a distinct and hopeful characteristic of the present interest. Church members have prosecuted with energy and in the best spirit a system of visitation to which heretofore they have been total strangers. Christian men and women, especially the latter, have visited block after block, calling at every house and inviting the inmates to the special services. Report says that they have been almost invariably received courteously. These visitors generally, we believe, have never engaged in such an effort before. Such a manifestation of interest cannot be without effect. But the results are not yet such as bear out the words of the eminent Christian, quoted at the beginning of this paragraph. But his opinion should encourage the children of God to continue their prayers and endeavors, and it should incite the preachers to make the best possible attempts to impress upon this unusual susceptibility the great and vital truths of revealed religion.

AFTER THE REVIVAL.—Revivals of religion, which in their influence extend beyond quickened church members, and through their aroused zeal by the Spirit, to the conviction and conversion of sinners, entail great and grave responsibilities upon pastors and churches during their progress, but greater and more serious responsibilities afterward, in respect to the care of converts or their training "in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." If a sense of these responsibilities grows less as the religious interest subsides, and is almost wholly cast off after the revival meetings have ceased and the fruit gathered in, more than half of the possible future benefit and blessing of the work will be lost to souls and to the Church, through the lapse of some and the inefficiency of others who may hold fast their profession, but by a very feeble grip.

If the object of a revived church, in organizing and carrying forward a series of revival meetings, is simply to bring the Gospel to bear directly upon the impenitent, arouse their religious consciousness, make them anxious over their sins, get them to make a public profession of religion, and thereby to increase the roll of church members—then with this object accomplished, continued special services in behalf of the newly added members will be relaxed, and they be left, in the weakest, most delicate and critical time of their Christian career, to pursue their new course of life as best they can. But if the object be to save souls and to add them to the church, that by the help of her ordinances and the encouraging fellowship and counsel of her members, they may grow in grace and in the knowledge of Christ, and so be in constant training and development for God's service, for ever increasing Christian usefulness, and for meetness for the inheritance of the saints in light by sanctification of the Spirit—then for this work which follows a revival, or the reception of members into the church on confession, and who thereby become the young disciples—"the lambs of the flock"—a deep and abiding sense of responsibility will be felt by those on whom their Christian training is devolved.

It will find expression in considerate helpfulness by word and act. They will take pains when meeting them to notice them, to greet them with a sunny, sympathetic face, to shake hands with them, and to drop with them for their strength and cheer, a word of Christian encouragement. This they will do naturally and discreetly so as not to risk the harm of overdoing the matter by overloading them with attentions, thereby exciting in them a false and undue sense of importance. They will also find some work for them to do in connection with the Church, and teach them that the Church is not a place for repose, a place to take one's ease in, to sleep in, but to work in. A minister and his board of counsellors have small tact and ingenuity if they cannot find employment in some department of church work for her members. "All at it, and always at it," was the motto of one of the Wesleys, for a prosperous church. Another important fact will be recognized; that for the proper training of new members, young or old in years, a prayer and conference meeting should be established, and as regularly held as the weekly church prayer-meeting. Such a meeting is an invaluable help to beginners in public prayer and other spiritual exercises. They meet on a common footing and have the comfort and strength of a mutual sympathy, which lessen the embarrassment, and aid in acquiring confidence in the exercise of public duties.

Left Behind

IN an account of the revival in Canon City, Colorado, occurred this sentence: "Quite a number of heads of families who once professed Christ, but who came West leaving their Christianity East of the great rivers, declare that now they have found peace again and that their intentions are henceforth to walk uprightly before God." From this we are to infer that with the loss of their religion they lost their peace and indulged in a walk not upright before God. At this we are not surprised, for it is the very fruit that the desertion of God bears; it is reaping according to the sowing. That the Christian religion had been once embraced indicated the presence of religious convictions and a sense of religious obligations, and casting off Christianity must do violence to these, destructive of peace. We grant that it is possible for men to grow away from their early Christian training and from former religious beliefs, and to conscientiously adopt others and be comfortable in their new faith. But this is not stripping one's self of all religious profession; it is simply a matter of exchange of one for another. Strictly speaking, such an one is not a backslider. We would define a backslider to be one who abandons, slides back from his religion, and who takes no other in its stead. It is not in the nature of the case for such to enjoy rest. To this, we have no doubt, these reclaimed and restored brethren in Colorado would now testify if given the opportunity; indeed, according to the report, this is their testimony.

Why a change of residence from the East to the West, from one State into another, or from one country into another, should be considered a sufficient pretext for a Christian to abandon his religion and forsake his God and Saviour, we never could understand. It is inexplicable, except on the assumption that in such instances Christianity is put on as a cloak is put on, to be removed when occasion requires. What a narrow, superficial view, and what an outrageous misuse this is of the religion of Jesus Christ! It has been said, and well said, that if the Christian religion is worth anything, it is worth everything. If this is so, and they who have given it a fair trial know that it is so, then the most valuable possession the Christian has he leaves behind as not worth m v-ing, when he moves West and fails to take his religion with him.

During a sojourn for some time in the West, which gave us an extensive knowledge of at least one community, to our surprise and grief we made the acquaintance of men, who moved there two score years ago from the East; from communities in which they were known and esteemed as exemplary Christians, and from churches in which some of them had been deacons and influential officials, and who in the West had never taken the trouble to identify themselves with any church, and had absolutely ceased to be church-goers. How greatly they err of whom this can be said; and of what inestimable peace and blessing they deprive themselves! Surely, to them as individuals, and to their families, the religion of Christ is as necessary in one clime as in another; as necessary among strangers as among friends; and to some of our Western communities, made up as they are of a large percentage of European peoples, with all sorts of religious beliefs, prominent in them a subtle and dangerous rationalism, there is emphatic need that the claims of Christianity be strongly presented, and constantly and consistently exemplified in the lives of its professed adherents. This is needful for the Christian's self-defense against the inroads of error, as well as for the effectual displacement of error, where it may be found to exist, by the truth.

The Third Party.

ON another page Judge Allen expresses, ("voices," suffer us to say by the way, as applied to written words, is an absurd phrase,) the feeling and belief of a large body of intelligent, patriotic, Christian men and women, who are hearty friends of the movement to restrict rum selling and to promote temperance. Many of them are total abstainers on Christian principle, nearly all of them are virtually such, for they use distilled or fermented liquors very seldom and only as a medicine. If the liquor traffic were dependent on their patronage it would soon become less than the thousandth part of what it now is. They all earnestly desire to see the traffic in liquors put under the greatest possible restrictions and reduced to the smallest possible proportions. They take no part in any measure to shield or foster the traffic and, whenever there is a fair and hopeful opportunity, strike a blow at it. They are in favor of such restriction as is backed by a public opinion, conviction and determination which will secure and maintain its execution. They are persons of influence. Their approbation in a moral measure is worth having. Such are they who are fairly represented by Judge Allen.

His words are plain, some may regard them as severe. They are really much less severe than those used almost every day in conversation by the body of citizens he represents. Judge Allen's article is mild when compared with the words often heard from the mouths of some of the very best citizens of this State. They are very sore, many of them very much exasperated from the effect of the third party on recent elections. It is well to know what such a body of citizens thinks and feels. Prudent men will take it into consideration. Whether it is right or wrong, wise or unwise, such is the position and feeling at present of this important part of our citizens. It should be taken into account.

There is a field where the third party would receive large and probably steadily increasing support, that is, in the election of reputable and resolute citizens as Excise Commissioners. Nominations for such offices, in absolute disregard of party affiliations, of men who will use existing laws to put the utmost restriction on the liquor traffic, who will execute the laws with hearty sympathy for the best class of citizens, and so execute any additional laws that may be made, would receive a support which would alarm the groggeries and work a reformation. Such nominations would not interfere in the least with the chief party divisions on other points affecting the public welfare. They would also, if not on the first attempt, certainly afterward, if faithfully persisted in, bring out such a demonstration of public opinion as would decidedly influence the action of legislatures, magistrates, the police and other executive officers.

"Old Colony" Papers.

A VERITABLE "GOD'S ACRE."

I.

THE burial place is always a significant annex to a town, as well as its historical index. Princeton Cemetery, as might be expected, is of exceptional interest and will more richly repay a visit than any other local graveyard in this country, not excepting that of Concord, Mass. It has been used as such for at least a century and a quarter, and is of a zig zag shape from the fact of its various additions in whatever direction new land could be obtained. It has very few trees, and those mostly evergreens, but is kept in neat and trim condition. The monuments are unpretending, probably from the fact that the fashion of plainness was long ago set by the simple stones and slabs which mark the graves of its most illustrious dead.

I have not space for noticing the many tombs of local celebrities, such as pastors of the church here, gallant officers of the Revolutionary and Civil Wars,* beloved physicians, honored citizens of the town and State; young men of promise, to whom in some cases illustrious fathers looked to perpetuate their fame; the heads or scions of families bearing such historic names as Bayard, Berrien, Stockton and Olden. There are several who were U. S. Senators in their day. One of these was John R. Thompson, who held the position in the days when New Jersey was called the "State of Camden and Amboy," instead of being a dependency of the Pennsylvania Railroad as now.

A number of monuments are erected, by their fellow students, to the memory of young men who died while in the College or Seminary. The most suggestive of these is a plain slab inscribed with the name of Guy Chew, a Mohawk Indian who died sixty years ago while educating for missionary work among his countrymen. The stone bears this touching legend, said to be his last words, "PRAY FOR THE POOR INDIAN!" Either his injunction has not been heeded, or the prayer has not been answered, for the poor Indian needs as much praying for as ever. I fear the trouble has been that men have not "lifted up holy hands" in these petitions, though the skies at last are brightening, both church ward and Washington-ward, and even army-ward (as see the last Report of the War Department). Another grave is that of James Moore, a captain of militia, who was the first to force his way into Nassau Hall when the British soldiers had entrenched themselves there on the day of the Battle of Princeton.

Among the tender tributes of almost heart-broken affection is a beautiful marble statue of a young girl, just spreading angel wings, and lifting her hands and raptured eyes heavenward. It is the memorial of the sole daughter of one whose name has long been honored and beloved in Princeton College. She was a lovely child of only fourteen years. It is said that during the almost thirteen years which have elapsed the father has never failed to visit the grave each day, when in the place.

In this sensational age when murder, if not (as De Quincey predicted) a fine art, seems to have become a necessary sauce for most literary and journalistic dishes, there should be special interest taken in the grave of a murdered man, named Rowand, behind a hedge in a corner of the old ground. He was assassinated one night on Witherspoon street, and his body thrown on a grave near the gate. There was for a long time a superstition that the grass would not grow on the spot where his head had lain, and a round, bare place was shown with great awe by the boys and less enlightened citizens. Rowand was a jeweler, and was on his way home with the key of his safe; but the murderer lost an essential part of the key before he reached the store, and got nothing for his crime but thirty cents and a hangman's rope. The culprit was a stranger in Princeton, and seems to have had no friends or relatives to claim his body. He offered no evidence in defence, displayed the most imperturbable demeanor to the end, and refused to give any clew to his personality or past career. He was a man of fine appearance, gentlemanly manners, and elegantly dressed, and had a large amount of money in his possession. This was Princeton's only capital case in all its history.

Among the teachers of the College who are buried here are some notable names. John Maclean was the first professor of chemistry in America, to whom Benjamin Silliman the elder referred as his earliest master. He was a Scotchman, who came to this country in 1795, and his son afterwards was President of the College. Arnold Guyot, as is well known, was a Swiss of Neufchatel, an associate of Agassiz, through whose influence he came to this country. He is not less memorable for his unshaken trust in revelation, and his valuable contributions to the harmonizing of science and Scripture, than for his scientific discoveries and cyclopædic knowledge. He had also a clear and fascinating style of presenting these subjects, which did much to popularize natural science and to make his defence of the faith peculiarly useful. He was a man of great loveliness of character and, like Joseph Henry, a simple, devout and active Christian. He died only two years ago. Around Prof. Guyot lie the remains of several members of his family circle, old and young. The inscriptions are mostly in French, which imparts a peculiar naïveté as well as a vivid and touching sense of the chances and changes of this life, which may begin among the Alpine heights and end in the sunny plains of Southern New Jersey. These epitaphs are full of simple piety, such as these: "Son Sauveur l'a reprise a lui"; "Réunie au Sauveur en qui elle a cru le 19 Iuilett, 1858"; "Elle a cru et espere en son Sauveur et servi jusque a la fin"; "Elle entra dans son repos." As I read these words of Christian hope in their foreign garb, I realized that we are all strangers and pilgrims on the earth, and how all our tongues would blend at last in the language of Canaan.

There is quite a representation of Huguenot names in this cemetery, such as Bayard, Janvier, Larue, Schmit, Tulane, some of them refugees from persecution. One of the descendants of the latter, Mr. Paul Tulane, now a resident of Princeton, gave a large part of the land belonging to the cemetery, and is specially known for his munificent donation of a million dollars for education at the South.

Other distinguished College professors buried here are Stephen Alexander, Lyman H. Atwater and Albert B. Dod. Prof. Alexander (in no wise related to the Archibald Alexander family) was one of the leading astronomers of this country, filling that chair in Princeton for forty-three years. He, too, was a devout scientist. The only time I ever saw him was when he spoke before the Presbyterian Alliance at Philadelphia on The Relations of Science and Theology. He was a small man, reminding me of Tayler Lewis. As one who all his life had "seen through a glass darkly," and whose latter days were somewhat shadowed by infirmity and trial, his epitaph is singularly appropriate, "I shall be satisfied when I awake with Thy likeness!" That of Dr. Atwater, in his day a recognized giant among philosophic thinkers, is not less significant: "I live by the faith of the Son of God."

* Since writing the above, one of the most distinguished of the heroes of our late war was interred in these grounds, February 5th. General David Hunter was the son of a Princeton professor, and his mother was a daughter of Richard Stockton, the signer of the Declaration of Independence. He was wounded severely at the Battle of Bull Run, and served mostly in the Southwest and in the Shenandoah Valley. While military governor, he issued his famous proclamation declaring the slaves of Georgia, South Carolina, and Florida free, but the President regarded it as premature and annulled it.

Few men in our country have had such a traditional fame as Albert B. Dod, or by an early death extinguished so many hopes of eminence. He was one of those whom we always speak of as "brilliant." He shone in society, in the classroom, and in the pulpit. He was an extraordinary conversationist. His mind was perpetually on the alert, and his power of language strikingly expressed his thought. His special sphere was mathematics, but he was equally accomplished in logic, metaphysics, literature and the fine arts. His personal appearance was striking—"his head unusually large, his eyebrows massive and projecting, his eyes brilliant and deep-seated," his form tall and square-shouldered, and his movement and carriage active and graceful.

When the veterans of Princeton decorated the graves of their comrades last May, they held their service, as is customary, on the grave of the last one who had died. This was the Rev. William Harris, late Treasurer of the College, who died suddenly and alone last March at Savannah, Georgia. He was a man greatly beloved, and combined with his financial duties a special attention to the religious interests of the College and community. His death, at the age of fifty-three, was a peculiar loss to the institution.

We must take still another walk in the Cemetery, before we have counted up its buried treasure.

F. N. Zabriskie.

A HAPPY PHRASE.—"We seek our life out of ourselves." A literary lady, visiting one of the Reformed churches noted for its beauty, read these words, in letters of gold, on the walls of the Consistory Room. She exclaimed to a friend: "How Emersonian—a world of thought in a few words!" and forthwith began to seek on the printed page for the pithy sentiment. Not, however, unmindful of the deeply devotional spirit of the words, she bethought herself to inquire of the pastor of the church. All attentive communicant members of our Church will recognize the sentence as located in the form for the Lord's Supper. It is, indeed, a gem in liturgic literature. It is the keynote of the Christian life.

As to Prof. Steffens and Hebrew.

DEAR MR. EDITOR: When Prof. Steffens, who "prides himself on having studied logic to some purpose," answers my arguments with arguments, and not by making pictorial accusations against me, I stand ready to reply. In the meantime I am not to be driven from this position by such illogical methods as a cry of "sour grapes."

J. G. Lansing.

Theological Seminary, New Brunswick, N. J.

Suggestive.

MY LITTLE LAD AND I.

I take a little hand in mine,
And walk the village street,
With chirp and chatter as we go,
In mingled converse sweet,
And pleasant salutations
From every one we meet—
Dear little lad and I!

I take this little hand in mine
To climb a neighboring hill,
To pluck wild flowers or to trace
A laughing mountain rill.
By which, when weary or athirst,
We pause to drink our fill—
Dear little lad and I!

I take two little hands in mine,
My boy upon my knee;
I listen to a pleasant voice,
Made rich with notes of glee;
I feel a breath against my cheek,
A breath of life to me—
Dear little lad and I!

I take those little hands in mine;
I hear a prattler's tongue
Repeating childish thoughts and songs
So sweetly said and sung,
In harmony with spirit-harps
For heavenly music strung—
Dear little lad and I!

With those two little hands in mine,
I think of other days—
One generation full of years
Between our parting ways;
And yet our souls clasp hands across
The chasm in close embrace—
Dear little lad and I!

Those little hands, so very fair,
God keep them ever white!
Those little feet, unfettered yet,
May they e'er walk aright!
That little life, so precious now,
May it be ever bright!—
Dear little lad, pray I!

—Clark W. Bryan, in Good Housekeeping.

Pithy Sentences.—In all healthy work that is done as it should be, we live and move by faith.

A religion which takes possession of the convictions of mankind carries with it its own evidence, in its conformity with universal spiritual experience; and the truth of it lying within the four corners of the conception, is above and beyond the power of historical criticism.

How many times must we outsiders learn up our science, and then unlearn it? Each new generation of philosophers laughs at the conclusions of its predecessors.

Sir James Martin, though one of the chief persons in a progressive and democratic community, did not seem to believe that either progress or democracy was about to work any miracles in the alteration of human character. They had to be accepted like other facts, when brought on by the nature of things, but were not therefore either to be particularly rejoiced over, or particularly hated. On the whole, democracy worked like galvanism in disintegrating the existing conditions of human society; but human society occasionally fell into a state when disintegration could not be helped....A monarchy when there was security that the monarch himself should be a wise man, was the best of all forms of government.—From "Oceana," by James Anthony Froude.

Hold Fast.—The last sermon of Rev. Sam Jones in Cincinnati was on the words, "Cast thy burden on the Lord." The closing paragraphs of the discourse were these:

"He hath delivered my soul in peace from the battle that was against me." Did you ever think about that expression? "For there were many with me." Ah me! I have seen this illustrated so many times. I have seen the precious old heart-broken mother; her boys had gone to the bad, and patiently the mother came up to me and said: "I will have to give my boys up forever. I have prayed for them every day from their birth to the present time; I have filled them with my prayers, and at night when they were asleep I bathed them in my tears; and yet my boy to-day said to me, 'Mother, don't you ever mention religion to me again,' and scoffed me away from his presence." And she said, "I will just have to give up and quit." But the very next night I saw the two boys of that precious mother walk up to the altar and give their hearts to God, join the Church, and say, "Glory to God! I am a saved man." And then I saw the old mother jump up and clap her hands together, and she said: "Glory to God! He has delivered my soul in peace from the battle that was against me. I thought my boys were gone forever; and, blessed be God! they are saved, when I thought they were lost forever."

I have seen a wife pray for her husband, and he went to the bad. And I have seen my own precious wife say, "I am broken down with the burden; I will have to give it up." She was about to give it all up in despair when God swept me into the kingdom of Christ, and I said, "Glory to God! He has delivered my soul in peace from the battle that was against me." I thought I had to give up in despair, but about that time He brought me into victory, and now I shout over victories unknown to men.

Many a man has been ready to give up, and has been on the verge of despair; but about that time some providential influence came along and swept him into the Church, which he thought he would never reach. Many a time the old brethren have gathered together and thought the Church had about reached its end, thought they were not doing any good; and about the time they were ready to give up along came some influence and swept hundreds and hundreds into the Church, and the old brethren clapped their hands and cried out: "Glory to God! He hath delivered our souls from the battle that was against us."

There are thousands of Christian people that have cried out about Cincinnati: "O this city has gone to the bad! She has three thousand bar-rooms. Wickedness exists on nearly every block. O how she is steeped in guilt and wickedness, and communism and dormant riot!" and the good men of the city have looked on and said: "O Cincinnati is gone! With all our prayers and all our efforts and all our preaching, Cincinnati is going to the bad!" And just about the time you are all about to give up, along comes some influence and starts the whole city to God, and I hope before this time next week we can clap our hands together and say: "Glory to God! This city is restored to Christ. They're flocking home to Christ by the hundreds and thousands."

I'll never desert this grand old ship of Zion; I'm aboard, and I'm going to stay. Many a man has given up and despaired of ever being a good member, and has asked me, when I was pastor, to take his name off the book; but, brother, I'd never let you take your name off. I never felt sadder in my life than when a man came to me and wanted me to take his name off the church books. Many a man has wanted his name stricken off, but he was rescued at the last moment. Many a time have I gone to a town and worked and worked, but all seemed against me; the preachers would not sympathize with me, and even my wife, I thought, was against me, and my children seemed to be against me; but I fought and fought and fought, and I thought I fell, and I said: "I am conquered forever," but blessed be God, when I opened my eyes the din and the smoke of the terrible battle had been wafted away, and angels and good men were all about me, and I said: "Glory to God! I am not alone." I thought I was alone in the fight.

Sister, brother, men, listen to-night. You can't go out alone to fight the battle of right—God won't let you. He will make angels pitch their tents around you, and make the good men of earth stand by you, and God Himself will be your friend. Glory to God, you don't go by yourself? If the devil says you are too weak to walk or start, tell him God is with you. Brethren, let us all start that way to-night. Let's start a better life, and if you do start to-night God will be with you. He will help you fight the battle.

Politics and Prohibition.—A Young Men's Prohibition Club of Kings County, N. Y., was formed a few weeks ago in Brooklyn. At a meeting about a week ago the following circular, professing to be the observations of a "crank," was adopted and 20,000 copies ordered printed for distribution:

At times it seems to this crank as if the two old parties were playing at see-saw. The "teeter" rests on a barrel marked "Old Bourbon" or "XXX Ale." On one end is the Republican party, on the other end is the Democratic party, both trying to see which is the heavier. But in the middle stands the saloon keeper, with one foot on one side of the barrel and the other foot on the other side, and by leaning his weight on this side or that he determines all the ups and downs. In the last campaign in this City of Churches 36 per cent of the Republican primaries and 48 per cent of the Democratic primaries were held in saloons, or in rooms connected with saloons. In New York city the proportion of primaries held in saloons was over 60 per cent. Another fact is that in the last year of Republican Mayor Low's administration the Excise League procured evidence that caused 135 licenses to be revoked or surrendered, and in almost every case Mayor Low's Excise Commissioners granted the law breakers new licenses. Another fact is that the present Democratic Mayor Whitney, two days after he received the nomination, felt it necessary to go to the house of the leading brewer of the city and solicit his high and mighty favor by making satisfactory pledges. The fourth fact which has been dangling before this crank's eyes for four months is that last fall the liquor dealers held a State Convention in New York city and their Committee on Law and Legislation reported that all the members of the State Legislature from Brooklyn and New York had acted at Albany in a manner satisfactory to the liquor dealers, with but three exceptions, two in New York and one in Brooklyn. The only member of the Legislature from Kings County who hadn't satisfied the liquor dealers was Assemblyman Heath. The crank watched for results. A few days later the nominating convention in Mr. Heath's Senatorial District assembled, and he was promply snowed under, failing to get either the nomination for Senator or the renomination for Assemblyman.

"So," said the crank to himself, "the liquor dealers cannot tolerate even one man from Brooklyn who doesn't want to play 'Simon says thumbs up.'"

This crank has been told that prohibition doesn't prohibit, and he believes it. He believes also that an axe doesn't chop, no matter how sharp it is. But he has a sneaking idea that a strong man can make the axe chop and a prohibition party can make prohibition prohibit. You must excuse him, he is only a crank. He finds there are a good many cranks right here in Brooklyn, and more of them coming every day. And now he finds that he is coming to the point at last. He has heard that Lord Dundreary said that a bird of a feather would be a fool to flock all alone by himself.

So this crank and about 100 other cranks, all young men between 18 and 50 years of age, have "pooled their issues" in a Young Men's Prohibition Club of Kings County. They don't want the dear public to mistake this for an ordinary temperance society. It is an out and-out political club. The members all believe in temperance, and most of them believe in total abstinence. But they all believe everlastingly hard that the saloon must go.

Our Church.

We are thankful for items of Church News compactly stated; or for marked copies or clippings from local exchanges, which we would not otherwise see. To insure publication in next number, they must reach us by noon on Monday. A condensation of items is unavoidable

Revision of the Lemmata.

MR. EDITOR: The committee appointed by the General Synod to re-arrange the Lemmata have an important duty to perform. I have no doubt they would welcome any suggestions from brethren who have often been members of the Synod, and have had opportunities to watch the progress of business and observe how it might be facilitated. I would like to make a remark or two for the purpose of eliciting the opinions of others. All legislative bodies are apt to be prodigal of their time at the beginning of their session, and find themselves crowded and driven by pressure of business toward the close. In this respect our Synod is not an exception. It is important, therefore, that all reports from the Boards, and business communications should be received and referred as early as possible, so as to give the committees ample time to prepare their reports. Committees should immediately proceed to consider the matters referred to them, and as a subject ripens in their hands present it for the consideration and action of the Synod, without waiting until their labors are completed. For example, it is not necessary that the Committee on Overtures, or on the Professorate should keep their report in hand until every topic has been matured, and then toward the close of the sessions throw an avalanche of business upon the Synod. It is hardly necessary that the subject of missions should be deferred until so late in the session that members become impatient and cannot take time for discussion. There are several committees that could easily report earlier in the session, and thus a great many side issues could be disposed of, and the field left clear for the grand vital questions that concern the life of the Church. A whole session, forenoon or afternoon as the case may be, is sometimes spent in unfruitful talk about some comparatively unimportant affair, while the whole subject of Foreign or Domestic Missions is disposed of—report, secretaries' and missionaries' addresses, discussion and all—in a single evening. This is not doing justice to the great work of evangelization which Christ committed to His Church. How to give every part of the work of Synod its due proportion of time and thought is for the Committee on the Lemmata to consider.

I would just throw out one suggestion, which is, that the sacrament of the Lord's Supper should be celebrated in the evening instead of the afternoon of Thursday. That evening will now be vacant, as the Alumni Association is to hold its anniversary meeting at another time.

It has often struck me that Thursday afternoon is not the best time for this service. Frequently the communications are not all received and referred by Thursday noon. It does not seem appropriate to resume business immediately after this solemn service, nor do the members feel like strolling idly about; and as business has not been fairly portioned out to committees there is nothing to do. I would hardly venture to ask the question which has often occurred to my mind, whether the Lord's Supper can properly be regarded as a Synodical action. Is it not rather a service for the Church as such, assembled on the Sabbath for public worship, than for the rulers of the Church convened as a court or a legislative body to transact business? This appears to have been the view of the Synod when this service was first introduced. It was ordered, "That the minister of that congregation in which General Synod hold their ordinary or extraordinary meeting have the Lord's Supper administered on the Lord's day immediately following the day of said meeting, that so the members of Synod may have an opportunity of joining in the celebration of that holy ordinance." (Minutes, June, 1814, p. 67.) The Synod must have found reason for changing the time, perhaps to give the members an opportunity to scatter and supply various pulpits, but by changing the time the character of the service was also changed to that of a Synodical religious service, where, instead of the members of the Synod joining with the church, the members of the church are invited to join with the Synod. However, ecclesiastical bodies generally have adopted this service, and perhaps the suggestion of its want of strict appropriateness may be hypercritical. It is usually a delightful and tender service, and should infuse its sweet influence into all the deliberations and actions of the Synod.

But it seems to me that much might be gained by celebrating the ordinance in the evening. The whole day could then be occupied with business. All communications could be read and referred. Unfinished matters laid over by the Synod could be taken up, and special reports received and discussed, and the committees could enter upon their work. At an evening service also, we could have a much larger attendance of the members of the churches. The services would not need to be hurried. They would be more solemn and impressive, and would bring the local churches and the Synod into more intimate communion. It is exceedingly desirable that the meetings of our General Synod should be popularized among the people who so kindly entertain its members. To this end services should be held that they are interested in, and at such times that they can conveniently attend them.

A MEMBER OF THE COMMITTEE.

Missionary Convention of the Classis of Raritan.

AN unusually interesting Convention was held in the Third Church of Raritan on February 16th, which promises to impart a new impulse to the cause of missions within the bounds of Classis. There was a full attendance of the ministers, and a large delegation of elders present, together with four pastors from two other Classes. Each session was opened with special devotional exercises, as expressive of dependence on God for success, and of desire for the aid of the Holy Spirit and the blessing of God.

The forenoon was set apart to Domestic Missions. The wants and claims of the Board were presented by its Secretary, Rev. Jacob West, D.D. Rev. Geo. M. S. Blauvelt, of Easton, Pa., made an address on "The Importance of the Work of Domestic Missions to our Church." Rev. P. M. Doolittle read a paper on "The Best Methods of Interesting our Churches in the Work of Domestic Missions." At this stage of the proceedings, Rev. J. P. Searle, Rev. B. V. D. Wyckoff and Elder J. H. Cain were appointed a committee to prepare resolutions embodying the views of the Convention.

The afternoon was assigned to Foreign Missions, and Rev. H. N. Cobb, D.D., Secretary of the Board, made a condensed and comprehensive statement of the openings in the three fields of labor, and of the finances. Rev. J. Preston Searle spoke on a "Better Knowledge Among the People in Reference to Missions." Rev. Wm. E. Davis spoke on the "Best Methods of Raising Money for Missions." Then a general discussion followed, in which Rev. Messrs. Pool, Le Fevre, Hart, Doolittle, Read, Conklin, Long, McNair, and Elder Ralph Voorhees took part.

The following series of thorough going resolutions were considered and adopted:

Resolved, That this Classis heartily endorses the apportionment plan of guiding the liberality of the Church; and requests our Missionary Agents to carry the Classical apportionments down to individual churches for their information.

Resolved, That this Classis approves and reiterates to its churches the subjoined suggestions of our Foreign Missionary Agents; and in so far as they apply to the work of Domestic Missions, we urge them in reference to that Board also.

1. A contribution, however small, from every church.
2. The organization of every Sunday-school.
3. Weekly, monthly or quarterly gifts from all contributing churches.
4. Organization of Women's Auxiliaries and Mission Bands.
5. Missionary sermons.
6. Monthly missionary prayer-meetings.
7. Circulation of Sower and Mission Gleaner.

Resolved, That we suggest to our churches the practicability and desirablenes of holding special missionary meetings on the Sabbath or a week day.

Resolved, That Missionary Agents of the Classis be empowered to arrange, if possible, with pastors and consistories such a Classical system of contribution to our Boards of Foreign and Domestic Missions as shall distribute the gifts of the Classis over the whole year.

At the close of the Convention the President tendered its thanks to the Third Church of Raritan, and especially to the ladies for their "noble hospitality," to which Rev. C. H. Pool responded in warm-hearted words.

S. C.

....HACKENSACK, N. J.—The interior of the First Church has recently undergone elaborate re-decoration. Not only have the side walls, the ceiling and pulpit alcove been repainted, and the wood-work stained, refinished and picked out in gold, but the windows have received rich and brilliant stained glass. The scheme of the decoration is one of light green tones with rich borders and symbols in complementary colors and brilliant parts of gold. One of the windows nearest the platform is a memorial gift, we believe, having for its subject Christ in the Temple at the feet of the Doctors. The commission for the decoration in general, as well as for the stained glass, was placed in the hands of the well known firm of church decorators, J. & R. Lamb, of New York. The result obtained has been noticeably artistic and harmonious, the glass agreeing in the key of its coloring with the walls and pews.

....CRANE'S VILLAGE, N.Y.—This small and struggling church enjoyed through the Week of Prayer and following weeks a season of spiritual refreshing. The pulpit has been for several years acceptably supplied by the Rev. C. A. Perkins, (Baptist,) of Amsterdam, who, with the aid of the Young Men's Christian Association Devotional Committee of Amsterdam, conducted the meetings. There were twenty-five or more who arose for prayer, and most of the number are ready to profess their faith in Christ.

....CHRISTMAS OFFERINGS.—The completed list just received from the Treasurer, of the special Sunday-school Christmas Offerings for our needy Church Building Fund, for which acknowledgments will be sent to each of the contributing schools, is very gratifying, and encourages the announcement that a similar special offering will be requested in due time from all the Sunday-schools of our Church for the Christmas of 1886.

N. D. WILLIAMSON, W. M. S. S.

The Great New Northwest.

IT is certainly very important that everybody likely to read these lines should clearly know how wide a door is open just now for the Reformed Church in this region. The door, in fact, has been open for some time already. Occasional hints on the subject have been dropped and recently some well-considered statements thereupon have appeared in the INTELLIGENCER, but the facts in connection ought assuredly not only to be known, but ought to be so known as to lead at once to earnest and thorough action.

Years ago now the writer—it seems only yesterday—was a home missionary in the bounds of the Classis of Michigan and though measurably successful—as he fancies he may say without immodesty—yet it must be confessed there would often come to him serious questionings as to the expediency of Reformed Church attempts there among pure American populations. It looked so very much, even to those in the thick of the work, like fishing behind the net—to use a homely but expressive phrase, which from its aptness became painfully familiar to them. For aside from the Hollanders, there was certainly in those days a very small field for us, and that was claimed nearly or quite always as pre-empted. The most that could be done was to foster, with no great heart but as if bound thereto by something of churchly honor, the enterprises previously begun by the denomination.

But this is by no means the case now in this New West. There is plenty of field here. The whole sisterhood of evangelical churches has its hands more than full of work. In the great empire of Northwestern Iowa this is so, and it is more so yet in this greater empire of Dakota. Of the Presbyterian situation I can speak from personal and experimental knowledge. The Synod of Dakota, embracing the country south of the 46th parallel and eastward of the Missouri river, has, exclusive of the Indian Presbytery, three Presbyteries, and in each of these there is crying need of from three to six or eight additional laborers for most hopeful fields. It has need of men and of far more money than it has any possibility of getting. And this is saying nothing of the territory stretching northward to Manitoba, and in the vaster regions southward and westward, and especially northwestward, lying on beyond. In the same case are the Methodists. This excellent people, by the way, for some reason is not nearly so aggressive in the pioneer line as once was—but the Church is certainly embarrassed with fields which it can by no means occupy. So with the other Christian bodies. Plainly there is vastly more to do in the planting of churches through this region than all the evangelical denominations put together, and using their best efforts, can hope to accomplish. The field is white and souls are perishing. Now this work, in broader extent than ever before known, opens to the Reformed Church, and people, one and all, therefore, have a special and most imperative call to take part therein.

By a noticeable providence are we brought into this connection. The planting years ago of that large colony, most of Pella people, in the then desert region—now a garden of Northwestern Iowa put the Church upon the outpost of the mission field. All around are points needing greatly to be occupied, and ready to welcome heartily almost any evi gelical denomination. Especially has this proven to be so in Dakota. The narrow sectarian affiliations of the leading Christian bodies, so exceedingly strong only a genera tion ago, have greatly weakened, and the sturdy orthodoxy combined with the broad and healthy catholicity of the Reformed Church is readily appreciated. The door is open. American churches can be planted not only along side of the older Holland churches, as at Orange City, and in mixed populations as at Maurice,—where our good Brother De Boer, so long known in Albany, has recently settled—but also among purely American people. Quite frequently at points of the latter character the Reformed Church is specially welcomed, because it makes a union of Christians of various cults and doctrines at once happily practicable, which would elsewise be wholly out of the question. This is so here in Sioux Falls. Our city of over 7,000 people, the largest in Southern Dakota, lies mainly on the western bank of the Big Sioux river, and all the denominations are represented, most of them feebly of course, upon that side of the river. But the Reformed Church on the east side gathers and unifies the religious population about it; and it certainly has as useful and perhaps quite as promising a field as any in the city. So at Salem, forty miles west of Sioux Falls, the capital of McCook county, the centre of a comparatively undeveloped country, which at no distant day will support twenty families where is one now—there the Reformed Church has gathered up nearly all the evangelical elements of that large village. There is but one other church, the Roman Catholic.

The matter stands in just the same way also, I presume, at the other points where are American churches, as at Turner and at Centreville. There are thus openings of large promise on every hand, where at least greatly needed work can be done in evangelizing this magnificent country. The Reformed Church ought to be glowingly ambitious to occupy these openings. There is need of both men and money, and our people should certainly see to it that both are forthcoming. As an instance of our needs, I will say that the Church of Salem has had no pastor since it was organized, but has been ministered to by a layman, Mr. George H. Cotton, a young brother of excellent spirit, graduated from Tama College, Iowa, an institution of the United Brethren. He purposes, however, if the way be clear, to enter our Seminary at New Brunswick next fall to take the full course. But what, in that event, will Salem Church do? It was my privilege the second Sabbath in February to administer the communion to this little flock, receiving four members by certificate and baptizing two infants.

A door swings open wide and a field stretches before us as never previously has been seen in our history. Give us men and give money to sustain them, help us to secure places of worship and homes for our ministry, is the cry that comes up from all sides. Pity, should that cry go out into empty air! There is a noble joy in laying the foundation of empires. Foundations are being laid here on these beautiful plains, these vast ocean-like sweeps of prairie, and empires are rising here in the Occident as superb really as any of Oriental dreams. Shall these foundations be laid in Christ and for Christ? Let the Reformed Church, with voice and hand, join in the work with the other Christian forces of our great land, to give answer in no uncertain sound.

As soon as may be I desire further to say something about the important educational foundations being laid here in the Northwest at Orange City, Iowa. Perhaps there are also other points of interest to which it would be well to call the attention of the Church.

WM. J. SKILLMAN.

SIOUX FALLS, Dakota, February 17th, 1886.

....MISSIONARY CONFERENCE AT CEDAR GROVE, GIBBSVILLE AND OOSTBURG, WISCONSIN, FEB. 8TH AND 9TH, 1886.—Our annual Conference was this year marked by unusual interest and enthusiasm. We had the pleasure also of having Rev. J. H Wyckoff from India in our midst.

The meeting at Cedar Grove opened on Monday evening, 7 o'clock. The church was crowded notwithstanding the unfavorable condition of the weather. The pastor of the church presided. Rev. J. H. Wyckoff spoke for about an hour, relating many incidents of the life and work of a missionary in India, and the actual condition of the foreign mission field. It was very pleasant for the "Work and Praying Band" to hear Mr. Wyckoff speak of his acquaintance with Mr. Jacob, the native missionary for whose salary the Band has pledged itself, and for the young people to hear him speak in high terms of Daniel Souri, for whose education they pay a yearly sum into the treasury of the Board of Foreign Missions. Rev. Mr. Wyckoff also knows intimately the only Holland missionary of our Church, Dr. Hekhuis. Rev. J. W. Dunnewold, from Gibbsville, followed with a short address on "The True Missionary Spirit;" after which Rev. Mr. Labach, from Oostburg, gave us, "Domestic Missions and the Love of Fatherland; How are they Related?" Rev. Mr. Wormser gave a summary translation in Holland of Mr. Wyckoff's address.

At Oostburg on Tuesday morning the same order was followed as on the evening before. Rev. J. H. Wyckoff gave us some more and different incidents of the situation and work in India, after which Rev. Mr. Karsten spoke on "Theory and Practice" in relation to mission work. The question was also discussed, "Is Education a Factor of Importance in the Mission Work?" Rev. Mr. Wormser again gave a translation of Rev. Mr. Wyckoff's address.

At Gibbsville a large audience sat waiting at 2 o'clock P. M., when the Conference commenced. Brother Wyckoff addressed the Conference on "The Women of India." He was listened to with great attention. Rev. Mr. Bloemendaal spoke on "Our Opportunities and our Responsibilities in the Mission Work."

Altogether we believe this Conference will have a beneficial influence in furtherance of the Gospel cause abroad and at home.

A. WORMSER.

....THE CHURCH OF BERGEN, N. J., has been holding a very delightful series of evangelistic services. The meetings began Monday, February 15th, with a sermon by the Rev. Hugh O. Pentecost, of New York. He was followed on successive evenings for two weeks by Ralph Wells, Rev. Ralph W. Brokaw, Rev. Wm. H. De Hart, Rev. Charles K. Clearwater, Rev. W. H. Ford, Rev. Charles T. Riggs, Rev. I. W. Hathaway, Rev. A. S. Biddle, Rev. Rufus W. Clark, Wilbur B. Wilkinson and Captain Louis Pennington. Rev. P. D. Van Cleef, D.D., was present at one service, but was only able to offer a brief prayer. On one occasion four of these workers were present; at another, two; and once only was the pastor of the church, the Rev. Cornelius Brett, left alone with his people. Every meeting began with a service of song led by a choir of about fifty young people. The after meetings for prayer and testimony were well sustained by the members of the church, and every evening found a number of seekers after God in the enquiry room. The meetings will be continued another week.

....HARLINGEN, N. J.—A Lady Washington tea-party was held at the parsonage Tuesday evening, February 23d, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society, and was a large and successful affair. Mrs. G. P. Cortleyou, who represented Martha Washington, wore an antique costume, and with her cap and kerchief and silvery white hair, very strikingly resembled that distinguished lady as we fancy she appeared in ye olden time. Mr. Peter N. Van Nuys assumed the part of George Washington and was dressed in the style prevaling at that time. With his tall, commanding figure and dignity of manner, one could almost imagine that the veritable Washington had again crossed the Delaware and come to grace the occasion with his presence. They were attended by six "maids of honor," six waiting maids, and six little girls, all dressed in ye olden style. As they were marched into the supper-room, preceded by two ushers, the national airs were played upon the piano and violin. There was a fine display of old-fashioned china and candlesticks, pictures of Washington draped with flags, etc. The old Harlingen parsonage, with its large rooms and open fireplaces, was a fitting place for an entertainment of this character. Many of the dresses, caps and capes worn by the ladies, and the coats of the gentlemen were very ancient indeed. The exercises of the evening were closed with singing "Auld Lang Syne," accompanied by the piano, two violins and a cornet. All felt they had spent a very agreeable and pleasant evening, and that the event had been a success both financially and socially.

A.

....FRANKLIN, N. J.—The Ladies' Aid Society celebrated the anniversary of Washington's Birthday by giving an entertainment and supper in the basement of the church. The room was tastefully decorated and the ladies and their aids were neatly uniformed. There was a goodly number present. Altogether, the affair was pleasant and profitable, netting a nice sum for the treasury of the society.

....PATTERSONVILLE, N. Y.—A fair was held at this place last week, extending through three evenings — Wednesday, Thursday and Friday—for the benefit of the First Church of Rotterdam, N. Y., the net proceeds of which amounted to almost $600. Among other curious articles displayed and disposed of to advantage was a handsome silk crazy-quilt, made by different ladies of the congregation and others, in which was worked pieces of their wedding dresses.

....SECOND ROTTERDAM.—This society recently held a very pleasant sociable at the residence of Elder Schermerhorn. The company was hospitably entertained, a toothsome supper was provided, and the receipts footed up to about $70.

....BOONTON, N. J.—Services are being held in this church every night with a large attendance. Six have asked an interest in the prayers, and many more are seriously thinking....There was a very pleasant surprise at the parsonage on Thursday evening, Feb. 18th, when over a hundred of the friends of the pastor, Rev. A. A. King, took possession and enjoyed themselves until midnight, and then departed, leaving the pastor the richer by $90.

....A MOVEMENT is on foot to organize a Mohawk Valley Ministerial Association.

....WESTREN ITEMS.—The Rev. Adrian Kriekard celebrated on Sunday, Feb. 21st, the tenth anniversary of his connection as pastor with the Third Church of Grand Rapids, Mich....Messrs. Frederiksen, Prins and Koch, managers of the New Holland settlement in Minnesota, have donated $500 to the Classis of Iowa for building a church at Prinsburg, Minn.

....PERSONAL.—The Rev. P. E. Kipp, of Schenectady, N. Y., has been voted a vacation of several weeks by his consistory. ....The Rev. A. J. Hagaman, of Hagaman's Mills, N. Y., has received from his people a donation of $70....The Rev. N. F. Nickerson, of Glenville, N. Y., delivered a temperance lecture at Florida, N. Y., which is spoken of in high terms of praise....Dr. W. E. Griffis, of Schenectady, N. Y., has a call from the Shawmut Avenue Congregational Church, of Boston, Mass.

Gleanings from our Exchanges.

....Professor W. P. Coddington, of the Syracuse University, has been engaged to supply the pulpit of the church at Syracuse, N. Y., for one year, his term to begin next Sunday.

...The Rev. Herman Vandewart's letter accepting the call to become pastor of the First Church of Hackensack, N. J., was read to the congregation on Sunday, Feb. 21st. He will administer the sacrament of the Lord's Supper to the members next Sunday, but the date when he will assume permanent charge of the pulpit is not fixed.

....When Dr. Easton became the pastor of the First Church at New Brunswick, N. J., in May, 1881, the actual membership was 529. During his pastorate there have been added on confession 270, on certificate 94, total 364. The losses by deaths, dismissions and suspensions have been 137, leaving a net gain of 227.

....Professor J. G. Lansing delivered his interesting lecture on "Arabia's Warrior Poets" on Friday evening, Feb. 19th, in the First Church of Somerville, N. J. His audience was greatly delighted with the poetical recitations and his graphic delineations.

....The first of a course of lectures in the Millstone Church was delivered last week by the Rev. E. G. Reed. His subject was: "Around the Bay of Naples." The lecture was an able one, and showed the effect of much study.

News of the Week.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 24.—Mr. Parnell criticizes severely the speech of Lord Randolph Churchill at Belfast. There is a great deal of feeling against the Orangemen....A meeting of the different Chambers of Commerce of England, Ireland and Scotland was held at London to consider the depression of trade....Prince Jerome Napoleon publishes a letter protesting against the proscription of the French Princess and calls the present Republic an oligarchy....Greece has submitted to the Powers, but declares that it is done because of the superior force....Governor Abbott, of New Jersey, has sent a special message to the Legislature in regard to the recent decision regarding railroad taxes....A resolution was offered in the Assembly at Albany asking the Attorney General to bring suit to annul the Broadway Railroad charter....A notorious illicit distiller was captured in Georgia....A young man was horsewhipped in St. Louis by a young woman....There is a great ice carnival at Burlington, Vt....A destructive fire swept over part of San Francisco and destroyed considerable property.

THURSDAY, 25.—It is reported that the first outline of Mr. Gladstone's Irish proposals has been presented to his colleagues in the Cabinet, and that the Premier goes the whole length of restoring the Irish Parliament. ..All workmen of foreign birth have been discharged from employment in German dock-yards....A great crowd of visitors at the Burlington Carnival....L. E. Cbittenden has been expelled from the New York County Anti-Monopoly League for acting as counsel for Jacob Sharp after he had accepted a retainer from Edward M. Knox to help him fight Jacob Sharp and his associates....Governor Hill has signed a bill providing for the commutation of sentences of convicts for good behavior, which affects nearly 5,000 prisoners of the higher grade ...The Hancock fund now amounts to $31,840....Mr. Henry S. Craven, Engineer of Construction, has been dismissed by the Aqueduct Commission....The funeral of John B. Gough took place yesterday from his home at Hillside, near Worcester, Mass. ....The Senate passed the bill of Comptroller Chapin to compel the Western Union Telegraph Company to pay the State $140,000. A bill was presented providing that after June 1st no cattle shall be killed within twelve hours after their arrival at the place where they are to be slaughtered.

FRIDAY, 26.—French Socialists propose an International Congress ...It is reported that China will not consent to the cession of Bhamo and adjoining districts to England. If England does not yield China threatens to organize a rebellion of the tribes....Vienna is suffering from water famine. The recent enormous growth of the city has made the supply of water inadequate....The Queen's Procter has decided to intervene in the Dilke case ...A crazy soldier entered the Chamber of Deputies, drew a revolver and fired twice in the air, causing great excitement among the Deputies. He was arrested. His name was given as Peronnier and he served in the French army in the Franco-German war....The fisheries question was discussed by Lord Landsdowne in the Dominion Parliament and by the Legislature of Nova Scotia....The United States Senate considered the Education bill..
The Legislature at Albany discussed the Appropriation bill for the new Capitol....The Assembly passed a bill limiting the period of deer shooting in the Adirondacks. ....A woman in New York was blinded by acid which she threw at her husband. ...Dr. Rauch warns the country against cholera....A young boy of seventeen was arrested for robbery in Buffalo. He had made extensive robberies in New York, Toronto and Washington....Four steamers were aground in the bay yesterday, owing to the severe wind and low tide.

SATURDAY, 27.—The employés of Nettleford's screw works went on a strike yesterday and a small riot ensued, and the windows of a building were broken.

(Continued on page thirteen.)

Our Contributors.

The Heretic Priest; A Tale of Reformation Days in the Netherlands.

(Translated from the Dutch of E. Gerdes, for the Christian Intelligencer, by Rev. Daniel Van Pelt.)

CHAPTER IX.—MEASURES OF VIOLENCE.

At a little distance to the South of the Cathedral at Mechlin, there stood at the time of our tale an ancient, broad but low tower. On the North side, a large gate gave entrance at once to this tower and to the church-yard. On the West, within the tower, a door opened upon a wide square, which led to a building which bore every evidence of being a prison. An iron door in the centre of this building brought the visitor into an ample vestibule, where stood on guard a small body of soldiers, and whence access was afforded to several galleries or wards of the prison.

Three days after the events narrated in the previous chapter, and near the hour of midnight, a man might have been seen leaving the building described above, and going straight towards the tower. Reaching the latter, he opened the door with a key and entered. It was pitch dark inside, for the little window on the churchyard side was wholly inadequate to admit the feeble light of the stars. The man, however, seemed to know the way perfectly; he indeed left the door leading to the square open, but even this did not diminish the dense darkness within the tower. With confident steps the man advanced to some depth along a corridor without striking against the low arches that supported the structure. At a certain point he stopped, and here a rope hung from above down to the floor at his feet. He grasped it with his left hand, and holding it thus he felt his way to a low bench placed beneath a narrow window. It seemed that he was expecting some one, for occasionally he stepped upon the bench and looked out upon the churchyard. But as at every such out look his expectations were disappointed, he mournfully shook his head.

"Why don't they come," he whispered to himself, as if he were afraid the walls might be listening to his words. "What can be the reason? Could there have been some mistake about the hour, or has Brigitta failed to inform Lord Imbize? I know they have need to exercise great caution, for it is not easy to elude the spies of Granvelle—but hark! I hear something."

A noise as of a small stone or pebble thrown against the outer gate was distinctly heard; a minute later a second little pebble struck the window.

"That's the signal," said the man. "At last, then. I am glad they did not come any later."

He looked carefully at first to see that no one was upon the square or inner court; and when he had satisfied himself of this, he softly opened the outer gate. Three men entered in quick succession; they seemed to have arisen from some of the graves, so sudden was their appearance. When the trio had come within the vaulted corridor, the man who had admitted them and had left the gate unlocked, turned to the first and said:

"Lord Imbize, you have but little time to accomplish your purpose. In a few moments you will hear the chant of the monks, who at midnight offer their prayers at the little altar. They remain there till one o'clock. Before that hour everything must be done, or your venture will fail. As soon as this chant begins, I must toll the small bell. That is the signal for the judges to assemble in the torture chamber, to examine the prisoners and force confessions from them."

"Are the prisoners all together?" inquired one of the men, whose voice we recognize as that of the ferryman.

"They are divided among three cells," was the reply. "Mr. Justus, the priest, lies heavily chained and alone in one. The Boutersem peasant, his farm hand, and Herman Van der Woude, occupy one together, and Mr. Dathenus also occupies a cell alone."

"And where is Philip Cruize?" inquired the ferryman. "You did not mention him at all; is he not confined in this prison?"

"Philip Cruize?" asked the bell ringer. "Him, I do not know. None by that name is here imprisoned. But I heard that one of the prisoners, on the way to this city, had succeeded in escaping. Perhaps this is the one."

"God grant it may be so!" said the ferryman, devoutly.

Lord Imbize now impatiently requested to be given the requisite directions to guide them to the cells of the prisoners.

"Listen carefully to what I am going to tell you," remarked the bell-ringer, "for you have but little time, and everything depends upon the right moment of action. Do you, Lord Imbize, place yourself under the second arch from the one beneath which we are standing. Stand with your back to me, and lean against the wall. Take six paces forward; there you will find an iron point. Press hard upon this with your right foot, while resting your left upon a similar projection two feet back. At the same time turn the floor beneath your feet, and having made one revolution, spring backward, and you will find yourself before an opening. This leads to a ladder which will take you down into a long hall. Your companions can now follow you. Proceed a hundred paces forward, and you will discover an iron-plated door. This key will open it, and it will afford you access to the cell which contains Herman Van der Woude and his fellow prisoners. Do not open this door, however, until you hear the prison keeper and his servant entering the cell, in order to conduct the inmates to the torture-room. Then act your part promptly, and compel them to unchain the prisoners. Having succeeded in this, you can easily reach Mr. Dathenus and set him free. Then return the same way you came. But as to the priest—"

At this instant the chant of the monks was plainly heard. The bell-ringer took the rope into his hand. The ferryman held his arm and asked:

"And what about the priest?"

"I do not think it will be possible to save him," was the reply. He is confined in the cell above the great prison-door, looking upon the square. And at the same time that the prison-keeper is sent to fetch the other prisoners, the assistant keeper and another servant are to conduct him to the torture. Now, be quick," urged the bell-ringer, who was also the door-keeper; "I at least do not wish to give occasion for suspicion, so I must ring the bell."

Vigorously pulling at the rope in his hand, the solemn tolling of the bell soon began to fill the air. Lord Imbize and his companions followed their instructions, and soon stood listening at the door indicated, ready to enter when the moment for action came.

Our readers will be curious to know how this bell-ringer came into such helpful relations with our friends.

Floris had taken care, soon after Adrian had received him and Sister Brigitta into the house, to destroy the box with the popish books and the sacred images. As Father Josephus had contemptuously flung aside his nondescript accoutrement and reassumed his monk's gown, Floris found once more the oft-mentioned brown patched cloak of his Uncle Philip's. Securing this he made a bundle of it, and prepared to set out for his parents' home. Sister Brigitta betook herself upon her journey to Mechlin, still firm in the confidence that she could benefit her master, but hardly dreaming that her loving design was to be fulfilled in the way it actually occurred.

After much arduous travelling by circuitous routes, through woods and across fields, studiously avoiding the regular roads, Floris reached the village of Berthem, a name which his family likewise bore. When he arrived under the parental roof, the house was filled with those who had come to attend the appointed conference, and who had succeeded in eluding the vigilance of the authorities. These men had bound themselves by solemn oaths and formed a league, the object of which was twofold: partly to overthrow the existing government and place themselves at the head of affairs; partly to exterminate, if possible, the Romish religion. These men are not to be confounded with the patriots, led by Prince William the Silent, who sought to restore the grossly violated rights of the people and to abolish the Inquisition, but had no desire to upset the government and persecute the Roman Catholics. Their aims and principles were much less noble, and their doings such that we may rightly designate them as conspirators; indeed they retarded rather than advanced the cause of liberty, as they brought that cause into much disrepute and alienated the patriotic Catholics, whose numbers were by no means small.

At the head of these conspirators was Lord Imbize. He was of an ancient noble family, was versed in several languages, and possessed of great eloquence. Of a reckless temperament, proud and cunning, he was successful in prejudicing the minds of a considerable portion of the people against William of Orange, Stadtholder of Holland and Zeeland. It was thought his design was to supplant him in his place as leader in the struggle for civil and religious liberty. This same Lord Imbize made himself notorious during the Image Breakings of the year 1566; and in 1577 he incited a serious riot in Ghent, during which much cruel persecution was directed against innocent Roman Catholics; and which was largely instrumental in destroying the "Pacification of Ghent," a compact entered into by the seventeen Provinces of the Netherlands in 1576, after much able argument and earnest persuasion by the Prince of Orange.

The information which Floris was enabled to furnish the conspirators was well calculated to arouse the violence of this young noble's temper to its highest pitch. Petrus Dathenus and his sentiments and methods were exactly to his liking, and a close intimacy had sprung up between the two. On hearing that he had been captured he drew a dagger, and flourishing this overhead, he swore that all those who had dared to apprehend and imprison Petrus Dathenus should pay for it dearly.*

"Now you see, my friends!" he said, addressing the assembly. "Now you see what a wretched government we have of it under the Ruward of Brabant, this William the Silent. Now you see, how we are left to be caught by wicked priests and the slaves of tyranny! Shall this be allowed to go on? Can you endure it?"

"No, no!" cried Herman Strycker, one of the earliest field-preachers, a man of much the same stamp as Petrus Dathenus. "Down with Granvelle! down with the prince! down with the priests!"

"Down with the churches, too!" added Imbize. "There's where they blaspheme God with their idolatrous mockeries! Demolish these structures, throw down the images, and I will furnish you such preachers as Petrus Dathenus!"

"Long live Imbize and Dathenus," cried the others. "Death to priests!"

Some time was now spent in consultation as to what could be done to deliver the prisoners. At last two plans were fixed upon. In the first place, twenty of the conspirators were to repair secretly to Mechlin. There they were to bribe the populace—which had already been roused by Imbize at former times,—to attack the soldiers on the day when their sentences were to be executed, and set the prisoners at liberty; they calculated, too, upon a goodly number of refugees from France, who could be easily induced by Imbize's gold to take a hand in this attempt. But at the same time, Imbize and Strycker, assisted by the ferryman, who had joined their numbers, should make an attempt by bribing officials or in some other way to get access to the prison, and deliver the prisoners in this way. But the great question was, how to gain access to the prison? Violence, it was too well known, could avail nothing here.

Floris here came to their aid. Sister Brigitta had often told him about her brother, who was bell-ringer of the cathedral and doorkeeper of the prison. If he could find her, it would need but little persuasion to induce her to attempt to secure her brother's aid in furthering the plans of the conspirators, as her whole heart was set upon delivering her master. Floris was to go to Mechlin, carefully disguised, lest some of the soldiers who had seen him at Boutersem might recognize him.

The conspirators remained in conference a few hours longer and then separated. High spirited and brave though he was, Floris was not favorably impressed with the sentiments that he had heard expressed. These men seemed to affect adherence to the sentiments of the Reformation, only to reach some other ultimate object. He greatly regretted that his father was so carried away with the eloquence of Imbize, and seemed wholly given to his way of thinking and his proposed methods of establishing the Reformed faith. He had left the house with the others. Floris, finding himself alone with his mother, was rejoiced to learn that she sympathized with his own feelings: "My child," said she, kissing him good-by, "I cannot think that anyone who has found the true peace of believing can entertain these violent sentiments."

The youth was on the point of leaving her, when the door was slowly pushed open and a cry of joyful astonishment fell from his lips. He sprang towards the man who entered the room, threw his arms about his neck, exclaiming: "Uncle Philip, is that you?" Philip Cruize had indeed escaped.

(To be continued.)

---

*Of Imbize Motley speaks as follows: "The roaring demagogue whose republicanism could never reconcile itself with what he esteemed the aristocratic policy of Orange, and whose stern Puritanism could be satisfied with nothing short of a general extermination of Catholics." That he was not actuated by the sincerest motives in the cause of religious reformation may be inferred from the fact that he eventually lent himself just as zealously to a plot "to effect a surrender of Flanders to Philip and the Inquisition."—(Dutch Republic III. p. 591.)—Translator.

What Can I Do for Christ More than I Am Doing?

BY REV. WILBUR F. CRAFTS.

1. CAN I not improve the observance of the Sabbath in my home and neighborhood by making the previous evening "the Preparation," as it was among God's Chosen People and among our Puritan and Scottish ancestors—retiring as early on Saturday night as on other nights, having first made all purchases for the Sabbath and all other possible arrangements, that no grocer, butcher, barber, newsboy or servant may have to do needless Sabbath work for me?

2. Can I not also help in securing a better Sabbath observance by making my pay-day Monday or Wednesday, and by this and abstinence from Saturday afternoon shopping help on the Saturday half-holiday and so Sabbath observance also?

3. Can I not rise earlier on Sabbath morning, and so regularly bring to church my whole family, except such as are less than three years of age, obeying God's command to gather together "men and women and the little ones and the stranger" in the public worship of God? (In the Welsh churches of Pennsylvania the deacons pass down the aisles at a certain time in each Sabbath-morning service and require each church member who has left any of his family at home to give the reason why. God does the same here, and He knows whether the reasons are good ones.)

4. Can I not come to church five minutes ahead of time to have a few moments of quiet meditation in the house of God before the service begins, as a better beginning of the Sabbath than filling the mind with news of crime and thoughts of business from a Sunday paper?

5. Can I not help to make strangers feel more welcome and so more inclined to become regular attendants by regularly informing the ushers of vacancies they can use in my pew, or by inviting strangers found at the door on entering to accompany me to my pew; and by speaking to strangers in my own or adjoining pews at the close of the service and inviting them to come again?

6. Can I not help to make the Sabbath services more powerful in bringing souls to Christ and building up souls in Christ by joining in my very heart in the prayers and songs, and in the latter with my voice also, most spiritedly as well as spiritually, and, during the sermon, by fixing my eyes in helpful attention upon the preacher, praying always that I and others may make self-application of the truths uttered, and, after the sermon and on the way home and at the dinner-table, emphasizing what commended itself to me and forgetting rather than criticizing what did not?

7. Can I not by prayer get courage enough to say to those who would keep me from Sabbath-evening worship or from prayer meeting by thoughtless social visits at the well-known hours of these religious services, as if assuming that I was only a Sabbath-morning Christian; can I not get courage to say, as I should if a business appointment were involved, that I have an "engagement" and must be excused, and so show to others that my engagements with God are as sacred as any others?

8. Can I not by prayer get the victory over the timidity that keeps me from using my voice for Christ at prayer meeting and elsewhere?

9. (A question for the men as well as for the women of the Church.) Can I not devote one evening a week, or one afternoon, to Christian work in calling upon strangers who have recently come into our congregation, or upon the poor or the sick, giving the pastor my name for that purpose?

10. Can I not scatter seeds of kindness and sow beside all waters more abundantly than I have done by keeping always at hand a package of leaflets for letters—poems of comfort, words of invitation, (such as are provided by the American Tract Society, near the Tribune Building, at a trifling cost)?

11. Can I not make my giving more Scriptural and less spasmodic by thoughtfully deciding on some definite part of my weekly or monthly income that I will put to the Lord's account to be drawn on from time to time for such benevolent offerings as commend themselves to me as the best investments in doing good?

12. Can I not make sure that none of my charitable gifts are really used to encourage vice by giving to no applicant whose claims I have not personally investigated or had investigated by the Charity Organization Society, of 21 University Place, (who will do it without charge on receipt of postal with name and address of applicant and informant), or by some other kindred organization?

13. Can I not do better with cast-off clothing than to sell it for a tenth of its real value, by sending it to the sexton for the deacons to use for our own or other deserving poor?

14. Can I not do something to stay the curse of intemperance by my own example, by reading up the subject that I may have facts with which to persuade others to abstinence; by hanging a "Family Pledge" on the wall of my home, with a "Visitor's Pledge" beside it; by refusing to patronize grocers who deal in this damnation; and especially by teaching the young to stop before they begin?

15. Can I not apply my Christianity more consistently in the daily duties of life by keeping my business engagements to the minute; by serving employers, employés, or customers, with conscientious fidelity; by selling no harmful article, no counterfeit goods; by renting property only with guarantees to prevent its use to promote intemperance or vice or Sabbath breaking; by avoiding that meanest though safest form of stealing—contracting debts without the probability of paying?

16. Can I not make mine a true Christian home by giving fifteen minutes after supper every evening to Bible reading, sacred music and prayer, with one longer service per week for a home study of the lesson, and a little home prayer-meeting on the Sabbath; and especially seeking to make mine a Christian home by mutual courtesies, seeking to be agreeable at home as much as when among strangers?

17. Can I not lighten and brighten the heavy work which the Sabbath school teachers are doing for my children by regularly preparing them on the lessons at home, and reminding them to practice what they have learned, and also by showing my gratitude to my teacher helpers by calls and letters?

18. Can I not more faithfully carry out the vows which I made at the baptism of my children to train them to be Christians, by sending them to the boys' and girls' prayer meeting, and especially by reading daily with them, with explanations, the "Bible Readings for Every Day in the Year," given in the Little Folks' Paper, or some other set of daily Bible readings?

19. Can I not head off in my family the temptation to read corrupting story papers and the criminal item of the daily papers by taking some religious paper and the Youth's Companion as helpers in training my household to walk in right ways?

20. Can I not make my papers, after I have read them, go about doing good by regularly loaning them to some other family, who are in turn to read them promptly and pass them on to others, or by putting them in the box for hospitals in our lecture room vestibule?

21. Have I not pure and popular books that, having been read, are of no further value to me,—not being books of reference,—that I can send about doing good by giving them to the Sabbath-school library, or to the Reading Circle library?

22. Can I not make doing and speaking for Christ easier by giving larger attention in thought and prayer to being what God would have me?

"Prohibition Again."

MR. EDITOR: From your editorial under the above caption in THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER of January 27th, I quote the following sentence: "When, then, prohibition is organized as a party and defeats the candidates of one of the chief parties of the country, the contest becomes one we cannot enter."

The context plainly shows that you referred to prohibition as a political party; and it requires but little imagination to suppose that your remark referred to the exhibition that prohibition made of itself in our last National and State political contests.

I fully agree with you in every part of your article, and for the sake of the cause of temperance I regret that any real friends of the cause could have been so far beguiled as to join in such a lamentable display of ignorance and credulity. Of ignorance, in not knowing beforehand the utter futility of their political efforts, under the many widespread and far-reaching interests involved in those elections; and the disastrous effect their action must, of necessity, in the very nature of things, have upon the cause of temperance. And again, of credulity, in believing, or even harboring the thought, that in such a nation or State as ours (where so many different and momentous subjects, embracing all interests, domestic and foreign, must combine to form a good, wise and stable government), any political party of one idea only could possibly be successful, and, in a one-horse chaise, ride into supreme power.

The Bible tells us that "the children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of light," and if any proof of its truth were needed, the political "Prohibition party" of this State, with its one idea of temperance alone, in our last elections furnished abundant evidence. No doubt many, and probably the great majority of that party, were professing Christians. But, no doubt, as in every political party, some were scheming politicians, adroit wire-pullers, pretending to aid the cause of temperance, while, in fact, working in the interest of the liquor dealers, or to help the party that proved successful. Theirs was the wisdom of "the children of this world," and seemingly absorbed all that was exhibited in that organization, and not leaving enough to "the children of light" even to form a comparison. The liquor dealers cannot well dispense with just such a party of one idea in any close contest.

I venture to affirm that this party has set back the cause of temperance for at least twenty years, and has alienated from its support more than twenty times the whole number of these ultra and impracticable friends.

And what warrant have they for taking the field as a purely political party, and bringing their politics into the pulpit and into the prayer meeting, and seeking thus to advance their party interests? Let them disband as a political party in contest with the great political parties of the State and nation; and then the cause of temperance may be advocated and preached and prayed for, not to make political proselytes, but as one of the great moral obligations under the Divine law, of which St. Paul, before Felix, so earnestly reasoned in connection with "righteousness and the judgment to come."

Throughout our State and nation Christians of all denominations are arousing to the great and fearful increase of the desecration of the Lord's day, and are making efforts to secure its better observance. Suppose some over zealous people should organize themselves into a political party with that one sole object, and call themselves the "Sabbath Observance" party, and enter the field of politics and run their candidates upon that one narrow plank as its platform, could anyone, guided by ordinary common sense, be so very credulous as to believe that they could by such a course aid their cause or even gain political power? Certainly not. It would be the utmost absurdity to suppose that any great numbers, even of Christians, would abandon all the other great questions of government and public trusts (upon most of which the two chief political parties are divided) and join in a political crusade which they know would be as disastrous as an attempt to join Church and State.

And it was precisely so in regard to the fiasco of the "Prohibition party" in 1884 and 1885. In 1884 the total vote for Presiden in this State was 1,171,263, of which the prohibition candidate received 24,999; while the successful candidate, who had repeatedly pledged himself in writing against all sumptuary laws, was elected by a majority of 1 047. In 1885 the total vote for Governor was a little over 1 000,000, of which the prohibition candidate received only 3 per cent. And in this great city of over 1,250,000 inhabitants, he received 1 215 votes, or less than one vote to 1,000 inhabitants.

Could any body of men, with revengeful politicians for assistants, and wire-pullers, and secret agents of liquor dealers, have brought the cause of temperance into greater disrepute than the prohibition party did in those elections? It is next to impossible.

I am well convinced that the most effective way, for the present at least, and probably for years to come, to lessen the great flood of intemperance, is to adopt the "high license" system, and by moral and religious suasion and not by any separate political organization, to educate the people and State legislators up to a higher and still higher license system, until local option laws can be enacted, and the fountain streams in towns and counties be gradually dried up. And let the selling of liquor without a license be made a misdemeanor and punished as such; and let all officers who are to grant licenses and enforce the law be held rigidly to the performance of their duties, under heavy penalties for wilful or negligent nonfeasance or misfeasance in office. Selling liquor would thus be made expensive and restringent, and would in part support the pauperism it creates.

Let the adulteration of any kind of liquor, or selling the same, be visited by the law with severe punishment. Thus its worst features would be prohibited; thousands of the lowest and most dangerous groggeries would be closed; they could not live under high license and such stringent laws; the same area could not sustain near as many saloons; and those who pay their license and keep within the law would naturally become informers against those who, like smugglers, interfere with and under-sell them. Such a course must of necessity more and more restrict the great liquor traffic; and would be in accord with that of a wise general who, instead of having his soldiers waste their time and energies in shooting arrows at a strong fortress, would gradually make his approaches and undermine the walls, and finally take the citadel.

In the heat of the presidential contest in 1884 an excellent and highly esteemed Rev. D D., in encouraging a good elder to vote for the prohibition candidate, said to him in my presence, "Vote as you pray." And this seemed to be the shibboleth of the Prohibition party. But, if probibition is all they pray for, among all the vast interests of the Church and of the community, and of the government, they are sowing only about one kernel of wheat to the acre, and letting all the rest run to waste. And this is the wisdom of the Prohibition party.

H. P. ALLEN.

The Reading Room.

Our Book-Shelves.

....“THE LIFE AND GENIUS OF GOETHE” is a compilation of a portion of the papers read at the Concord School of Philosophy last summer, embracing such topics as Goethe's youth, self-culture, “Titanism,” relation to English literature, to women, and to Schiller, and his characteristics as a playwright; also, special critiques upon his “Faust,” “Märchen,” “Elective affinities,” portrayals of child-life and of women. There is added a valuable account of the newly-discovered Goethe manuscripts, and “Reading Notes” of works by and concerning Goethe. They are all readable, and of more or less literary merit. The peculiar accent of New England “culture,” as distinct as the nasal twang of the uncultured Yankee, is upon most of them,—the joint offspring of Emersonian Transcendentalism and Channing's “Liberalism.” The result is a frequent impression as of summer haze and languor,—we might say, of midsummer madness, for several of the papers are the production of cranks, notably those of Mrs. Cheney, Mrs. Howe, Dr. Bartol, and Thomas Davidson (“Titanism”). We are constrained to say, that we prefer the straightforward style in which the men condemn Goethe's selfish and sensual views of woman to the sentimental and apologetic way in which the women of this volume treat them. Prof. W. T. Harris's paper on Faust strikes us as the ablest, as well as one of the healthiest, of the series. He concludes with these suggestive and timely words: “It is, if I am not mistaken, the most interesting event in literary history, that Goethe should conduct his hero from pantheistic agnosticism to Christian theism.” (Ticknor & Co.)

....“TIRESIAS AND OTHER POEMS,” by Alfred, Lord Tennyson, is No. 46 of “Harper's Handy Series.” Besides Tiresias, an elaborate composition, the volume contains The Wreck, Despair, The Ancient Sage, The Flight, To-morrow, The Spinster's Sweet-Arts, Balin and Balan, and other pieces. Whatever may be the conclusion upon the whole collection, no one will question that the volume contains many passages equal to any Lord Tennyson has published in the past, and this is equivalent to saying that the book contains verses not surpassed by any living poet.

The Series also includes a sensible medical treatise by Titus Munson Coan, M.D., entitled “Ounces of Prevention;” and Mr. Bancroft's “Plea for the Constitution of the U. S. of America,” questioning on historic grounds the decision of the Supreme Court in relation to legal tender notes; also “What Does History Teach,” being two lectures delivered at Edinburgh by Dr. John Stuart Blackie, in regard to “The State” and “The Church.”

The cream of English novels find a place constantly in these handy volumes. The list is too long for repetition here. It should be looked over by those desiring such intellectual pastime, and wishing it in a convenient portable form.

....“OLD WELLS DUG OUT.” Being a Third Series of Sermons by T. De Witt Talmage. Vol. III. Anyone familiar with Dr. Talmage's incisive and inimitable way of putting things would recognize these sermons as his before he had read through the introduction of any one of them. He would have no need to turn to the title-page to confirm his opinion of their authorship, so conspicuously stamped upon them is the impress of his striking peculiarities which distinguish him from other preachers. Few published sermons, if any, are more eagerly and generally read than those preached by this singularly gifted man in the Brooklyn Tabernacle. (Funk & Wagnalls.)

....“CARMINA SANCTORUM.” By R. D. Hitchcock, Z. Eddy and L. W. Mudge. Two of these editors were employed on the “Hymns and Songs of Praise,” issued a dozen years ago. That was a collection and a very good one; this is a selection and also very good. It is a square volume of 750 pages, containing as many hymns with music, and also chants and suitable indexes. It is a convenient book to handle. The music is suited to the ordinary run of choirs and voices, and yet contains none of the jingling ditties which are or have been so popular but have no staying power. The words represent the present state of English hymnody, and in general are faithful to the sub-title, though not always. The [illegible] (by Mrs. H[illegible]) is a song of praise, but [illegible] not to God but to the pilgrim fathers. [illegible] such sacrilege! The hymns avoid always the low and prosaic but not always poems which lack the lyric element and are not singable. Still, this book is on the whole the best one out.

....Mrs. Nathaniel Conklin (Jennie M. Drinkwater) is an author who has become known and endeared to a multitude of young folks by the sprightly humor and plain good sense of her stories. In “UNCLE SETH'S WILL” she has quite excelled herself, especially in her description of scenes and portraiture of characters. Uncle Seth—quite an original in his way—is independent, rigidly conscientious, firm in his convictions, yet withal genial, kind, and a favorite with his youthful kindred, to whom he has money, and something better, to bequeath. The making of his will and his weighing of characters supply the material of the story. (Pres. Board of Publication.)

....“WHAT DOES HISTORY TEACH?” By John Stuart Blackie. This little volume consists of two lectures delivered before the Philosophical Institution of Edinburgh. Whatever Professor Blackie writes is sure to be sprightly, thoughtful and suggestive, and this book is no exception. One lecture treats of the The State, and does it with great vigor and freshness; the other handles The Church with equal freedom and force but not always justly. The Professor traces persecuting intolerance to dogma, whereas it certainly owes its origin to the union of religion and State, and in accounting for the Reformation omits to mention the chief cause of its permanent success, viz., the manifest influence of the Holy Spirit in renewing men's hearts and lives. Still the book is well worth reading. (Scribners.)

....“MADAM DE MAINTENON.” J. Cotter Morrison has written, and Scribner & Welford have published a small parchment-covered book, a short “Etuda” on Madam de Maintenon. In this neatly written sketch, the author avoids the two extremes of overpraise and acidious criticism. The impartial author says that Madam de Maintenon “derives her peculiar attraction and piquancy precisely from the constant interaction of contending motives of worldly wisdom and spiritual aspiration, between her struggles to secure a high place at court, and a safe final retreat to the kingdom of heaven. She pursued both ends with an energy which never relented, and showed a tenacity which cannot be surpassed in her resolution to make the best of both worlds.”

Notwithstanding the author's apparent contempt for the double motive of this remarkable woman, the general impression on the mind of the reader will be that she was a person who honestly endeavored, and with success, to introduce practical reforms in the licentious court of the king, and the popular verdict will be in her favor.

....“CHILDE HAROLD'S PILGRIMAGE.” By Lord Byron. This is the second weekly number of “Cassell's National Library,” edited by Prof. Henry Morley. Byron's noble poem is one never to be put aside, and in the wondrously cheap form in which it is here published many may be lead to read it who never otherwise would have known its beauty. (Cassell & Co.)

....“ARMSTRONG'S PRIMER OF ENGLISH HISTORY” is very well made. It is accurate and yet readable; has maps and diagrams of royal descents. We cordially recommend it for every purpose for which a primer is used. (A. C. Armstrong & Son.)

....“OUR LITTLE ANN” is a sparkling book of 276 pages, neatly printed and beautifully bound, written by the author of “Tip Cat,” “Miss Toosey's Mission,” and “Laddie,” and published by Roberts Brothers, Boston. Price $1. This charming little story deserves to rank with the best efforts of this graceful writer of touching and radiant fiction. It is sweet as the tones of a lute without a rift to break its music into discord.

....The readers of the INTELLIGENCER need no introduction to the name of Lucy Randolph Fleming, whose story, “ALICE WITHROW; or, The Summer at Home,” has just been issued by the publishing house of Thomas Y. Crowell & Co. The book tells of a family of boys and girls who were prevented from making their usual summer stay in the country, but who found congenial occupation and learned profitable lessons in their city home. It is an excellent book for parents to put into the hands of their children; is skilfully written and well illustrated.

Our Library Table.

Periodicals, Serials and Notes.

...The frontispiece of the Magazine of Art is an engraving of Miss Farren, from a painting by Lawrence—a very graceful picture of a moderately handsome lady. Mr. Wm. Davies in The Tiber Ostia to Bagnorea, describes a part of the classic river little known, and six illustrations aid the reader in imagining the scene. A paper on the last exhibition of the British Institute has two excellent engravings; one, The Grandfather, from a picture of F. D. Millet, fills a page very agreeably. Chests and Cabinets, by J. H. Pollen, illustrated, will be profitable to those interested in decoration. Mr. William Allington contributes a descriptive poem of a Black Night and W. J. Hennesey almost surrounds it with appropriate drawings. The Society of British Artists is critically considered, and is illustrated with engravings of notable pictures. Mr. Wm. Holmden tells the characteristics of Art in Persia in the time of Darius and Xerxes, and they are also presented in pictures. A full page engraving of E. Munier's picture, At the Spring, is charming. The record of foreign and American art is just, genial and sufficient

....The Atlantic for March opens with an excellent “short story” of the sixteenth century, told in the style of that age. One feature of the number is the fact that three memorial articles are found in it, criticizing lives lately ended on earth. H. E. Scudder writes of Elijah Mulford, and Thomas W. Higginson of General Grant, while the editor gives the good work done by Richard Grant White in the “Shakespearean Scholar.” John Fiske continues his historical studies by tracing the course of the country after the Revolution, and Dr. Holmes gives two of his more recent poems. The serial stories, by Henry James and Miss Murfrees, grow in interest. Two or three papers combining criticism with historical research, with a Contributors' Club of average merit, fill the other pages of the magazine.

...Wide Awake sustains its reputation for rich and varied attractiveness. The March number contains sketches of Harriet Beecher Stowe, of the Empress Eugenie and of the Empress of Austria; short stories by Sophie May, Mary E. Wilkins, Lieut. Schwatka and E. S. Brooks, and other good things too numerous to mention.

...Vick's Illustrated Magazine for February abounds in plain and seasonable advice on a variety of topics relating to the care of the garden and conservatory. The numbers of this magazine furnish a treasury of information on all matters pertaining to the culture of fruits, vegetables and flowers not easily found in so convenient form anywhere else.

....Mededeelingen van wege het Nederland. Zendel. The last issue contains a collection of Javanese riddles and an account of Night-fishing at Noesa-laoet, together with journals of mission work on the Island of Savoe and at Minnehassa. The other articles are upon the Bantiks, a tribe which, notwithstanding its nearness to the centre of mission work, still remains heathen, and the record of a letter of thanks signed by 108 Brahmins and presented to the Basle Missionary Society at its jubilee in 1884, acknowledging the benefits conferred upon their country by the schools and the literature of the society, but saying not a word about religion. The reply of the Society is graceful but distinctly declares that its chief object is the proclaiming of the Gospel, and kindly asks these gentlemen, since they are so pleased with some of the incidental results of Christian truth, to come to the source of them all, the person and work of the Lord Jesus, and obtain the full enjoyment of salvation.

....Mitteilungen der Geographischen Gesellschaft zu Jena. Heft 3 of the 4th volume contains narratives of two interesting missionary journeys, one in Northern Siam, the other in the African region north of Ashantee and east of the Volta. The latter gives additional evidence of the extent to which the propagation of Mohammedanism has gone in equatorial Africa, reaching almost to the west coast. Another paper treats of the languages of Africa, giving a very good view of their character and mutual relations and resemblances.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

A. D. F. Randolph & Co.: Christ as a Teacher. Two Lectures before N. Y. S. S. Teachers' Association. By Marvin R. Vincent, D.D. 12mo, pp. 58. 35 cents.

Cassell & Co.: Adam Hepburn's Vow: A Tale of Kirk and Covenant. By Annie S. Swan. 12mo, pp. 244. $1.

Baker & Taylor: A History of the United States in Chronological Order. From the Discovery of America in 1492 to the Year 1885. By Emery E. Childs. 12mo, pp. 254. $1.

John B. Alden: Historical Essays. By James Anthony Froude. Being Selections from “Short Studies on Great Subjects.” 12mo, pp. 368. 50 cents.

A. C. Armstrong & Son: Mrs. Leicester's School and Other Writings in Prose and Verse. By Charles Lamb. With Introduction and Notes by Alfred Ainger. 12mo, pp. 411. $1.50.

UNBOUND BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

The Man of Feeling. By Henry Mackenzie. (Cassell's National Library.) 32mo, pp. 191.

Religion in a College: What Place it Should Have. Being an Examination of President Eliot's Paper read before the Nineteenth Century Club in New York, Feb. 3d, 1886. By James McCosh, D.D., LL.D., D.LIT

The Last of the Macallisters. A Novel. By Mrs. Amelia E. Barr. (Harper's Handy Series, No. 58.) 16mo, pp. 173. 25 cents.

Aunt Parker. A Novel. By B. L. Fargion. (Harper's Franklin Square Library, No. 513.) 4to, pp. 74. 20 cents.

Immigration. Report of the Standing Committee on Immigration, Prepared and Read before the National Conference of Charities and Correction at Washington, D.C., June 9th, 1885, by Dr. Charles S. Hoyt.

A Talk on a Sunday Train. By Rev. R. S. McAllister, Centreville, Miss.

PERIODICALS.

March.—The New York Fashion Bazar, The Domestic Monthly, American Agriculturist, St. Nicholas, The New Princeton Review, The Forum, The Century, Lippincott's Monthly Magazine, The Art Journal.

Notices and Acknowledgments

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY.—Evangelical but not denominational. Prints in 147 languages in aid of foreign missions; grants religious reading to the needy; sends colporters to millions in our highways and hedges, and to the immigrants in Castle Garden and elsewhere. This work depends wholly on charitable gifts. Donations and legacies are earnestly solicited. A summary of the sixtieth year mailed free. O. R. Kingsbury, Treasurer, 150 Nassau street, New York.

THIRTY-FOURTH STREET CHURCH, N. Y.—The twenty-fifth anniversary of the dedication of this church will be observed on next Sunday morning, afternoon and evening, and Monday evening. At the Sunday morning service (10.30) the pastor, Rev. James M. Dickson, D.D., will preach the sermon. At 2.30 P.M. there will be a reunion of present and former officers, teachers and scholars of the Sabbath-school. At the evening service the Rev. F. M. Zabriskie, D.D., will preach on the subject, "A Backward Glance over the Quarter-Century." On Monday evening there will be a general reunion service, when addresses will be made by Rev. Carlos Martyn and other invited guests. All former members and friends of the church are cordially invited to be present.

CORRESPONDENTS will please address Rev. William D. Perry at No. 95 Adelphi street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Remarkable Recuperation.

D. M. FERRY & Co., the well-known seedmen, of Detroit, Mich., announce that they are on their feet again and ready and anxious to receive orders for seeds from every one of their old customers, and from as many new ones as feel kindly disposed toward them. They are in condition to fill promptly every order with new seeds of the best quality.

On January 1st their immense warehouse was destroyed by fire. It was filled with probably the largest stock of assorted seeds ever gathered under one roof. Their books and papers were all saved, and every person who had ordered seeds of them will be supplied with his usual stock. They had large quantities of seeds in their warehouses on their seed farms, in the hands of their growers and not yet delivered, and on the way from Europe, which, together with their fully stocked branch seed store in Windsor, Ontario, close at hand, and the free and vigorous use of the telegraph and cable, enabled them to secure a new stock in a remarkably short time.

Before the fire was subdued they had secured new quarters and were devoting all their energies to their customers' interests. In thirty days from the fire they were in perfect working order again.

When we consider the magnitude of their business, the appalling destruction of property at the most unfortunate season of the year, we doubt if the annals of history furnish a case of such rapid recuperation. Such energy deserves success.

BEAUTIFUL ROSES FOR ALL.—We have received the New Guide to Rose Culture, published by the Dingee & Conard Co., Rose-Growers, West Grove, Pa., (see advertisement) and take pleasure in recommending it as one of the handsomest and best catalogues of the season. This company makes a specialty of growing and distributing roses, and offers nearly 500 varieties, including all the latest novelties and finest standard sorts. They also offer choice hardy shrubbery, climbing vines, fine seeds, &c. They send by mail or express, as desired, and are well known as amongst the most reliable and trustworthy establishments in this country, and all purchases made from them are sure to be satisfactory.

We respectfully call the attention of every subscriber to the seed advertisement of James J. H. Gregory, Marblehead, Mass. His large and complete catalogue is sent free.

Market Report.

Review of the New York Market for Butter, Cheese, etc. Reported by DAVID W. LEWIS & Co., Produce Commission Merchants, 49 Pearl St., New York.

Commission on Butter, Eggs, Poultry, etc., is five per cent; Flour, Grain, etc., 2½ per cent. Marking-plates furnished when desired.

NEW YORK, February 27, 1886.

BUTTER.—Receipts for the week, 15,569 pks.; exports 1,996 pks.

During the past week the writer visited Eastern markets. There are no large stocks of butter down east. In Providence they have two Butterine manufactories, and a large amount of substitutes are made and vended. One house there was reshipping to New York over a hundred packages of N. Y. state dairy butter, and were reluctantly distributing a car-load of Chicago-made Butterine in its place. In Boston the marketing of the town is together, the whole business is focalized. Faneuil Hall Market is the Hub (within the Hub). Over it is the Merchants' Exchange. Around it are grouped the wholesale houses. Contiguous to it are storage refrigerators and the railroads and shipping facilities from tracks to storehouses, and steamers are handy. There is system in the market layout of the town, and her merchants in dairy produce are running creameries in Vermont, in N. Y. State and largely in Iowa. The stock of butter in Boston is small, but as elsewhere is being supplemented by cheaper substitutes. The New York market this week is easier. Current arrivals were no more than taken. There is a hankering after new spring make, and old butter begins to get the go-by. A strictly fine new butter is wanted at 30a32c. Common new, like poor old butter, is unsaleable. We quote:

Solid silky grain-fed fresh Elgin creamery.—	@35
Fancy fresh grain-fed Eastern creamery...33	@35
Heavy bodied, grainy, high-flavored dairy, fresh. ..28	@30
A strictly fancy Delaware dairy, entire....25	@26
Fair to good dairies.....16	@22
Fine summer firkins 20	@24
Fresh Western imitation creamery... 23	@27
Western store-packed butter..... 7	@10
Winter make, common roll butter..... 9	@13
Grease..... 4	@ 5

CHEESE.—Receipts for the week, 11,539 boxes; exports 11,000 boxes.

The market is—is—is—well a prominent factoryman was here all the week and went home last night without making a sale. Three hundred boxes of full cream Jefferson County Septembers were offered in Boston at 9½c. there. Several hundred boxes of night skims sold here at 7c. We quote:

	FANCY.	FINE.	FAULTY.
Factory, full cream.	9¾@10	9½@ 9¾	6 @ 8
Night's milk.
" skimmed.	7 @ 8	4 @ 5	2 @ 3

EGGS.—Receipts for the week, 7,848 bbls. We quote:

Near-by fresh laid, per doz..... 22	@23
Southern and Western, per doz. 21	@22

"One of the best novels ever issued from the press of this country."—ALBANY JOURNAL.

THE HOUSE AT CRAGUE.

BY MARY B. SLEIGHT. 12mo, $1.25.

"An unusually well written story."—Journal and Messenger.

"The incidents are well described and the plot is developed with skill and power. An admirable story admirably told."—Interior.

"The delineations of character are forcible, consistent throughout, and indicate rare powers of conception."—Presbyterian Banner.

For sale by all booksellers, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price.

T. Y. CROWELL & CO.,
13 Astor Place, New York.

STANDARD MUSIC BOOKS.

For Quartet Choirs.

DOW'S RESPONSES AND SENTENCES. 80 cts.
STRACHAUER'S CHURCH MUSIC. $1.00.
SHEPARD CHURCH COLLECTION. $1.00.
BAUMBACH'S SACRED QUARTETS. $2.00.
BAUMBACH'S NEW COLLECTION. $2.00.
BUCK'S MOTET COLLECTION. $2.00.
BUCK'S 2D MOTET COLLECTION. $2.00.
EMERSON'S SACRED QUARTETS. $2.00.

These are all collections of the best and most refined Sacred Music.

For Choruses.

EMERSON'S CONCERT SELECTIONS. In 6 numbers, each 25 cts. Complete $1.00.
Admirable Selections, Sacred and Secular. Ditson & Co. also call attention to the exceedingly rich treasury of the best sacred music contained in the more than 100 Masses (by Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, and other masters) which they publish. No Choral Society or Choir should be without them. Latin and English words. Send for lists, Average price 75 cts.

For the Home.

CHOICE VOCAL DUETS. $1.00.
HALFDAN KJERULF'S ALBUM OF SONGS. $1.50. Very superior collections.
LEAVES OF SHAMROCK. $1.00. 100 Irish Melodies, arranged for piano.

For Music Students.

RITTER'S STUDENTS' HISTORY OF MUSIC. $2.50. The most condensed and practical history extant.

Any book mailed for retail price.

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston.
Chas. H. Ditson & Co., 867 Broadway, N. Y.

"A Capital Book for Social Meetings and Sunday Schools."

SELECT SONGS.

Compiled by F. N. PELOUBET, D.D.

344 Hymns and Tunes, admirably chosen for use where only one book is desired for the Devotional Meetings and the Sunday School. All who have used Select Songs speak of it in the highest terms.

Firmly bound in Cloth, $40 per 100 Copies.

Ready March 10.

An edition of words only, $10 per 100 Copies.

BIGLOW & MAIN, 76 East Ninth St., N. Y.
81 Randolph St., Chicago.

EASTER MUSIC

THE RISEN CHRIST.

AN EASTER EXERCISE,
By J. E. HALL.

This consists of a beautiful and instructive Responsive Service, throughout which is interspersed new and appropriate music, the whole forming a complete Easter Exercise for Sunday Schools.

16 pp. Price 5 cents each, or 50 cents a dozen by mail, postpaid; $4.00 a hundred by express, not prepaid.

1886. EASTER CHIMES. 1886.

WITH SERVICE, (Ad Lib.)

A collection of new, bright and pretty carols by the very best writers of words and music, to which is prefixed an exceedingly interesting Responsive Service, prepared by Nettie A. Wellman. The arrangement is such that the Service and Carols may be used separately or combined, as the music is printed after the Service, instead of being interspersed through it. Price, the same as "The Risen Christ."

Send for our complete lists of Easter Music, Free.

PUBLISHED BY
THE JOHN CHURCH CO., Cincinnati, O.
J. CHURCH & CO., 55 E. 13th St., New York City.

ORGANS The most beautiful and finest toned in the world. Low prices, easy payment. Send for Catalogue. Address
Weaver Organ & Piano Co., YORK, PA.

RECENT ISSUES

BY THE

Presbyterian Board of Publication.

The Professors' Girls.

ANNETTE L. NOBLE.

16mo. Price, $1.25

Flower Talks at Elmridge.

MRS. E. R. CHURCH.

16mo. Price, $1.15

Uncle Seth's Will.

MRS. J. M. D. CONKLIN.

12mo. Price, $1.25

Roland's Daughter.

MRS. JULIA MCNAIR WRIGHT.

12mo. Price, $1.25

Immortality Not Conditional.

REV. A. A. HODGE, D.D.

16mo. Tract. 20 pages

Certificate for Reciting the Shorter Catechism.

Tinted Paper, fancy type. 10 cents

Blank Reports for Church Narratives.

Ordered by the General Assembly of 1885.
Price, per hundred, $2.60.

Address orders to
Messrs. WARD & DRUMMOND,
116 NASSAU ST., NEW YORK, N. Y.

FOR ONE MONTH.

GREAT BARGAINS IN THEOLOGICAL, SUNDAY-SCHOOL AND MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS. FAMILY AND TEACHERS' BIBLES A SPECIALTY.

Come and see at
N. TIBBALS & SONS,
124 Nassau St, New York City.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD
GOLD MEDAL PARIS EXPOSITION—1878.

POPULAR LECTURES.

SUBJECTS

1.—The Romance of the Revolution.
2.—An Evening with Longfellow
3.—The Tudors
4.—Monologue—National Poems and Events

Address MRS. E. T. BARRETT,
SING SING, N. Y

GEO. MATHER'S SONS, PRINTING INK

Manufacturers. Superior Black and Colored Ink Lithographic and Plate Ink. Varnishes, etc. 60 John street, New York.
The Intelligencer is printed with our ink.

OUR New Catalogue of Books for family, Sunday-school, ministers, students, or teachers' Library will be sent free to any address on receipt of a postal request. Address PHILLIPS & HUNT, Publishers, 805 Broadway, New York

A. S. BARNES & CO., Publishers of the authorized Hymn and Tune Book for the Reformed Church in America. Write for introductory terms 111 and 113 WILLIAM STREET, NEW YORK.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.
25 CTS. 25 CTS.

CONSUMPTION

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., N.Y.

DEAFNESS its CAUSES and CURE, by one who was deaf twenty-eight years. Treated by most of the noted specialists of the day with no benefit. Cured himself in three months, and since then hundreds of others by same process. A plain, simple and successful home treatment. Address T. S. PAGE, 128 East 26th St., New York City.

EDUCATIONAL.

UNIVERSITY of the City of New York.

JOHN HALL, D.D., LL.D., Chancellor.

1. DEPARTMENT OF ARTS, Tuition Free.
2. DEPARTMENT OF SCIENCE, Tuition Free.
3. SCHOOL OF CIVIL ENGINEERING, Tuition $100
4. DEPARTMENT OF LAW.
5. DEPARTMENT OF MEDICINE.

 Catalogues, with full particulars of all Courses, may be had upon application to the Registrar.

BEST TEACHERS AMERICAN and FOREIGN, promptly provided for Families, Schools, Colleges Skilled Teachers supplied with Positions. Circulars of Good Schools free to Parents. School Property rented and sold. School and Kindergarten Material, etc.
J. W. SCHERMERHORN & CO.,
AMERICAN SCHOOL INSTITUTE, 7 East 14th St., N. Y

EUROPE Travel in Select Party. "THE BEST." Seventh Year. Unique Advantages. Send 10 cents for "The Old World and European Guide." 100 pages, illustrated. A. de Potter, Albany, N. Y.

CARDS 60 Fancy Pictures, and 25 elegant Cards in Gilt Edge, Silk Fringe, Hidden Name, &c., 1 Songster, 1 $50 Prize Puzzle, and 8 parlor games, all for 10cts. Game of Authors, 10cts.
IVORY CO., Clintonville, Conn.

CURE FOR THE DEAF

Peck's Patent Improved Cushioned Ear Drums
PERFECTLY RESTORE THE HEARING, and perform the work of the Natural Drum. Always in position, but invisible to others and comfortable to wear. All Conversation and even whispers heard distinctly. We refer to those using them. Send for illustrated book with testimonials, free. Address, F. HISCOX, 853 Broadway, N. Y. Mention this paper.

MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD.

The question often asked, How does MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD compare with other foods and tonics? We refer to Dr. S. W. Abbott's report for 1886. He is the State Inspector of Foods for Massachusetts.

	Albumen.	Alcoholic matter.	Organic matter.	Ash.
Murdock's Liquid Food....	14.10	1 97	16.45	0.42
Liebig's.....	Not any	54.87	5?.16	23.74
Valentine's	do.	28 67	22.62	11.09
Johnston's.....	do.	20.13	47.16	3.30
Delacre's	do.	56.13	60.5	19.24

MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD contains 14.10 per cent of albumen; all other foods do not contain any Common food does not contain over one per cent. that is available.

It contains less organic matter than common food and common food contains 16.85; the other preparations from 22.62 to 60.50 per cent

It contains 0.42 of Ash, which is indigestible matter. The others contain from 3 30 to 23.74 per cent.

In alcoholic extracts 1.97. The other preparations are all TONICS, and they contain from 20.13 to 56.13 per cent.

These facts show why MURDOCK'S LIQUID FOOD excels all other foods and preparations in making new blood, and cleansing the system of disease.

Murdock's Liquid Food Co., Boston.

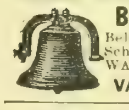
MEMORIAL TABLETS.

MEMORIAL WINDOWS, CHURCH FURNITURE, INTERIOR DECORATIONS.

J. & R. LAMB, 59 CARMINE ST., NEW YORK.

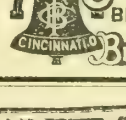
BELLS.

McShane Bell Foundry
Finest Grade of Bells,
CHIMES AND PEALS for CHURCHES, &c. Send for Price and Catalogue. Address
H. McSHANE & CO.,
Mention this paper. Baltimore, Md



BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY.
Bells of Pure Copper and Tin for Churches, Schools, Fire Alarms, Farms, etc. FULLY WARRANTED. Catalogue sent Free.
VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

MENEELY & COMPANY
West Troy, N. Y. Bells,
For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others



CINCINNATI BELL FOUNDRY CO
SUCCESSORS IN BELLS TO THE
BLYMYER MANUFACTURING CO
CATALOGUE & TESTIMONIALS
CINCINNATI O. BELLS, CHURCH, SCHOOL, FIRE ALARM

FAIR AND HONEST.

If you are sick or ailing no matter what your complaint, write to us and we will send you On Trial one of our large Electric Medicated Appliances to suit your case, provided you agree to pay for it, if it cures you in one month. If it does not cure you it costs you nothing to try it. Different Appliances to cure Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Diseases, Piles, Lung Diseases, Asthma, Catarrh, Lame Back, Ague, Debility, and many other diseases. Remember we do not ask you to buy them blindly but merely to try them at our risk. Thousands of cures made monthly in cases where all other treatments have failed. Price very low. Illustrated book giving full particulars and blank for statement of your case sent free. Address at once.
ELECTRIC PAD M'F'G CO., 564 STATE STREET., BROOKLYN, N.Y.

The Home.

AUNT MARJORIE'S CORNER

Consecration.

"A MOTHER" writes to ask whether full consecration implies the dedication of the whole life to Jesus, in such a way that every word and act shall be only for Him, so that to sing a secular song, however sweet, to join in an innocent game or to do anything else not distinctly in the line of worship, shall interfere with entire consecration. She says in effect, "Shall I sing only hymns, read none but religious books, perform no offices except those of piety?"

A little reflection will show our friend that this is the monastic idea, and that it is not the idea of the Master, as plainly seen in the Gospels. He said of His disciples in the prayer through which we feel the throb of the Divine heart as nowhere else, "I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou shouldst keep them from the evil." To be in the world, and not of it, in it, living for Jesus, yet not turning away from any pure earthly enjoyment, should be the Christian's aim.

Perhaps we can understand this by looking at consecration as we see it in other relations.

A father loves his children devotedly, a husband his wife, a daughter her mother. The trend of the life is ever toward the object of love. For wife and children the husband and father toils uncomplainingly through wet and dry, heat and cold, counts self denial easy, and labor a delight, but he is not forever talking and thinking only of them. His love does not make him careless of the state of the market, oblivious of political change, forgetful of his duty as a citizen. The truest love is not always garrulous; not always demonstrative.

This the all-comprehending Shakespeare said when he gave us Cordelia's portrait, setting it in bold relief against those of Regan and Goneril.

There is a sort of piety which does far more harm than good; blundering where it ought to be tactful; inviting criticism where it should be gentle and winning. We should not repel by narrowness, nor attach too much importance to non-essentials. It may be that there is the most real worship in that which is not worship at all; that the tender word, the flower by the child's plate, the little service obligingly rendered, the invalid's hour brightened, the evening at home made happy for boys and girls, the cordial welcome to the husband after his day's work, are all accepted by our gracious Lord as the cup of cold water concerning which the "Inasmuch" was said.

What do our readers think about this? "A mother" would like to hear several opinions.

Their Angels.

"I say unto you, That in heaven their angels do always behold the face of my Father which is in heaven."

IN that great city which God's presence lights,
Amid the shining throngs of spirits blest,
There are three angels, strong and very fair,
Who stand apart to me from all the rest.

One of the three is tall, with courage bright;
And one has starry eyes, and low voice sweet.
And one bears heavenly flowers and smiles; and all
Make melody for that high place most meet.

I do not know their names, but should I pass
Into that wondrous land of light and song,
I know that I should surely find them out,
And quickly should I stand my group among.

I should not dare on Michael great, to look,
That mighty Prince who for God's people stands,
Nor on that other, Gabriel, peerless one,
Who bears the holy lilies in his hands.

Nor on the bending ranks of seraphim,
Veiled each in six-fold wings of azure dye,
While ceaseless adoration through them burns,
Should I dare turn my glory-dazzled eye.

Nor on cherubic circles closest pressed
About the throne, whose hearts and wings of fire
Throb ceaselessly, with love unquenchable,
With burning purity and deep desire.

But these my little children's angels are,
I should not fear their half-familiar grace.
These angels three, their angels, evermore
Behold the vision of our Father's face.

Enough for us and them! They downward bend
Toward the dear children in their childish ways—
They upward look, and all their being burns
With rapture, as on God they turn their gaze.

On God! The sweet reflection of His love
Falls from their faces on our earthly home.
Our Saviour's little ones and ours they guard,
Secure they wait our Father's message, "Come!"

—Mary C. Gates, in The Independent.

Helping.

ARE any of you so young that you can do nothing for the Church? I think not, and I want to give you a bit of my own experience on that subject, so that even the smallest of you may be led to ask, what can I do?

When I was a wee little girl—and that is a great many years ago—we had the dear, old church in our village repainted, recushioned and recarpeted. There was a great bustle about it all, for the ladies of the congregation met daily in the church to cut and make up the carpet. Things, you see, were very different then. If we bought a new carpet now it would be cut and laid by the persons from whom it was purchased. Not so then. Our mothers and aunts and grandmothers met daily in the church to cut and fit and sew, and we children came in after school to look on, and probably to hinder, although they were too kind to tell us so.

The enthusiasm and excitement was contagious. We also wanted to help. As to threading needles for dear old ladies who wore spectacles and tried to put the thread in the needle's eye at arm's length, that sort of help was not satisfactory. There was nothing to show for it after a whole hour of needle threading.

"Can't I help?" was the constant request.

"You might go outside and help the painters," was the advice of someone who evidently was not fond of children.

This suggestion was received with the disapproval it deserved. Help the painters? No, indeed. We might play hide and seek in the galleries or even climb up in the belfry, but we could not be bluffed off by being sent away on such a foolish errand.

Finally our dear Sunday-school teacher whispered to me softly that we might hem some dusters for the use of the sexton.

Here is another sign of the changed times. Couldn't you purchase a feather duster for the sexton? you ask.

We never had what you now call a feather duster, although the wing of a goose or a duck was sometimes used for the same purpose. But in addition to these the neatness of our Dutch people required that the Bible, etc., should be dusted with some old bit of soft muslin. The suggestion to provide dusters was accepted. Mother purchased some unbleached cotton which was cut into squares and the hems folded down and basted. I have forgotten how many of us children were provided thus with work, but I had two as my share. The hemming required time and patience, for even the selvage was basted down, probably to keep us longer busy. We got dreadfully tired of this quiet, patient work, but then we were working for the church and that reconciled us to it. The seams appeared unnecessarily long; we didn't see the use of such large dust cloths, but none of the ladies at work on the carpet agreed with us in that view and we received no sympathy from them. Our share of the general labor was finished, however, before the carpet was laid, and as we were once more at leisure someone proposed that it would be well to have the nice new dust-cloths marked.

Thinking over it now in the wisdom of later life, I can see that the unanimity with which this proposition was received was not wholly disinterested. The marking would keep us busy a long time.

At that period we were taught to work the alphabet on a "sampler," and when any article of clothing was to be marked we copied the letters from the sampler. We could all mark pretty well and we knew that the letters should be marked on the left hand corner, below the hem.

We proposed to use our initials, each one marking the article she had herself made, but the ladies rejected the suggestion of making a personal mark on public property.

Now here is a puzzle for you, little girls. Can you guess what letters we decided to use?

You must not ask Dame Playfair's class, for, from the wise answers they give, I am sure that they are all older than you little ones, to whom I am speaking.

One of the ladies who had basted our work for us proposed two letters of the alphabet, which not only appropriately named what we had made, but the denomination of the church to which they belonged.

Another lady suggested that if we finished the lettering before the carpet was sewed we might make the figure 2 additional, to signify that the letters if read twice would give the whole story of their use and proprietorship.

This caused much laughter, in which, however, we children did not join. We wholly rejected the use of the figure 2, but we worked the two letters.

Now, you see, we had done something for the church.

Can you tell me, you little ones, without any help from older brothers and sisters who guess Dame Playfair's puzzles, what two letters these were?

And as the moral to my true story let me advise—if you are too young to do anything better for your church, you can at least hem and mark a duster, and that may lead you when you grow older to do something more. But don't forget to work in some way while you are young for the Church and for the spread of the Gospel.

G. L. VANDERBILT.

Anti-Slang Leagues.

"ONE cent, Rob." "Yes, you must pay." "We heard you say it," were the half serious, half jesting words that greeted my ears as I neared a group of young people, at the close of one of our informal meetings. My countenance betokened curiosity, and one of the girls volunteered the explanation: "Miss Pell, Mamie has a slang box, and we are to pay a penny for every word we should not say."

Naturally, since then I have watched and listened; and not so frequently do I hear "one cent," as the eager lips are rehearsing some incident of momentary interest and the enthusiastic speech makes them forgetful. The little check, the constant reminder, is working well, and the results have reached beyond just the circle of girls themselves. On the evening of their Sunday school Christmas entertainment, their teacher was relating the day's experience, and made use of a word that seemed to Mamie, (the holder of the box,) questionable. The merry eyes sought those of her teacher, as she said somewhat shyly and yet triumphantly, too, "Oh, Miss Norris, one cent for that." I was glad to know the teacher paid the fine without any argument, albeit the word could scarcely be defined as a tabooed one.

Let us all help—mothers, fathers, older sisters, teachers, friends, all—to correct this habit so easily formed, but so difficult to break. It was good news last Sunday morning as we stood talking before the session to hear one of the mothers say to her seventeen year old daughter, who had just used a forbidden word, and while acknowledging it, added, "Can't pay, haven't a cent." "My dear, remember you will have to put it in the box at home, then." Turning to us, the lady continued, "I find the box a good means of restraint with my six children."

Oh, for more boxes, or any laudable means, whereby we may reform our evil speaking. In the great weighing, that will come, the accounting of "every idle word," we shall certainly be found wanting.

OLVA.

The Earnest Worker.

BY ANNA D. WALKER.

THE Christian who desires to work for his Master must not shrink from labor nor be indolent and dull in making plans.

A good lady having the oversight of a missionary meeting put into her hands, and knowing some weeks previous that such a duty was expected of her, fell to planning as to how to make it a success.

She spared no pains, wrote letters and invited her acquaintances to come, and doubtlessly implored the Lord to give her all needed aid.

There was among her circle of acquaintances a lady who had never attended a missionary meeting, and who professed to have no interest in missions.

To this lady, Mrs. Bird by name, she went and gave her a pressing invitation to attend the gathering.

"No, thanks;" said Mrs. Bird, "but I do not care to come, and besides that, I expect company on that day to spend the day with me."

"Then come and bring your friend with you."

"Oh, no, I could not do that, she might not like to go, and I do not care to do so."

The earnest worker urged the case, but all her efforts were unavailing, so she secured the name and address of the expected visitor, and then bade her friend good day, and left her.

Her next move was to write to Mrs. Bird's friend, state the case, and ask her if she would not be kind enough to attend the meeting, and send word to Mrs. Bird that she would meet her there and accompany her home.

She received a cordial affirmative reply, and upon the appointed day was quite delighted at seeing Mrs. Bird and the good friend at the meeting.

Such a plan as this would not always succeed, but in the case mentioned it did admirably. What we admire, however, was the earnest work done for the cause.

Our friend did all she could to make the meeting what it should be and the Lord added the blessing. The attendance was large and the meeting was uncommonly interesting.

If we put heart, hands and brains to work we all can do something for the Master.

For the precious little people who are the light and life of our households no better mental provision is made than in "The Pansy," and in "Our Little Ones and the Nursery,"—two periodicals, equally good, served by a corps of ladies and gentlemen especially gifted with ability to minister to such a constituency, and handsomely illustrated. As is the case with all really good writing for the children, the verse and prose of these magazines afford pleasure to the seniors in the home. We read a considerable part of the contents of both every month for our own enjoyment.

CHILDREN'S PORTFOLIO.

Waiting to Grow.

LITTLE white snowdrop, just waking up,
Violet, daisy, and sweet buttercup;
Think of the flowers that are under the snow,
Waiting to grow!

And think what hosts of queer little seeds,
Of flowers and mosses, of ferns and of weeds,
Are under the leaves and under the snow,
Waiting to grow!

Think of the roots getting ready to sprout,
Reaching their slender, brown fingers about
Under the ice and the leaves and the snow,
Waiting to grow!

Only a month, or a few weeks more,
Will they have to wait behind that door;
Listen and watch and wait below,
Waiting to grow!

Nothing so small, and hidden so well,
That God will not find it, and presently tell
His sun where to shine and His rain where to go,
Helping them grow! —Ex.

"Thy Will Be Done."

JOHNNY was in a despondent mood. He was the son of an artist. His papa was just recovering from a severe attack of brain-fever. As a general thing, artists are not wealthy, and Mr. Crawford, after his illness, was very poor. Johnny had procured a position as clerk in the grocery store of one of his father's friends. By doing this he had helped to keep the "wolf from the door." But for the last two days he had been kept in the house by a severe sore throat, and now he was in bed.

"If this keeps up much longer," he muttered to himself, "I don't know what they will do." Then came a long train of rebellious thoughts.

He would be fifteen years old to-morrow, and he the oldest of four children. He was not being prepared for the practice of any art or profession. He could not bear the thought of leading a life of ignorance. His mother and father were both highly educated. But, just then, there seemed no chance for him. El (or Eleanor), one of the two thirteen year-old twins, having inherited her father's talent, ought to go to the best of art schools. He did not worry so much over Em, the other twin, for she seemed made for a sweet, jolly little housekeeper. There was plenty of chance for her developing her taste "if we have anything to cook," Johnny thought. Then there was eleven-year-old Ruth, sweet, saintly and blind. "She should have more comforts," groaned Johnny, as he thought of his pet sister. Then his thoughts went on to his father, who was still weak. It was a dark lookout.

"Well, I shan't be sick," he said, "they shan't pay doctor's bills for me." Just then mamma came in to see her boy. For her quick motherly eye it was easy to perceive the state of mind in which he was.

She said, as cheerily as a self-denying mother can say a thing, in spite of her own despondency, "I hope my boy will have a happy birthday to-morrow."

To the despairing "I hope so," that came back, she could only answer by passing her gentle hand across his brow and whispering, "God bless my boy."

It did him good. After she had left, his mind, taking a more cheery turn, built airy castles, of helping relatives suddenly discovered. Thus he fell asleep.

There was some slight ground for his castle-building. His mother's relations had all been separated from her at the time of the great fire in Boston. At the time she had been married only a few weeks. Being settled in her own house, quite a distance from her old home, she had not been able to keep track of her friends. She had been the oldest of eleven children, four of whom had died. The youngest, at the time of the fire, was two years old. After the fire, her husband finding work in Springfield, she had settled there. Though diligent search had been made, she had never found her family. This was to her a source of great sorrow.

But to return to our story.

Johnny awoke late next morning. He lay for awhile with his eyes shut, and fell into a discontented strain of thought. On opening his eyes he saw a pretty easel, which he knew was of Ruth's making. From the easel shone Ruth's pretty face, well drawn. Ah! that was El's work! Lifting his eyes, he saw next a beautiful copy of Correggio's Christ, which showed his father's skilful hand. Last, but not least, he saw a beautifully-worked text, proving Em's thoughtfulness. He read the words: "Thy Will Be Done."

These tokens of the remembrance of his birthday pleased him and drove away his dissatisfaction, until in saying, "Well, this is nice," he found that his throat was sorer than it had been before. Then his heart grew rebellious toward the heavenly will of our Father. When his mother came in and discovered how much worse he was, she despatched Em for the doctor. She came back saying that the doctor had gone out in the country. Then Ruth remembered about a doctor whom Patty Robinson had said was staying that day at their house. He had come up to help Dr. Rumsey with a surgical operation. His wife being a cousin of Mrs. Robinson, he had decided to stay in the city for a day. Of course, he was immediately sent for. He came and was piloted by Em into Johnny's room, where both father and mother were. He bowed and, introducing himself, said: "I am Dr. Sherwood, at your service." A change overspread all faces present, excepting that of the young doctor himself.

"Excuse the liberty," Mrs. Crawford said, "but what is your first name, and what is your parentage and residence?"

"My name is Will Sherwood, originally of Boston, now of Hartford, Connecticut. And I half suspect you are my long-lost sister, of whom I have heard so much. What is your name?"

"Eleanor Sherwood Crawford. Oh, Will!"

"Oh, Nelly!"

So Johnny saw in this young doctor his Uncle Will, who had been a mere baby when Mrs. Crawford had last seen him. Johnny's case was one of diphtheria, but not a severe one.

You may be sure poverty was at an end for them. They moved to Hartford, where three of Mrs. Crawford's brothers, as well as her parents were living. Her two sisters were married, one living in Cambridge and one at Newport. Her brother Harry, who had died shortly after the fire, had been blind like little Ruth.

In Hartford Mr. Crawford found plenty of work. El received an artistic education and became a well-known artist. Johnny became a doctor, taking up his uncle's extensive practice when he retired. Ruth lived at home with her father and mother. Em married and set up housekeeping in Boston.

Johnny often thinks of the end of that eventful day. In the evening El said: "It is well uncle was in town, or you might have had to make another kind of will than an Uncle Will."

Johnny smiled and thought, "Thy Will Be Done."

V. D.

The Tongue Guard Society Again.

A FEW weeks ago we published a description of the Tongue Guard Society, to which the members pledge themselves to give one penny to its treasury every time they speak disparagingly of another person. The money thus raised is used for the benefit of the poor. Every week we hear of new people forming branches among themselves, some of them even selecting their own beneficiaries, whom they charitably assist by the money accumulated. A number of persons have already received help from this novel source of revenue, which is a species of atonement to counterbalance the almost universal failing of speaking spitefully against persons. For the benefit of new branches we have been requested to place before the public the following laws that govern this society.

CONSTITUTION OF THE TONGUE GUARD SOCIETY.

Motto:

"If aught good thou canst not say
Of thy brother, foe, or friend,
Take thou then the silent way,
Lest in word thou shouldst offend."

Article I. The name of this association shall be the Tongue Guard Society.

Article II. Any person may become a member of this society by signing the constitution and conforming to its rules.

Article III. We, the undersigned, pledge ourselves to endeavor to speak no evil of any one.

Article IV. Should we, however, through carelessness break our pledge, we agree for each and every offense to forfeit the sum of 1 cent. The money so forfeited to be placed in a box reserved for this purpose, and to be expended semi-annually for charitable objects.

Article V. We also agree to use our best endeavors to increase the membership of the society in our town, and to assist in organizing societies in other places.

Article VI. It is, however, understood that when called upon to give our opinion of the character of another it shall be done in truth, remembering in what we say the Scripture injunction, "Do unto others as you would that they should do unto you." —Hartford Times.

The Nest in the Wind.

NOW that the trees on the hill are bare
Against the blue of the wind-swept sky,
You can see the nest that hangs by a hair
Unhurt of the gale as it whistles by.

Look how lightly it rocks and swings—
The sudden flutter that strips a rose
Might snap its hold; yet it swings and clings
In the wildest westerly wind that blows.

Many a blast from the North and West
Hurtles over this hill-top bleak,
But airily rocks the empty nest
No matter how fiercely the storm-fiends shriek;

Rocks and clings by some frail device,
While the mighty river that lies below
Is bound, resistless, in chains of ice,
And the mountains are buried deep in snow.

I've rubbed out a picture time and again
(As lovely a picture as eye could see—Done all in white on my window pane),
Just for the sake of that nest in the tree.

For many a night when the wind was so strong
That it rocked the beds where the children lay,
I thought—but again and again thought wrong—
That now, without doubt, it was blown away.

So to see what had happened while I was asleep,
I would breathe on the frost-work fairily fine,
And spoil for a clear space where to peep
The whole of the fanciful, frail design.

Palm-tree and pine and fern would grow
On the glass again, the next frosty night;
But to see the nest swinging to and fro
In the teeth of the wind, was a rarer sight!

And rarer yet is the sight, when spring
Calls from afar her wandering throng
Of the glancing eye, and the restless wing,
And the throat that thrills with delicious song.

For then the nest is alive again
With its chirping, fluttering, feathered brood,
And you understand it was not in vain
That it weathered the wintry solitude.

—Mary Bradley, in Wide Awake.

Little Heads Together.

BIBLE QUESTIONS.

Can the "Little Heads" find these words in the Old Testament, and give the verses and chapters of the books from which they are taken?

1. Gourd. 2. Ropes. 3. Shovels. 4. Harrows. 5. Swords. 6. Sackcloth. 7. Neighbor. 8. Spark. 9. Pavilion. "Ittalie."

DIAMOND.

1. A vowel. 2. A conjunction. 3. Beneath. 4. The home of a savage beast. 5. A consonant. Joseph.

ENIGMA.

I am an old adage composed of 28 letters.
My 19, 27, 36, is a public building.
My 7, 8, 14, 11, is a grain.
My 1, 23, 25, 11, 13, is an animal.
My 2, 9, 15, 26, 17, is not before.
My 4, 5, 18, 19, 16, 25, is a parent.
My 22, 26, 28, is a boy's name.
My 20, 21, 14, is an insect.
My 12, 10, 24, 6, 13, is the Book.

Lewis and Jennie L.

Answers to Puzzles of February 10th.

Love worketh no ill to his neighbor.

1. Lois. 2. Ointment. 3. Virgins. 4. Elymas. 5. Wages. 6. Olivet. 7. Rabbi. 8. Kish. 9. Eunice. 10. Tarsus. 11. Honey. 12. Naaman. 13. Oil. 14. Ivory. 15. Labon. 16. Levites. 17. Timothy. 18. Og. 19. Hebron. 20 Ishmael. 21. Siloam. 22. Nain. 23 Ephesus. 24. Israel. 25. Goshen. 26. Mt. Hor. 27. Barnabas. 28. Onesimus. 29. Rome.

Correct answers from A. M. M., "Nan," Rappie Bowne, L. P. C., E. M. Clark.

"Nan" inquires whether all the puzzles in any number of the paper must be answered in order to have recognition, or whether a boy or girl may have "a little credit for answering one." Credit is given for each answer received.

A. M. M. is "sorry that she slept so long," but appears to be quite wide awake at present.

S. H. Jackson contributes a budget of puzzles, and hopes that others besides "Rappie" will try to solve them. Look out for one or two of them next week.

Send puzzles and answers to Cousin Lois, at this office.

Remember the March Prize for the best original puzzle by any boy under fourteen years of age.

Letter from Switzerland.

LUCERN.

OUR tour through the land of sunny skies, and along the shores of "the great mid sea that moans with history," (as George Eliot has said of the Mediterranean,) will always be a joy in memory. We have visited ruins and antiquities, dating back centuries and even thousands of years, until we have almost imagined we were living in the age of the Cæsars. We have traversed art galleries, and tarried before the great works of the greatest masters, until we have almost wearied of Madonnas and sacred subjects into which ancient art has been cramped. We have visited cathedrals and become surfeited with these great piles, though wonders of architecture in themselves, still cold in their formalities of Popish rites, but now we say adieu to all this, and, while letting the works of art linger in our memories, seek the beautiful and grand among the lakes and mountains of Switzerland.

Italy, however, is by no means barren of beautiful scenery. One of the most enjoyable days of travel was that between Rome and Naples, especially that part of the route within 75 miles of the latter city. It was an exceptionally bright day, and this, under those beautiful, mellow, and intensely blue skies, means a picture in itself; but with the innumerable peaks of purple hills on one side, with groves of olives nestling at their base or climbing their slopes, with here and there an ancient castle on a commanding summit, and on the other the vast plains of rich and finely cultivated fields, stretching away to the sea, was a picture of striking beauty almost unrivalled. From Genoa to Pisa, also along the shores of the Mediterranean, the scenery is very fine. Rarely, also, do we find surpassed in grandeur and beauty such scenery as we witnessed in crossing the Appenines on our way from Florence to Venice.

This latter city, by the way, impresses the traveller very strangely. From a boy I had had a longing to see Venice, the city of gondolas, where they have no use for horses except in the menagerie. The entrance to the city by rail is over marshy flats on bridges of piles, and on alighting from the train you step into a gondola to be rowed by a couple of gondoliers to your hotel, the entrance to which is by steps rising out of the water. The strange stillness of such a great city and the untenanted ruins impress one with a feeling of loneliness.

As we stood on the "Bridge of Sighs" leading from the Doge's palace to the dungeons, made memorable by the shrieks of hundreds of prisoners, which a Dickens alone can depict in lifelike horror and wierd terror, we fancied we could still hear the screams of the condemned as they were forced across that narrow passage down to the dungeons below to await their awful death. The great locks and huge doors seemed to speak, as they creaked on their hinges, of the cruel scenes they had so often witnessed. Looking out upon the Adriatic from Venice, a mellowness of the atmosphere akin to that of Naples, although of a different hue, strikes one. We had heard so much of beautiful Italian skies we were prepared fully to realize the enjoyment of basking under them, and strangely enough, on our very first entrance into Italy, as the sun was setting over the Alps, the whole heavens were tinged with a vermillion glow and golden richness such as we had never before witnessed. A fitting introduction to what we were anticipating. And, strange to say, just as we were crossing the line from Italy to Switzerland on Lake Lugano, returning northward, we were favored with a repetition of our first evening's experience in Italy, only still more gloriously grand, as though Nature were trying to outvie herself in all the exquisite touches she had before given us, saying to us, "Your farewell to Italy and her beautiful skies shall not be forgotten, nor leave an impression of disappointment."

But Como, beautiful Lake Como, shall we ever forget it! Nestling in the arms of the Alps one would think it would become congealed by the cold breath of the mountains; on the contrary, it has quite an Italian climate, its beautiful emerald waters never frozen, and its shores fragrant with blossoming roses, oleanders and oranges in midwinter, in the more sheltered parts. The sloping banks and great hills towering up on either side, are studded and dotted by beautiful white villas, which seem like a setting of pearls to this emerald picture of mountain reflections. All this seemed like a magnificent panorama to us, passing up the lake in a steamer.

We crossed over the mountain from Lake Como to Lake Lugano by rail, and as our train skirted the sides of the mountain, clambering to a great height above the bosom of the lake, we were favored with a picture of unparalleled beauty.

The scenery on Lakes Como and Lugano at the gates of the mountains were invested with a beauty and grandeur to hold us spellbound; but as we crossed the Alps by way of St. Gothard Pass, the sublime heights of these great mountain fastnesses rose before us on so colossal a scale as to pervade us with a feeling of solemn awe of the Infinite power of the mighty Maker "who weighs the mountains in scales and the hills in a balance." Oliver Wendell Holmes says, "It stretches a man's mind to see the Alps." As our train coursed its way in its toilsome climb, through the tortuous, jagged and romantic mountain passes, through tunnels, over bridged precipices, along the shelving rocks, higher and still higher up the sides of the mountains, as the snowy peaks rose before us in the region of the stars, they seemed to say, "Here is an end of all things, the ultimate of heaven and the supreme of strength invest us. We are types of the godlike in nature and human aspiration, types of power and permanence, measures of the infinite in space and time. Bow down and be content that you have seen us, for the joy and wonder of this hour shall be with you forever." Yes, for the old longing to look on the Alps that had begun when I was in the primary geography at the school-room desk, was gratified at last.

This St. Gothard Railroad, which in 1882, after ten years of work, replaced the "diligence" in this mountain climb, is a marvel of engineering skill, which cost brains and muscle and money; no less than twenty two millions of the last.

In the ascent there are tunnels in addition to the great St. Gothard tunnel nine and three-quarter miles long. Some of these are spiral tunnels, constructed in the shape of a cork screw. One of these is especially interesting. Entering this tunnel, a little church, looking up from the train, is seen on a hill above. After making the first round in the mountain and emerging from the tunnel, the little church again is seen, but now on a level with the train. Again the train enters the mountain, and on emerging the church is seen the third time, but now far down below the train in the valley. All of our party were agreed that the mountains looked much more magnificently beautiful, now in midwinter, in their royal suits of ermine, now reaching to their very base. At this season of the year also, one might almost persuade himself that the atmosphere was fresher, before it had been breathed over and over again by swarming tourists. Certainly this is the case in hotels, and one can have his pick of rooms, and is a welcome guest, and the servants have time to attend to one's little comforts, and there is no hustling and crowding to death by one's fellow creatures, and no gruff answers from over-worked hotel keepers.

Altogether we are eminently satisfied with the treats that have been given us in the visible uplift of nature, enpanding and enlarging our conceptions of the great and mighty works of God; and this, I take it to be the subtle charm of mountains, that they aid the imagination in its ascent towards realms of ideal glory, and dispel all consciousness of little things that occupy us when we go about the earth with eyes downcast and thoughts turned inward.

A. M. QUICK

THE REV. J. A. BALDWIN, who died last week in the seventy-sixty year of his age, preached last as a supply at New Lots, L. I. He graduated at Yale College in 1 J, and from the Princeton Theological Seminary in 1834. He was licensed the same year to preach by the Presbytery of Newark, N. J. His first settlement was at Flatlands, L. I., from 1836 to 1852; his second was at Lancaster, Pa., over a German Reformed Church from 1852 to 1856; after that at New Providence, N. J., in a Presbyterian church from 1857 to 1863, since which time he has supplied vacant churches. He was a good preacher and a very courteous, genial man.

The General Outlook.

EVANGILE ET LIBERTE, a religious journal published in Lausanne, is the organ of the Eglise Libre in the Canton de Vaud, Switzerland. We translate from this journal the following: "On October 1st, 1536, and the following days, the arches of our superb cathedral were the witnesses of the celebrated 'Dispute de Lausanne;' at the termination of which the Bernese, our masters, who some months before had driven out the Savoyard, introduced the Reformation into the Canton de Vaud and annexed us, although subjects and not yet citizens, to the Helveti[illegible]

"By these means, God, who is the Master of men and of nations, introduced us to the great Protestant family; which, delivered from the errors of Rome, has for more than three centuries grouped itself around the Bible, that grand and glorious book which is the source and the rule of our faith.

"Three hundred and fifty years of blessing!

"How shall we celebrate this jubilee?

"We wish neither monuments of marble nor medals of bronze. We do not wish anything grand but something good.

"In order that a celebration of this sort be profitable, some preparation must be made.

"This is the work of our historians and our lecturers. We have excellent ones. If they grant our request they will give us some studies of the epoch of 1536. They will furnish us with a history of that period; a living, popular history, animated by a Christian spirit. We want books and pamphlets to distribute in our families. Something similar to the Chroniques, published in 1835 and 1836 by Mr. L. Vuillemim, our Vaudois historian, whose style was so elegant, whose thought was so chaste and refined.

"Our little journal promises its readers to contribute to this work.

"And then, when the anniversary day has arrived, our congregations will unite in solemn services and the voice of prayer and of thanksgiving will be heard."

....Song Services during the last few years, and especially those of last summer in Battery Park and Tompkins Square in this city, held by the Rev. C. C. Goss and Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson, having to some extent solved the question, "How to reach the masses with the Gospel," plans are being matured in this city, looking to the formation of a National Song Service Committee, composed of members of the various denominations and from different sections, charged with the duty of setting in motion influences for the more general diffusion of Song Service work in all parts of the country, in halls, theatres, parks, and other places where the masses will be likely to assemble, as well as in all departments of church and mission work.

Its duty also will be to give such information in respect to the forming and conducting of such services as those engaged in them may desire; to publish and circulate in tract and pamphlet form, such Song Service Hymns, with and without music, as are best adapted to the end in view, as well as to labor in every possible way for the spiritual elevation of the masses through the agency of sacred song.

The preliminary committee will be thankful for facts and suggestions from persons interested in this work, so that the plans formed may be such as to start the masses all over the country singing the praises of God. The address of the Rev. C. C. Goss is 97 Varick street, New York city.

....The jubilee of Methodism in South Australia is to be celebrated this year. The first sermon was preached in 1836; the first church was erected two years after. There are now in the Conference 336 churches and preaching places; 75 itinerant and 363 local preachers; 7,825 members, and about 19,000 Sunday school scholars. It is proposed also to raise a jubilee fund of $300,000, which will be used to remove church debts, to make some provision for a theological training school, and lay the foundation for a college for women.

....Any person discovering a printer's error in an Oxford Bible will b paid a guinea, provided it has not been discovered before. As showing the accuracy of the new version, it is stated only three printer's errors have been discovered in all the editions.

....Five hundred and thirty new names have been added to the convert's roll of Bethany Church, Philadelphia, during the last three months.

....Trinity Church, Boston, of which Rev. Phillips Brooks is the pastor, has joined the list of "free" churches and has done away with pew rentals.

